National Senate Adopts Amendment to River and Harbor Bill Appropriating $140,000

Prompt Work by Mayor Shea in Behalf of the Amendment

The Herald bureau at Washington reported Tuesday that the appropriation of $140,000 for dredging a bend and other obstructions in Weymouth Fore river below the Fore River shipyards, Quincy, Mass., was put into the river and harbor bill which passed the Senate today. It will probably now become law, as only the approval of the House conferrees is needed to send the bill to the President for signature. Representative Lawrence of Massachusetts will be one of the House conferrees. The measure carries appropriations aggregating about $36,000,000.

The Fore river item was put in the bill by Senator Lodge, and only by a scratch. Although the report of the army engineers favoring the improvement was forwarded to Washington a week ago, the usual delays in moving it through official channels were experienced. Senator Lodge encountered exasperating obstacles, but persisted, and today, after hours of vigorous communications with engineer officials and the secretary of war, and just before the consideration of the bill was completed, the Senate obtained all the papers in regular form.

COULD ANYONE ELSE BUT SENATOR LODGE HAVE SECURED FOR QUINCY THE RIVER APPROPRIATION?

POST MORTEM EXAMINATION

Reveals Peculiar Death of the Hendrickson Boy

Five local physicians and a specialist from Boston held a post-mortem examination at Hall's undertaking rooms Tuesday afternoon to determine the cause of the death of Arthur Hendrickson, aged 15 years, who died suddenly at the City Hospital Monday night.

The boy lived at 31 Carroll's lane, and shortly after he had finished eating supper Monday evening was taken suddenly ill with a severe pain in his stomach. He was taken to the City Hospital, and the physicians were about to operate for appendicitis when he died.

The examination Tuesday afternoon showed that death had been caused by a rupture of the iliac vein, or in medical terms status lymphaticus. The lymphic gland which should have been absorbed by nature, when the boy was ten years of age, had not disappeared, and had produced conditions which resulted in the rupture. The physicians stated that the boy had been doomed to sudden death ever since he was ten years of age.

Three years ago Carl H. Hendrickson, a brother of Arthur, who was then 15 years of age, died under almost the same conditions. The boy had returned from skating when seized with pain, and died soon afterward.

A post-mortem examination at that time showed that his death had been caused by a rupture of the renal vein, and that the lymphic gland had not been absorbed as it should have been.

The cases of the two boys have caused considerable interest among medical men, and a specialist was sent from Boston to get a report of the case for Medical Examiner Leary of Boston. The boys were sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Hendrickson.

TODAY'S COURT.

J. Willard Farnham was arraigned for assault on Frank West at Milton. He was fined $10.

Terence Masterson was fined $5 for drunkenness at Quincy.

THE GRANITE OUTLOOK

As Told by Stone in Its January Issue

There is a general feeling of optimism at the various granite centers over the outlook for the coming year says "Stone." It is true that some men have recently been laid off, but this is no more than the usual suspension of full activity during the winter months. It was a little more marked this year than usual at some of the centers, like Barre, for instance, because a greater number of

SOUTH BOSTON TRAIN SERVICE

Quincy Workingmen Remonstrate over New Service

Representative Langelier, ex-Representative Frank Badger and others appeared before the Railroad Commissioners on Tuesday in an effort to secure better train service for workingmen between all the Quincy stations and South Boston, particularly between 6 and 8 A. M. and 5 and 7 P. M. They pointed out that in the past residents of Quincy Adams, Quincy, Wollaston, Norfolk Downs, Atlantic and West Quincy had been able to go directly to their work at South Boston, where now they have to go to the South station, and pay a car fare on the street railway. This is not only more expensive but a great loss of time. It is the same at night when returning home from work, making a long day for workingmen. Having enjoyed for years much better accommodations, they hope that it may be restored.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Speaker Cannon found that there was one more fight in him.

Anyhow, the jimswinger has served to let folks know the name of the governor of Oklahoma.

It may be better to be right than to be speaker, but it must be bully to be right and speaker too.

Should imagine a fighter like "Uncle Joe" would rather they wouldn't be so nice to him as the end of his reign approaches.

On the other hand election of United States Senators by direct vote will have a depressing effect on the Senate whitewashing industry.

In a fierce duel with swords near Paris the other day the innocent bystander, in the person of the referee was severely punctured.

It is intimated that Tom L. Johnson will be the next mayor of Cleveland. Hasn't Tom done enough for that city that now has 3-cent fares and a new position as the sixth city in the nation?

Senator Lorimer's lobby threat that a vote against seating the tainted Senator means an investigation of the election of "other Senators" must suggest pleasing thought to the voters of the country, especially about our Senators.

Brockton merchants and shoe manufacturers have won out in their fight against high express rates getting a reduction to New York of 25 cents a hundred pounds; that is it will now be 75 cents instead of one dollar as formerly.

Representative "Bill" Newton seems well posted on feminine apparel. At a hearing Tuesday before the committee on legal affairs on restricting the length of hatpins he not only claimed to know all about hatpins but also about hats. He said: "I know all about hats, too. I know what the 'Vesta Tilley' is, and the 'Sarah Bernhardt,' that's just come on the market, and the last one, the 'Pinky-Panky-Poo'; and they needn't tell me that it's on account of the hair that they have to have their pins so long." Wonder if the women themselves are as up-to-date on these little matters.

Now that a new radial avenue from Boston to the South Shore is proposed by the Metropolitan Improvement commission ,why not make a NEW avenue? The Old Colony boulevard as proposed is wholly within the limits of Boston except where it uses the present Neponset bridge and a few hundred feet of Hancock street in this city. Hancock street is the present thoroughfare over which all the heavy teaming to and from the South Shore must pass and no part of it can become a parkway. Between Pope's Hill and Quincy the proposed avenue makes too many detours.

The Daily Ledger believes that the new avenue from Boston should be wholly on the water side of the railroad from the South Station to City Square, Quincy. From Harrison Square it should extend in nearly a straight line through the easterly section of Neponset and across the river by a new bridge, intersecting the present Quincy Shore parkway near Squantum street. The Quincy parkway will be soon be continued to the High school and eventually to West Quincy, and would accommodate the auto traffic between Boston, Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and all the South Shore.

As reported by the commission the Old Colony boulevard is of very little benefit to Quincy, but nevertheless Quincy will be called upon to pay a large assessment for the next 30 or 40 years. The Senator and Representatives from Quincy should be instructed to secure an amendment to the appropriation when authorized relocating the boulevard. It means everything to Quincy.

These were presented to the Senate with a brief statement about the importance of the improvement.

A letter from Secretary of the Navy Meyer, in which he emphasized the danger that one big ship building company would be eliminated from the list of bidders for constructing battleships hereafter unless this improvement could be made, was read.

Senator Frye, chairman of the committee on commerce, who had the bill in charge, said he approved of the appropriation, and it was at once adpoted.

The Daily Ledger knows that Mayor Shea is taking an active interest in the passage of the bill for the improvements of the Fore River. Tuesday night he sent the following telegrams to Senator Lodge and Congressman O'Connell:

Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge:

In behalf of the City of Quincy, I desire to express my thanks for your successful efforts in behalf of the improvement of Weymouth Fore river, a project of great importance to this community.

(Signed) W. T. Shea, Mayor.
Quincy, Jan. 31, 1911.

Hon. Joseph F. McConnell:

The City of Quincy asks you to use your best efforts in behalf of the amendment to the River and Harbor bill, which provides an appropriation to dredge the Weymouth Fore river.

DECREE ON MEN'S CLOTHES.

The International Custom Cutters' onvention at St. Louis last week again summons mankind to confront the decree of these lords of men's dress. The tailors perhaps gain heart to try despotism, by the servility with which women submit to stern fashion's awards. But man is an angular and wilful critter, never subdued to the tailor's dominion.

In the kingdom of men's clothes, there is always a vast outlying section controlled by Insurgents and hostiles. They occasionally venture into the tailor's reservation, when absolutely driven by the threat of nakedness. But they so thoroughly enjoy freedom of dress, and their enjoyment is so contagious, that it is never possible to enlist any large section of the masculine persuasion in the lock step of formal fashion.

The custom cutters decree for 1911 is the corset coat and snug trousers. If they can persuade men to throw away slightly worn suits because out of style, they can double their business.

Their eyes look with longing on the fat pastures in which are fed milliners and dress makers, who grow wealthy on woman's changeableness. On strict economic reasoning, it ought to cost no more to clothe women than to clothe men. Women are physically smaller. The number of square inches of skin to be covered by clothes must be at least 20 per cent less for the average woman than for the average man. The economist would therefore argue, that women's clothes should cost 20 per cent less. Actually the clothes of a fashionable woman must cost five times those of a fashionable man. The average woman probably spends twice the average man.

There is an old saying, of course unjust to many an impeccable citizen, of spotless coat and eternally creased trousers, that it takes nine tailors to make a man. It will take the complete reversal of that dictum, so that a tailor shall be as good as nine men, to impose the whims of fashion on the ordinary citizen.

DRIFT OF OPINION

The point has been made that it would be much simpler to require the branding of all articles with the date upon which they are placed in cold storage than to wait for the lapse of six months before affixing the brand of refrigeration. Inasmuch as the object of all these bills, or pretty much all of them, is to protect the consumer, interested readers will be able to discover sound reasons why the exact date should be required, when the articles are placed in cold storage, while equally sound ones will suggest themselves against a delay of six months, or later, before the brand is applied. It is the abuse of the cold storage plant, in the aim to maintain artificially high prices, in utter disregard of the rights of the consuming public, that legislation should be directed. And a good way to begin is to make the date of refrigeration correspond with the placing of the articles in cold storage.—Salem News.

HOSPITAL APPRECIATED.

The Brockton Hospital report certainly provides food for thought says the Brockton Enterprise. In the memory of men still young, when anybody in town met with serious accident he was either treated hastily and taken home, if he was lucky enough to have one, or was lifted on a train and carried twenty miles to Boston and then hustled in an ambulance across part of the city to a hospital. The fine curative effects of that lively trip to a man who had been run over by a train or badly smashed up in any serious accident can be readily understood. Yet there were those then who argued against a hospital, and who averred that there was so little illness and there were so few accidents in Brockton requiring hospital treatment that it was childish to try to start and maintain a hospital. A number of faithful and believing souls, however, got together, worked hard and long, raised money in various ways with the aid of the people in general, and here are just a few big facts from last year's record of work done:

Patients admitted in 1910, 822; treated, there or outside, 971. Operations, 479. Largest number of patients in one day, 53; average number, 39. Free patients treated, 344.

These figures tell the story. Discharged patients with good words to say about their treatment at the hospital tell something more in which the public is interested. The hospital is a success. Twenty years ago many scoffers jeered at the idea of such an institution. Nobody jeers today unless his senses have left him, and all sensible people recognize the worth and the immense helpfulness of having such an institution of mercy and relief which can be reached without banging and tumbling the patient about for an hour's run by a railroad and ambulance from the scene to a Boston place of treatment, to say nothing of the good treatment for relief in cases of illness.

The Brockton Hospital started soon after the Quincy Hospital and had for its matron the head nurse of the Quincy Hospital, Miss Beattie who is still at its head.

AN INDEFINITE POSTPONEMENT

What Amendment to Reciprocity Pact Will Probably Mean

GARDNER CIRCULATES PETITION

Working Hard In Interest of Gloucester Fisheries—Course Does Not Meet With Approval of President, Who Wants to Preserve Agreement Intact—Gloucester Men Are Heard Before Ways and Means Committee

Washington, Feb. 1.—The effort of Representative Gardner of Massachusetts to have the Canadian reciprocity treaty subject to amendment from the floor of the house is not meeting with the approval of President Taft or the members of the house who are expected to put the treaty through without a change.

Mr. Gardner's activities have been guarded with considerable secrecy. For some reason he has been unwilling to divulge the nature of the petition which he is industriously circulating among members of the house. Those who have signed the Gardner petition, however, assert that it calls upon the house committee on rules to bring the McCall reciprocity bill into the house with a rule permitting amendments to any section.

Mr. Gardner's interest is opposition to free fish, but as he could not muster a coporal's guard in support of the amendment to the fish paragraph he has been compelled to make his petition for amendment wide open in order that he might get the support of members from the northwest farming districts who are opposed to the removal of duties on farm products.

Mr. Gardner refuses to tell how many signatures he has obtained, but those who have signed the petition say he has quite a formidable list. Should he succeed in getting enough names to demonstrate to the rules committee the necessity of bringing in the kind of rule demanded by him, it is believed that such a rule and the resulting amendments would mean the end of reciprocity negotiations at this session of congress.

Many members of the house insist that the agreement entered into between the representatives of the United States and Canada is not a treaty in the strict sense of the word and that, unlike treaties submitted to the senate for ratification, it is not necessary to accept it without a change or reject it.

It is generally believed, however, that any attempt on the part of congress to change the proposed treaty would bring the negotiations to a halt. If congress has a right to amend them the Canadian parliament has a similar right, and while the Canadian ministry is undoubtedly in a position to force the treaty through parliament regardless of the dissatisfaction which is said to exist in certain quarters, it is regarded here as extremely doubtful if the ministry would concede to the United States the right to amend and deny it to its own legislative body. It is apparent, therefore, that once either legislative body insists on amendment the negotiations will be prolonged indefinitely if, indeed, they are not terminated abruptly.

A delegation representing the city of Gloucester and the fishing industry of that city arrived in Washington to protest against the free fish section of the Canadian reciprocity treaty.

Although the ways and means committee heard the Gloucester fishermen yesterday afternoon, consideration of the treaty will not be begun by the committee until next Thursday. Secretary of State Knox has been invited to appear before the committee Thursday and explain in detail the negotiations between the United States and Canada.

"A REVERSAL OF POLICY"

Montreal Board of Trade Is Hostile to Reciprocity Pact

Montreal, Feb. 1.—By a vote of 60 to 44 the board of trade passed a resolution declaring against the reciprocity agreement with the United States. The resolution reads in part as follows:

"We hereby record the unalterable opposition of this board to the proposed reciprocity treaty with the United States, which treaty would involve the country in dangers not yet fully realized, and we consider the government should first ascertain the opinion of the whole country on this question and receive a definite mandate thereon before committing it to a change so revolutionary as this reversal of its entire policy, threatening not only the trade, but also the more vital interests of Canada as a nation."

A committee composed of the members of the council and a number of leading members of the board was appointed to wait upon the government and place the resolution before it.

GRANITE OUTLOOK

men than customary had been employed in turning out the work that had accumulated during the strike Every producer and manufacturer believes that with the coming of spring there will be a resumption of work on a larger scale than last year. All the indications point that way. Many of the leading firms are taking advantage of the dull season to improve their equipments and increase their facilities.

An increase in the price of rough Barre stock has been expected for some time, and there was no surprise over the circular letter sent out last month from the Granite Quarries Owner's association. The statement made by the association was to the effect that the increased cost of production in the quarry industry caused by advance in price of supplies and labor places the quarry owners under the necessity of raising the price of rough stock. The association declares that it has gone into the matter with great care and has made the advance as small as is consistent with the welfare of the Barre granite industry. It is understood that the increase amounts to about 5 per cent. on the average. It is not expected that this raise will affect the price of finished stock. But the manufacturer and retailer will have something more to meet than an increase in price. The same circular says:

"For some time past a condition has developed whereby the quarry operators have been furnishing stock from one inch to three inches above the size ordered, and while this entails a loss of 10 per cent. to 20 on their business, the manufacturers have reaped no benefit. It has now been agreed between the undersigned quarry owners that from date of new price list stock will be quarried as close as possible to size ordered, and all quarry foremen will be instructed accordingly. Further, that no allowance or replacement of stone shipped to customers will be made, provided the stone will make the size marked and is not defective."

The annual meeting of the Barre Granite Manufacturers' association was held during the past month and the question of adopting a trade mark for Barre granite, which has been under discussion in the association for some time, was brought to a head by the approval of a design made by William Duff of Barre. The executive committee was instructed to have this trade mark copy-righted, and hereafter all Barre granite will bear this label. The purpose of using the trade mark is to stop the flooding of the market with granites that look like Barre granite and that are sometimes sold under that name. The association also took steps for instituting a uniform cost system and a uniform basis of figuring work. The announcement was made that the association starts out this year in the best condition that it has been in since it was first organized.

During the past month the annual meeting of the Granite Manufacturer's association of Quincy, Mass., was also held. A feature of the meeting was a discussion of the necessity for and advisability of increasing the prices on Quincy granite. The general consensus of opinion was that it would be an excellent thing to raise the price and that there would be little difficulty in doing it providing united action could be had. No definite decision was made however. Another point raised was in advocacy of the construction of municipal docks in Quincy. Water shipment would not only have an excellent effect in keeping railroad rates within bounds but would also enable the quarries to ship rip-rap and grout.

The Concord branch of the Granite Cutter's National union is to ask for changes in the present bill of prices, and has notified union headquarters to that effect. The bill of prices now in force between the cutters and manufacturers expires on the first day of May next, and under its provisions notices of any changes desired by either party must be filed three months prior to that date. It is probable that the cutters will ask a slight increase over the present schedule for certain classes of work. Agreements with the quarrymen, tool sharpeners and other branches of the granite trade expire on the same day as that of the cutters.

The present agreement between the several unions of the granite workers and the employers at Cape Ann expires on March 1, and the men have already presented a new schedule of prices. The cutters are now getting 38 1-2 cents an hour for 48 hours a week, and they demand 42 cents an hour for 45 hours per week. Paving cutters are all piece workers. They demand a general advance. For instance, New York paving is now paid for at the rate of $22.50 per thousand and 5 cents off for drilling. The cutters ask that it be raised to $25 per thousand and be drilled free. The quarrymen are now paid about 23 cents an hour and they demand 25 cents. In Rockport, Lanesville and Pigeon Cove a number of hundred men are employed in all branches and fears are expressed lest a strike should develop out of the situation.

The work of Visiting Nursing in Brockton has shown a wonderful increase since organizing. Work was first begun with but one nurse; now three are employed. The expenses for 1910 were over $2000 and the receipts $2607.06. The president in her report states that 3256 visits have been made on 507 patients, and 93 new-born babies have been cared for. Out of this number 24 pauper cases were treated and 118 visits were made for the city, 17 free visits on 22 tubercular patients and 135 visits to the Wales Home, the remaining being general cases. During the year 50 physicians have availed themselves of the services of the nurses and the women's clubs of the city have accorded the association very cordial support.

SANITATION LECTURE.

Some fifty availed themselves of the privilege of hearing Mrs. C. O. Tyler of Abington lecture at the clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon under the auspices of the Home Economics committee of the Quincy Women's club. Mrs. Stanley Bone presided and introduced Mrs. Tyler.

Mrs. Tyler is a member of the Sanitation committee of the State Federation and that she is an active member and interested in its work was soon evident to her listeners Tuesday. Her special subject was "Let the label tell its own story." It was a subject to interest the women of the family. The family must have food—but what food? It must be pure, clean and nutritious. The old order of things has changed and no longer is the winter's supply put in of good home products. The heater in the cellar prevents putting in large quantities but a cold closet was a good idea as it is much cheaper to buy in quantities.

Housekeeping is reduced to two things cleaning and cooking. One must know how to buy.

Mrs. Tyler gave the menu for a simple luncheon, telling of the composition of each article. Benzoate of soda seemed to play an important part in each article. Club women owe Dr. Wiley a debt of gratitude for his fight against benzoate. For whether it is dangerous to health or not it permits of adulteration.

Benzoate is used to preserve canned goods like tomatoes, catsup, etc. Hamburg steak so treated keeps a bright red color instead of growing darker as it does when we make it at home. Chickens thus treated appeared fresh. Peas of bright green color were made so by copperas; strawberry preserves by the label showed no strawberries at all; pickles contained quantities of alum enough to kill a small animal. How about our children who are fond of the large store pickles? Ice cream is much adulterated, also coffee, and cereals. In a day we may take in with our food dozens of things that might cause disease.

In Oct. 1907 the law was passed requiring labels stating the contents. Housekeepers should know these labels. Conditions are 9-10 better now and it is up to the buyers to discard the 1-10 adulterated. It is said 9-10 of the illness is caused by food. Insist on cleanliness. See that the markets and restaurants are not contaminated. Don't buy exposed berries or fruit. Watch the fly. Keep your screens in later.

There is a national campaign against the fly and the Federation asks its members to help exterminate the fly. It comes from filthy places and carries filth. How about your market? Do the flies cover everything? The market man is required to have his boxes of vegetables, etc., at least 18 inches above the floor. Do you visit the market or telephone? Should market and see for yourself at least once a week. Shops are what we demand of them.

Recommend sanitation committee for the club to learn about conditions in the city. The laws of the United States require labels on all goods and it is in our own hands whether we buy pure food or not. Learn to read the labels and buy only properly labeled goods. In the home and in the markets insist on cleanliness.

At the close of the lecture there was a general discussion Mrs. Tyler answering the questions put to her fully and comprehensively. She is earnest, and well posted in every little detail. Her pleasing personality held the close attention of those present who undoubtedly carried away with them much food for thought that should in the future work out for good along these lines in our city.

MOTHERS' CLUB CONVENTION.

The annual state convention of Mothers' clubs will be held in Fales house, Waltham on Feb. 16, 17 and 18, and a large attendance of delegates is expected. On the opening day there will be a reception by the Waltham Mothers' club. The speakers during the convention will include Mayor Walker of Waltham, Supt. Parkinson of Waltham schools, Supt. Peaslee, Lynn schools, Mrs. Schaff, national president; Mrs. Merryman, s tate president; Miss Lucy Wheelock, Mrs. H. S. Whittier, Dr. Helen G. Putnam and Dr. David Snedden.

KING'S DAUGHTERS ANNIVERSARY.

Unity circle of King's Daughters of which Mrs. W. H. Doble is leader is to hold its annual meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 7 and at the same time celebrate the twenty-fifth year of organization, the date of which was Jan. 13. The meeting is called for five o'clock in Bethany chapel. Supper will be served at half-past six and the anniversary exercises will be held at quarter of eight.

A fine program has been arranged. Dr. Hardy will have charge of the devotional service; Miss Suzan Brokenshire of East Milton will welcome new members; Mrs. Abele will read a paper; and some fine music may be expected as there are to be solos by Mr. Frederic Kennedy, who sang so pleasingly in the Creation concert and violin solos by Miss Laura Herrick of East Pepperill whose playing was so pleasing at the Women's club a few seasons ago.

NEW ENGLAND CLUB.

The annual reception of the New England Women's club was held in the club rooms at 585 Boylston street, Boston, Monday afternoon. The reception is usually held in the fall but owing to the death of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, president of the organization, it was postponed until now.

In the receiving line at the reception were Mrs. May Alden Ward, 1st Vice President, Mrs. Edith Chapman Gould of New York, a noted singer, vice presidents Mrs. Horace Mann Willard of Quincy, Miss Mary Ladd, Mrs. Nash and Miss N. E. Rowe, and the presidents of various organizations about the city, Mrs. Boland, president of the charity club, Mrs. George Rice of Brookline, formerly of Quincy, Miss Gill, president of the Collegiate Alumnae association and several others.

Mrs. Albert M. Parker of Presidents Hill was on the reception committee as was also Miss C. Belle Kenney of the Quincy Mansion school. Mrs. Eben W. Sheppard of Greenleaf street poured at the tea. Mrs. W. E. Alden of Chestnut street, a member of the Arts and Literature committee was present at the reception.

IN MEMORIAM.

With the call for the February business meeting of the New England Woman's Press association, each member received a picture of Mrs. Marion A. MacBride and a few words in memoriam from her son Jas. D. MacBride. Mrs. MacBride was one of the founders of the press association and a widely known club woman. For a brief time she resided in Quincy and her son is well known here among his associates at the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. His tribute to his mother which accompanied her picture was as follows:

"In loving memory of a dear mother, I wish to offer this little picture as a token to a few of her many friends. It was taken about 1895 and was a favorite with her. Lying helpless in bed for a year and a half, knowing that death was coming, she calmly awaited its approach and finally, after great suffering, died as she had lived, ready and unafraid. One of the last things she wrote was a copy of the last two lines of the poem "A Parting," which I found under my breakfast plate:

"Say not Good Night, but in some brighter clime Bid me Good Morning."

It was her farewell, and so we must always remember her.--James D. MacBride."

ART LECTURE.

There was a good attendance Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Everett C. Bumpus, Presidents hill, for the opening lecture in the series of four which she is giving at her home on early Italian art. The subject Ravenna proved interesting as it is one of the most interesting of the Italian towns. The great attraction of Ravenna which makes her unique not only among the cities of Italy but of the world is the fact that here are preserved so many monuments of the dark and stormy ages of transition from the Roman to the Teutonic—monuments of the highest possible interest to the lover of early Christian art.

The lecture was well illustrated and the artistic features and stories connected with each told entertainingly by Mrs. Bumpus.

Pisa of leaning tower fame will be the subject of the next lecture on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 7.

A FINE CONCERT.

The following from a recent issue of the Brockton Enterprise will be of interest to Quincy people:

"Musicians and music-lovers of this city and surrounding towns gathered last evening at the First Universalist church, to enjoy the concert given by the combined Westland and Lotus quartets of Boston, before an audience of 600. The society was most happy in its selection of artists, and the program was arranged with rare discrimination and taste. The entertainment was stated by many to be among the finest given here for several years, and enthusiastic commendation was heard on every hand.

A feature of the evening was the Sextette from Lucia, and the closing number was "The Lost Chord" by double quartet with organ accompaniment given with exquisite rendering of tone, made a fitting climax for a fine program. At the close, the singers were obliged to appear again and again."

JOLLY SIXTEEN SURPRISE.

Mrs. Leo Clofflin of 116 Upland road was given a surprise Tuesday evening by friends from Brockton and members of the Jolly Sixteen. Mrs. Clofflin was expecting to celebrate her birthday very quietly in her home, but her friends had connived with Mr. Clofflin and had other things in store. At 8 o'clock the bell rang and Mrs. Clofflin went to the door to be met by 18 friends who burst in upon her with a shower of good wishes. When she had recovered her equilibrium, the guests were invited to remove their wraps and a pleasant evening was spent in playing whist, listening to good music, and partaking of the refreshments which were provided. Before the party broke up Mrs. Clofflin was presented a handsome set of dishes. Mr. and Mrs. Clofflin came to Quincy from Brockton a little over a year ago. Since taking up their residence here they have been members of the Jolly Sixteen.

A BIG JAIL FORCE

Average of Two Employes For Each Prisoner In New York Bastile

New York, Feb. 1.—Commissioner of Accounts Fosdick reported to Mayor Gaynor that the Ludlow Street jail, the home of the "Alimony Club" and the scene of many delightful newspaper stories, is altogether too well provided with attendants since the Republican sheriff, John Shea, came into office.

He says that there was an average of over two employes attached to the prison for each prisoner last year, and that the county could easily save over $10,000 on this item of the payroll.

The commissioner reports that at no one time last year were there more than seventeen prisoners in the jail, and that at times there were only three.

KING GEORGE'S LIBEL SUIT

Monarch Will Absolutely Deny a Morganatic Marriage

London, Feb. 1.—Proceedings were begun today before the lord chief justice and a special jury, brought by the crown authorities against Edward F. Mylius, who is charged with having been concerned in the publication of seditious articles and a defamatory statement that King George, when Prince of Wales, was morganatically married to a daughter of an admiral at Malta.

According to The Standard, there is still a possibility that the king may appear in the witness box, if Mylius persists in his plea of justification.

If the king does not appear in person he will send an absolute denial of the story through his secretary.

MR. POLLARD PRESIDENT

Re-elected at Annual Meeting of Choral Society

The annual meeting of the Quincy Choral Society was held at Colonial hall on Tuesday evening. President Pollard opened the meeting with his yearly report which was in his usual happy vein, showing deep interest in the work of the society, and a generally optimistic outlook for next season's plans. He expressed his own appreciation of the ability of Conductor Wenson, and of the value of his training in placing the work of the society upon such a high plane of excellence, saying that he felt sure he was also expressing the sentiment of every member of the society. The report was accepted with hearty applause as were the reports in general.

PRESIDENT POLLARD.

The society is to be congratulated upon the fact that, after three seasons' work the treasurer's report still shows a balance in the treasury to begin next season's work, and all bills paid without help from the guarantors. This shows unabated interest on the part of the members, and that the society, as a musical force in Quincy, occupies a high place in the public mind. The Choral concerts have come to mean something worth hearing to people in general, and it is certain that next season's program will be eagerly anticipated by many.

The election of officers in societies whose by-laws set no limit to the time of consecutive office holding, is apt to result in a monotonous re-election of the same board year after year; but in the Choral Society where nominations are always from the floor, and where a few of the members are awake to the more wide spreading and growth-building influence of new members in the executive force of any society, there is usually much nominating and good natured balloting; but custom nearly always rules and this election was no exception. It resulted in the choice of nearly the same board which has been in office since the society was formed: Thomas B. Pollard, president; Dr. George H. Ryder, vice president; Harry S. Bates, treasurer; Mrs. Irene C. Tirrell, secretary, and three directors: Mrs. Edith Cary Page, Frank W. Crane and Wendell H. Luce.

After a hearty vote of thanks to the executive board for the year's work, and to all who had assisted in making the season successful, the meeting was adjourned to February 15.

Although the annual meeting is usually the last of the year, there will be one or two extra meetings this month, social in spirit and with entertaining musical programs arranged by members.

IN FASHION'S REALM

Black Satin Banded With Velvet to be Popular for Spring Wear.

Black and White Still in Vogue With Those Who Dress Well.

We Americans are so progressive that the talk already is of Spring fashions. The majority are buying their Winter clothes, for they know that they are to face three months of cold weather; but the shops and dressmakers are getting ready for the warm weather, and they are also exploiting new fashions for the choice of the fortunate ones who are going South for Lenten days.

Nothing very new is promised at this date. It now looks as though the Spring fashions would play changes on the old ones. Something startling may develop later on, but every one hopes not. The designers say that they are quite willing to have things rest until next Summer, because they have just mastered the intricacies of the prevailing styles, and they see wide possibilities of improvement and modification.

They would like to build along these lines all Spring, using the narrow skirt, the high waist, the peasant sleeve, as the foundation and adding to these individual touches. This is a reasonable and sensible ambition and should have enough force in it to become a certainty.

Not only the designers, but the public as well, would prefer to have leisure to invent attractive garments on the present lines rather than throw aside the old and learn how to do something new.

There is much that is attractive in the fashions we have with us. We have climated a good deal that was evil and projected much that was worth while. In October things were rather chaotic, for only a few knew how to cut many of the coats and skirts that were fashionable and there were many failures. Now we know how to manage the narrow skirt in such a way that it is comfortable and graceful, and have learned how to adjust the peasant sleeve so that it is no longer hideous and uncomfortable. we can extend our skirts in a straight line over the waist and end them at an artistic line under the bust; we have learned to do without stocks on semi-formal gowns, and we have become quite accustomed to the absence of petticoats.

No one of these fashions is now laughed at or considered extreme. The public becomes accustomed to everything, and familiarity with a garment may possibly obliterate criticism of it, but at least it causes contentment. We know the present styles well, and know just what we can wear and what we must avoid.

Now let us have peace. Let the designers employ their art in giving us new combinations and perfect workmanship. Let the tailor learn how to apply novel and effective trimming on coats and skirts and let the maker of gowns learn how to adapt each one to the person that must wear it. This is a vast undertaking in itself, for there has been a lamentable lack of it for the last two years. It is not altogether the fault of the workers; they have been so frenzied in their attempt to keep up with the changing fashions and learn how to cut and drape each new garment that they have had no time for by-play, and yet it is this by-play that produces a city of well-dressed women.

There is little talk of the decided change from black and white. That it will last is the opinion of those who should know. It has proved a successful follower of vivid colors, and the artists in the profession have developed a wonderful way of putting crude colors against this combination that has made many a gown lovely. When it is the fashion to use a back ground such as black or white for the introduction of a special color note, then one is apt to find an amazing number of successful costumes.

It is when vivid colors are used as backgrounds that women in mass present a too brilliant appearance. The colors do not harmonize, and one is in doubt about what to wear for any occasion. The argument against a black and white season is that groups of women such as one sees at large social gatherings lose all gayety and their lack of color throws a funeral shade into the atmosphere.

The improvement over the old-time method of relieving black and white is to introduce Egyptian and Oriental colors with it. Heretofore designers have used pastel shades in conventional application. Pale pink and blue, lavender and canary yellow were the tones chosen to touch up and bring in relief the white and the black. Today these tones would not be considered. Vivid red, Chinese and cobalt blue, orange yellow, papal purple and grass green are among some of the colors chosen for black and white gowns.

These are made possible by the present method of veiling a color. It is now applied to the under slip, and does not appear as an addition to the outer covering. Whatever is veiled is often more artistic than what is fully revealed, and this is true of the gorgeous trimmings that are put on the interlining of the modern gown.

A black and white gown, for instance, at once receives attention when the upper bodice shows under its black chiffon slip all trimmed with black. The moire is not the stiff weave that we used to call by that name, and which was so well imitated in a cotton quality that it lost its vogue; it is an admirable texture with the softness of satin and the faint watering that is artistic.

The satin is not messaline nor meteor. It is somewhat heavier, although it has the suppleness of the other weaves. It is more like the satin we used to wear, for which we paid a good price and expected to get good service. The suits of both are made much the same way—short, slim coats, single breasted, turnover collars, a velvet band at the hem, on sleeves, and at the foot of the narrow skirt.

Some of the skirts show a gusset of velvet let in the two side seams half way to the hips from the hem. Again the gusset is only on the left side. It is not trimmed with braid and buttons, but left severely alone to give the impression of being a panel under a slashed Directoire skirt.

More ornamental suits in the black satin are made with a kind of Directoire coat, which is not new, but remains unusual and quite smart. It is buttoned down the front, reaches half way to the knees and has the fronts turned back from the waist line to the hem in the French Guard manner. The facing of these fronts is of black velvet. The sleeves are long and tight and the high Napoleon collar has Fleur-de-Lis of gold on each corner. The skirt of this coat has black velvet on it somewhere, and a good model for the slender woman has three wide folds of satin with a wide fold of velvet between.

It is not amiss to discuss furs among Spring fashions, even if we were not in the middle of January. But at this period the question of furs is quite important. There are still many women who have not had the leisure or the money to indulge in furs so far this season. They have waited until other and more necessary things were out of the way.

Black and white furs have taken on as much fashion as other black and white fabrics. They are not always an easy choice, because ermine, which is the best of the white furs, and rabbit, which is the best of the imitations, soil easily. Small strips of ermine go a long way toward making black fur effective, and some of the best sets have half-inch bands on the edge of the darker pelt.

It is not quite correct to speak of black fur, because the pelts that are most fashionable have a tinge of brown, such as Hudson seal and dipped otter. The long-haired furs, like fox and lynx have gone slightly off in favor because their surface is not smooth. There is a disposition to shelve the hides with long hair and even Russian and Hudson sable are placed next to seal and moleskin.

The two latter furs have reached a higher degree of popularity than even the furriers thought they would. Just why they became the most desired of all is hard to explain, unless it is that few other pelts have such a fashionably smooth surface. As near velvet as a fur can look seems to be the desire of the public.

Shoulder scarfs are more in fashion than any other kind of neckpiece and pillow muffs with little or no trimming are the only kind considered. The woman who owns a small muff must discard it if it is not of precious fur. If it is, then she must have it ripped apart and use it for a turban or as a trimming for another muff made of velvet or a smooth fur.—Anne Rittenhouse in New York Times.

SMALLPOX IN TENDERLOIN

Quaker City Takes Unusual Precautions to Prevent Its Spread

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—One of the most sweeping quarantines in the history of the city was put in force following the discovery of smallpox in the Tenderloin district. The section was roped off and guarded, and everyone found within the police boundary was compelled to submit to vaccination.

The health physicians waited until 4 o'clock in the morning, "when everyone would be at home," before beginning their work. At that hour 100 physicians, accompanied by a large detail of policemen, entered the district, which included Philadelphia's Chinatown, and began vaccinating.

It is estimated that 3000 persons submitted to the needles of the doctors.

WOMAN PUNCHES UP NAGEL

Says Rent For White House and Other Buildings Is Overdue

Washington, Feb. 1.—A demure little woman dropped in on Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor to tell him that she was tired of being beaten out of the rent that was due her for the use of the White House, treasury and state, war and navy buildings.

"I don't intend to be put off another minute," she said. "I have made all my plans to start for Florida tomorrow and I want to be sure that the matter will be settled before I leave."

"O, it will be settled all right," she was told. "Don't think of letting it interfere with your trip south." The woman expressed her thanks and presumably started for Florida.

OVER FIVE HUNDRED SHOCKS RECORDED

Dead From Mount Taal Eruption Number Four Hundred

Manila, Feb. 1.—The latest conservative estimate places the number of dead as a result of the eruptions of Mount Taal and the accompanying tidal wave at 400.

The volcano continues active, and there is no lessening of the shower of mud and stone. The observatory has recorded 537 shocks. Of these twenty-five were shown by the seismograph to have been of considerable intensity.

The organized relief expedition, composed of army surgeons, the constabulary and American and Filipino volunteers, now have charge of the situation.

Many deep fissures have opened on the north shore, and preliminary soundings indicate that the lake bottom is sinking.

TOOK NEGOTIABLE BONDS

Hardly Likely That Broker Davie Is Hard Pressed For Cash

Boston, Feb. 1.—Isadore Fox, receiver for Robert E. Davie, the missing boy broker, states that $80,000 worth of bonds of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway, which Davie bought for cash, he believes, are with him.

Davie also had with him, it is believed, 320 shares of common and the same amount of preferred stock of the United States and Mexican Trust company of New York.

Many of the bonds are negotiable in Mexico and abroad, so that the former wizard of finance, if outside the United States, should experience no difficulty in converting them into cash.

LAWYER'S BODY DUG UP

Bloodhounds Are Placed on Trail of Supposed Ghouls

Stanford, Ky., Feb. 1.—The coffin of George B. Saufley, a lawyer, who died suddenly last March, was found yesterday afternoon at the side of the grave in which it had been buried. On it were the footprints of a man and a woman, but the body had not been disturbed.

A strange woman tried to get the body several months ago, but the caretakers of the cemetery refused to exhume it. The grave was afterward guarded for several weeks. When the casket was found yesterday bloodhounds were brought to the grave side and immediately took up the trail of the supposed ghouls.

GIRL'S SIGHT IS NOT RESTORED

Fasted Eight Days In Anticipation of a Miracle

MAYOR BECOMES INTERESTED

Orders That Performance Must End, as City Authorities Would Be Blamed If Result of Self Sacrifice Proved Fatal—Fast Is Broken With Bowl of Broth, Followed With Toast and Eggs Under Eyes of Police

Pittsburg, Feb. 1.—McKeesport's blind girl, Margaret Shipley, yesterday completed her eighth day of fasting in the hopes of the restoration of her sight by a miracle, and remains sightless.

Mayor Arthur of McKeesport called at the Halderman home, where the blind girl has been making her fast, and served notice on Mrs. Halderman and the girl that the performance must end. Unless Mrs. Halderman forced the girl to take nourishment, the mayor said he would send somebody to jail.

"If this thing resulted fatally the city authorities would be blamed," said the mayor. The blind girl, who was conscious, consented. The mayor left the chief of police to see that his order was obeyed. Within half an hour Margaret was sipping a bowl of broth.

"I did not have enough faith," Margaret told the mayor. "If I had had more faith I would have had my sight by now. Lots of times in the last two days I have doubted, and I could not drive away the doubts. I am still trying to get more faith. I will keep on wearing this white robe, so as to be ready when the blessed moment comes."

The crowd that assembled at the house yesterday waited in vain for a message. No person was admitted to the girl's room except the watchers and the city officials.

C. F. Halderman, the head of the family, is preparing to remove to California. Halderman says that he will not stay in McKeesport and face his neighbors after this thing is over.

Margaret had toast and eggs last night. The city physician, whom the mayor sent to the Halderman house, says her condition is becoming normal. He told her she would be able to leave her bed in a couple of days.

"Oh, no," said Margaret, "I will lie here in my white robe and continue my meditations till heaven sends me sight."

The notoriety that resulted from the girl's fast has brought a sudden increase in Margaret's mail. She never received more than three or four letters in her life, but several thousand have reached the McKeesport postoffice in the last three days addressed to her. Mrs. Halderman refused to make any of them public, but said most of them urged Margaret to have courage and assured her others were praying for her.

NOT REGARDED AS "THEFT"

Woman Who Took $700 From Husband Is Acquitted by Jury

Toledo, Feb. 1.—Mrs. Florence Phillips of Maumee, without being required to offer any defense to a charge of stealing $700 from her husband, was acquitted by a jury. The indictment charged grand larceny.

The verdict was returned at the direction of Judge Brough, who ruled that the "theft" of any amount of money or property by the wife from the husband, or vice versa, did not constitute larceny.

The defense was also fortified with the proposition of law that a husband cannot testify against his wife.

Sheep of Seven Colors, Warranted Fast, Offered to New York Zoo

New York, Feb. 1.—Mayor Gaynor has received an offer from Uno Topperwein of San Antonio, Tex., to supply the New York zoo with something decidedly new in sheep.

Topperwein writes that he has captured a sheep in Mexico with seven colors in its wool and that, although he has twice sheared the animal, the harlequin colors remain fast.

The mayor will refer the letter to the authorities of the Bronx zoological gardens.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Rose Lane smiled complacently into the lieutenant governor's face.

Handler's face became red—a deep red that threatened any moment to merge into a rich grape purple hue.

"You go at that safe and open it just like you need the coin!" he shouted.

Valentine made a deprecatory gesture.

"You flatter me," he answered, and he smiled a most aggravating smile that caused the now thoroughly aroused prison master to pound his desk and hoarsely cry:

"Flattery be d——d! You do as I say or I'll give you the"—

Handler caught himself just in time. He suddenly remembered that the lieutenant governor was present. "Say, Valentine," he substituted for his intended threat of the straitjacket, "you're fourflushing because there's a gallery present, eh?"

MRS. WEBSTER STEPPED FORWARD PROTESTINGLY.

No. 1289 turned and surveyed the visitors present. His gaze passed from the lieutenant governor to the two members of the Gate of Hope society. Then in the background, half crouched into one of the uncomfortable wooden chairs that adorned the warden's office, he saw a girlish figure. He leaned forward involuntarily, for he saw a face and a pair of large brown eyes fixed steadfastly upon him. He recognized the girl as the one he had saved from the remorseless clutches of Billy Cotton—Cotton, whom he had thrown to his death through the window of a transcontinental flier. But only for a moment did Jimmy Valentine falter. With masterful control he wheeled to face the warden. "You are wrong again," he said evenly to Handler. "You know I am not what you would have these people think I am."

Now the grape purple began to show in the warden's face. The thick veins in his neck began to thicken still more and to crowd his low collar for space.

"You better do as I ask, Valentine," he warned.

"I know that every one here knows that, but"—

"You're doing ten for opening a bank safe and you can't open an old safe like mine?" The warden was sneering.

"I never opened that bank safe. You know that."

"You're going to pose, eh? Well, listen, you go and 'cop that gopher' or I'll give you solitaire for a month." Handler was now at his worst. A month of "solitaire!" A month, thirty days, thirty nights, alone, save for the rats and the river tides that seeped between the stones!

"It is an impossibility for any one to open a safe without the combination. I regret I cannot do as you ask."

Handler forgot the presence of the lieutenant governor and of the ladies.

"Get out of here, you"—

Mrs. Webster stepped forward protestingly.

Fay determined to take a hand.

"You're losing your temper, warden," he began when he saw the prisoner step to the door through which he had come. "Just a moment," Fay said commandingly to the convict. "I forgot your name."

The prisoner halted. He saw that the speaker had come across to the middle of the office. "My name is Valentine, sir," he responded.

"With your permission, warden, I will speak further with this young man," Fay directed at Handler.

"Aw, he's making a grand stand play because there is some one here."

"And you"—

Handler was apologetic.

"I've only"—

"If you please, I should like to talk to Valentine," spoke Fay coldly.

"All right, go ahead. He's waiting to talk."

"Valentine," said the lieutenant governor, "can you not as a favor to us, a lot of skeptics, open the prison safe?"

The prisoner came toward the officer of the state.

"If the warden will favor me with the combination I will try."

Handler broke in, "You fourflushing"—

"And without it?" continued Fay.

"I could no more do it than you, sir."

"Were you not convicted for doing just what we ask?"

"Yes, sir, on the evidence of a dying crook and"—

"That'll do, Valentine," interjected the warden.

"One moment, Mr. Handler," said Fay, raising his hand. "You were about to say, Valentine?"

"Nothing, sir."

"I want you to talk."

"I would rather not."

Rose Lane had risen from her chair. She advanced and grasped her uncle's arm. She turned her eyes pleadingly toward his.

"It might mean your pardon," said Fay, stroking fondly the brown hair that crowned the girl's head.

"My pardon?" exclaimed Valentine.

"Yes, I am the lieutenant-governor of the state. Perhaps I will intercede for you."

CHAPTER IV.

VALENTINE'S face revealed the thrill of surprise that shot through him as he learned that the man before him was no less a personage than the lieutenant governor of the state. And he might intercede for him; he might ask the governor for a pardon! At the same time Valentine was not insensible of the important part the girl at the state official's side had played in bringing about his change of fortune. She had called her uncle's attention to him and had evidenced keen interest in him. He would never forget that.

She stood now at the lieutenant governor's side, uncertain as to exactly what attitude she should maintain toward the young man in prison stripes who stood before her uncle and to whom she owed a lifelong debt of gratitude.

It was most embarrassing indeed, she concluded. She wondered what rule of etiquette applied in the case of a girl of eighteen who desired to enter into conversation with a convicted safe breaker. The flush in her cheeks mounted to her forehead, and into her soft brown eyes came the dancing, changing lights that were tellitales of her impulsive temperament.

Jimmy Valentine, conscious of the girl's delicate beauty and noticing that he still seemed to be the especial object of her attention, found difficulty in preserving an even demeanor. Finally, however, he secured a firm grip on himself and preserved a calm, undisturbed bearing with which even the watchful warden himself could find no fault. He addressed the lieutenant governor.

"After all," he said, "I think I will talk to you."

Handler did not approve of the turn events had taken.

"Oh, you will talk, will you?" he said threateningly to the prisoner.

Valentine was aware of the meaning of the warden's sinister tones. He had been an unwilling eyewitness on more than one occasion to the vengeance wreaked by the official on helpless prisoners who had aired their troubles or their experiences or those of fellow prisoners to the visitors from the outside world.

"You can't frighten me, warden," he announced defiantly. "I know I am taking a chance when I talk to an outsider, but"—and the flash that revealed in him the strong man's dauntless spirit came into his eyes—"I'll take that chance and all others for the one chance I have here to speak for myself—for my liberty."

The warden, appreciating the futility as well as the lack of wisdom in attempting anything further in the lieutenant governor's presence, subsided.

Fay turned to his niece.

"Rose, are you sure this is the man?" he said in low tones.

The girl unhesitatingly stepped toward the convict.

"Mr. Valentine, have you ever seen me before?" she asked.

"Yes," replied No. 1289 without a falter.

"Can you tell me where?"

"Yes." He directed his eyes significantly toward the warden.

The lieutenant governor caught the suggestion and said:

"Warden, might I ask that this man, my niece and I be left alone for a moment?"

"Why?"

"I have asked a favor of you, Mr. Handler. I will be responsible for your prisoner, and the ladies will pardon me, I know."

"Oh, certainly!" spoke Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster simultaneously and walked out of the room.

But Handler was not so quietly disposed of. He snapped at Fay:

"Valentine will tell a straight story, barring a few facts. He was a crook; had part of the coin stolen. If you can jump that pardon him." The warden leaned forward and leered into the prisoner's face, saying, "If you try to make a sucker of me you'll get yours."

Handler strode hastily out into one of the corridors of cells.

Rose again addressed the convict. "Where did you see me before?"

"On the New York Central train between Buffalo and Rochester on the 8th of June two years ago. You were alone in the parlor car. I came in and saw a man sitting on the arm of your chair. You were pale and frightened. I pulled him away and took him into the smoking compartment. He came back again, and I a moment later heard you scream. I came in, and he attacked me. I hip locked him and threw him through the window."

Rose extended him her hand, which he eagerly grasped.

"And then after you threw the man through the window," asked Fay, "will you not tell me what you did, Mr. Valentine?"

"I was afraid I might have killed the man, so I left the train by the wrong side at the next station."

"He was badly hurt—died later, did he not?"

"Yes, sir."

"Was he a friend of yours?"

"No, sir."

"Ever see him before?"

"No, sir."

"But he confessed that he was your partner in robbing the bank—why?"

"Likely because I threw him from the train."

"How did you come by the money identified as having been stolen from the bank?"

Valentine paused a moment before his reply.

"I won it of him playing whist on the train just before the row."

"Is Valentine your name?"

"No, sir."

"Then how did he know you as Valentine?"

"He asked my name while we were playing cards, and as I thought it none of his business I told him Valentine."

"What is your business?"

"I was originally an expert accountant; then I became an expert with the Globe Safe company."

"Tell me, did you give this evidence at the trial?"

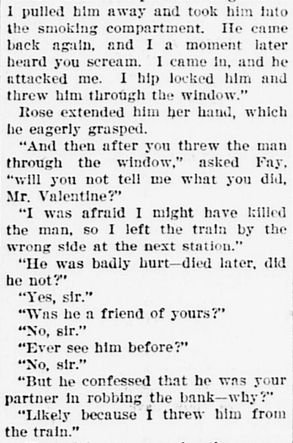

"No, sir."

"Why not?"

"The man who confessed had died. If I had told this story they would have tried me for murder; that would have brought the lady in."

Rose Lane gave a gasp of ecstasy as she heard Jimmy Valentine's final words. She clasped her hands enthusiastically and turned to the lieutenant governor, exclaiming as she did so:

"Oh, uncle, just to think that he would not try to help himself keep out of jail by telling about rescuing me from that ruffian. And all because he didn't want to drag me into the case."

Rose drew a deep breath and gazed adoringly at Jimmy Valentine.

"Oh, uncle," she cried, "isn't he a perfectly dear safe breaker?"

DYNAMITE CAPS ARE FOUND IN SUIT CASE

Said to Belong to Suspect In Los Angeles Outrage

San Francisco, Feb. 1.—A suit case, alleged to have been identified as belonging to J. B. Bryce, one of the men for whom a warrant is out charging knowledge of the Los Angeles Times explosion, was found yesterday afternoon by detectives at a news stand near the San Francisco Ferry building, where it had been checked.

The suit case is said to be the one taken by Bryce from the residence of Mrs. L. Ingersoll, where he had roomed with David Kaplan and M. A. Schmidt.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ASSESSED TEN DOLLARS.

It cost J. Willard Farnham $10 this morning for calling a man a herring at Milton on Tuesday, and emphasizing the remark by knocking down the man to whom the name had been applied. The affair took place at the Milton car barn. Farnham and Frank West got into a little dispute Tuesday morning, and after calling each other herrings, West alleged that Farnham knocked him down. The latter claimed that he was simply defending himself, but Judge Pratt said the assessment would be $10.

—The National Senate will vote Thursday on the ocean mail bill.

AGAINST THE HULL PETITION

For New Basis of Apportionment For Fore River Bridge

There was quite a fight before the House committee on rules of the Legislature Tuesday afternoon over the admission of a bill presented by Representative Nickerson of Hull to broaden the bill for the widening of the draw and repairs of the Fore River bridge.

The admission of the bill was favored by Harvey L. Pratt, counsel for the town of Scituate; W. H. Rogers counsel for the town of Cohasset; and Senator Nash of Hanover, for his senatorial district. They charged that the towns they represented did not have the opportunity to get together on the matter, nor did they know until late in December what it was proposed to do. They wanted to reopen the apportionment made in 1906 by a commission. This is what their petition will do.

Senator Nash said that the cat in the meal was the widening of the draw, which was solely in the interest of the City of Quincy, which wanted to get its dreadnoughts through. He said that not one of the towns brought into the apportionment of the cost and maintenance of the bridge under the findings of the commission four years ago could be benefited because the draw was widened and they wanted a new apportionment.

The admission of the bill or petition was opposed by Senators Barnes of Weymouth and Keith of Bridgewater, Representatives Langelier and Thomas of Quincy, Representative Storm of Braintree, and Solicitor Mellen of that town, also City Solicitor McAnarney of Quincy.

Braintree was opposed to the petition because Norfolk county is brought in, and that town will have to bear a part of the burden it does not under the apportionment made four years ago.

Representative Thomas said that the Fore River Co. buys supplies in the towns which now object to the draw, amounting to $225,000, and in the whole state it expends more than $1,000,000 annually.

The committee took the matter under advisement.

THE GOLDEN CIRCLE.

A gentlemen's night was given by the Golden Circle of the United Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening at the home of Miss May Morrison 16 Elm street. The chaperons were Mrs. Albert Thompson, Mrs. Charles Campbell and Mrs. Andrew Morrison. Miss Grace McKinnon favored the company with a reading. Thomas Melrose and William Campbell sang several solos. Games of all kinds were played and refreshments of candy and fruit were served by the young ladies.

Those present were:Gertrude Bonham, Tiny McInnis, Margaret Gordon Grace McKinnon, May Morrison, Jeanie Russell, Barbara Ross, Georgiana Marcus, Marion Russell, Annie Wadman, Mary McKay, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie, Arthur Garmory, Harold Warmington, William Michael, William Campbell, Charles Ross, Albert Robertson, William McPherson, James Ross, Thomas Melrose, Leon Field, Guy Hamilton.

ACTED SUSPICIOUSLY.

. Word was received at the Police station Tuesday afternon that there was a man under the railroad culvert on Newport venue near the Presidents bridge acting in a strange manner. Thinking that it might be the man who had been frightening women about Wollaston the police auto was sent hurrying to the place. They found the man, and locked him up as a suspicious character. The man had on two or three pairs of pants, outside of which he had put on a pair of white drawers.

This morning two Wollaston ladies who had been annoyed by a strange man came to the police station to see if they could identify the man. They declared, however, that he was not the one. The young man gave his name as Carl Allezhausser, aged 21 years, and his home as Appleton street, Atlantic. After receiving the third degree he was given in charge of his mother. The young man evidently was not just right mentally.

WALDEMAR MARKER

Popular Tenor Soloist Sings at Quincy Concert

A musical treat was in store for those who attended the concert at the Swedish Baptist church Tuesday evening, and about 200 people took advantage of it. The church choir rendered two selections in a very able manner, and the string band likewise furnished excellent music in their contributions. The piano solos by Clarence Lundin were greatly enjoyed and loudly encored.

Waldemar Marker of Jamestown, N. Y., a tenor singer of note throughout the country, rendered five selections, two in Swedish and three in English. Mr. Marker has a powerful and sweet tenor voice of wide range. His rendition of "The Holy City" in Swedish was perhaps the most enjoyable number on the program, even to those who could not understand the language. A combination piece, "My Earthly Home" and "My Heavenly Home" was rendered in the English and Swedish and elicited much well-earned applause. Other selections in English were "The Fading Rose" and "Calvary," both of which were well rendered and effective.

Mr. Marker is touring the New England states, assisting in revival services, and his only means of subsistence comes from the proceeds of these concerts. The Swedish people may congratulate themselves in that they have done well by one who contributed much to the success of the meetings held last week in the church.

BASE BALL NOTES.

The Ramblers are getting into line for 1911. They have started on their schedule for games away from home. On July 4th they will travel down to Wellfleet again where they went on the last Fourth. The boys are eager for another try this year. The rooters down there dig down in a way to make a fellow feel envious in comparing their support to that which a visiting team gets at home.

There will be some change in the Ramblers outfield this season, and the fans may expect as fast a trio as there is in this city.

It is thought that the Galvin Bros. of the Cranch A. A. will try out for the Ramblers since they are a speedy pair.

"Capt. Bill" Manning stole 35 bags last season, made 54 put outs and 53 assists.

"Butts" Chapman was star batter getting 33 hits out of 89 times at bat in 22 games, making his percentage .371. McCarty got 431 in 16 games and Murphy 500 in 10 games.

The Ramblers are making up a schedule of games with the mill league of Providence this year for Sunday games.

"Russ" Bates will probably join the Ramblers this season.

Will the Makaria baseball nine show up this year?

SAN FRANCISCO WINS FIRST RECOGNITION

Vote Tests Congress' Sentiment In Regard to Exposition

Washington, Feb. 1.—San Francisco was given the Panama canal exposition by the house of representatives. The battle between the Pacific coast city and New Orleans came on a vote whether the house would first consider the New Orleans proposition, involving a government expenditure of $1,000,000, or the San Francisco resolution, which does not call for a government expenditure.

The house voted to consider Frisco first by a vote of 188 to 159. The San Francisco resolution thereupon was immediately taken up and its formal adoption was a foregone conclusion.

In submitting the special rule under which the exposition project was considered Tuesday, Mr. Dalzell, from the committee on rules, stated that that committee had been appealed to by the advocates of both San Francisco and New Orleans. Neither city was willing to have the other city's claims first considered.

It was thereupon determined to put the matter squarely up to the house and have a rollcall, which was done.

GREAT VICTORY FOR QUINCY

Defeats Fast Reading High at Reading

In one of the fastest and most exciting games of the year Quincy High defeated Reading High Tuesday afternoon on the Reading floor, by a score of 18 to 7. Inasmuch as Reading had already defeated Quincy on her home floor it was generally expected that Quincy would receive a more overwhelming defeat when Reading had us in her own lair, but Captain Manning and his men came back like a steel spring, and gave their opponents a drubbing.

During the first half there was so much close work that there was little opportunity for shooting baskets from the floor. "Bill" Manning caged several free tries, however, and the Reading team was so well covered by Quincy that the score was 9 to 5 in favor of "the Red and Blue" at the end of the first half.

. During the second half Quincy played more for the ball, and displayed good team work. Prout and Nicolini collided during this period, and the former proved to be the harder of the two, since the Reading centre had to leave the game. The injury was not serious. Temple of the home team was also hurt, but he was able to stay in the game.

Manning was the star of the game. During the first period he shot five baskets from free tries, and in the second period he secured two baskets from the floor and another from a foul. One of the baskets from the floor was shot with Stenbridge, captain of the Reading team, clinging on to him. Prout, at centre, played a strong game in blocking and passing, and shot two baskets. Harmon came to the fore with two baskets and shares with the Chapman brothers honorable mention for great defensive work. The victory was the most satisfactory won by the Quincy team this season, and it will reflect great credit upon the school not only because it was a victory, but also because the game was clean and sportsmanlike throughout:

The summary:

QUINCY	READING

SECOND TEAM ALSO.

The second team repeated its performance of two weeks ago and defeated the Reading second team 12 to 8. The game was close and exciting all the way through, and served as an inspiration for the first string men. S. Prout, Tirrell and Trask played the best for Quincy, while McLeod, Stratton and Geary excelled for Reading.

The summary:

QUINCY 2nd	READING 2nd

SPORTING NOTES.

Quincy High certainly did herself proud Tuesday in bearding the Reading lion in its own den. Prout closed one of the lion's eyes, and Manning got two hands full of his whiskers.

At a meeting of the Quincy Adams Extension club of the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday evening Thomas Veale was elected captain of the baseball team, and Carl Carlson chosen manager. A Y. M. C. A. league will be formed in the spring. Four teams from the boys' department will contest for the trophy. The Intermediates and Employed Boys will be represented in the league.

—The net price of gas in Stoneham and Reading will be reduced from $1.80 per 1000 cubic feet to $1.50.

Fallen Financier Says They Were Not Interfered With Until He Bought it, When Banking Department Jumped on Him—Testifies In Trial Before New York Jury Which Is to Determine His Sanity

New York, Feb. 1.—Joseph G. Robin, the indicted banker, whose financial operations led to the closing of his chain of banking institutions, was placed on trial before a jury in proceedings to determine his sanity.

Alternately dejected and complacent, Robin took the stand and swore, among other things, that he had given bribes to effect the passing of certain securities covering loans held in 1910 by the Riverside branch of the Northern bank. Robin was chairman of the board of directors of this institution.

The four alienists upon whose diagnosis of Robin's alleged mental disorders the verdict largely depends, were in court and observed the prisoner closely.

District Attorney Whitman appeared personally for the state. Robin's counsel, Mr. Jerome, upon whose declaration that the prisoner cannot direct his case the proceedings were brought, was also in the courtroom. Robin spoke almost inaudibly at times, and was requested repeatedly by Justice Swann to raise his voice.

The indicted banker said that he was living in the Tombs, came to this country in 1885, and had been engaged in various ventures until 1906, when he participated in the merger of a financial institution, of which he was part owner, with the Northern bank.

Robin said he understood, all right, that the proceedings were to determine his present mental condition. He had hardly gotten the words out of his mouth when he surprised everybody by suddenly exhibiting a check for $4000 which he said furnished proof that he had paid a bribe to effect the passage of certain securities covering loans.

"I bought the Riverside bank," Robin testified. "The banking department that had been allowing this bank to go along this way suddenly jumped on me.

"'How about this Fidelity Development company?' M. W. Hutchins, the chief examiner of banks, asked me. I said I bought it for $75, but it was now worth par. He said:

"'I bought forty-six shares and I have not been able to get a bid on it.'

"'How much did you pay?' I asked.

"'$3000,' he answered.

"I paid him $4000 by check and Hutchins passed our bank. This is the way the banking department does business.

Mayor Signs Contract for Auto Chemical Engine with LaFrance Company

A Reliable Car Made by Well Known Manufacturers

After more than one week of tireless energy exerted in quest of information and in the inspection of motor cars adaptable to the needs of the local fire department, Mayor William T. Shea and Chief Engineer Peter J. Williams, awarded on Wednesday the contract for one combination chemical engine and hose motor car to the Am-LaFrance Fire Engine Company of Elmira, N. Y., the company being represented by their New York agent, Joseph A. Webber. The contract price was $5,500. The car is to be delivered in from 90 to 120 working days.

Mayor Shea said last night "The selection of a car for our department has been one of the hardest problems I have had to face, and I believe we have made a wise selection. I took into consideration the several bids received, the reputation of the companies, the quality and strength of material used, the power of the motor and its design, the cities and towns having purchased the several makes of cars, letters from various officials throughout the United States, personal conferences with authorities on automobiles, personal inspection of the cars, the matter of tires, wheelbase, drive, clutch, cooling, brakes and design and, after a few sleepless nights decided to award the contract to

THE LAFRANCE COMPANY.

This company has been building fire apparatus for over half a century. They know the requirements of the service, which is very exacting. They have been experimenting with the present type of car they market for a period covering three years. They have not attempted to place it on the market until it had first been thoroughly tried out on the hills and rough roads of Elmira, N. Y. Their reputation is of the best. Their financial condition is of the best. Their guarantee is equal to any submitted, and I find that they have alays lived up to their guarantees. We have some of their apparatus in service in this city. I felt that when we need fire apparatus, the place to get it was from a fire apparatus manufacturer, and the following esdcription of the car ought to convince our taxpayers that the City of Quincy, through its Mayor has not made any mistake in the selection.

A DESCRIPTION.

The motor car is a four cylinder, four-cycle, 5 1-2 inch bore and 6 inch stroke and by the A. L. A. M. formula is rated at 48 H. P., but this rating only assumes a piston speed of 1,000 feet per minute. At a greater piston speed, and the motor is designed for a speed much in excess of that mentioned—the motor has developed an actual horse power of 74.4 percent on a break test. All parts of the motor are designed for heavy service and in-

TAXES ARE WELL PAID

Current Receipts of City in January Unusually Large

The receipts of the city in January were remarkably good. Over twice as much was paid in by taxpayers as in January last year, and large sum by the water takers, showing that Quincy people are prosperous, and have the cash to pay their bills.

The tax receipts reported by the the City Auditor in January are compared below with 1910 and 1909:

To Jan. 31, 1911	$51,171.09
To Jan. 31, 1910	22,847.12
To Jan. 31, 1909	25,188.71

The water receipts in January were over $3,500 more than last Janfiary as will be seen by these figures:

To Jan. 31, 1911	$17,673.33
To Jan. 31, 1910,	14,090.46
To Jan. 31, 1909,	12,227.01

The receipts from sewer assessments were also larger and compare as follows:

To Jan. 31, 1911,	$1,618.59
To Jan. 31, 1910,	1,145.35
To Jan. 31, 1909,	683.75

The receipts from assessments for new house connections with the sewer showed a falling off, the figures being:

To Jan. 31, 1911,	$480.66
To Jan. 31, 1910,	710.62
To Jan. 31, 1909,	798.07

To total receipts of the city from these four sources during the month were about twice as large as in 1910 or 1909, as follows:

To Jan. 31, 1911,	$70,943.67
To Jan. 31, 1910,	38,793.55
To Jan. 31, 1909,	38,897.54

SUCCESSFUL LAUNCHING

Steamer Sankaty Put Over at Fore River Shipyard

The passenger and freight steamship Sankaty, the first vessel to be launched at the Fore River yards this year, was given her maiden dip this noon in the presence of a number of officials of the New Bedford, Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket Steamboat Co. for whom she was built. The launch was a private one, for aside from the officials of the New Bedford Co. and friends of the sponsor, the only ones present were the officers of the Fore River Co. and the naval officers of the American Argentina governments who are stationed at the yard.

The sponsor was Miss Elizabeth Hathaway of New Bedford, and she performed her part of the ceremony without a hitch.

The New Bedford party came to the works in a special train that arrived shortly before 12 o'clock landing the party within a few feet of the launching stand that had been erected about the bow of the vessel. Work driving home the wedges that lifted the vessel from the blocks and allowed her to rest on the ways was well under way by by this time, so that but little more remained to be done to launch the vessel.

When all was in readiness, the signal was given to saw away the soul pieces, the last pieces of plank that held the vessel in check. This was the work of but a minute, and as she began to move down the greased ways, Miss Hathaway struck the steel bow a ringing blow with a bottle of Mumm's "extra dry" which was encased in a steel mesh. As the sparkling wine ran down the steel bow Miss Hathaway cried out "I christen thee, Sankaty." The next minute the vessel struck the water with a splash that sent a huge wave bounding toward the Weymouth shore.

Then the launching party gave a hearty cheer which was taken up by the whistles on the tugs in the river and by the whistles in the yard. The tugs immediately came alongside and the new addition to the Fore River fleet was taken to the fitting out dock where she will be completed in time to go into service the coming summer.

The launching stand was as usual gayly bedecked with bunting of the national colors, while a line of flags of the international code were suspended across the deck of the vessel from stem to stern. The bottle of wine was also suspended from the bow by a tricolored ribbon.

Immediately after the launch the guests were escorted to one of the office buildings where a lunch was served.

After the lunch Admiral Bowles welcomed the guests at the launching, and assured the New Bedford friends that there were plenty of other points in that vicinity for which future boats might be named. Today he said was an ideal day for the launching of this vessel for she was built to combat with snow and ice.

Brief remarks were made by Representative W. R. Thomas, who told how much Quincy appreciated such a great industry as was the Fore River Co. and how proud we were when it was learned that Argentina had awarded the company the contract for the two largest battleships in the world. He was sure that Argentina would never have cause to regret it.

Mr. Shultz, acting manager of the New England Navigation Co., and Representative Willis, also said a word in praise of the good work of the Fore River Co.

The special train took the launching party, including some twenty or more senators and representatives, back to Boston at 1.30.

STREET RAILWAY WILL COOPERATE

Whether It Be Double Tracking, Freight Transportation or Comfort Stations

So General Superintendent Conway Tells Board of Trade

The Board of Trade had an unusually large attendance at its regular February meeting on Wednesday evening. Street matters in general and double tracking of Washington street in particular, received attention, as General Superintendent Conway and Division Superintendent Gammon were present by request.

The regular order of business was suspended and the Washington street problem taken up immediately. President Stone outlined the action of the board in its efforts to secure better street railway service on Washington street, and then introduced John T. Conway of the Old Colony company.

Supt. Conway wanted to learn more, however, about the needs and plans.

A. L. Whitman criticised the service on Washington street, and anticipated it would be worse when trolley freight was established. There was great need of double tracks to be placed in the centre of the street. The service was worse since the long turnout was put in.

F. F. Crane poured on a little oil. He told of the progress in transportation from Lapham's coaches to horse cars, and later electric cars. Today we have very courteous employees on the street railway and pretty good service. To secure double tracking was a question of damages for street widening.

President Stone and others agreed that the company had very courteous employees. But the Quincy Point route is a good paying line and entitled to better service.

Councilman Richards told of the long time taken on Nantasket trips. Quincy had freely granted franchises, as asked, for locations, turnouts, trolley freight, etc., and should get something in return; more cars and quicker time.

A. L. Whitman emphasized the need of larger waiting room and toilets in City Square.

Mr. Frothingham and Mr. Dasha of the North Weymouth Improvement Association were present and said they were instructed to work for a double track system to Quincy. The service today prevented the development of North Weymouth.

Supt. Conway was pleased at the appreciation of employees. Nevertheless, he said, it was difficult in the summer months to obtain experienced men. The management has considerable to contend with, and it is difficult to give the best of service. It was eleven years ago that he came to city. Then there were no double tracks and no transfers. Double tracking is a business proposition. The attitude of the company is always to meet the citizens fairly on public improvements and cooperate. We must first find what is really needed and the estimated cost. What are the abutters willing to do? What is the Massachusetts Highway willing to do? Have the County Commissioners any interests? Then the company will tell definitely what it will do. Under present conditions we are doing the best we can on Washington street. It is not possible to give smooth 15-minute service. Trolley freight service has proved a godsend to any community where adopted. They will tell you so. Congestion is not an injury to a city, as it really means business. Where comfort stations are needed the city, the steam railroad and the street railway should cooperate.

He suggested a joint committee of the Board of Trade and City Council to consider the Washington street situation, and find out just what was needed. Then the street railway would do its part.

F. F. Crane brought out the fact that the weight of goods generally handled by trolley freight were packages that two men could handle, but Supt. Conway said special arrangements could be made for Quincy, and should a dock be established on the water front the street railway would be ready to provide means of shipment if the city would grant the rights. Mr. Conway was enthusiastic over a dock.

Mr. Conway volunteered the information that trolley freight for Quincy was not far distant, as cars were now being equipped.

A vote of thanks was extended to General Superintendent Conway and Supt. Gammons for attending the meeting, also to the two Weymouth men.

Refreshments were served and then routine business was in order.

The petition for the double tracking

PROGRESS ON GRANITE BILL

Agreement Reached on Many of the Items

Another meeting of the two committees representing the Granite Manufacturers Association and Granite Cutters Union was held Wednesday evening. Quite a number of the items in the agreement were settled, but the committee did not reach the vital question, that is the one relative to the minimum rate of wages. Another meeting of the Association will be held next Wednesday evening.

WELL KNOWN PAINTER.

Ward L. Hayward, formerly one of Quincy's well known citizens, passed away Wednesday afternoon at the old homestead at Scituate, where he has resided for the past six years, aged about 70 years. Mr. Hayward had been in poor health for about a year, his illness being due to a shock. For the past few months he has been confined to an invalid's chair. Wednesday morning he had another shock which he did not survive.

When in Quincy Mr. Hayward was for many years one of the firm of Hayward Bros., the well known painters. They have not been engaged in active business however for several years. Mr. Hayward was a widower, his wife having passed away some years ago. He leaves a son, Charles Hayward who resides in Scituate, and two daughters. His daughters are Nellie, wife of Mr. Witham of Scituate, and Jesse, wife of Warren T. Arnold.

Mr. Hayward was one of the oldest members of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows and for many years held the office of chaplain of the lodge very acceptably.

The funeral will be held on Saturday at 2 P. M., from his late residence at Scituate. The Rev. F. B. Noyes the local pastor will officiate. The burial will be at Scituate.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Florida has a bride seventy-eight years old. The Florida papers probably attribute this to the effect of the Florida climate.

Jacob Riis says that drunkenness is caused by poverty and half by poor cooking. Apparently the mere matter of thirst does not get a look in.

Irkutsh, in Siberia, is esteemed the wickedest city in the world. Pittsburg must have been losing a few laps recently.

When May Irwin tells "Uncle Joe" he has "beein doing some funny stunts," it shows how universally genius is recognized.

Wellesley college girls do not want to vote. What a blow to the "votes for women" people. The ballot on the question showed 557 against to 293 for suffrage.

To be out of debt must be a surprise to any town but Bridgewater finds itself not only out of debt but some $5,000 to the good as well as having another $5,000 due from uncollected taxes. It also has a town fund of over $18,000.

What is hailed as the victory of Governor Wilson of New Jersey in defeating ex-Senator Smith for reelection to the Senate and in securing the election of James E. Martine, is arousing comment in Washington. It was felt that in precipitating the fight against Smith, Governor Wilson staked his political future.

This question of ship subsidies is being agitated again before Congress with the backing of President Taft. It is insisted that all American business which appears on ships for the transportation of either its raw materials or finished products is paying to foreign ship owners a tax or tribute greatly in excess of tariff duties and that a constant stream of revenue which should remain in this country to fill the arteries of commerce is drawing off to other countries. The project is encountering the usual opposition.

The formation of the National Progressive Republican League in the fight between the insurgents and standpatters to control the Republican party in exciting considerable comment. The President is said to be concerned over the matter and to regard it as an attempt to contest his renomination in 1912. He is undecided whether to appear indifferent to the League or to prepare to oppose its activities. The attitude of Theodore Roosevelt toward the League is also causing much speculation. From his utterances in the Outlook and on the platform, he is thought to be entirely in accord with the principles of the new organization, but whether he endorses its reported intention of urging the nomination of Senator LaFollette for president is a decided question. The principles of the League are brief. It aims to restore government to the hands of the people; to prevent corrupt use of money in elections; to provide for popular election of Senators; to secure direct primaries; to simplify presidential elections; and to establish the initiative referendum and recall. This enunciation of so-called Republican principles sounds like a political platform written by William Jennings Bryan, and demonstrates how much political lines have been shifted in recent years.

Politics, foreign relations and ship subsidies seem to be strangely mixed in the new and great "American Idea" in which the leaders of the Republican party are seeking to interest President Taft and the people of the United States. This idea is to build a railway through North, Central and South America, so it will be possible to transport merchandise by rail from this country as far as the Straits of Magellan, if desired. Politics are involved in it because the leaders of the Republican party feel that their recent disastrous defeat can be retrieved only by some great project capable of firing the imagination and patriotism of the American people. Perhaps the leaders of the Republican party seek to follow the example of Bismarck who, when the German Empire was torn with internal dissentions, precipitated the Franco-Russian War in order to take the eyes of the German people from their troubles at home and direct them toward foreign conquest. Foreign relations are involved in the idea because the apparent failure of the favorite plans of President Taft and Secretary Knox to capture the Far East as an American market makes it necessary to provide another outlet for American manufactures. Ship subsidies are involved because if American products can be distributed throughout Central and South America without ships, the necessity for a subsidized merchant marine will disappear. The vastness of the undertaking is realized, but the American people are thought to be capable of carrying it through.

THE GROWTH OF ADVERTISING.

The most phenomenal change which the publication business has seen during recent years, is the growth of advertising. We have in mind many journals on our exchange list that are printing nearly twice the number of pages that they were able to fill ten years ago.

Their news columns have not greatly enlarged during that time. The collection of local and telegraphic news was highly developed at that period. The change has come about because business men have found out that they can make a great deal more money through advertising.

The department stores have worked out the idea in the most scientific fashion. No consideration of local pride, in a newspaper as a representative of the home town, tempts them to their lavish use of printer's ink. It is purely a question of sales. They would no more think of getting along without advertising than they would think of opening some morning without clerks to wait on customers.

Here and there, however, one finds some one of the smaller merchants who thinks he can get along without this factor of salesmanship which the great stores find essential. Actually the little store neds it even more than the big store. The big store would not be apt to make any money if it quit advertising, but it would draw a certain minimum of trade by its very bigness. If the small store quits advertising, it gets practically no trade except what comes from its show window displays.

The average person will read a newspaper advertisement scores of times for every once he passes a given shop window. Hence the value of the advertisement is worth far more than any showing made in a window, which the bulk of the buying public never sees.

DRIFT OF OPINION

A Brooklyn woman, who very temperately yet very pointedly addresses a New York contemporary, declares it to be impossible to find short hatpins in the market. She says that while she wears a small hat, as do tens of thousands of other women this year, only one length of hatpin is to be found. All hatpins are made, she alleges, upon the model of a year or a year and a half ago, when big hats were the rage. They are in common use not because they are desirable, but because they monopolize the trade. The manufacturers, all men, make up millions of them on one model; the women have to take them or go without.

It may be well for this protest to receive widespread publicity not only because of the light it sheds upon responsibility with regard to hatpins, but because of the hint it gives with regard to responsibility for a great many other things.

Perhaps it should be assumed that woman lays upon men the blame for most of the fashions that draw out criticism. All that is certainly known about it is that if she were inclined to be ungenerous she might easily and properly do so. For she is dependent to a large degree upon the taste, invention, skill and business exigencies of men. Men rather than women, dictate fashions. Men devise the models and produce the articles that very frequently bring down criticism upon women.

Of course, it lies with women to say whether they will accept what the men provide. They could, if they would, go without the big hatpins or the big hats or the high heels. But only nation-wide, world-wide insurgency could accomplish much, and women are not well enough organized to carry on a fashion-changing campaign that would give resonable promise of success.—Christian Science Monitor.

What is to be the outcome of that move, on the part of the legislature, by which the state board of health is directed to investigate the conditions under which sanitary drinking cups are manufactured, and report on or before the 15th of April? The house has set the ball a-rolling, and it is believed that the order will be concurrently acted upon at the different stages. According to general expectations, there will be more or less of a determined attempt to repeal last year's law. Despite all that the health experts have said nd may say, the feeling is growing that in requiring the purchase of sanitary paper cups, the Massachusetts legislature unduly favored the paper cup manufacturers. The point is further made that in seeking to establish sanitary conditions, the legislature, by decreeing the retirement of the common drinking cup, except in a few favored circles, has set up conditions little reckoned upon when last year's law was pushed through with a rush and a hurrah. The irritating feature centers in the steadily expanding conviction that in striking at the common drinking cup, with its magnified dangers to individual health, the legislature innocently placed private manufacturing interests above the public welfare. This is where the pinch comes, and there are legislators who have come to realize that popular growling over this pinch it as well based as it ought to be respected.—Salem News.

The Massachusetts house has gone on record in favoring San Francisco over New Orleans as a site for the Panama Canal exposition. Incidentally, the information is forthcoming that the reasons for this expression are based upon the fact that the Pacific Slope city, unlike its southern rival, neither asks nor desires aid from Congress, having already raised $17,500,000 for the exposition.

If the various legislatures are going to line up in this matter, we fail to see why the Massachusetts reasoning should not commend itself at least to the majority of these bodies. Tapping the national treasury in favor of expositions held by ambitious cities has been overdone, and it is now time to cry halt.—Salem News.

She was presented a silver tea set on behalf of those present, Mr. McCullock making the presentation speech. An excellent musical program was given by Misses M. Reed, A. WILL FAVOR TARIFF BOARD

Senate Finance Committee Will Make Two Amendments

Washington, Feb. 2.—Senator Smoot, who is an important man on the senate committee on finance in the absence of Senator Aldrich, said, after a talk with the president, that the finance committee will vote to report favorably the tariff commission bill after amending it in at least two particulars.

He says that the committee will strike out that provision of the house bill under which the board would have some authority in the matter of summoning witnesses and obtaining papers and documents. The committee, he feels sure, will also vote in a provision that the president shall appoint the five members of the board, by and with the consent of the senate. As the bill stands now, it is not necessary for the appointments to the board to be confirmed by the senate.

HONDURAN TROOPS LEAVE

Puerto Cortez Occupied by American and British Marines

Puerto Cortez, Feb. 2.—The evacuation of Puerto Cortez by the Honduran government troops has taken place, and the town is now in the hands of the American and British marines, who are awaiting the arrival of the forces of General Bonilla, the leader of the revolutionists.

Several days ago trenches were dug and guns were placed outside the limits of the town, and government troops were stationed there to oppose the insurgents, but these were withdrawn, the governor having asked the commanders of the international forces for forty-eight hours in which to evacuate the city.

He asked also for protection and marines were then landed from the United States gunboat Marietta and the British cruiser Brilliant to prevent disorders.

TESTS FOR BOY SCOUTS

National Council Soon to Meet at Washington

On Feb. 14 the National council of Boy Scouts of America will meet at Washington at the White House, and be received by President Taft who is honorary president of Boy Scouts of America. It is estimated that about 300,000 boys are enrolled in different states under about 3,000 scout masters.

Locally we are right in the game, and four troops all doing business along the Boy Scout movement. One in connection with the Wollaston extension Club of Y. M. C. A., another troop in our Quincy Association, another at Quincy Point, and another at South Quincy Extension club.

Lester H. Clee, boys work director of Young Men's Christian Association is scout commissioner, and is in charge of all the work. A large number of boys have been sworn in as tenderfoot which requires that a boy shall be able to tie four knots, know the scout law, history of American flag, and take the Scout's oath which is:

"On my word of honor I will do my best,
To do my duty to God and my country,
To help others at all times
To obey the Scout law."

The scouts are now studying up for the second class scouts and some have already taken tests in swimming and signalling.

For a boy to become a second class scout he must pass following tests.

1—Have at least 1 month's service as a tenderfoot.

2—Elementary first aid and bandaging.

3—Signalling, (Semaphore.)

4—Track half a mile in 25 minutes.

5—Go a mile in 112 minutes (at "scout pace.")

7—Cook a quarter of a pound of meat and two potatoes without cooking utensils other than regulation kit.

8—Have at least $1 in Savings bank.

9—Know 16 principal points of compass.

After passing all the above tests a scout must pass the following tests in order to become a first class scout:

1—Swim 50 yards.

2—Must have $2 at least in Savings bank.

3—Signalling. Send and receive a message either in semaphore, sixteen letters per minute.

4—Go on foot, or row a boat, alone to a point seven miles away and return again.

5—Describe or show the proper means for saving life in case of two following accidents. Fire, drowning, runaway carriage, sewer gas, ice breaking, or bandage an injured patient.

6—Cook satisfactorily two out of following dishes, as may be directed: Porridge, bacon, hunter's stew, or skin and cook a rabbit or pluck and cook a bird.

7—Read a map correctly and draw an intelligible rough sketch map.

8—Use an axe for felling or trimming light timber or for alternative produce an article of carpentry or joinery.

9—Judge distance, size, number and height within 25 percent.

10—Bring a tenderfoot trained by himself in the points required for a tenderfoot.

After the scout camp, which is to be conducted by the Y. M. C. A., many boys will be qualified as first class scouts.

NEW BRUNSWICK IN FAVOR.

A letter from St. Johns says: Should the new trade agreement between Canada and the United States be ratified, the farming, fishing and lumbering interests of New Brunswick would profit by the larger market opened to them, and the general benefit would be very considerable. This is the view expressed by men representing the several interests named. It is recalled that in the old days of reciprocity there was a large trade between this Province and the New England States, which declined when the treaty was abrogated.

clude, in its design, the very latest improvements and best practise known in motor-car construction. The cylinders are cast in pairs of the finest specially selected grey iron, with offset inlet and exhaust valves on opposite sides of very large dimensions. All parts of the motor are readily accessible and the cooling system is perfection in its design. To strength, without unnecessary weight, the manufacturers have devoted much study and the result is that the entire car, while light, is capable of withstanding any strains to which it might be subjected.

The clutch is of the multiple disc type running in a bath of oil and not susceptible to heat or wear, and requires no adjustment. It appears positive in action and does not slip. The carburetor is of the famous "Vortex" type and is unequalled for heavy work and economy of fuel. The magneto is a "Bosch." The system of ignition is the Bosch high-tension magneto dual, jump spark, dual coil with double throw switch and starting button on ash. This system is not only and all the wiring is thoroughly protected and enclosed in a single tube.

The lubrication of the motor appeals greatly to firemen on account of its positive action and simplicity, and because the oil tank is mounted between the motor cylinders where it is kept warm at all times.

The steering gear is of the non-reversible type of worm and gear. It is made of one piece construction, extra strong, ball bearing and enclosed in an oil tight case. The steering wheel is large, 18 inch, and has serrated inner edge for a firm grip by the operator. The transmission is of the sliding gear type, selective, three speeds forward and one reverse with direct drive on high speed. The gears, shafts and pinions are made of the best chrome nickle steel, case hardened and mounted on annular ball bearings of the "F & S" type. The transmission case is cast in a single piece, housing both the transmission and the differential. This case is supported at three points, the front support being a ball and socket joint. This prevents any strains in the transmission case due to weaving of the frames.

WILL STOP QUICKLY.

The car is driven through sprockets on a jack shaft to chains from these to those on the rear wheel sprockets, and is controlled by dual brakes on rear wheels of very large diameter. This car, going at 35 miles per hour, can be stopped in its own length and the liability of skidding is entirely eliminated, due to the use of the dual system of tires on the rear wheels.

This feature in the design of the La France car is excellent. Should one of the rear dual tires become deflated from any cause while en route to a fire, the car can continue on its way without stopping, and the injured tire can be changed at the fire or upon return to quarters. By the system of quick detachable tires and quick demountable rims, this change of tires can be accomplished very quickly. The tires are all the same size and are procurable at any garage, while those offered on some of the cars were of special make and special size and could be only gotten from one concern.

The dual system of rear tires has been thoroughly tried out by several concerns and found very reliable and the New York Herald has several cars that have had them in use for nearly two years with marked success. Their service compares favorably with that of the fire service, because they have to get their papers to the trains on time and cannot afford to wait for tire troubles. They have tried large pneumatics, solid tires, dual solid tires and have finally found their only relief from tire trouble in the dual pneumatic such as is used on the LaFrance car.

The frame on this car is of pressed channel chrome nickle steel, very expensive and the strongest procurable. While it is not so large and bulky as others offered it combines added a very essential feature on fire cars, where the expense of tires is the greatest factor to contend with and the lighter the car without sacrificing strength, the lower will be the cost of upkeep.

The axles and many other important parts where strains are liable to occur are made of the world-renowned Krupp steel imported from Germany. Every piece of metal entering into the construction of the car is the best money can buy and the manufacturers make the claim that they could not spend another dollar in perfecting their output. The car will speed up to more than a mile a minute and will climb any hill in Quincy at more than 20 miles per hour. While speed is not so essential, it is well to have it in emergencies and this car has surely the power to negotiate any of our streets and hills in the most severe winter weather.

The most appealing feature is the great factor of safety of this car over all others considered. It is built lower to the ground, it is 140 inch wheelbase, six inches wider than others, and the same track as horse-drawn fire apparatus. This great width and low center of gravity makes it positively non-capsizable in turning corners; however our men will not be obliged to experiment in bursts of speed when turning corners.

THE EQUIPMENT.

The entire car is constructed at the works of the LaFrance Co. at Elmira, and all the fire fighting equipment carried on the car is of their own manufacture and patented. The fire fighting equipment consists of a 40 gallon, quick-operating chemical tank mounted under driver's seat; four fire department lanterns (one to have a red globe so it can be distinguished at night); two pony fire extinguishers; door opener; crow bar; axe; extension ladder; roof ladder with hooks folding out of the way when not in use; plaster hook; 250 of 3-4 inch best four-ply chemical hose; extra charges of soda and acid for the chemical tank; hose body to hold 1,000 feet of water hose of the large heavy size; large perforated sheet steel chemical hose basket, made to hinge back so the members will have room to pack in the hose after a fire; spanners; nozzles; soda receptacles and many other small tools necessary in fighting fires.

The lighting system is automatic, one switch turning and lighting the three large searchlights simultaneously and the search light on the dash is of the swinging type and can not only be used in finding the way at night, but at fires when the men are in need of such a light. There will be a hand operated siren horn and a large locomotive swing type bell to warn pedestrians of the coming of the car. The painting and ornamentation is of a beautiful design the predominating color being English vermillion. The car will, in all probability, be stationed at the Central Station and make runs to all first alarms.

Mayor Shea and Chief Williams feel confident that the citizens will be proud of their new acquisition.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

High School — Public Schools
Woodward Institute — Parochial School

Some weeks ago the public school teachers sent a lengthy petition to the School Committee asking for an increase in salary. The petition went into the question of salaries at great length setting forth that the increased cost of living made it seem to them that their salaries should be increased. At that time no action was taken on the petition by the School Committee, but at its meeting Tuesday evening the committee voted to ask the City Council for a sufficient sum in addition to the amount they intended to ask for in the budget, that the maximum salaries paid the grade teachers, grammar masters and the High assistants might be increased. This shows that the School Committee recognize that there is merit in the petition, and that if the Council will give them the money the salaries will be raised.

HOW TO GET INCREASE

Miss Adams Tells the Teachers at Mothers' Meeting

The regular meeting of the Mothers' Association was held in Bethany Congregational Chapel Wednesday afternoon. The attendance was unusually large, because the school teachers were invited to be present. The seating capacity of the chapel was taxed to its utmost.

The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Mabel Ellery Adams of Boston, formerly of Quincy. Her subject was "The correct use of English in the home."

The devotional services were led by Mrs. S. I. Wood. Her theme was "Faithfulness in little things."

The teachers were necessarily late in arriving and during the delay which ensued in providing for the large number present, Miss Adams spoke informally, saying that teachers were the most belectured class of people she knew. She said one winter the teachers of Boston had an average of seven lectures a week presented to them, and they were pressingly invited to all of them.

She went on to say that she believed a very good argument to put before school boards and legislators, who were called upon to pass upon teachers' salaries, would be one based on the fact that teachers who are practically compelled to spend all their leisure in work, directly or indirectly related to their school, are unable to do sewing which formerly helped them to ecconomize. She said that she thought fifty dollars would be a very conservative sum to name as the amount which the average teacher today is obliged to expend for sewing which she used to do herself. Most members of school committees are married men with families who know how much dress maker's bills amount to and such an argument properly presented could not fail to carry weight with them, then she laughed and said, you teachers in Quincy, who are trying to get an increase of salary, try it.

Proceeding to the topic of the afternoon, Miss Adams made a strong plea for the correct use of English in the home. She showed that the habitual use of formally correct English constitutes a pass-port to good society, and that lack of ability to use such language puts a stumbling block in the path of the socially ambitious, which neither wealth nor great capacity in other ways can remove. She mentioned cases of brilliant men in public positions abroad who brought reproach upon the name of America by expressing themselves ungrammatically upon important occasions, and attributed their slips to a childhood past in a home where such mistakes were habitual.

After thus generalizing Miss Adams took up the common errors, one by one, and explained just how children and careless grown people manage to distort their speech with them. She put the most blame upon the parents and the home, claiming that anybody who had been through the Seventh Grade of the public schools knew better, and only continued to make such errors through carelessness. The speaker interspersed her talk with many little jokes and several serious quotations from classical authorities and ended by reciting a dialect poem which, although it contained every error which she had deprecated, was warmly received by the audience. So many of those present were personal friends of Miss Adams that she held an impromtu reception lasting nearly half an hour, which was one of the most enjoyable features of the afternoon.

The president of the association, Mrs. John D. Mackay, announced that there should be an election of officers for the ensuing year at that time, but as the nominating committee had been unable to complete the ticket, the meeting adjourned sine die.

CHARGE IS CHANGED TO MANSLAUGHTER

Fourteen-Year-Old Boy In Court For Killing a Chum

Pittsfield, Mass., Feb. 2.—The unusual sight of a 14-year-old boy appearing in court on a charge of murder was witnessed in the district court here when James McKeever entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of murdering Francis Donovan, a 14-year-old comrade, on Jan. 23.

There was not sufficient evidence presented to warrant holding the lad on a murder charge, so it was changed to manslaughter and McKeever was held for the grand jury in $2500 bonds. Bail was furnished.

While walking home from church, McKeever and Donovan had a quarrel, resulting, it is alleged, in McKeever's drawing a knife and stabbing his friend. Donovan died almost instantly. Evidence was presented to show that Donovan pressed the quarrel, and that before the stabbing occurred, Donovan struck McKeever in the face with his fist.

A Goal He Had Never Reached.

"You are the greatest inventor in the world," exclaimed a newspaper man to Alexander Graham Bell.

"Oh, no, my friend, I'm not," said Professor Bell. "I've never been a reporter."—Ladies' Home Journal.

WATER STREET FIRE.

The alarm from Box 136 at 6.25 this morning was for a slight fire in the house of Louis Grossman on Water street. One of the family was going into the cellar with a lighted lamp when the lamp came in contact with a skirt that was hanging on the wall. A blaze was quickly started, and while the family extinguished the balze others ran to the fire alarm box and gave the alarm. There was practically no loss.

SEVEN HUNDRED DEAD

Five Thousand Families Ruined by the Taal Eruption

Washington, Feb. 2.—The eruption of Taal volcano and the accompanying disturbances in the Philippines killed 700 people in the town of Talisay, according to the report of the governor of Batangas province, which was cabled to the war department by Governor General Forbes of the Philippine islands.

Among the estimates of casualties transmitted to the war department was one from Delegate Apaccible, representing Batangas in the Philippine assembly. He reported that 5000 families had been ruined by the disaster.

Recent earthquake shocks have been slightly perceptible in Manila, Forbes reports, but they have caused no damage.

POSSESSION OF LIQUORS

Judge Rules That It Does Not Prove an Illegal Sale

Milford, N. H., Feb. 2.—Judge Keyes gave a ruling in a liquor case that involved points of state-wide interest. The chief issue was as to evidence that is necessary to convict when liquors are found in a raid.

Charles Calderria, a merchant, at whose house in East Milford, it was alleged, beer and wine and bitters labelled as containing 33 percent of alcohol were found, was discharged, the court declaring the evidence not sufficient to convict of selling or intent to sell.

FIFTY KILLED, HUNDREDS HURT

Explosion of Dynamite Causes Panic In Many Cities

NEW YORK CITY IS SHAKEN

Great Buildings Sway and Windows Are Shattered by Invisible Agents of the Air—People Five Miles Distant From Scene of Disaster Are Injured When Thirty-Five Tons of Dynamite Explode at Pier In Jersey City—Not a Single Survivor to Tell Cause of Accident Which Creates Immense Havoc

New York, Feb. 2.—Thirty-five tons of dynamite in transit for shipment from Pier No. 7 in the Communipaw terminal of the Central Railroad of New Jersey exploded yesterday afternoon.

Fifty men are believed to have been killed outright and hundreds of persons, some of whom at the time of the explosion were five miles removed from Jersey City, were seriously injured. Falling bricks and splintered glass windows aided in adding the names of a thousand more persons to the list of injured.

Scenes unparalleled in the history of this section of the country followed swiftly after the great atmospheric disturbance. The rush of millions of cubic feet of air to close the vacuum created by the detonation stirred the atmosphere within a radius of fifty miles of Communipaw.

Doors were closed as by unseen hands, windows were splintered by invisible agents of the air, and the shock of the explosion was "felt" in places as far removed as Long Branch, N. J., and Norwalk, Conn.

For nearly an hour after the explosion millions of persons in New York city, Jersey City, Newark and Yonkers sought vainly to determine the reason for the unprecedented commotion. In each city the greatest fear was that a disaster had occurred in the immediate locality, and the most imaginative rumors were afloat.

All over the lower end of Manhattan skyscrapers swayed and rocked as though in an earthquake. Plate glass was shattered, contents of show windows were scattered over the sidewalks, and clocks and pictures fell from the walls.

A General Stempede

Tenants in the upper stories of the immense buildings were panic stricken, thinking the lower floors were crumbling under them, and stampeded to the elevators. In the streets pedestrians feared the buildings were about to crash down upon them and ran madly about seeking a point of safety.

None survives to tell the story of the cause of the explosion. The theory most generally accepted is that, despite precautions of a most exacting nature, a case of dynamite sticks weighing between fifty and sixty pounds fell or slid from the pier at Communipaw while a dynamite transport lighter was being loaded and the contents exploded in the hold or on the deck of the lighter.

On the pier were two freight cars, one of them partly depleted of its cargo, the other full of dynamite. A freight car containing a shipment of cement was between the two laden with explosives. By a strange freak, only one of the dynamite cars, the full one, exploded.

The cargo of dynamite had been shipped from the mills of the Dupont Powder company, and one of the two lighters, which with its entire crew was blown to pieces, belonged to the company. This ill-fated little vessel, the Whistler, carried a crew of four men.

She was moored fast to a large lighter, the Katherine W., owned by Captain John Healing. Eight men are believed to have perished on board the Katherine W.

Surrounding Cities Suffer

Property damage and personal injury were by no means confined to Jersey City, but lower Manhattan island suffered greatly. Points as far away as forty miles from the scene of the explosion reported that windows had been broken in houses and buildings and the concussion left its mark on ships that were in New York bay.

In no longer period of time than is required by a person to raise and drop his arm fifty lives were snuffed out, two small boats and their crews blown to splinters and 200 feet of the pier shattered to bits. Fragments of human forms were found 500 feet away from the explosion.

The terminal of the Central Railroad company comprises a section of the river frontage of approximately 2000 feet or more, and Pier No. 7, where the explosion took place, is situated half way between the northern and southern limits of the terminal. A quarter of a mile to the north of the pier is the railroad station of the line.

The large building as well as the structures on the other piers of the railroad company was damaged considerably. Railroad officials say that property valued at more than $200,000 belonging to the company has been destroyed.

Only the most meagre scraps of information could be gleaned by the police when they arrived at the scene. It was the same reply they received from all whom they questioned. This was, that although persons in the vicinity had known that at noon time there had stood a long pier, moored to which were two tug boats, there was nothing except a few charred boards floating on the water a few minutes after the explosion.

Pier No. 7, extending more than 600 feet into the river, is one of the largest and most important of the railroad terminal yards. It is wide enough to permit of four separate sets of tracks, and the pier long has been used, because of its advantageous situation, as the point of transfer of dynamite and high explosives from freight cars to the dynamite tugs. This perilous work has assumed large proportions within the past five years since the builders of the metropolis have put dynamite in great demand. Nearly all the explosives that were used in blasting the rock for the Hudson river tunnel extensions on the Manhattan shores were shipped by way of Pier No. 7.

Pier Superintendent's Story

Of those who were in any way acquainted with what took place immediately prior to the explosion, Louis Gallaudet, the superintendent of the pier, had the most connected story to tell the railroad investigators.

Five minutes before 12 o'clock and six minutes before the explosion, Gallaudet, who had been at the end of Pier No. 7 to superintend the unloading of the Ingrid, left to return to his office. The distance he had to walk was about 600 feet.

"I was just entering my office," said the superintendent, "when it seemed that I was clutched from every side and there rang in my ears a deafening roar. I turned and saw a great cloud of white smoke and great quantities of debris flying high in the air. The first shock seemed to be followed by another less violent, but of this I am not sure.

"Then for an instant the cloud shut off the sunlight," Galluadet said "With the first shock passed, there followed a strange and terrifying stillness, which was broken by a round of crashing glass. This was the roof of the passenger station which fell in.

"Then," said the man, "the larger pieces of debris fell to the pier and into the water, and with the break of light through the cloud of dust there broke also on the minds of all in the vicinity the first realization of the disaster."

Most of Pier Gone

Two hundred feet of the end of the pier, where, it was learned, more than twenty men had been at work at 12 o'clock, was entirely demolished, and only here and there in the muddy water stood a charred piling.

Out in the stream as far as the eye could see were splintered boards, but of the twenty stevedores or of the twelve men who had been on the Katherine W. and the Whistler, or of the stevedores who had been at work unloading two vessels at the end of the pier, nothing could be seen.

Where the two dynamite lighters had floated beside the pier head there remained to mark the spot only half adozen small boards. A tangled mass of blackened steel, intertwined and knotted around several freight car tracks, showed the place where a few minutes before the freight cars had stood.

LORIMER'S IRON HAND BEHIND THE SCENES

Brown Says It Directed Agents In Illinois Bribery

Washington, Feb. 2.—In the senate Mr. Brown of Nebraska, one of the leading insurgents, attacked the election of Senator Lorimer and declared that the Illinois member would be deprived of his seat.

"The silent and iron hand behind the scenes," he said, "knowing all that was being done by his agents and consenting to, if not directing, their every act, was Mr. Lorimer himself. Such is the story of the record and such should be the verdict of the senate."

"THE TARTAR OF THE NAVY"

Sperry Was One of Its Most Efficient Officers

PNEUMONIA CAUSES HIS DEATH

Admiral Who Commanded World Cruise of United States Fleet Recognized as Brilliant Strategist and Authority on International Law and Its Usages—About to Begin Important Task When Taken Sick

Washington, Feb. 2.—Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, retired, who successfully piloted the United States fleet around the world in 1908-09, died at the Naval medical school hospital here of pneumonia.

Admiral Sperry arrived in Washington last Friday from his home in Newport, R. I., for special duty in the state department incident to his representation of the United States at the conference of the naval powers of the world, held in London, in the early part of 1909. He was taken ill shortly after his arrival.

Admiral Sperry was 63 years of age, having been born at Brooklyn Sept, 3, 1847, entering the navy in 1862. He reached the rank of rear admiral in 1906 and retired on attaining the age of 62 in 1909.

Read Admiral Sperry had been assigned to duty at Newport on several occasions, and was at one time president of the naval war college. Since his retirement he had made his home in Newport. He is survived by a widow and one son.

Sperry was said to be the best informed officer in the navy on questions of international law, and because of his knowledge of international law he represented the United States navy at one of The Hague conferences.

The death of Sperry was a blow to the state department, which had counted much upon his assistance in perfecting a translation of what is known as the declaration of London.

The agreement of the London conference was drawn up in French. It sets forth the various principles of maritime law to be applied by the prize court at The Hague.

Both Great Britain and the United States have translated the document, but there are discrepancies in important particulars in the two translations. Sperry had been summoned to Washington for the purpose of reconciling the differences before the document is submitted to the United States senate.

Admiral Sperry has been called the "Tartar of the Navy." Nor is there any doubt about his having been a stickler for the best form in naval affairs. At Annapolis and at Newport he was a strict instructor, keen to read the characters of those who were under his instructions and merciless with the would-be shirker. But the boy or man who was anxious to advance, who really wanted to learn, ever found in him a wealth of friendly assistance. He was a square man.

His sailors loved him. Men who served under him always speak of him in the highest terms. They never expected him to crack jokes, but they liked the way he ran his ship. And they more than once found that he had a very human side.

When he left in 1909 the active list of the navy, the service lost one of its most efficient officers, for he was a recognized authority on tactics and a brilliant strategist.

TO REPLACE SERMONS

Illinois Minister to Introduce Moving Pictures In His Church

Elgin, Ills., Feb. 2.—Rev. Clark S. Thomas, pastor of the First Universalist church, is going to start a motion picture show in lieu of sermons.

"I have tried everything to gain attention," he said, "and I have found that the old stereopticon lectures are as much out of date as the old style of preaching. Now I am going to try a moving picture show."

Dr. Thomas said he believed the church had evolved into as much of an educational as a religious institution.

Carroll Declines Nomination to the Superior Bench

Boston, Feb. 2.—James B. Carroll of Springfield has declined to accept an appointment on the superior court bench to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Judge Bond of Waltham a few days ago.

Governor Foss offered Carroll the judgeship. Carroll thanked the governor, but said, definitely and finally, he would not accept. He said that going on the bench would entail too great a personal sacrifice on his part.

Women Jurors Begin Reform

Wenatchee, Wash., Feb. 2.—That it is not safe to swear now that women are eligible as jurors was the lesson learned by Ned Crane, found guilty by the jury of women of having used profane language, and fined $1 and costs. The charge was brought by a woman.

KNOX WON'T APPEAR BEFORE COMMITTEE

Canada Might Resent Giving Details of Conference

Washington, Feb. 2.—Representative McCall of Massachusetts, who introduced the resolution embodying the Canadian reciprocity, expresses the opinion that the treaty will be accepted by the house at this session of congress. He says that much of the opposition to the treaty has disappeared.

Secretary Knox will not appear before the ways and means committee today, as was previously announced. The secretary of state, in a document accompanying the president's message, gave all the information about the negotiations which he felt called upon to divulge to congress.

It is now explained that for the ways and means committee to ask Knox to relate in detail the nature of the conferences between the representatives of Canada and the United States would be extremely undiplomatic and an act which might be resented by Canada.

IDENTIFIED BY VICTIMS

New York Police Think They Have Kidnappers' Chief In Custody

New York, Feb. 2.—With the arrest of Giuseppe Scerl, 35 years old as he was leaving his home on East Sixty-third street, the police believe they have captured the leader of and the brains of the gang of kidnappers who carried off the Longo and Rizzo boys from their homes in Brooklyn last November.

Scerl was positively identified at police headquarters by both lads as one of the gang of kidnappers, and then was taken to Brooklyn and handed over to the authorities there.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence. Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

When Jimmy Valentine recovered from the effect of Rose Lane's flattering description of him and felt that he could look the lieutenant governor in the face without the twitch of a single muscle he asked his questioner if there was anything further that he cared to know.

"Yes," responded Fay. "I appreciate any thought you may have had for the young lady, my niece. But as you did not know her, had never before met her and could therefore have had little or no interest in her, I do not see how any thought of her would have influenced your actions. What think you, Mr. Valentine?"

No. 1289 was temporarily nonplused by the penetrating perception and cold analysis of the lieutenant governor, who was questioning him as though he was on trial for his life, with Fay as the cross examiner.

"I mean," began Valentine—"I mean they would have convicted me of murder on her testimony very probably—at least that is what I feared if they knew about her and got hold of her as a witness against me. I did not believe they could convict me on the burglary charge."

Rose Lane's enthusiasm began to cool as she heard her hero in his explanation hint that, after all, there might have been some other motive than thought of and for her in his refusal to drag her into a vulgar, sordid murder case. She was not experienced enough to realize that Jimmy Valentine had to satisfy the keen, searching, though withal kind hearted lieutenant governor, whose questions suggested a doubt of the convict's innocence. But the faith of the girl was not entirely shaken. She knew that this unfortunate young man would surely straighten out everything in the end. How could any one with so gracious and winning a smile and with such adorable eyes ever have committed a crime greater than the pillage of his grandmother's jam closet! Yes, he was the victim of some strangely terrible plot, of heinous machinations like those of the French revolution or of the Spanish inquisition.

The lieutenant governor continued to press Valentine.

"But once convicted," he went on, "it seems to me that you would have made an application for a new trial."

"My lawyer is working on that now, sir."

Rose Lane pressed her uncle's hand and looked pleadingly at the state official as though supplicating his further aid for the prisoner. The lieutenant governor was responsive to the fair young girl's influence, and after a pause he spoke the words that were to fill with a new hope the tortured soul of Jimmy Valentine.

"Tell your lawyer to apply for a pardon. I promise you he shall have every possible assistance in his effort to secure it."

"Thank you, sir; thank you," murmured the prisoner gratefully, but his eyes turned involuntarily to those of the girl, who he well knew was really responsible for his new opportunity.

"And you can thank my niece, too," added Fay.

"I thank her most deeply."

"That's all," said Fay, moving away and beckoning to Rose.

Valentine started as though to go through the door leading to the cell corridor where Handler was pacing restlessly up and down. Suddenly the prisoner reconsidered. He took a step toward the girl, who stood watching him with an expression of pity in her eyes. He bent over as though to grasp her hand; then with a stoical effort he mastered himself and straightened back.

"Words are futile things sometimes," he said in a low, gentlemanly voice, with perfect pronunciation and intonation. "But I"—

"Yes, we know that," put in the lieutenant governor.

Rose Lane was deeply touched by the struggle that even her little burden of knowledge of the world told her was going on in the prisoner's breast.

"Goodby, Mr. Valentine," she said softly.

The prisoner replied in a half whisper. "I would rather you called me by a name that is not disgraced. My true name is Lee Randall."

"Goodby, Lee Randall," said the girl.

"Goodby. God bless you," was the convict's trembling response as he turned slowly away to be led back to his cell and to Warden Handler.

"Rose," called the lieutenant governor.

"Yes," said the girl, going to him.

"Is he innocent?"

"Why, certainly."

"That's your intuition?"

"Yes, and that's all a girl has in judging men. Don't you think he is innocent, uncle?"

"I don't know, but I think he might be honest were he given the chance."

"And you are going to give it to him?"

"We will go to the governor. The matter rests entirely in his hands."

Rose threw her arm around her uncle's neck and kissed him fondly.

"The warden is very angry, and the man is helpless," she said fearfully. "Why, they might even kill"—

"Oh, no, Rose, not that."

"But you realize"—

"Yes, but I don't think they would dare since I"—

"But I am in a chill of fear. The warden's manner"—

"Most wardens are bullies, Rose, and I don't think this Handler an exception; I think a few words from me might"—

At this juncture Handler stormed into the office. He glared angrily at his visitors. At Fay's direction Rose went out into the waiting room.

"Finished your star chamber session, governor?" he asked sneeringly.

"Mr. Handler," sternly, "let me say something to you for your own benefit. You are an employee of the state. Employees have been removed, even wardens, for a speech no more discourteous than the one you have just made. When Valentine gets out—and I hope it will be soon—I am going to ask him how he was treated, and if he tells me you treated him any worse after today than before I came I promise you a little polite h—l. Good day, sir."

The lieutenant governor followed Rose.

Smith had come in with the warden. The latter turned to his secretary as Fay departed and snarled viciously, his teeth protruding like yellow fangs. "Valentine, eh? Get him!"

Smith, his face gravely set, obediently went out of the room.

CHAPTER V.

As his secretary left the room to procure Valentine Warden Handler glowered darkly at the door that closed behind him and through which No. 1289 was to be unwillingly brought. He would show this man who had dared to talk to the lieutenant governor that Billy Handler was the boss of Sing Sing prison and no one else, even lieutenant governors to the contrary. Discipline must be preserved. Yes, that was it—the old explanation that always held good when a prisoner who offended the warden in any way was meted out the vengeance that the warden would not be denied. Once there was a thin chested, cough racked little election inspector "doing three" for crooked work at the polls who had had his front teeth kicked down his throat because he would not shine the warden's shoes. As for this slick Mr. Valentine, he was altogether too independent, too, and the warden would give him the lesson of his life. He would—

The door opened, and in came Smith, holding Jimmy Valentine by the arm.

The warden stood at his desk. "Bring Him over here!" he cried hoarsely, pointing to the space in front of his desk.

The secretary slipped his hand up behind the prisoner's neck and with a violent heave flung Valentine forward so that he was barely able to prevent himself from falling flat on his face. Gritting his teeth, No. 1289 straightened himself and finally succeeded in suppressing the impulse that surged within him to spring at his cowardly assailant's throat. Probably it was the realization of the fact that he knew himself to be more than an equal for Smith in a hand to hand conflict that enabled him to restrain himself—the contempt of a strong, confident man for an ignoble inferior.

Smith was larger and heavier, yes, but the man who had hip locked the burglar Cotton and had thrown him headlong to his death from the window of a rushing railway train was not one to be trifled with. Besides, no less a personage than George Bothner, the world's lightweight wrestling champion, had taught Valentine the mysteries of the "grapevine," the "cross buttock," the "Cornwall heave," the "flying mare," the "back heel," the rib crushing "scissors," the waist and crotch holds and even the tortures of the deadly strangle holds, front and rear.

Handler bent over his desk, resting both his hands upon it, and sneered at Valentine.

"Why didn't you smash him when he hit you, you coward?" he asked the helpless prisoner in purposely aggravating tones. "You're losing your nerve in this little boarding house of mine; that's what's the matter with you. You haven't any manhood left in you. And, say, Valentine, when we have had you here as our guest two years more you'll be whining around like a puppy with the pink eye; that's what you're coming to. It's bound to get you—this life—just like it gets all the rest of you thin skinned guys. Only a bum can live this life and keep his mind and his manhood."

The cruel words of the warden sank deeply into Valentine's soul, as Handler well knew they would. But the prisoner was determined that he would show no signs of weakening before the two men who hated him.

"I didn't hit him because I'll square myself when I get out," answered Valentine defiantly, "and there are a few little things that I will square with you, too, Mr. Warden Handler. You know you have me in your power, and so do I. But, Handler, you're going to like me better from now on because, realizing my position, I have dared go against you."

But Valentine had mistaken his man. The respect that one fighting man has for another who fights him squarely found no place in the craven heart of Billy Handler. Valentine had yet something to learn of the psychology of jail wardens. Handler's face took on a malignant expression. "Oh," he sneered, "so I'm going to like you, am I? Well, just watch me. I'll burke you, you"—

Handler lunged around the corner of his desk at the prisoner.

"Don't burke me!" cried Valentine desperately.

Eyes gleaming with his vengefulness, with hands outstretched, the warden came headlong at Valentine, who braced himself to withstand the shock of the oncoming body. Crouching, the prisoner primed himself to clutch one of the warden's thumbs, which was carelessly extended outward from his hand—a trick Bothner had shown him. Once securing this thumb, it could be pulled back or twisted to the breaking point if necessary to cause an opponent to yield, or by drawing the outstretched arm over his shoulder, wheeling his back to his foe as he did so, Valentine could bend sharply forward and throw his assailant helplessly over his head and on to the floor in a heap with the disconcerting "flying mare."

But midway in his rush the warden stopped short. He had caught himself just in time. About to throw himself blindly at his intended victim, a thought (an inspiration he afterward considered it to be) flashed through his brain. The warden halted, much to the amazement of his secretary, Smith, who had been watching the proceedings with unconcern born of experience in like happenings. Then Handler turned away, rested one hand on his desk and with the other stroked his heavy, square chin reflectively.

"God!" he pondered. "Suppose the lieutenant governor should get on to those deals in the contracts for supplies? He might, and then I'd need him to be my friend."

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

MYLIUS GIVEN YEAR IN JAIL

Guilty of Circulating Libel Concerning King George

CONDUCTS HIS OWN DEFENSE

Rumor of Morganatic Marriage Set at Rest by Testimony of Admiral Seymour, Whose Daughter Was Said to Have Been Married by Monarch—Letter From Latter Read In Court, Entering a General Denial

London, Feb. 2.—A prison sentence of one year was imposed upon Edwin F. Mylius after he had been found guilty of criminally libelling King George. Mylius had published in The Liberator an assertion that the monarch, while Prince of Wales, had morganatically married a daughter of Admiral Seymour, and that several children had resulted from the union. He was tried on three counts and was convicted on all of them.

Admiral Seymour took the stand and swore that none of his daughters had ever been married to King George. "I had only two daughters," declared the admiral. "One died when she was 22 years of age, and the other is the present Mrs. Napier."

Mrs. Napier was also called to the stand. "I was never married to King George," was the simple statement to which she swore.

Mylius attempted long and elaborate cross examinations, but was cut short by the court.

Mrs. Napier was the last witness, and the prosecution closed the case after she left the stand.

The verdict was the occasion for a ripple of applause which disturbed even the stern dignity of the English court for a time. Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, in delivering the sentence, stated that Mylius had wronged not only the British sovereign, but the British people.

Mylius conducted his defense in person. Immediately after the opening of court he petitioned the tribunal to compel the attendance of King George.

In addressing the court Attorney General Isaacs announced that the original charge had been withdrawn and the charge of plain libel substituted. The attorney general further declared that the king could not appear constitutionally, although he was willing to refute in person the aspersions cast upon him in The Liberator. Isaacs declared in opening the case that all the allegations made by Mylius in his story in The Liberator were false.

"Beyond the fact that King George is married to Queen Mary, every statement made by Mylius is an utter falsehood," declared Isaacs.

Mylius was bold and cheerful during the morning session of court. He smiled frequently.

Isaacs, in addressing the court, took up the details of the story which Mylius had written. It had been charged in the story that King George had been married at Malta prior to 1893 to a young woman named Seymour, although the barrister declared that the king had not gone to Malta until November of 1893, several months after his marriage to Mary of Teck.

Isaacs regretted that the king was not permitted personally to face his slanderers, and concluded with the declaration that the suit had not been brought to protect the monarchy, but that King George had sought the protection of the court as a man, a husband and a father.

It did not take the jury long to find Mylius guilty of circulating a libel, and the court forthwith condemned him to one year's imprisonment.

After sentence had been passed, Isaacs read a letter signed by King George and authorizing the attorney general to state publicly that the writer had never been married except to Queen Mary; had never gone through a ceremony of marriage except with the queen, and that he would have attended the proceedings to give evidence to this effect except for the advice of the law officers of the crown that it would be unconstitutional for him to do so.

The Liberator, in which the alleged libel was printed, is a small sheet published in Paris, its editor being Edward H. James, who was formerly a legal practitioner in the United States.

It is assumed that the government took this unusual step in bringing the present proceedings less to punish the author and circulator of statements and opinions offensive to the crown than to set at rest for all time the story immediately involving the person of the king.

FUGITIVE MAY RETURN

Governor Hay Thinks Missing Banker Is Entitled to Pardon

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 2.—Having reimbursed his bondsmen and repaid thousands of dollars to depositors lost by them when his bank failed in 1893, J. R. Edmiston, president of the Walla Walla Savings bank and the Security Savings bank of Seattle, who has been a fugitive from justice since his conviction in 1895, was pardoned by Governor Hay and can now return to this country. It is not known where Edmiston is.

In granting the pardon Hay says that any man who had spent years in foreign lands working to repay depositors money lost in his bank had done all that could reasonably be asked of him and was entitled to legal freedom.

K. OF H. VISITATION

Grand Protector Parker a Guest of Maple Lodge

The official visitation of the board of Grand officers to Maple lodge, Knights and Ladies' of Honor, was held Wednesday evening, the occasion calling out a large number of visitors from lodges at Boston, Dorchester, Somerville, Charlestown and Salem being represented.

Electa hall, where the meeting was held, was very prettily decorated for the occasion, the color scheme being buff and blue, the colors of the order. These with the National emblem made a very effective appearance.

The board of Grand officers which included Grand Protector Fulton H. Parker of Dorchester and suite, were received with due honors and escorted to their respective stations.

After the business meeting their were brief addresses by the Grand officers, during which Maple lodge was congratulated on having nearly reached its thirty-third anniversary.

After the meeting there was a social hour, during which there was dancing and a general good time. Ice cream and cake were served by an efficient committee.

"NOTHING MUCH."

Admiral Bowles of the Fore River shipbuilding company was at the state house Wednesday, says the Globe "meeting" the big and little statesmen of Beacon hill. "What does Fore River want now?" asked one member of the legislature who was introduced to the admiral by Representative Thomas of Quincy. "Nothing much," sweetly and coyly replied the admiral. "All we want is to have the legislature grant the city of Quincy and the towns affected to raise the $25,000 necessary to widen the present Fore river bridge from 100 feet to 125 feet. All of the interested parties are willing to do their share in widening the bridge.

"You see, it's like this: I worked hard and for a long time to get the contract for building a big ship, and finally landed it. It has a beam of 98 feet and it is going to be difficult to get her through a 100-foot opening. Ships are growing bigger all the time, and if the Fore River company is to remain in the market as a competitor of other great shipbuilding concerns we must have a wider draw to the bridge over the river."

Admiral Bowles is a fine type of the American naval officer. He is also a good business man, a diplomat and a hustler after ship building contracts at home and abroad.

BAD FALL.

Henry E. Teasdale, the well known lawyer whose office is in the Adams building, was injured by a fall this morning as he was hurrying out of the building on his way to Boston. The sidewalk in front of the steps slants quite a little, and, made slippery by the snow, was a dangerous spot. As Mr. Teasdale was issuing from the building both feet slipped from under him, and he fell over backwards. His right arm was pinned under him, and owing to the heaviness of the fall, it was believed that some of the bones in his arm were broken. Dr. D. B. Reardon was summoned and upon examination found that the ligaments were strained but no serious injuries had been inflicted although the arm was pretty badly scraped. After the arm was bandaged Mr. Teasdale was able to go to Boston.

MISSING GIRL FOUND.

Cecelia DiBona, daughter of Antonio DiBona, who has been missing for the past week, was found in a serious condition Wednesday by Inspector McKay, at the home of her brother-in-law Lucio DiBona. The girl left home one night about a week ago and failed to return. After an absence of a day the fact was reported to the police and Inspector McKay was assigned to the case. He placed the brother-in-law under arrest and had him arraigned in court for adultery. DiBona pleaded guilty and was held in $1,000 for the grand jury.

Chicago Costs $49,440,000

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Chicago's budget for 1911, as prepared by the council committee on finance, amounts to $49,440,000. Of this amount $13,500,000 will go to the board of education.

—Heavy snows are reported in northern Maine.

HORSE TENNIS IS LATEST.

New Game Being Played In Chicago and Is Well Liked.

Martin A. Delaney of the Chicago Athletic association has planned a new game, a combination of medicine ball and tennis, which he calls horse tennis.

Instead of a tennis ball a three pound medicine ball is used in horse tennis, and the player is allowed to pick up the ball and throw it at will, rackets being out of the question because of the weight and size of the ball. Instead of a net an ordinary sawhorse is used, and the ball is thrown over it. A regular tennis court diminished in size will mark the limits of play, and there will be regular service courts, with rules governing the service and volleying the same as in tennis.

The sole idea of the game is to make the daily routine work of the students more interesting and to inject more "pep" into the exercise. The medicine ball will not be eliminated by any means, as the horse tennis is a trifle too violent to be worked into all cases, especially at the start. In the way of exercise the new game makes a good midway station for medicine ball and handball, and the few who have tried the game are enthusiastic over the prospects.

MONTREAL'S ICE CARNIVAL.

Winter Sports of All Sorts to Be Held During Week of Feb. 6.

Montreal is making great preparations for the annual winter sport carnival which is to be held this year during the week of Feb. 6. The ice carnival is an event which draws visitors from all parts of the continent to the chief commercial city of Canada. The winter sports are varied and exciting.

The program of sports at this winter's ice carnival includes tobogganing at the Park slide, skating in the various rinks, curling matches, torchlight snowshoe tramps over Mount Royal by the various clubs, ski and hockey and curling championship matches, the ladies' curling bonspiel, storming of the ice palace and a pyrotechnical display.

A big ice palace will be erected on the east flank of Mount Royal, the mountain which is a center of attraction for tourists. The style of architecture adopted for this palace is the English Tudor baronial of the fortified period. The interior of the main tower will consist of a main chamber forty feet in diameter, which will be decorated and utilized for exhibition purposes. It will be 100 feet in height and the others 100 feet each.

The ice palace will be the center of the display of fireworks. By lighting it up with colored and prismatic flambeaux the scene will be brilliant and changing. The storming of the palace promises to draw an army of snowshoers clad in historical costumes.

G. P. Chittendon, coxswain of the Yale 1910 crew, recently expressed his objection to recruiting the rowing squad from among the football players. He says that during his years as an oarsman he only knew one football man to make the crew, and he adds: "Those of us who know know also that it was cruelty to animals to put him there. His spirit was willing, but even his flesh was weak, for he was not the same man the next fall, when Yale needed him most."

Fighter Lewis Grabbing Money Abroad

Harry Lewis, the American welterweight, is certainly grabbing off plenty of money over in Paris, as he has already engaged in two fights which he has won and is matched for three others. He is also to meet Willie Lewis on March 4 in a fight for a finish.

Eli's New Stadium Will Seat 60,000.

Yale's new steel and concrete stadium will seat 60,000.

WINTER BASEBALL CHAT

Johnny Kling says he may not play ball this season. He threatens to stick to his pool business.

In Plank, Russell and Krause, Connie Mack has three crack southpaws for next season.

Connie Mack's son Earl will catch for Monte Cross's Scranton New York State league team next summer. His father is sure he will make a big league star.

The largest ball player that doth perform is thought to be Julian Castillo, first baseman of the Almendares team of Havana. Senor Castillo weighs 262 pounds and is one speedy boy despite his size.

Fred Falkenberg, the tallest human being in the American league, is to quit smoking in order to put on weight. He has not taken a puff of the weed for three weeks, and if he holds out until spring he may add a couple of ounces to his ballast.

WOLLASTON CAR SERVICE

Street Railway Ready to Establish New Schedule

Wollaston people are kicking considerably over its street car service, and they cannot be blamed much, for under the present schedule it is hard to tell when a car will arrive. The cars leave Quincy on time, so that practically all the trouble is with the cars coming from Boston. This is no fault of the local company, but is due to delays between Neponset and Dudley street. The outward cars from Dudley street are seldom on time in arriving at Neponset, but on the Hancock street line areable to make up time so that they arrive in City Square on schedule time.

With the cars that go via. Wollaston, however, it is impossible to make up time lost on the Boston side, with the single track, and the result is that one seldom knows when to expect a car.

Railway officials say that it is impossible to remedy the trouble under the present schedule. It could be remedied they say if Wollaston people would agree to have the all through Dudley street cars run via. Hancock street. This would give fifteen minute service via. Hancock street to the Elevated.

Wollaston would be taken care of by the car which now arrives in City Square on the hour and half hour from Weymouth Landing. The plan would be to run these Weymouth Landing cars through to Neponset via. Wollaston both ways. This would ensure Wollaston a schedule that could be depended upon.

The only objection to this seems to be that a change of cars would have to be made at Neponset for the Elevated, but as cars leave Neponset for the Elevated every three minutes there would be practically no delay, and there would be little complaint for lack of seats on the Boston side, as the cars are seldom crowded when leaving Neponset. Probably better time would be made.

On the return from Boston, knowing that the Wollaston car would leave on schedule time, plans could be readily made to make good connection.

Supt. Gammon said this morning that the company was anxious to inaugurate the change noted above, in the Wollaston schedule, and that he believed once it was established Wollaston people would be much better served than they are at present. It needed only a request from Wollaston people to put this service into effect.

BRITISH DREADNOUGHT.

The Thunderer, the 17th British dreadnought and the fourth of the superdreadnought type was launched at the yards of the Thames iron works company at Canning town on Wednesday says a London dispatch to the Globe. The archbishop of Canterbury conducted the religious services preceding the christening by Mrs. Davidson.

Ffteen thousand people, many of whom had gone by special trains from this city, saw the launching and cheered wildly as the great fighter plunged into the water. Local officials gave a reception for the several government officials and other prominent personages present.

The Thunderer has a displacement of 22,680 tons and will be equipped with turbines with a total of 27,000 horse power. She is expected to make a speed of 21 knots an hour. The vessel is 584 feet long and is armed with 10 13.5-inch guns and 24 4-inch guns. She is the largest vessel ever launched so far up the Thames. Three thousand workmen were employed in her construction.

GRANITE LEAGUE.

Dartmouth forfeited to Princeton in a bowling match of the Granite league Wednesday evening, and the tail-enders were awarded four points. In order to earn the points, the Princeton team rolled three strings. J. Gillis was high man on single string and totals.

STREET RAILWAY

of Washington street was referred to the committee on public improvements of which John R. Richards is chairman.

It was voted on motion of E. J. Sandberg that the Old Colony street railway company be requested to establish a waiting room with toilets in City Square.

The invitation of the Men's Club of Christ church to attend the talk by Representative Norman H. White on Feb. 6 was accepted.

Two new members were elected.

F. F. Crane reported for the committee on canal which acted with the Weymouth Board of Trade and has forwarded data to the U. S. engineers. He reported that Gov. Foss was also interested.

The banquet committee reported that the annual banquet promised to be the best ever held in Quincy, with a good menu and good speaking. It would be largely attended. All reports on tickets should be made not later than Sunday.

A rising vote of thanks was given Senator Lodge for his good offices in securing an appropriation for channel of Fore River.

Resolutions were offered by Frank F. Prescott favoring a new route into Quincy for the Old Colony boulevard favored by the Metropolitan Commission. The resolution will be considered at the next meeting of the Board of Trade. Mr. Prescott advocates an additional bridge over the Neponset river to the east of the railroad bridge.

GRANITE CITY WHIST.

Ten tables competed in the weekly whist tournament at the Granite City club Wednesday evening, after which Henry P. Furnald served escalloped oysters. The high scores were made by James E. Neary and James H. Lalley. The former had a score of 38 won and 15 loss which gave him 71.7 percent, and the latter 35 won and 16 loss, which gave him 68.5 per cent.

—Five engineering officers of the Argentine navy, who have been with the Pacific fleet of the United States navy, have been ordered to report to the Argentine naval commissioner in New York for the purpose, they understand of superintending the construction of a Dreadnought for Aagentina. Two of the officers have already left for New York and the others will follow.

Sh rman Breaks Tie Vote Three Times and Secures Passage Ocean Mail Bill by Senate

Means New Contracts for Steamers at Quincy

Again the Fore River Shipbuilding Company hears good news from Washington; the Ocean Mail bill passed the National Senate on Thursday, and several contracts will soon be placed for new steamships.

As passed, the bill authorizes the payment, by the postoffice department, for the carriage of mails of $4 per mile on the outward voyage to second class American-built vessels plying between American ports and ports in the Philippines, Japan, China and Australasia, and between American ports and ports in South America south of the equator, and the payment of $2 per mile to third class American ships similarly engaged. Stops at American ports on the South Atlantic are provided for. It is explicitedly declared that no contract shall be awarded to any person or corporation engaged in any competitive transportation by rail or who is employed in exporting or importing merchandise in his own behalf. There also is a provision limiting the expenditures in any one year to $4,000,000 or to the surplus earnings of the ocean mail carrying business.

CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT

Scene from William Tell and Kindergarten Play

Parents and friends in large numbers filled the hall of the Massachusetts Fields school on Thursday evening to witness the entertainment given by the pupils under the auspices of the Parents and Teachers Association.

The program consisted of sketches, recitations, songs and instrumental music all carried through with marked ability considering the age of the performers. Charles Wade performed the duties of master of ceremonies with becoming dignity.

WHAT CITY OF 40,000
HAS AS MUCH PROMINENCE AT WASHINGTON
AS THE CITY OF QUINCY?

Opening with two dramatized kindergarten games by pupils of Grade II, and closing with a scene from "William Tell" by the boys of Grade VIII, the entire evening was full of interest for those present.

In the opening number "Billy Bob Tail," little Miss Esther Campbell, made a prepossessing Billy while the "Hobyahs" was also cutely enacted.

The "valentine exercise" and "Rose song" by the girls of Grade III were prettily done, and "Columbia and her thirteen states," a speaking tableau by the pupils of Grade V, met with applause. Roland Forsyth recited in a realistic manner "The night wind."

HOW SENATOR LODGE SAVED THE DAY

Did Heroic Work for Fore River Bill and Prevented Battleship from Being Bottled Up.

Almost Blocked By Red Tape and a Contumacious Chief

People of Quincy have already learned with appreciation and pleasure of the good work of Senator Lodge in securing the appropriation of $140,000 for the Fore river channel improvement, and Mayor Shea and the Board of Trade have forwarded hearty thanks to him at Washington; but few have any idea of the heroic work that Senator Lodge actually did. "W. E. B." the Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript, has carefully noted all the details, and tells graphically how Senator Lodge overcame the many obstacles:

KEEP MOVING!
Things Move So Fast These Days
That People Who Say—
IT CAN'T BE DONE!
Are Interrupted by People WHO DO IT. LODGE DID IT.

Washington, Feb. 1, 1911.

Red tape and an undiplomatic chief of army engineers came very near bottling up an Argentine battleship in Weymouth Fore River, figuratively speaking. They also gave Senator Lodge a shock yesterday and added to his gray hairs. Eventually, the senator escaped without damage and won his point, while at the same time a li tle item in the River and Harbor bill providing for an increase of sixty army engineers was saved.

This threatened tragedy occurred over the effort of Senator Lodge to incorporate in the bill an item providing for the straightening of Weymouth Fore River, where the Fore River Shipbuilding Company is constructing an immense battleship for the Argentine Republic. While not much noise has been made about it, there is reason to believe that the ship when finished might never reach tidewater unless the river were straightened, owing to the dangers in the way. Not only that, but the shipbuilding company would be practically excluded from bids for the construction of battleships of great size unless Congress authorized improvement of the river.

IT IS A RULE

of the River and Harbor committees, if not of law, that no appropriation or river improvement shall be allowed unless the project has been approved by army engineers. Some weeks ago the Senate Committee on Commerce, which then had the House River and Harbor bill under consideration, gave a hearing to Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, Senators Lodge and Crane and Representative O'Connell on the Fore River improvement project. The survey had been made and a report of the estimate of cost from Colonel Frederic V. Abbot, the engineer in harge at Boston, was anxiously awaited. It came several day ago and was referred by General W. H. Bixby, chief of engineers, to the Engineer Board of Review.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The country's all right. Sultan Sulu says so in a letter to Mr. Taft.

"A headline says 'Nat Goodwin seems to be fond of girls.' But in relation if we may judge by his divorce record.'"

When Col. Watterson said that it was hard to lose the savings of a lifetime he meant that it was distressing. It is easy enough.

The weather doesn't seem to have any effect on the Valentine crop and the shops are showing a more varied assortment than usual.

Don't forget the birds these days. When the ground is covered with snow they not only suffer for food but for water. Throw out a few crumbs and see how quickly a little flock will gather.

The Republican senators from New York, New Jersey, Maine, Ohio, Nebraska and Montana will confer a great favor upon their party by not dying, as Democrats will come in then.

Pure food laws are being made still more stringent. The latest proposed amendment requires the net weight or measure of the contents of a package to be stamped on its label. Wonder how many housekeepers know that a five-pound box of butter seldom contains five pounds and the same of lard and other boxed goods?

Weymouth people are interested in the progress of Senator Melvin S. Nash of Hanover who formerly preached for several years in their town. He will probably be a candidate for lieutenant-governor or for the executive council next fall, his district assuring him support for either position.

It is rumored that before long ex-Gov. Guild will receive a high diplomatic appointment. Certainly there is no man at the present time who could better represent the country; our ex-governor is diplomatic, has the command of several languages, and with it all is a true patriotic American, ready at all times to act for the best interests of the country.

That was rather a remarkable statement in the Boston Herald the other day to the effect that over twenty pulpits in greater Boston were vacant because the ministerial cares weigh too heavily on the occupants. Quincy did not figure in the list but its largest parish is to lose its minister. At Braintree both Congregational churches have or are to lose their pastors. Large parishes should give their pastors an assistant for one man can hardly be expected to do all that is now required in a large progressive church. If good sermons and social service is expected of the minister he should be relieved of the drudgery. Attending social functions, looking after trivial duties, which might just as well be cared for by some member of the church, and the preparing of sermons in the small hours of the morning, when they should be taking their rest, are some of the things which the men of the cloth complain of.

By all means adopt the proposed schedule for Wollaston on the street car line, that cars may be run upon time and be depended upon. And for various other reasons. It will result in quicker time between Wollaston and Boston, and quicker time between Quincy and Boston. Then again Wollaston people may find a seat in the cars which is impossible now on many of the trips, for the cars are filled at Quincy or Neponset with through passengers. Many shipyard men who live in Wollaston also want restored the through service between Newcomb Square and Wollaston which they long enjoyed.

But the greatest benefit will be to through passengers from City Square to Neponset and Boston. All of the through cars should be run over Han-Hancock street route which is double tracked and is not utilized to the extent it should be. Through cars should be run without waits at Neponset which are unnecessary and vexatious. Many have found that they can now leave the Quincy cars at Neponset and board an Elevated car at that point earlier for Boston. Soon the street railway should run cars over Hancock street every ten minutes as well as twice an hour through Wollaston and twice an hour through Wollaston Park. If the through cars were removed from the Wollaston route it would be possible to give Wollaston people cars each way every 20 minutes. But with 30 minute service the through traffic between Wollaston and Boston would be better accommodated by the change, as cars could be run on schedule time and good conections made at Neponset.

THE HABIT OF DISAPPEARING.

The disappearance of Miss Dorothy Arnold, the New York heiress, who dropped out of sight seven weeks ago, focusses attention on a symptom of our feverish civilization.

The New York detectives have practically dropped the case. She was of age, they say, and had a right to leave home, and will return when she gets ready.

It is not often that the central figure in a disappearance case is a girl with a romantic face and appealing beauty, whose printed pictures suggests the first thought that the newspapers are reproducing some classic work of art.

The ordinary disappearer is of another type. He is a frayed and frousy ne'er do well, who drops into the ocean of oblivion that society may assume the family burden which his coward heart could not bear. Or he is a crooked official caught in some spider's web of the law and his own frauds, who dreams that with a fresh start he could build his life on a fairer foundation.

The third type is that of some headstrong girl, for whom home seems a prison chamber instead of a shelter from storm, who has not learned that the illicit pleasures of sense soon turn to dust and ashes. The case of Miss Arnold is of course wholly different from these. If she proves to be alive, her departure will no doubt be found due to some temporary mental bewilderment, or to some innocent whim of romantic passion.

But let us hope that others be not emboldened thus to impose a torturing strain on their friends. Society has little use for the man or the woman who quits the game. If you can't untwist the tangled skein of life, the hand of time always does it for you.

If life seems a cage imprisoning your hopes in its iron wall of circumstance, it does not pay to dash your head against the bars. To impatient young hearts, the forces and conditions surrounding you seem absolutely fixed. Older people know how flexible these conditions really are. If you can't alter them, the flux of time will soon enough reshape them in a way to give you the chance to climb out.

DRIFT OF OPINION

Says the Springfield Union: "Inasmuch as the bill now before the legislature providing for a head tax of $5 a year on bachelors exempts men that are of notoriously bad character and those physically disabled, its passage probably would mean a hasty scramble on the part of bachelors to secure a clean bill of health, morally and physically, by prompt payment of the tax. Few men would care to be known as scallawags for the mere saving of $5 a year, and all except the obviously crippled or deformed like to regard themselves as sound in limb and body." Perhaps, rather than to be put even by implication or suspicion into either of the classes the Union mentions, some of the bachelors might even take a jump into matrimony offhand. No man or woman desires to be looked upon as out of the matrimonial handicap race. We see that in the occasional weddings of those who are eighty years or so of age. It is seen every day in the cases of young couples who wed on practically nothing and continue to have very much of the same afterwards. However, the bill hasn't passed yet. There seems to be a fair likelihood that it may be regarded as one of the numerous freak bills which sane legislators have to kill in order to keep Massachusetts out of the violent ward in the opinion of the other States.—Brockton Enterprise.

Dr. Edna Day, of the University of Kansas, urges the establishment of a school for prospective mothers at the university. She thinks young women ought to be taught, before marriage, what to do when baby is teething. She should add "what to do when the 'vindy-vind' begins to crawl on the 'leedle' stomick small," and a course on "How to avert forced marches at night," and how to interpret "gooble boogle." Dr. Day's plan is to have a supply of infants on hand from orphan asylums for practice. Her idea is to perfect efficiency through the instrumentality of charity. The plan may be all right, but deliver us from being either the student or the baby! —Kennebec Journal.

VICE PRES. SHERMAN

president of the United States yesterday exercised his constitutional prerogative of casting a vote to break ties after three successive roll calls in the senate.

By his first vote he saved from defeat the ocean mail or ship subsidy bill, and by the third he forced an adjournment of the senate on a vote having direct bearing on the resolution looking to the election of senators by direct vote of the people.

The vote on the passage of the subsidy bill, both in committee of the whole and in the senate proper, stood 39 ayes and 39 noes, and on adjournment 37 ayes to 37 noes. On all three occasions the vice president voted in the affirmative.

Another notable occurrence concerning the vote on the subsidy bill was the absence of the new Democratic senator from West Virginia, Clarence Watson. He had taken his seat earlier in the day as the successor to Senator Elkins, but was in the senate chamber only a few moments during the session, and voted on only one rollcall.

This vote was cast on an amendment offered by Mr. Shively of Indiana, regulating the aggregate expenditures which may be made under the terms of the bill. On this provision the new West Virginia senator cast his vote in the affirmative, thus indicating his opposition to the measure.

After voting he disappeared and when the next ballot was taken Mr. Scott, his Republican colleague, announced Watson's "absence," saying that he was away "on important business."

After the final result became known the opponents of the bill, including all of the Democrats, realized that Watson's absence prevented the defeat of the bill. He was the only Democrat present during any of the rollcalls whose vote was not cast against the measure.

The final vote on the bill took place after three hours of determined conflict over amendments. Apparently there was no general appreciation of the sharp division which afterward developed and as a body the senate was unprepared for the tie votes.

JUDGE HARTWELL RESIGNS

Retires From Supreme Bench of Hawaii at Age of Seventy-Five

Honolulu, Feb. 3.—Alfred S. Hartwell, chief justice of the supreme court of Hawaii, has resigned. Hartwell has seen many years of service in the islands. In the seventies he held several judicial offices here and he returned in 1904 to fill a vacancy on the supreme bench. He is in his 75th year.

Judge Hartwell served through the Civil war in the union army, and in 1864 was brevetted brigadier general of volunteers for gallantry. He was a member of the legislature of Massachusetts on the Republican side in 1867. He went to Hawaii in 1868.

BELIEVE ARNOLD GIRL IS A SUICIDE

Grieved at Her Parents' Opposition to George Griscom

New York, Feb. 3.—The belief of Francis R. Arnold, the millionaire perfumery imperter, that his daughter Dorothy is dead arises, it is learned, from a threat of suicide made by the missing girl because of the family's objections to the courtship of George S. Griscom, Jr.

Shortly before her disappearance on Dec. 12 her despondency was most marked. Her grief at the opposition shown by her parents to Griscom caused her to declare that she would do away with herself, and, convinced that she has carried out this determination, her family has gone into mourning and refuse to entertain any other possible explanation of her disappearance.

AMERICANS NURSE REBELS

Annette Cowles and James Garfield Lead Volunteer Corps

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 3.—Miss Annette B. Cowles, the trained nurse who was on her way from the United States to Mexico City, was on one of the trains held up for three days by insurrectos south of here and proved an angel of mercy to the injured insurgents.

She led a volunteer corps of nurses, among whom was James R. Garfield, former secretary of the interior.

She returned here when the trains were released by the insurgents, and is so strongly impressed with their need of aid that she has decided to remain here and supervise their nursing.

ENDEAVORERS MADE HAPPY

Contributions of Over $23,000 Announced at Big Meeting

Boston, Feb. 3.—After listening to speeches by Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., and others, the large audience which crowded Tremont Temple last night to do honor to Clark as founder of the Christian Endeavor, and to aid in celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of the birth of the society, were moved to the highest pitch of enthusiasm by the announcement which proved that $23,126 had been raised towards the last $50,000 for the new headquarters building to be erected in this city.

The first gift announced was from Dr. James L. Hill of Salem of $15,000 of the $200,000 for the building fund. A gift from Mr. Anonymous for $5000 followed.

Governor Foss contributed $1000, and several contributions of sums ranging from $500 to $10 were announced.

MYLIUS' TRIAL ILLEGAL

King George Was Whitewashed, According to Editor of Liberator

Paris, Feb. 3.—Edward H. James, the editor of The Liberator, whose article was the basis of the suit against Edward Mylius, convicted in London of libelling King George, issued a statement declaring that the trial of his British agent was illegal and the proceedings a "whitewashing."

"Mylius refused to proceed because the king refused to testify," said the statement. "If the king had gone on the stand and sworn that the marriage had not occurred, I would be glad to apologize in The Liberator, which under the circumstances can only attack the trial as a violation of almost every principle of English law, evidence and liberty."

APOLOGIZE TO THE STANDARD COMPANY

Writer and Magazine Publisher Retract Statements

New York, Feb. 3.—Counsel for the Standard Oil company, which recently began suits for $250,000 damages against Hampton's Magazine and for $100,000 damages against Cleveland Moffett, the writer of an alleged defamatory statement concerning the Standard Oil company, has received written retractions from both the publishers and the writer.

The article in question referred to the manufacture and sale of impure candies and said that the Standard Oil company manufactured and sold impure materials which went into these candies, and that when the various dealers were arrested and fined, the Standard Oil company paid the fines.

FOUR PRIESTS INJURED

Auto Skids and Crashes Into Taxicab In Funeral Procession

Holyoke, Mass., Feb. 3.—Four priests of the Roman Catholic church who were attending the funeral of Rt. Rev. Mgr. E. S. Fitzgerald were seriously but not dangerously injured when the taxicab in which they were riding in the funeral cortege was struck by the rear wheels of a skidding auto truck, loaded with furniture, on the Williamansett bridge over the Connecticut river, the boundary line between Chicopee and Holyoke. The chauffeur of the taxicab had his leg broken in the crash.

The taxicab was demolished, but neither the motor truck nor its occupants were injured.

The collision was primarily due to a heavy pall of smoke which came from a mill chimney. The smoke shut off a view of the funeral procession from the driver of the auto truck until he was almost upon the taxicab.

ANOTHER BIG LANDSLIDE

Hasty Shifting of Houses Necessary In Culebra Cut

Washington, Feb. 3.—Another great earth slide a mile long has started in the Culebra cut in the Panama canal, and already has completely covered the 35-foot bank of the canal oposite the towpath with 250,000 cubic yards of material.

Some hasty shifting of frame houses became necessary to save them from the earth slide.

EIGHT UP IN MONOPLANE

World's Passenger-Carrying Record Broken by French Aviator

Pau, France, Feb. 3.—A four-seated Blerlot monoplane, piloted by LeMartin, flew over the Pau aerodrome with eight passengers, whose combined weight was 1112 pounds.

This establishes a new record for the number of passengers carried in an aeroplane.

Handicapped In Fighting Vice

Boston, Feb. 3.—Police Commissioner O'Meara, in that portion of his annual report made public, deals with "the business of vice." He advises "a future commissioner" that in efforts to suppress this he will receive little encouragement from the courts, indifference from the public and some abusive criticisms from the social purist.

SENATOR LODGE

BIXBY DEMANDS REGULAR ORDER

Monday Senator Frye reported the River and Harbor bill and gave notice that he should call it up for action the next day. Monday also, Senator Lodge called up General Bixby and requested a knowledge of the figures contained in the report, which was known to be favorable, that he might offer an amendment providing for an appropriation. General Bixby refused he figures, stating that the matter must go through the regular routine. As this would necessitate a report by the Board of Review, its signature by the Secretary of War and its transmission to the Capitol, Senator Lodge waiving his request for figures, courteously asked that the routine be hurried a little. General Bixby, although evil, gave the senator to understand, that it could not.

TIME WAS FLYING,

and Senator Lodge went to the Capitol, where in less than two minutes he secured the passage of a resolution requesting that the figures be sent to the Senate. This disagreeable but necessary move had the effect of causing General Bixby to call a meeting of the Board of Review Monday evening.

Tuesday the River and Harbor bill came up promptly in the Senate, but neither report nor figures reached the Capitol. Senior Lodge telephoned the War Department and was informed that the document had gone to the secretary of War for his signature, and would be sent up within two hours. The two hours passed, and meantime the Senate was making rapid progress with the bill, which had already passed the House.

Mr. Lodge got Secretary of the Navy

MEYER ON THE TELEPHONE

calling him from a cabinet meeting. Mr. Meyer became active (he had already recommended the appropriation on the ground that the Navy Department could not afford to have the Fore River Shipbuilding Company dropped from the list of bidders) and in a short time Senator Lodge got word that the report had been sent to the House of Representatives. He rushed over here, Asher Hinds fished it out from the basket of the document clerk, where it had gone to be printed, and with the report on his desk and thus giving his action official standing, he drafted an amendment to the bill calling for an appropriation of $146,000. This was accepted by Senator Frye and the bill as passed contained it.

Thus the peculiar devotion of the Engineer Department to red tape and routine not only endangered an improvement whose necessity is generally conceded, but put in jeopardy the pet desire of the chief of engineers that Congress give him sixty more engineer officers. These were provided for in an amendment to the bill added by the Senate Committee. This was clearly new legislation and Senator Lodge had only to make a point of order against it and it would have gone out. It cannot be said with certainty that the senator would have done this had the disobliging tactics of the chief of engineers defeated the Fore River appropriation, but it cannot be denied that General Bixby took a very dangerous chance, to say nothing of the needless trouble he caused.

NO HOPE FOR RECOVERY

Archbishop Ryan Cheers Up After Visit From an Old Friend

Philadelphia, Feb. 3.—After a visit by ex-Governor Stuart, Archbishop Ryan, who was in a semi-conscious condition most of the day, rallied, and after an animated conversation with his caller appeared to be greatly improved. His physicians say, however, that his heart action is still extremely weak. They had out no hope for his recovery.

The archbishop and the former governor have been warm friends for many years. They chatted and joked together more than five minutes.

How to Have Red Lips!

The girl with red lips and pink cheeks may be thankful for both the note health—vigorous, forceful, magnetic health and while it may be impossible for some to attain swing morbid states or health, yet the majority of seemingly healthy girls women and men are almost pale because of a lack of red blood corpuscles. When the blood is impure and enriched with these red corpuscles the weight increases and a healthy tint appears on the cheeks, while lips assume a healthy red color. Many physicians and beauty doctors prescribe three-grain hypo-nuclein pellets which are said to invariably increase the red blood corpuscles. A course of treatment lasts about two months. The nervous system of the entire health also improves rapidly. The best physicians and apothecaries supply this tablet in sealed vials.

GOOD ADVICE BY MAYOR SHEA

At Banquet of Catholic Total Abstinence Society

The annual banquet of St. Mary's C. T. A. was held Thursday evening at St. Mary's hall, and as usual proved a very enjoyable affair. It was strictly a men's affair, and there are few if any of the members of this well known society who were not present.

The tables were laid lengthwise of the hall and looked very attractive. The dinner was served by Burleigh & Martin and was excellent.

Following the dinner there was speech-making the several addresses being interspersed with violin solos by Paul Morrissette, and vocal solos by Joseph Morrissette, Frank Muller and Bernard McGee.

The after-dinner exercises were opened by Daniel Duggan, president of the society, who welcomed all, and said it was a good sign of the interest of the members when they could be induced to attend in such large numbers on so stormy a night. President Duggan introduced as the toastmaster Mayor William T. Shea, who has been a member of the society since March, 1875.

Mayor Shea got a flattering reception when he arose to preside. Before introducing the speakers he gave a talk to the members in which he encouraged the principle of total abstinence, and said it was one of the best assets a young man could have in life. Today, said the Mayor, business houses, more and more, are giving perference, when they have places of responsibility to fill, to the men who are known to be total abstainers from intoxicating liquors. The Mayor also encouraged the members to remember they were not banded together simply to abstain from intoxicating liquors themselves but to encourage other men to do likewise.

"Now I didn't come here tonight to talk politics," said the Mayor, "and I am not going to, but I want to encourage you young men to take an active part in the public affairs of your city, your state and your country. Don't vote for candidates, though, because they happen to belong to this or that party. Pick your men for their own worth, and if you know of a candidate seeking election who will be a credit to the people he is to represent, vote for that man regardless of his political affiliations.

"And, once you have elected a man to office, don't be over critical of his acts. Remember he is placed in a position of responsibility that you cannot understand, unless you also have filled like positions of responsibility. It may be that this official does not always think or act on public questions the way you think is best, and if he doesn't agree with your ideas, at least give him credit for acting on these subjects from the point of view which seems to him to be the best for all the people, and not for any particular section of group of friends.

"And, while I have encouraged you to take an active part in the public affairs of your country, let me give you a word of warning along this line. Don't go into politics to the exclusion of everything else and don't keep in politics if you find it is interfering with your business. That is the mistake that many young men make, but, unfortunately, they never realize it until it is too late.

"But, above all, whether you are in politics or out of it, stick to the principles of your Total Abstinence Society. It will be the best asset you can carry through life. A man who is a total abstainer can, as a general thing, be trusted in all walks of life. A temperate life along one line generally begets a temperance in the other walks of life.

"I have been a member of the society since 1875, and I have never regretted the fact that I joined this organization and kept my membership in it till the present time. I hope and trust this society, now in a flourishing condition, will continue to grow in membership, in power, and in influence and that the younger generations growing up will soon be enrolled as members, so that the splendid example already set by over 200 young men pledged to total abstinence, and all that this implies, will serve as a beacon light to the other parts of our beloved city."

The first speaker was Rev. Henry T. Grady, pastor of St. Mary's church, who spoke on total abstinence from a religious standpoint.

Dr. John H. Ash followed and spoke on the same subject from a physician's standpoint.

The next speaker was William H. Teasdale, who enjoys the distinction of being the only one living of those who joined the society the night when it was organized in November, 1876. Mr. Teasdale paid a tribute to the organizer of the society, John White, and said that many fathers and mothers had blessed him for his efforts in rganizing the society which now numbered 240 members.

Charles J. McGilvray, grand knight of Ave Marie council, K. of C., also spoke briefly.

The speaker of the evening was to have been T. H. Munnane, sporting editor of the Boston Globe, who had planned to give a talk on base ball. unfortunately however he was taken ill that afternoon and had to cancel his engagement. In his absence Mayor Shea called upon Timothy J. Collins, the local Globe correspondent.

Mr. Colins spoke for the press, and complimented the organization upon the noble work which they were doing toward the uplifting of the young man, and the work that they were doing to further the cause of total abstinence. From his own personal observation he knew what a great blessing it had been to that section of the city because of the existence of such a society, and in closing wished them many more years of success.

FORESTERS MASQUERADE

Eight Prizes Awarded for Handsome and Comical Costumes

A very enjoyable masquerade party was held at Alpha hall Thursday evening, under the auspices of Court John Ericson, Foresters of America. A larger number of the participants appeared in costume, and for a time there was much speculation as to the identity of the faces hidden behind the masks. Then came the command to unmask and there were exclamations of surprise as maskers, who were thought to be one person, turned out to be someone else.

Many of the costumes were homemade affairs, yet they were very attractive, and the scene was a merry one. Dancing was in order from 8 to 1 o'clock, with a brief intermission at 10.30, during which refreshments were served.

Prizes were given for the most comical, and most handsome costume, and it was quite a task for the judges to decide to whom the prizes should be awarded. The judges were N. M. Akerson, Albion Ericson, Charles H. Johnson and B. Gulbrandson. They awarded the prizes as follows:

Ladies—Mrs. Charles Pearson, Miss Hilda Peterson, Miss Agnes Johanson and Miss Gertrude Halmgren.

Gentlemen—Otto Johnson, Swan Larson, Arthur Peterson and A. Amelius.

The committee in charge of the affair were: Algot Ericson, Charles A. Ericson, John Matson, John Olson, Svan Cederstrom, Charles Person, Otto Gelotte and William Ericson.

WHIST PARTY.

Fourteen tables participated in the whist party held Thursday evening at the residence of Mrs. T. J. O'Brien of Gay street, in aid of the District 3 table at the St. John's bazaar. Rev. John J. Coan and Rev. Patrick Scannell were among those present, and there were also guests present from Boston, Norwood, Jamaica Plain, Milton, Brockton, Brookline and other places. The prizes for the best scores were awarded to Miss Veronica Burke, Miss Catherine Hallesey, Miss Annie Tierney, Patrick Ward, John Welsh and Timothy O'Connell. During the evening there were vocal solos by Miss V. Burke, Miss Julia Coltello of Norwood, Mrs. Timothy O'Connell and Daniel Reardon. After the play, refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed until 2 o'clock.

BURTON HOLMES'S LECTURE.

This evening and Saturday afternoon, at Tremont Temple, Burton Holmes will give the fourth travelogue in his present series, the subject being "Motoring in Germany."

The Argentina naval officers at Quincy will be special guests of the lecturer.

Starting with Bohemian Carlsbad, he crosses the German frontier in his motor car, and tours through the lovely rural districts of Germany, visiting such historic and interesting cities as Nuremberg, Rothenburg, Heidelberg and smaller cities of interest to every tourist.

He thence motors through the Black forest, visiting the Falls of the Rhine, once more crosses the German border, ending this attractive "Personally conducted Motor Tour" in Swiss Lucerne.

It is announced that he will repeat his Passion Play travelogue on Saturday evening, Feb. 11.

NEW COMMODORE

78 added, so that the total membership to date was 425.

The report also spoke briefly of the season's work and of the financial standing. He also read a letter from Admiral Garcia, extending the thanks of the Argentine officers in Quincy for the courtesies that had been extended to them, and also oppointing the Quincy Yacht club as a corresponding club of the Buenos Ayres yacht club, which the executive committee had accepted.

The financial statement showed the receipts of the year to have been $5,501.83; and the expenditures including payment of note, races, etc., were $5,478.08, leaving a balance on hand of $23.75.

The report on the building fund showed the total receipts from bonds, sinking fund, etc., to have been $11,-715.20.

Reports were also received from the house committee and treasurer.

It was voted that hereafter the items of a like nature in the treasurer's report should be bunched. That is where there were several expenditures for one particular purpose, like stationery, etc., they should be reported under one item. This would simplify the report.

At this point Treasurer Morse, in behalf of Mrs. W. J. Tilley, presented a framed picture of the late William J. Tilley, with the request that it be hung in club house. The picture was accepted and a vote of thanks extended to Mrs. Tilley.

The following officers were then elected, the secretary being instructed to cast one ballot for the list:

Commodore—Ira M. Whittemore.
Vice Commodore—Henry S. Crane.
Rear Commodore—Frank F. Crane.
Secretary—John O. Hall.
Treasurer—George S. Morse.
Measurer—Ralph E. Winslow.
Executive Committee—Herbert W. Robbins, Eben W. Sheppard, Joseph L. Whiton, Jr. and Harry E. Winslow.
House Committee—Edgar W. Emery, F. W. Easterbrook, T. E. Furnald, W. S. Hardwick, William J. Hudson, Fred E. Tupper and Edward M. Graham.

Upon motion of George S. Morse the club voted to contribute the sum of $300 toward the expense of dredging near the club house as proposed by a plan on file with the Harbor and Land Commissioners, for which a sum of $3,000 is asked. It was stated that if the club were willing to share the expense that there was a better chance of getting the appropriation For this reason the sum was voted.

Col. Francis V. Abbott, U. S. district officer was elected to honorary membership in the club.

After some little discussion the club voted to limit the membership to 600.

At this point Commodore Robbins surrendered the gavel to Commodore Whittemore.

In taking the gavel Commodore Whittemore thanked the club for their kindness in electing him as their commodore. He intended to do his best to please the members and make the club a success. All knew of the many able commodores the club had had in the past, and he should try to emulate their example. For the past few years the club had a large amount of work to do, for it had to be brought from the low tide, and small membership up to what it is today. It was his desire to continue the present high standard of the club. He also spoke of the great amount of wrk that had devolved upon the officers during the past year, and he doubted if any man could have accomplished what Treasurer Morse had done.

The coming summer is to be a busy one in yachting, and there will be many visiting yachtsmen, and he hoped that when the yachtsmen from Narraganset Bay were here that every member would do what he could to give the visitors a good time.

Three cheers were then given for Herbert W. Robbins, the retiring commodore.

It was voted that the club take a membership in the American Power Boat association.

The executive committee was instructed to use its best judgment in marking dangerous points about the harbor.

It was voted to endorse the petition for the establishment of a government signal station on Great Hill.

Votes of thanks were extended to George Tupper, who retired this year from the house committee, and to Capt. W. S. Hibbard for his services as fleet captain.

Commodore Whittemore? then announced the following appointments.

Fleet Captain—George H. Wilkins.
Fleet Surgeon—Dr. Fred E. Jones.
Delegate to Y. R. A. M.—Herbert W. Robbins.
Delegate to Interclub—J. P. Holbrook.
Interclub judge—W. S. Chase.
Chairman board of judges—John O. Hall.
Challenge Cup Committee—Morton H. Smith.

Commodore Whittemore, who will guide the destinies of the club during the coming year is one of the Quincy clubs most enthusiastic yachtsmen. He is the owner and skipper of the Dartwell, one of the fast cat boat class, and a thorough sportsmen. One who can meet defeat by another yacht with as smiling a face as if he had won. He has long been a hard worker for the club, and has done much to bring the club up to the high standing it now has. BIG C. E. RALLY.

Great interest is being shown in the Christian Endeavor rally to Bethany church next Monday evening. Nearly 1000 tickets have been distributed in Quincy and neighboring towns, and it is expected that the seating capacity of the church will be taxed to the uttermost. Seats will be reserved for ticket holders until 7.30. After that all will be welcome to the seats that are left.

DR. MYERS

Dr. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple, is sure to deliver a powerful and straight-forward address. The music will be of the best and a spirit of enthusiasm will pervade the meeting.

MUST ADVERTISE.

Success Impossible Without Use of Newspapers, Says Pittsburg Broker.

One of the leading real estate operators of Pittsburg was asked by a Leader reporter as to the outlook in realty for the coming year, and was given a prediction that, so far, is being borne out in the business of the market. The broker continued:

"The best watchword for the future of real estate is judicious advertising. I am very well convinced, from my experience in the past year, that the real estate business without being advertised in a judicious manner, will die. There is no use of disguising the fact that the daily newspaper and the real estate market are very closely allied to each other. They are well mated, if you want to put it in this style.

"Write your 'ads' so that they will strike something. Do not write them without a point—a sharp point at that.

"My business has taught me that much the past year. I can see that the newspaper must be used constantly to make business, and I also see that advertising must be done carefully and more time spent in preparing the advertisements.

"I think that you can always get business when you have something worth selling, and when you tag on a good readable 'ad' to such a thing it will go, and that is what I call judicious advertising.

"I am very well pleased with the outlook."

POLICE BALL TONIGHT.

The annual concert and ball of the Quincy Police Relief Association will be held tonight at Music hall, and while the weather does not look promising there is no fear but what the affair will be largely attended. The association has been rather unfortunate in a way in selecting the dates of their annual affairs, for it almost invariably proves to be a stormy night. But this has not seemed to interfere with the attendance, so that tonight will be no exception.

The members of the department and their many friends are looking forward to the affair with thoughts of pleasure and many of the guardians of the peace will lay aside their uniforms of blue for the more conventional evening dress.

The grand march will be sarted by a call from a police signal box that has been set up in the hall, and the box will also be used in case of necessity to summon's members of the department to duty.

"What's in here?" asked the tourist. "Remains to be seen," responded the guide, as he led the way into the morgue.—Jester.

THREE DAYS HUSTLE

Plans Made to Raise $5000 for Y. M. C. A.

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian Association held Thursday evening, the finishing touches were given to the plans for the big three days compaign which is to open for $5,000 next week Thursday, with a banquet at the Association building.

The organization is now perfected with Theophilous King as chairman of the Citizens Committee which at present stands as follows:—A. D. Albee, Judge A. E. Aevry, E. H. Angier, Clarence Burgin, R. F. Claflin, F. W. Crane, Alex Falconer, H. M. Faxon, C. P. Hutchins, Dr. J. A. Gordon, R. E. Foy, C. T. Hardwick, C. A. Howland, Dr. E. R. Johnson, H. L. Kincaide, N. G. Nickerson, Thomas A. Fenno, Frank F. Prescott, W. G. Shaw, R. B. Tobey, G. H. Brown, D. L. F. Chase, R. D. Chase, J. S. Swingle, W. G. Spargo, E. E. Jameson. Other names will be added.

John L. Miller, chairman of the School Committee was chosen as general chairman of seven teams of business men, captained by the following well known business and professional men:

Team 1, D. King.
Team 2, E. H. Ewerz.
Team 3, George A. Sidelinger.
Team 4, A. N. Murray.
Team 5, Dr. S. C. Hardwick.
Team 6, E. W. Branch.
Team 7, J. A. Sedgwick.

There will also be four teams of younger men by by B. G. Barnes, A. Blanchard, J. J. Floyd and E. J. Jenkins who will hustle for new members under the same enthusiasm.

The whole plan contemplates raising $5,000 in a three days' hustle, finishing on Monday night, Feb. 13, and includes a grand opening banquet on Thursday Feb. 9 with F. W. Ganse, vice president and general manager of the Columbia National Life Insurance Co. as the chief speaker.

Sunday, Feb. 12, will be Association day in many of the local churches, addressed by well known Association men from out of town.

One hundred and twenty interested and enthusiastic men will make short work of the job and will have a lot of fun doing it.

To have the annual current budget of the association cleaned up in three days with a whirlwind hustle will make everybody happy. The money may be paid any time within the next three months, and will cover the entire current budget of the Association for the present year ending April 30, together with a shrinkage which has become evident in connection with hte collection of the last big camgaign fund.

The work of the Association speaks for itself, seven days a week, three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and there are no apologies to make for it. It is recognized by all thoughtful people as indispensable to the community, and therefore must be supported. No money has been asked for its support for fifteen months and this call should meet with quick and ready response. Keep your eye on the Big metre.

MID-WINTER MEETING.

Of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

By invitation of New Hampshire's Daughters the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's clubs held its mid-winter meeting at Park Street church, Boston, today. The morning session was called to order at ten o'clock. An address of welcome was given by Mrs. Adelaide M. Godding, president of the hostess club with response from Miss Georgie A. Bacon, president of the Federation. Certain legislative matters were presented by Mrs. Nellie K. Rich, chairman of the Legislative committee, for action by the Federation. Then followed the address of the morning by Rabbi Stephen T. Wise, of New York, on "The Newer World for the Child."

The afternoon session opened at two o'clock with a group of children's songs by Miss Bertha Wesselhoeft Swift, after which came an address by Mrs. Mary S. Starkweather, Assistant Labor Commissioner of St. Paul, Minnesota, on "Modern Industry and Child Life."

The addresses were of great interest, and the church was taxed to the limit of its seating capacity. The Executive Board of the Federation was entertained at luncheon by the hostess club, while the delegates accommodated themselves at nearby restaurants.

ENTERTAINMENT

During the evening piano solos by Mildred Podbury, violin solos by Leslie Miller, and a violin and piano duet by Frances Hibberts and Edwin Baker were enjoyed.

The lullaby by the girls of Grade IV accompanied by Cecilia Arenberg was very dainty, each little Miss rocking her dolly to sleep in the song. The tableau acrostic, "America," was well taken, and as each bearer of a letter came upon the stage he told what national benefit it stood for.

The exercise "Winter" brought into play a number of children from Grade VI in appropriate costumes who spoke their lines and acted their parts in a manner most praiseworthy.

Six children from Grade VII sang "Mount Vernon Bells" very creditably, and Miss Dorothy Wetmore delivvered a recitation entitled "The black-eyed rebel."

The sketch "Patriotic women" brought to view such famous characters as Martha Washington, Betsey Ross, Moll Pitcher and others in appropriate costume.

Not to be omitted were the recitations of Blanche Morris entitled, "Seeing things at night" and "Mother's" frosting" delivered with such appropriate gestures and engaging manners as to bring much applause.

The closing number, a scene from "William Tell," followed an introduction by Charles Wade. The parts were well taken by the following cast:

William Tell	Henry Northrop
Walter, his son	Fred Torrey
Friesshardt, guardian	Lee Morris

NO CHANCE FOR RATIFICATION

Reciprocity Must Wait Until Next Session of Congress

ROOT SO INFORMS PRESIDENT

Fishermen Tell Ways and Means Committee That Putting Fresh and Salt Fish In Agreement Will Compel Them to Sell Ships and Abandon Gloucester as a Home—Gardner Opposed to Whole Treaty

Washington, Feb. 3.—There is little hope for the ratification of the Canadian reciprocity treaty or the creation of a permanent tariff commission at this session of congress. This was the information conveyed to the White House by Senator Root and announced by him after a conference with the president.

Senator Root said that while he himself favors reciprocity, the congestion of legislation is so great that it would be practically impossible to get through such important matters as the two mentioned by him. He pointed out further that a short session of congress was intended primarily only for the passage of appropriation bills and that it is too much to expect that legislation of far-reaching importance can be passed in the month now remaining before congress adjourns on March 4.

Accompanying Root were Senators Lodge, Crane and Beveridge, and Representative Mann.

Gloucester fishermen appeared before the ways and means committee Thursday in opposition to the Canadian reciprocity treaty. Each of the witnesses declared that if the section of the treaty putting fresh and salt fish on the free list were permitted to remain in the agreement they would be compelled to sell their ships, abandon Gloucester as a home, and move to Nova Scotia, and that in all probability the fishing industry would be ruined.

Representative Gardner, in whose district Gloucester is situated, told the committee that the packers in that city wanted protection on their finished product, but were in favor of free trade on the raw material. The fishermen, he said, wanted protection on the raw fish and also on the finished product.

Representative Boutelle, a member of the committee, asked Gardner if he opposed only the free fish section of the treaty.

"I am opposed to the whole treaty," said Gardner emphatically.

"Would not amendment to the treaty in any respect be equivalent to killing it?" asked Chairman Payne.

Mr. Gardner said he was not prepared to answer such a question. In response to a question by Champ Clark, Gardner said he was opposed to reciprocity on competitive articles.

Arthur Millett, the government expert stationed at Gloucester, and one of the representatives of the United States at The Hague, said that the fishing industry in the United States each year amounted to about $54,000,000 and gives employment to 143,881 persons. Of this amount, he said, the value of the product in Massachusetts is $7,095,229 a year and gives employment to 11,577 in that state. He expressed the opinion that many of the men now engaged in the fishing business in Gloucester could not get a livelihood in the United States if fish were put on the free list. He also expressed the opinion that free fish would not result in a material reduction in the price of fish to the consumer.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Ellt Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Handler reached out, picked up a box from the desk and extended it to the now thoroughly thunderstruck convict, who was slowly recovering from the mental strain of the last few moments. "Have a cigar," smiled the warden graciously, with a sweeping bow. "Also permit me to offer you a chair, Mr. Valentine.

"By the way," he went on easily, "are you perfectly comfortable in your cell? If not, I want to know what I can do for you. I'm going to have Smith go to see you every day to do for you anything that you want, provided the rules of the prison permit, and maybe some things they don't."

"HAVE A CIGAR."

Valentine, hardly believing what his eyes and ears told him actually to be occurring, dropped bewilderedly into the proffered chair and, taking a gilt banded Havana from the box, stuck it eagerly between his lips.

"Have a light," said the warden, striking a match and extending it to the end of Valentine's cigar.

The secretary stood across the room near a door, eyes staring in his wonder as No. 1289 leaned back luxuriously in his chair, crossed one striped leg over the other and sent fragrant clouds of blue smoke toward the ceiling.

"This'll be a regular Y. M. C. A. before we get through," he gasped. "I think I'll apply for a job as worsted holder for some old maids' sewing society. This prison is getting altogether too genteel to suit me."

* * * * * * * *

When a young lad of good parentage and of sound training and education begins to chafe under the restraint of parental discipline it is time for the parents to exercise the wisdom got only from the lessons taught in the great school of the wide, wide world.

Theories and principles expounded ever so convincingly will not keep the growing boy at home after 7 o'clock in the evening when there is a chance to escape into the streets to meet the "bunch," the alluring, versatile bunch whose plans so often include the annihilation of the Sioux warriors of the Dakota plains who have laid down the tomahawk to take up the agency clay pipe and store clothes.

That is to say, theories and principles merely will not suffice to restrain the impulsive, imaginative, action craving youths unless the parent combines with them enough knowledge of the world to convince the half formed, half trained youthful mind that the mentor has the best interests of the lad in mind, that he has been through it all himself and knows full well the joys and disappointments, the fears and hopes of early days.

And it is the habitually stern, optimistic, unyielding and academic parent who convinces the young lad that he knows nothing of the fascinating temptations of boyhood. The spirit of compromise is allowed to perish by such a parent; the spirit of rebellion grows in the son's heart; a spirit nourished on the decay of the respect and love thrust aside by the father who would not understand.

A certain lad of sixteen years found life in his New England home far more circumscribed than was that of his companions of the same age and same comfortable position. He was not allowed to go swimming in the lake because his young friend Tommy Clark had narrowly escaped drowning. The fact that Tommy Clark could not swim and was "taking a dare" on that memorable occasion when he verged on death near the county line road bridge and the fact that the lad we are considering could swim very well made no difference to the father as well as to the mother. The son must keep away from the water. That was final.

The further fact that this boy aspired to be a mining engineer made no difference to this father or to this mother. It had already been decided for him that he must study for the ministry.

Three years passed. The lad was in college. The study of theology did not suit his temperament or his desires. He wanted, above all things, to go out into the world of action, to battle with the might of the strong man he was becoming against big, tangible odds; out in the open air under the open heavens, down in the bowels of the earth or wherever there were mines to be dug and equipped and operated. He wanted to study the problems that faced the men who decoyed the glistening ores from secretive Mother Earth, and he thrilled with the idea that he could succeed in this profession.

He sat in his room in the college dormitory one sunny spring morning and wrote his father that he could not continue his study for the ministry; that he wanted above all other things in life to enter the school of mines at the university.

He waited five days. The answer came. The same night there were a vacant room and a vacant bed in the dormitory. Next morning came a search. Under a table was found a crumpled note that the tears of the lad had blurred as he read. The letter was taken to the president of the college. When this gray haired gentleman adjusted his spectacles he pressed the paper flat on his desk and read:

"If you do not continue your course in theology I will cease to pay your bills at college. Should you discontinue them you must return home, where I will secure you a position as bookkeeper at your uncle's store."

JIMMY VALENTINE'S FATHER, WHO BROKE THE SCHOOLBOY'S HEART.

Signed to this eloquent, brief epistle was the name of the young man's father.

Several years have passed since that crumpled letter was picked up from the floor of the college student's room. Several years have passed since an aged couple, soon to eke out their meed of existence in a small country town, have heard news from the son who would not become a minister.

Several years have passed since a young college student appeared penniless and discouraged in a middle western city and vainly walked the streets for days, subsisting as best he might, in search of any kind of work that strong hands and arms could perform.

So there should be tempered judgment shown, say I, in dwelling on the present fate of Jimmy Valentine when it is considered that he was the ambitious lad who left the crumpled note lying on the floor in his bedroom and set out to fight the world single handed.

That Jimmy should have lost in his first grapple with life should afford no reasonable person ground for reproach. Those of us who have not lost as yet quite humanly perhaps incline toward comparisons which favor our own acknowledged virtues, but at the same time the environment of our fellow beings at critical periods in their lives should always be remembered when the final estimate is made. It is human to have human emotions. It is human to have inhuman ideas concerning some of our fellow men at various times; but, after all, why not adopt the optimistic philosophy of Jimmy Valentine himself? For was it not he who at the time "Frisco Eddie" bungled the "inside job" of a safe looting expedition in Omaha sought to soothe the latter's feelings by saying sympathetically:

"Nobody is a failure until he admits it himself. You will never admit you're a failure, Eddie, so cheer up. You, therefore, can never be one."

Consequently Jimmy Valentine must be given a chance. His doctrine is the doctrine of hope. Give him a chance to apply it to himself and await uncondemningly and dispassionately the result.

If he succeeds in making a man of himself, a man such as his Creator intended him to be, who is there to say that his past has anything in it to concern a critical world? Or who is there to deny to Jimmy Valentine his birthright if he should miraculously redeem it?

But should he fail in the great test—well, perhaps no word should just now be sent regarding him to the old home in the little town, to the father and the mother who would not understand.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

PARK THEATRE.

William H.—Uncle "Billy," everybody calls him—Crane has come to town in a brand new George Ade comedy. He's at the Park Theatre and if you want a good hearty laugh and a nice little thrill, too, that's the place to go to get it. Maybe you remember that the last time Mr. Crane was here—nearly two years ago he presented "Father and the Boys"—another Ade comedy and one of the most entertaining plays in a very long time. His new piece "U. S. Minister Bedloe" is said to be lots more entertaining. It tells a story about how a dear old man, who has always been content to be a political boss in a little up-state town somewhere, suddenly gets appointed U. S. Minister to one of those small republics down south where they are always having revolutions. He takes his wife and his pretty daughter along with him and a polished Spanish gentleman, high in the government of the republic, promptly begins to make love to her. Then the young American she was half way engaged to back home turns up as the promoter of a new insurrection and gets arrested as a filibuster right off. The U. S. Minister doesn't realize that the thing is serious. But he has been rather frightened by the encouragement his daughter has been giving to the Spanish gentleman and so he persuades the young American to allow himself to be marched off to prison—thinking thereby to impress his daughter and revive her interest in her former sweetheart. Suddenly he learns that his young friend is to be shot as a spy. There's a situation for you, sure enough. But the Minister is just startled—not dismayed. He's fought and won too many battles at the polls for that. He promptly develops real military genius, overturns the government, rescues the young American and sails away for home, triumphant and happy. Mr. Crane has a splendid company. There's dear old Mrs. Whiffen as the Minister's wife; pretty Millicent Evans as his daughter; Harrison Ford is the young American and he is handsome and heroic and boyish enough for anything. Henry Miller Jr., who looks a lot like his father, is the polished Spanish gentleman and Macey Harlam is a plotting patriot and Dan Collyer is a funny, slangy secretary of legation and Louis Massen is a pompous old diplomat.

Park Theatre, Boston.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"The Road to Yesterday," which Mr. Craig is preparing for the coming week at the Castle Square, tells the entertaining tale of a bright and merry young woman who wishes she might travel back into the scenes and among the people of long ago. Her wish is mysteriously granted, and at the beginning of the second act, she sees and becomes a part of the picturesque and primitive life of England in the year 1603. All the characters are transported with her, and the second and third acts have not a little in them of novelty and surprise. Two seasons ago Mr. Craig began his career as manager of the Castle Square with this play, and it was then received with such delight that its revival is certain to be accorded a hearty welcome. In the fourth act all the characters retrace the road from yesterday, none the worse for their adventures, the heroine is "pulled out of her dreams" and happy in the love of the man who has rescued her from many perils. The part of Elspeth Tyrrell, the heroine, will be played by Mary Young, and Mr. Craig will again have his romantic role of Jack Greatorex, who becomes Reformado Jack in the second and third acts. The new member of the company, Robert Homans, will appear as Will wi' the Feather, and others in the cast will be George Hassell Bert and Wilfred Young, Florence Shirley, Marie Curtis, Mabel Colcoard and Al Roberts. There will be an especial equipment of scenery which will add to the attractiveness of the production. "The Road to Yesterday" will be acted for only one week, being followed on Monday, February 13th by a great dramatic production of "Faust."

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

At the Hollis Street Theatre, for a two weeks' engagement beginning Monday, Feb. 6, Charles Frohman will present John Drew in "Smith," in which Mr. Drew has made one of his most brilliant hits of recent years. This is the fifth Maugham comedy to be seen in this country, the others having been "Lady Frederick," "Jack Straw," Mrs. Dot" and "Penelope," but "Smith" is said to be far and away the best thing its author has yet done. Aside from its excellence as a specimen of playwriting, in which both comedy and serious elements are skilfully blended, it affords Mr. Drew a character in which he has achieved a personal success of the most emphatic kind, although the role is quite different from what the playgoing public is in the habit of characterizing as "a John Drew part." While "Smith" is the title of the play, the principal character is Thomas Freeman, a returned colonial, an active, healthy, breezy farmer from Rhodesia. After eight years of pioneering he re-visits London, where he had formerly been a prosperous stock broker and a man of fashion until he had been swamped by some bad investments. Roughing it has made a man of him, and he is in search of a wife. His soul revolting at the shallowness of the smart set, he falls in love with "Smith" who is the parlor maid in his sister's household. Out of his romance with "Smith," and the reformation of the bridge mad women who are brought to their senses only when one of their number is face to face with a tragedy, the play is made. Mr. Drew will give Wednesday and Saturday matinees during his engagement at the Hollis.

SHUBERT THEATRE

On Feb. 6th, at the Shubert Theatre Messrs. Shubert, loose internationally famed musical producers will present that effervescent fountain of fun, Sam Bernard, in his latest merry musical melange, "He Came From Milwaukee," with all the splendor that characterized its recent run of six record-breaking months at the New York Casino and from whence it comes here. Sam Bernard has always been considered the most original purveyor of musical comedy on the American stage, not only because he is a natural born comedian of irresistible qualities but his productions and organizations have always been the envy of the theatrical world and the recipient of unbounded praise by the entire press and public; and from all accounts this season, Mr. Bernard has been so handsomely encouraged by the Messrs. Shubert that we may expect for this engagement one of the most gorgeous and costly musical productions on tour, a spectacle embellished with a reckless rainbow color scheme pictured after the original Aladdin dream of beauty. One of the many features of the engagement is the initial appearance here of that famous New York Casino Chorus of which so much has been written and many pictures have been painted. It is the first time in five years that this circle of chorus celebrities have appeared outside of New York City.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Master Gabriel, the diminutive comedian and late star of "Buster Brown" and "Little Nemo in Slumberland," will head one of the strongest comedy bills next week at B. F. Keith's Theatre that has been offered at that amusement resort this season. Master Gabriel, who is without question the smallest star on the boards today, is also one of the cleverest. Although 26 years of age, he weighs only 45 lbs., and is only 33 inches high. He will appear in a new comedy written especially for him and entitled "Little Tommy Tucker." This serves to introduce a large company of fun-makers, including Edwin Lamar, the wellknown animal actor, who will create another remarkable animal role. Willette Whittaker, the harpist and entertainer, who has just completed a long and very successful European tour, will be another strong feature, singing some of her Southern plantation melodies. Miss Whittaker will be assisted by F. Wilbur Hill, the banjo soloist. Another feature will be Beatrice Ingram and company, who will offer an original comedy of department store life, entitled "The Duchess." George B. Reno and company will introduce their uproariously funny burlesque military drill, and Charles and Fanny Van will present their latest comedy sketch, "The Stage Carpenter's Experience." Other big features will be Rice, Sully and Scott in sensational comedy acrobatics; Butler Haviland and Alice Thornton, two clever singers in a musical comedy; and Mlle Diaz's Trained Monkeys, an unusually clever and amusing troupe that is bound to appeal to the youngsters.

WITH THE ACTORS.

Julian Eltinge opens at the Boston Theatre next week in "The Fascinating Widow."

Daily matinees of "The Rosary" are given at the Globe theatre.

"Madam X" reaches its 50th performance on Monday night at the Majestic Theatre.

"The Follies of 1910" still merrily rolls along at the Tremont Theatre, commencing the fifth week Monday.

Next Monday night begins the fourth week of "The Dollar Princess" at the Colonial theatre.

A pretty story was told the other day in the Boston Herald about Walter Damrosch of the New York Symphony orchestra who came over to Boston this week with his orchestra to play at the Boston Opera house. "One 13th of January—it was his birthday—he woke with a sense of low, sweet orchestral music, so subtle that he could not tell at first whether it came from inside his own soul or from without. He stole softly to his chamber door and was greeted with a burst of sound that left him no longer in doubt, the birthday morning ovation of his own orchestra.

"Every birthday since then they have contrived some new way to surprise him. One time he strolled alone to a favorite little cafe and was settling down to a lonesome meal when a cherrful home-like sound seemed to pervade the whole house. It was his orchestra again and his favorite symphony. Another time he had been abroad. He landed in town late at night, and weary with many troubles he put up at a downtown hotel and flung himself upon his pillow. He was just in the first feverish drowse, when he began to feel a change coming over him. He thought he dreamed that his problems had been solved and that he was in a summer garden by an Italian bay and that there was music such as his soul delighted in. And then he woke when the symphony grew a little lounder and remembered that it was again his birthday and that somehow the orchestra had found him."

CALLS JUDGE "HALF-BAKED"

Jerome Also Scores Jury Which Declared Robin Sane

New York, Feb. 3.—The verdict of a jury which declared Joseph G. Robin, the indicted banker, sane, was denounced as an insult to the professional alienist at a meeting of the section on neurology and psychiatry, at the Academy of Medicine.

W. T. Jerome, who represented Robin, addressed the meeting and told the alienists that their profession as well as his had been flouted.

"Your profession has been insulted by this half-baked judge, who holds office by the grace of Charles Murphy, and so has mine. I love my profession and you love yours and we will not stand to have them dragged into the mire. The proceeding was the most ridiculous and absurd on record."

The jury which found Robin sane did so contrary to the testimony of six alienists. The judge referred to by Jerome is Edward Swann. He complimented the jury on the verdict as proving the efficacy of the jury system.

GOVERNMENT TAKES A HAND

Five Seperate Inquiries Into Great Dynamite Disaster

HANDLING OF COMBUSTIBLES

Jersey City Inspector Says Law Was Violated In Matter of Transportation—Blast on Water Front Was Probably Largest Explosion of Dynamite That Ever Occurred—More Than Thirty Lives Thought Lost

New York, Feb. 3.—With five separate investigations under way there is every indication of determined official intention to get to the bottom of the causes of Wednesday's disastrous explosion of dynamite on the Jersey City water front which cost upward of thirty lives, caused the injury of hundreds of persons and material damage estimated at approximately $1,000,000.

Besides the announcement by Public Prosecutor Garven of Hudson county, N. J., that he was gathering information with the intention of presenting evidence of criminal negligence, if such were found, to the grand jury at an early day, independent investigations were instituted by the coroner, the Jersey City police and the head of the bureau of combustibles of that city.

A fifth and important party to the investigation is the United States government. The federal inquiry is in charge of H. P. Conreye, special agent of the bureau of explosives under the jurisdiction of the war department.

Inspector of Combustibles Connolly of Jersey City declared he had knowledge that the law was being violated in the handling of dynamite at Communipaw and that combustibles were being transported through Jersey City without legal authority.

The list of identified dead stands at nine, with nine known missing and a score of laborers, names unknown, not accounted for.

The property loss will be between $750,000 and $1,000,000. The heavyest sufferer is the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Vice President Besler sets the railroad's loss at about $200,000. The United States government sustained $50,000 damage at Ellis island, and an additional $10,000 or $15,000 at the army headquarters on Governor's island and at Bedloe island, where the Statue of Liberty was shaken bare of many windows and big electric lights.

The blast was probably the largest explosion of dynamite that has ever occurred anywhere intentionally or by accident. Fifty thousand pounds went up in the single detonation. There was a marvelous escape, however, from a much bigger disaster, for there was another 50,000 pounds standing on a siding within 100 feet of the pier end, which stood unexploded through all the tumult.

Robert Peelo, professor of mining in Columbia university, and a noted expert on the use of dynamite, has the following to say:

"The Communipaw explosion should receive the attention of the legislature of every state. I believe, from my experience with dynamite, that every state should enact a law making it compulsory with those who ship explosives of this nature to have them frozen before being put in transportation.

"It should also be demanded that competent men, experts with dynamite and its dangers, should be in charge of the shipments."

Old Doorkeeper Passes On

Washington, Feb. 3.—Major George H. Morrissey, one of the oldest doorkeepers of the house of representatives and one of the most picturesque figures at the Capitol, died yesterday afternoon.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

POP KORNCERT BY PRISCILLA

A Merry Time with Unique Features at Quincy Point

Nearly 100 people attended the "Pop Korncert" given by the Priscilla sorority in the Quincy Point church Thursday evening. The vestry was prettily decorated with strung popcorn to carry out the effect of the name. During the evening a concert was given by French's orchestra. Among the attractions were a shooting gallery and a bean baggery, in charge of Miss Clara Buzzell and Miss Cora Barnes respectively. The arrangement of the gallery was very clever. The names of the girls were the bullseyes. Whenever the marksman hit a letter of a girl's name the girl had to present a prize to that fortunate individual. Thus each member of the sorority furnished as many prizes as there were letters in her name.

The punch table was in charge of Miss Lillian Eaton, and the pop-corn table in charge of Mrs. Bessie Skinner.

In the centre of the vestry was the ice cream booth presided over by Miss Helen Sherburne and Miss May Oliver.

In the latter part of the evening a chafing-dish lunch was served. Mrs. C. P. Marshall, Mrs. M. E. Wight and Mrs. A. B. Foster were in charge of the chafing-dishes. The menu included welsh rarebit, shrimp wiggle, Scotch woodcock, coffee and punch.

The storm outside seemed to add to the mirth and merriment within, and all who attended were high in their praises of the hostesses. The members of the sorority were clad in their Priscilla costumes, and looked very fetching. With the storm and the Priscillas and everything, the scene savored of those mentioned by the poets Longfellow and Mrs. Hemans. In fact the whole atmosphere was sort of a "speak for yourself John," although of course nothing of the sort was intended by the young ladies of the sorority. It is believed that the evening was a success financially, as well as socially, and the Priscillas were much pleased with the number who braved the storm to attend.

SERIOUS FIRE PREVENTED.

The alarm from box 142, South Braintree, Thursday evening at 9.55 o'clock was for a fire at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Haskell on Franklin street. The fire originated in the laundry at the rear of the house and was gaining great headway but was quickly quenched by the firemen before very serious dmage was done. A fortunate circumstance was the fact that the engine house is directly across the street and the department was saved a long run. The flames were confined to the one room in which they started. The sheathing was badly burned and the contents ruined and the whole house filled with smoke but it is thought that the loss will not be heavy. The house and furniture are insured. The blaze was officially declared out at 10.40.

MUSICAL AT ATLANTIC

Given by Daughters of the Shakespeare Club

The fourth musicale of the Atlantic Shakespeare club was given at the home of Mrs. Harry Read at East Squantum street Thursday afternoon. The afternoon's program differed from any previous affair, as the talent was provided by the daughters of several members.

The president, Mrs. William Cummings presided and read the following program:

Dances from Henry VIII by Edward German
(a) Morris dance
(b) Shepherds dance
(c) Torch dance
MISS LOUISE WILDE

When daisies pied and violets blue, from Love's Labor's Lost
Bid me discourse, from Venus and Adonis
Miss Alice Coe

First act of Taming of the Shrew
Selection from Browning
Miss Maud Read

The Henry VIII dances played by Miss Wilde were perfectly interpreted, and called forth the greatest enthusiasm. Miss Coe's solos were sung with her usual technique and finish. The readings by Miss Read gave evidence of great ability and study.

The afternoon's entertainment was followed by a delightful buffet lunch. At the next meeting selections from the sonnets will be studied by the club.

CLOSELY CONTESTED

Cambridge Wins Meet With Quincy by 2 Points

Although Quincy Y. M. C. A. went to Cambridge on Wednesday night to contest for athletic honors, with but nine men, the result of the meet was in doubt up to the last event, which was the 440 yd dash. The local boys had been more than holding their own, having a lead of one point when they lined up for the quarter mile run. To win the meet Quincy had to win first and second in this event and it was conceded before the race that it was impossible for a visiting team to defeat the Cambridge boys on their own track, which is of a very peculiar shape. After the last pair had run, it was found that Cambridge had captured first and fourth places, giving Quincy the second and third men in the event.

This gave Cambridge the meet with a total of 33 1-2 points to 31 1-2 points for Quincy.

If Claflin, the local shot-putter, had shown up, the local team would have come back with the trophy, a handsome oak shield with a silver tablet. Claflin could easily have won first place in this event, as the Cambridge man only made a mark of 39 feet. Cambridge also captured second and third places. Quincy only getting a fourth.

McArdle scored second in the high jump and second in the three broad jumps.

Prout a second in the 440 yd.

Wilson a second in potato race and third in three broad jumps.

Wood a first in the high jump.

Cranshaw a second in the 15 yd dash..

Phelan a third in the dash and third in the 440 yd.

McInnes a fourth in the potato race.

White tied for fourth in the high jump.

Trask a third in the potato race and fourth in the dash.

Every man on the local team scored points in the meet, which was enjoyed by a fair sized crowd.

Gold and silver medals were given to the first and second men in each event.

BRIEFS

Today is the centennial of the birth of Horace Greeley, once a candidate for the presidency.

PIRATES WIN FROM TIGERS

Great Contest for Second Place in Makaria League

At the Granite street alleys, Thursday evening, the Pirates wrested four points from the Tigers, and the Cubs and Giants split even, taking two points each, in the Makaria league.

In the first match the scores were close in all the strings. The Pirates took the first by 8 pins, the second by 15, and the third by 2. None of the scores were very high, but with the exception of one man all were within 12 pins of each other. Hoxie led on single string with 92, and was high man on totals with 258.

The summary:

PIRATES.

Hoxie	85	92	81	258
E. Nicoll	88	90	68	246
Stewart	73	94	86	253
M. Nicoll	87	78	82	247
	333	354	317	1004

TIGERS

Curtis	82	90	80	252
Jones	85	81	86	252
Brooks	85	90	81	256
Richards	73	78	68	219
	325	339	315	979

CUBS—GIANTS.

The match between the Cubs and the Giants was one of ups and downs. The former won the first string by a handsome margin of 47 pins, and lost the second by 21. The third string was neck and neck, but the Giants nosed out a victory by 3 pins, and split even with their opponents on points. The Giants did well considering that they were playing with a dummy. Morris, captain of the Cubs, was high man on single string with 105, and also on totals with a pinfall of 257.

The summary:

CUBS

Jenkins	74	81	80	235
S. Bates	89	69	83	241
R. Stewart	94	75	83	252
Morris	105	70	82	257
	362	295	328	985

GIANTS

Collins	81	87	81	249
S. Bates	71	77	88	236
Dell	89	83	82	254
Dummy	74	69	80	223
	315	316	331	962

The Red Sox still maintain a good lead in the league, but the "scrap" for second place is extremely interesting. The Cubs have hung on pretty well, but the Pirates are dark horses, and the Giants and Tigers are game. The Athletics have not found their second wind yet, but there is still hope since the race is a long one.

The standing:

	Won.	Lost.
Red Sox, King,	27	9
Cubs, Morris,	19	17
Pirates, Nicoll,	18	18
Giants, Dell,	17	19
Tigers, Jones,	15	21
Athletics, Troupe,	12	24

DE ORO MADE GREAT PLAY IN TITLE POOL MATCH.

In the last frame of his first night's play with William Clearwater in New York recently Alfred De Oro, holder of the world's pool title, made what experts declare the most wonderful shot ever seen in a championship contest. Clearwater had broken the bunch and left the "one" ball outstanding from the pyramid. De Oro studied the lay of the balls for fully three minutes before shooting his cue ball to the side and bottom rails for two banks and into the remainder of the pyramid, from which the "three" ball was sped away toward the lower left hand pocket and at right angles from the direction taken by the cue ball when it left the bottom rail. From this play he spread the balls all over the table and had little trouble in pocketing his needed five for the total of his required 200, but as the frame had to be played out he went on until he had pocketed thirteen for a total of 208.

MOURNERS GET A SCARE

Aged Woman Comes to Life as She Is About to Be Buried

Glasgow, Ky., Feb. 3.—Mrs. Jane Pitcock, 80 years old, caused a commotion in the mountain hamlet of Gamalio by coming to life in her coffin at the funeral in the church.

The lid of the coffin had been removed to give the mourners a last look at the supposed dead. Then the aged woman opened her eyes and stretched forth her hands in silent supplication to those around her. Some ran out of the church in terror, while others fell on their knees beside the coffin and prayed.

The woman remained conscious several hours, murmuring of wonderful visions, then she again sank into unconsciousness, which this time actually ended in death.

PALMER'S UNUSUAL BET

Ex-Senator Has Won Substantial Sum From Insurance Companies

Detroit, Feb. 3.—A letter received by former Senator Thomas W. Palmer on his 81st birthday reveals a curious incident in the career of the statesman, in which he practically bet $150,000 he would live to be 75 years old.

The senator, at 64 years of age, proceeded to wager $150,000 with several insurance companies—for no company would take the entire amount alone—that he would live more than eleven years. The wager took the form of an income policy. For the amount the senator deposited he received an income of $12,500 a year for life, whether he lived one year or 100. The senator has drawn $212,500 on the bet.

QUINCY'S FINEST WERE CERTAINLY IT

At the Fifth Annual Ball of the Police Relief Association at Music Hall

Popularity of Police Shown by Large Attendance

Success in every way marked the fifth annual concert and ball of the Quincy Police Relief association. Last night was the date of the affair, and Music hall the place, and it is doubtful if the hall ever held a larger party than that present on this occasion. It was a perfect jam, so much so that dancing was accomplished with difficulty until late in the evening.

CHIEF BURRELL.

It was thought perhaps that the storm might keep some away, but if it did, no one missed them. The guests began to arrive early, and by 8 o'clock, the hour at which the promenade concert opened the festivities, the hall was well filled, and it was seen that in point of attendance the number present would exceed that of previous years.

The balcony was soon filled with people composed largely of those who had come to watch the gay scene from this commanding point, and it was not long before a sign reading, "Not even standing room" could have been posted at the foot of the stairway leading to the balcony. Then the ladies and gentlemen who were to be the more active participants began to gather, and at 9 o'clock, the hour for the march to commence, they were standing ten deep near the entrance, while others were gathered in front of the platform and along the sides of the hall.

Meanwhile Wilson's orchestra of ten pieces was giving an excellent concert, the program of which was as follows:

March, "The Cavalier"	Salome
Overture, "Stradella"	Flotow
Serenade, (Flute and Cello)	Titl
Sigilman and Loraine
Concert Waltz, "Wedding of the winds"	Hall
Selection, "Chocolate Soldier"	Strass
Finale, "Jolly Fellows"	Capone

The decorations of the hall were confined to the platform. In the center front was a large shield with background of green. In the centre of this was a reproduction in flowers of the official policeman's badge of Quincy, the lettering being done in colors. It was a very handsome thing, and was the work of Derringer, the well known Atlantic florist. Over this shield was a police patrol box, surmounted by two flags. This box was connected with a large gong which was sounded to open the ball and for the formation of sets for the square dances.

QUINCY PEOPLE CANNOT

BE UP-TO-DATE IF THEY

DEPEND ON WEEKLY PAPERS.

The reception committee was composed of Chief Burrell, Sergt. Hanson and Officers Riley, Hinchin and Dinneen. They were very efficient in the discharge of their duty, and saw that the comfort of the guests was anticipated.

There was an unusual number of the City Government officials present this year. First there came Council-Cherrington, chairman of the Committee on Police, and Councilmen Craig, Ross, Studley, and Sodergren of the same committee. Others of the City Council present were: Councilmen Richards, Sandberg, Duffy, Forde, Ericson, Histen, Campbell, Leslie, Bolster and Boyd. There might have been other councilmen present but they were not seen in the crush. Then there were ex-Councilmen DeNormandie, Badger, Hill, Carey, Flynn and others.

Also Chief Engineer Peter J. Williams and Mrs. Williams, City Messenger Tirrell, Representative Thomas; Lawrence W. Lyons, clerk of the District court; Chief of Police Amos Loring of Braintree, Chief McLaughlin of the Fore River police; Officer O'Day of station 10, Boston, and daughter, Miss Mary O'Day, and doubtless other officials who were taking in the scene from the balcony.

It was but a few minutes after the hour of 9 o'clock when three rounds of three blows, the police call, was sounded on the large gong. This was the signal for the grand march which was to open the festivities. The march in itself was a feature. Upwards of one hundred couples participated in it. The first twelve gentlemen were members of the department and their marching was perfect. They acted as guides which kept the couples following well in step and line. Citizens who saw these leaders of the march, as they came down the centre of the hall, had no reason to criticise their police force, for while these men make a fine appearance when in uniform on the street, here in the conventional evening dress they were particularly attractive. Each wore a badge denoting the committee on which they served.

At the head of the hall, near the entrance, stood Leo J. McMaster, the director of the march, who guided the marchers and thus avoided the confusion that sometimes takes place in grand marches. First came Lieut. Daniel R. McKay, the floor marshal, with Mrs. McKay; then Chief Frank E. Burrell and Mrs. Burrell; Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue, the floor director and Mrs. Goodhue; Officers Patrick A. Milford, John T. Larkin and Daniel H. Doran, the assistant floor directors, with their wives; Officer Henry F. Riley and Miss McLane; David L. Farrell, Claes A. Broberg, George F. Phillips, Jeremiah Hinchon and Jeremiah Dinneen with their wives.

INSPECTOR McKAY.

First the marchers came down the centre by couples, then by twos, and so on until there was a line of sixteen front. The alignment of this line was almost perfect, and it was greeted with a spontaneous outburst of applause.

The march over, the ball continued with a brief interruption for refreshments until 2 o'clock when it closed with a waltz to the air of "Home, Sweet Home" with the sentiment "Come Josephine in my flying machine."

At this hour the weather was far from being pleasant but the dancers found electric cars in waiting at the door that took them to any parts of the city, and caused not a few to remark what a great convenience the street cars are.

As stated above, Lieut. McKay was floor marshal, Inspector Goodhue, the floor director and Officers Milford, Larkin and Doran the assistants. The aids were the following officers: George A. Cahill, Ernest H. Bishop, Charles T. Crooker, Michael Donovan, Daniel J. Ford, Edward Johnson, Charles Olsen, James H. Whelan, James W. Murray, Claes A. Broberg, Edward J. Curtin, John P. Duffy, John J. Avery, John Holloran, David L. Farrell, George F. Phillips, Henry F. Corbett, Henry W. Thorne, John J. Duane.

The committee of arrangements to whom much credit for the success of the fifth annual was due included: Chief Frank E. Burrell, John T. Larkin, Alfred W. Goodhue, Daniel R. McKay, Patrick A. Milford, Jeremiah Hinchon, Daniel H. Doran, Jeremiah Dinneen, David L. Farrell and John P. Duffy.

ing. The hearing was attended by City Solicitor McAnarney and other counsel and the engineers. No definite decision was reached. The matter of the Saville street crossing was not reached at this hearing.

MELON CHOPPEE DANCE.

The Melon Choppee club had a very pretty dancing party in Colonial hall last evening. About 25 couples were present to participate in dancing to Provost's orchestra from 8 to 12. Besides the regular dances there were several moonlights and the Melon Choppee whirl which was in the nature of a German. During the evening, punch was served by Miss Helen Kenn and Miss Eva Archibald.

The committee in charge of the dance consisted of the following: David Morris, Edward Jenkins and George Russell. The officers of the club are: J. Ernest Collins, president; Grover Williams, vice president; Charles Hart, secretary and John Q. Giles, treasurer.

WILL IT PASS THE HOUSE?

What the fate of the ocean mail bill will be in the house is a question that is bothering Representative Weeks, says the Washington correspondent of the Globe. The Gallinger bill barely scraped through the senate, Vice President Sherman's vote being necessary to break the tie.

The bill has been referred to the house committee on postoffice and post roads, since it is a mail subsidy matter, and Representative Weeks, the Norfolk county congressman, chairman of that committee, will call a meeting of the committee early next week.

There are enough members of the committee in favor of ship subsidy to get a report, but how the house stands is a problem. Mr. Weeks has asked Representative Dwight of New York, the Republican whip, to take a poll, and Mr. Dwight is now busy with that task.

BERNHARDT DELIGHTED.

The exhibition which opened Monday, Jan. 30, at the gallery of Dolla Richards, 100 Newbury street, included a study in charcoal by S. A. Eldridge of this city. The sketch is an autographed drawing from life of Sarah Bernhardt, which so delighted the great actress that she expressed her enthusiastic approval by writing autographed verses below the figure.

As Mme. Bernhardt is an artist not only with the brush and mallet, but also a professor of art and declamation at the conservatoire, she is more than a competent judge. The "Divine Sarah" entertains no lively appreciation of American art and artists and she has in Mr. Eldridge's case made a notable exception. The study was made immediately before the midnight reception given in her honor by Mrs. Jack Gardner in the library of the Somerset. It may well be added that Mr. Eldridge is a pupil of Ross Turner and Joseph De Camp. He is the youngest son of the late John L. Eldridge, once a prominent lawyer of Quincy.

—President Taft's proposed treaty with Canada will be welcomed by the United States. It is a notable fact that 91 per cent of Canadian goods imported into this country will benefit by considerable reduction in duty. Only 9 per cent will remain unaffected.—Mansfield News.

Y. P. R. U. DANCE.

An unusually enjoyable dancing party was given in Alpha hall Friday evening under the auspices of the Y. P. R. U. of the First church. About 75 couples were present, and many of them were from out of town. On the program there were the usual number of waltzes and two steps, a Portland fancy, barn dances and a Paul Jones. The waltzes were all moonlight with the effect carried out by means of green shades over the lights around the sides of the hall.

Punch was served throughout the evening in one of the ante rooms beside the stage. The music was furnished by Gourlie's orchestra. Among the guests were people from South Framingham, Lynn, Lincoln, Boston and Kingston, Mass. Mrs. George G. Saville and Mrs. James Walker were the patronesses. The committee in charge included Miss Catherine Saville, chairman; Miss Ruth Penniman and Brewster Walker.

The Ladies' Aid association of the First Universalist church met with Mrs. Charles Hobart, 35 Pearl street, Thursday and quite a number were present. Arrangements were made for the May sale and the business kept the ladies busy until called to order by the hostess and the line of march taken to the dining room where a bountiful supper was served. After supper a social time was enjoyed until late in the evening, when the ladies departed with many good wishes for their hostess. "Yes, thank you, we'll come again," said all.

STATE HOUSE HEARINGS

Apportionment for Hingham Bridge—Public Library Bill

The Committee on Roads and Bridges of the Legislature will give a hearing Monday morning at 10.30, in room 426, on the petitions of the towns of Weymouth and Hingham and the City of Quincy for a bill that will oblige the State to pay a portion of the expense of the new bridge over Weymouth Back river between Weymouth and Hingham. The expense of this bridge is now apportioned between the City of Quincy and the towns of Weymouth and Hingham. City Solicitor McAnarney will attend the hearing and urge the passage of such a bill as proposed.

At 11 o'clock Monday morning before the Committee on Libraries there will be a hearing on the bill of Mayor Shea, for authority for the Thomas Crane Public libray to hold property in excess of $100,000. The Thomas Crane Public library is incorporated and under the law it is not now allowed to hold property to more than that value. Property has been deeded to the library so that it now has more than the amount allowed by law and as other property may come under their control the passage of the bill is urged.

—About one-half of the sugar consumed in the United States is brought from foreign countries, about one-fourth from our own islands, and the remaining one-fourth produced in this country. The total production of sugar in the United States now amounts to one and three-fourths billion pounds a year, of which more than one billion pounds is beet sugar and about three-quarters of a billion cane sugar.—Medford Mercury.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The Democrats will have to try a hazard of new fortunes in 1912.

We have just negotiated a parcels post treaty with Brazil. By and by we shall probably have a parcels post with ourselves.

The attorneys for the Standard Oil Company in their arguments before the Supreme Court, said that John D. Rockefeller was an artist. In oil?

Having learned that there are already three Smiths in the United States Senate, Gov. Wilson says "That's all" to the New Jersey aspirant.

February is the shortest month of the year but it looks as though it was to be an unusually busy one socially if one may judge by the dates announced in the "Coming Events" column in the Ledger.

Washington is selling the fashion this season for names and at the capital it is now "Grayce" and "Alys," instead of Grace and Alice. It's a sad blow to us poor old fogies who have thought the good old days of Mary, Maria, Abigail, Martha and the like had returned for good after a period of Maymes, Maries and Maggies.

A young husband in Washington has solved the problem of domestic happiness in rather a novel manner by having the judge of the court place her in a home for a while. The husband says "Don't sue 'em for divorce, or send 'em back to mother. Just treat 'em like children. Send 'em to some institution, and they'll soon get all right. My wife wouldn't mind me. She was continually threatening to leave me. I didn't feel that I ought to spank her, so I have had her sent away where she'll learn to be a good girl. When she gets out we'll live happify together again."

It is reported in a Boston paper that the delegates of the improvement societies of that city, upon recommendation of the legal and legislative committee voted this week to oppose the bill providing a $25,000 bathhouse for Quincy, to be built by the Metropolitan Park Commission on the ground that the expense of such improvements, local in nature, should not be put upon the city of Boston by having them built by a State commission toward the expenditures of which Boston pays 60 per cent.

It might be said by Quincy and the other cities of the Metropolitan district that the Old Colony boulevard proposed for Dorchester alone should be defeated for a similar reason. As laid out it is wholly within Boston, but Boston will expect the district to pay 40 per cent of the cost. As the route is laid out it is of no benefit to any city outside of Boston. If an additional bridge is built over the Neponset river to the east of the railroad, South Shore towns will be willing to pay an equitable assessment toward the cost.

If the towns to the south of Boston expect to have improvements similar to those to the north of Boston they must pull together.

When it was proposed to extend the Revere Beach parkway to Lynn, the Metropolitan Park Commission did not advocate a route across two railroads that it might enter Lynn over the turnpike and existing bridge, but it went to great expense and overcome difficult construction by building along the shore from the Point of Pines to West Lynn requiring a long bridge and causeway, but avoiding the railroads.

The same plan should be adopted south of Boston. The route reported will go under the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Pope's Hill, cross the Neponset branch at grade, and cross the railroad by bridge at Atlantic street, Quincy.

The Daily Ledger route however is wholly to the east of the railroad from the South Station, Boston, to City Square, Quincy, and thence to Nantasket and all the South Shore towns. It would shorten the distance from Boston to Squantum and points on the Quincy Shore reservation nearly two miles. It would also be a much more direct route from Boston to Houghs Neck and all the South Shore towns, as the Quincy Shore reservation will be continued across Black's creek to Hancock street, and will have many tributaries such as Valley street.

DRIFT OF OPINION

The address delivered by Rudolph Spreckels of San Francisco at the Chamber of Commerce dinner in this city last evening had especial value for this section of the country in the conclusions drawn by the speaker from experiences not altogether creditable to American civics, rather than in the experiences themselves. The story of municipal misrule has been told over and over again. It makes very little difference whether it relates to San Francisco or to New York, to Chicago, Pittsburg or Boston, its source may be traced in each instance to loose morals and loose methods in the business community. Corrupt politics is an effect, not a cause; the moment the responsible manhood of a community determines to root out extravagance and inefficiency and dishonesty in municipal government, boss rule is doomed.

San Francisco could not shake herself from the clutches of a conscienceless group of public plunderers until she had first succeeded in awakening her business men to a proper sense of their responsibility. All went well for the cause of good government as soon as those most interested in good government made it their business to secure it. Mr. Spreckels' message to Boston, to Massachusetts and New England, if we interpret it correctly, is that mere condemnation of municipal ills on the part of those who have it within their power to heal them is only a misconception of civic duty. The thing for clean men to do is to stand out for clean methods everywhere, to be tolerant of nothing else, to be content with nothing less.—Christian Science Monitor.

No doubt the governors and members of congress who went into office on what was generally termed the "wave of insurgency" last fall, will find themselves in the position of the hero of H. G. Wells' novel, "The New Machiavelli," who is swept into parliament on a Liberal wave and then wonders what he is going to do. Mr. Wells has done nothing better than his description of his hero's helplessness when he looks about him, among the members of his party. "It was easy to tell what they were against," he says, "but difficult to tell what they were for." Then he goes on to point out how the party of Liberalism is made up of elements of chronic opposition. "It is easier to say 'I oppose' than 'I do,' he declares. "The politician who takes the easier course has only to draw upon the reservoirs of hate which are deep in human nature."

Substitute Democrat for Liberal and the situation is not at all unlike that which obtains in this country today. The Democratic party and its allies, the insurgents, have attracted those who find it easier to say "I oppose" than "I do." Let a statesman of constructive qualities be swept into office in such a heterogenous mass, and he is quite apt to wonder, like Mr. Wells' hero, what he is going to be able to accomplish. Probably every man who has held office has wondered the same thing, but, if he is backed by an aggressive party that has been used to constructive legislation, the individual feeling of helplessness is not so intense. But there is only pity due the thinking, earnest man who finds himself in a headless, disorganized mass of legislators of whom it can only be said, in the words of the novelist just quoted: "It is easy to tell what they are against but difficult to tell what they are for."—Haverhill Gazette.

"It will be nearer two thousand years than two when we shall be able to fly from Washington to New York in two hours, and many years will elapse before the aeroplane will be used for transportation," Says Wilbur Wright, a gentleman who may be assumed to know something about aerostation, but who is not give to vainglorious boasting over "the conquest of the air." Mr. Wright and his brother have, in a measure, taught men how to fly, and under their instructions men can fly, if they exercise a prodient common sense. But they have not taught men how to rival the migration of the birds, still less how to life freight trains into the air. To balanced minds, nothing has been more strikingly proven by the discoveries and inventions in aviation than the limitations of the application. That some of these limitations may be overcome to a degree is altogether likely; but Mr. Wright's warning is that the conquest must not be expected too soon.—New Bedford Standard.

ELECTED BY AID OF CORRUPTION

Findings of Lorimer Probers Criticised by Root

OBJECTS TO THEIR METHODS

Points Out Where, In His Opinion, the Committee Was at Fault, and Asserts That Evidence of Value In Establishing Bribery Was Refused—Great Crowd Hears Speech Which May Determine Senate Vote

Washington, Feb. 4—Senator Root's speech on the Lorimer case drew a great gallery to the senate for the first time this winter. The senatorial galleries as well as those given over to the public were filled. Great interest had been aroused in what Root would say and the viewpoint he would take. Many persons who came to hear him speak did not know whether he would be "for" or "against" Lorimer.

Others who had knowledge of the senator's views went so far as to predict that his argument would determine the final attitude of the senate in declaring Lorimer's election invalid or allow him to retain his seat. It was known that Root had been urged by the president to read the testimony in the case and make a speech in the senate analyzing it. It was known that Root had reluctantly agreed to do this.

Many of the senators who are yet uncertain how they will vote were anxious to have Senator Root's legal review of the whole case. It is commonly said that Lorimer's fate hinges largely on the effect produced on the senate by Root's address.

The speaker lost little time in indicating the conclusion he had reached, which was entirely antagonistic to Lorimer. He took the position that the investigation committee had been at fault in permitting either the attorney for Lorimer or the attorney for the Chicago Tribune to direct its course in the matter of connecting Lorimer with the corruption of members of the Illinois legislature, but agreed that even in the face of its failure in this respect the committee had obtained sufficient evidence effectually to taint and invalidate the election.

Not only did the senator differ as to the conclusions, but as to the methods of the senate committee. He did not believe that that organization had properly interpreted the scope of its instructions, but felt that it had gone too far in interpreting the charges as a private complaint by the Chicago Tribune. The committee should, he thought, have borne in mind that the reputation, the honor, the purity and the authority of the senate were involved.

"When," he asked earnestly, "did we entrust the guardianship of our honor and integrity to any newspaper or any man? It was the duty of the committee to investigate whether corrupt methods and practices had been resorted to as directed by the senate and not to decide whether The Tribune had established a case."

He pointed out that a committee was instructed by the senate to ascertain, in the election of Lorimer, whether there were used "corrupt methods or practices," and that the committee had reported to the senate that such corrupt methods were not used to the extent of invalidating Lorimer's election, in their judgment. "A fair inference from this finding," said Root, "is that the committee was of the opinion that such practices were used. This inference is supported by an examination of the testimony."

Senator Root said he had disagreed with the committee on its conclusions with great reluctance and regretted that, if his views became the sense of the senate, it would effect the interests and bring injury to Lorimer and disgrace to a great state and the country as well.

Senator Root said, that having adopted the view it did, the investigating committee fell naturally into the error of declining testimony that might have been of value in establishing bribery. He said there was already in the evidence substantial ground of the fact that bribery existed and it was the duty of the committee to have done what the senate directed it to do and run this clew to the ground.

FAVORED BY PRODUCE MEN

They Urge Congressmen to Ratify Proposed Treaty With Canada

Boston, Feb. 4.—The members of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange petitioned the Massachusetts senators and representatives in congress to support the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

A resolution was adopted, declaring that the members heartily commended the terms of the proposed reciprocity agreement in respect to the elimination and reduction of import duties. For many years, it was pointed out, thousands of barrels of apples are yearly shipped from Canada to Europe, glutting the market.

The members believe that if free trade is established, Canadian producers of apples would ship their apples to the middle west, leaving a portion of the foreign trade to New England farmers.

BANKER IS INDICTED

Charge of Larceny Against Head of Defunct Corporation

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 4.—Eight indictments were returned against C. J. Rixey, president of the defunct Virginia Safe Deposit and Trust corporation, which went into the hands of receivers, together with its eight branches scattered throughout Virginia.

The indictments charge Rixey with larceny, making false statements as to the financial standing of the bank and falsifying the accounts of the institution. The former banker, his attorney announced, is in Norfolk, recovering from a serious illness. He will be produced in court here Feb. 20.

DIPHTHERIA TOXIN KILLED BOUTURLIN

Doctor Bought Tubes of Germs and Gave Them to Count

St. Petersburg, Feb. 4.—The trial of Dr. Pantchenko and Count O'Brien de Lassy, who are charged with murder in the poisoning of Count Vassilli Bouturlin, De Lassy's brother-in-law, has been productive of sensation after sensation.

Testimony was adduced that Pantchenko obtained tubes of diphtheria and cholera germs, which he had represented were required for scientific purposes.

He said he gave the tubes of cholera toxin to Le Lassy, who had furnished the money with which he made the journey to Kronstadt to get them.

A commission of medical experts testified that Bouturlin's death was due to poison, and that the poison could have been diphtherial toxin.

REVOLUTION IN HAYTI

Arms and Ammunition Dispatched to Disturbed Districts

Washington, Feb. 4.—In view of the revolutionary activities in the northern part of Hayti, the Haytian government has issued a call to arms and is dispatching arms and ammunition to the disturbed districts.

This information was received by the state department in a telegram from the American minister at Port au Prince. The minister reports that there is considerable excitement in Hayti and that many arrests have been made.

Reports from the American consul at Cape Haytian verify the press reports of trouble in that locality.

Nne patients suffering from pneumonia were inoculated with a liquid extract from metabolic products given off by the pneumonia germ in progress of growth. In every case, it is asserted, the patient was cured.

CITY HEMNED IN BY REBELS

Juarez' Capture Certain Unless American Troops Intervene

TROOPS RUSHED TO BORDER

Presence Ostensibly to Better Enable United States to Preserve Neutrality, but They Are Within Hailing Distance of Mexican City Should Their Services Be Required—Mexico Has Sympathy of United States

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 4.—Ciudad Juarez is completely hemmed in and its capture today by the Mexican rebels is regarded as certain unless the United States troops now on the way here interfere.

It is said semi-officially here that steps may be taken by the United States government to check any attempt of the Mexican revolutionists to bombard Ciudad Juarez, which is opposite this city.

Rapid and systematic moneuvering of United States troops is already under way with this contingency in view. Four troops of cavalry from Fort Presidio, Cal.; two from Fort Wingate, N. M., and six from Fort Meade, S. D., were ordered to duty yesterday along the border.

This more than doubles the force now doing patrol duty, giving twenty-one troops along the boundary.

Ostensibly the presence of the American troops is to better enable the United States to preserve neutrality, but it is admitted that the troops may fit in very conveniently to any unlooked for situation created by the present crisis at Juarez.

Four of the cavalry troops from Fort Meade will come to El Paso, where they will be almost within hailing distance from Juarez.

Before American troops cross the Rio Grande it will be necessary to have permission from the Mexican government. This, it is understood, probably will be forthcoming, with the understanding that the activity of the United States troops is to be confined to maintaining order.

Fighting by the rebel forces within the town limits and bombardment of unfortified places doubtless will not be permitted. The work now being done by the United States navy in Honduras is cited as similar to the work which the army may undertake in Mexico.

No secret is made of the fact that the United States is in sympathy with the government of Mexico in the present revolutionary crisis and that little consideration will be given to the bands of rebels now planning to bombard Juarez if American interests are threatened by these acts.

The present friendly relations between Mexico and the United States make it possible for a perfect understanding to be reached relative to the rules of war that will prevail at Juarez.

Mexico, knowing the impartial and disinterested attitude of the United States and the desire of the state department to protect American property, is said to be quite willing to allow the United States to exercise the necessary precautions at the American border.

The mayor of Juarez yesterday ordered all places of business closed. American and other foreign flags were at once put out by the foreign residents. The consuls had not had any notice of an attack, and the mayor declined to say why he issued the closing order.

There was an exodus from the town of women and children and other noncombatants. Federal officials are busy in every direction making preparation to meet the proposed attack.

The guard of United States troops at the two bridges connecting Juarez with El Paso was doubled to prevent any insurrectos from the Texas side crossing the Rio Grande.

MILTON

Richard V. McKay, who has been visiting his home in East Milton for the past few weeks, will soon return to Cuba to take up the duties of his new position. He will have full charge of the Pennsylvania Steel Co.'s works on the island of Cuba.

The East Milton Hose house was called out twice this week for grass fires. On Tuesday a still alarm from the neighborhood of Box 41 was for grass fires along Canton avenue. The tree warden's men were at work with their torches, but owing to the high wind, the fires got away from them and the Combination wagon was pressed into service.

An alarm from box 73 Wednesday at 6.10 P. M. brought the hose wagon to a grass fire by the railroad crossing on Granite avenue.

John McLaren of Martin place barely escaped severe injury on Tuesday. As he was wheeling a barrow of wood up Bryant place the electric car came by and hit the wheelbarrow. The wood was knocked into the middle of next week and Mr. McLaren was bowled over and shaken up pretty severely.

The Silent Five were defeated by the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. basketball team Thursday evening by the score of 33 to 26.

Miss Cora Day, a teacher at the Belcher school, has been out sick this week.

Ralph Frethie who was operated on at the Quincy hospital last week is getting on comfortably. His convalescence is slow but the doctors are confident that it is sure.

STORM'S IMPORTANT BILL.

Braintree people are interested in House Bill No. 760 accompanying the petition of Representative Henry M. Storm of this town for legislation to prohibit the use of intoxicating liquors, and the carrying of intoxicated persons on passenger trains of railroad corporations.

The text of the bill is as follows:

Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to enter a passenger car on any railroad in this commonwealth while intoxicated, or to drink intoxicating liquor while in a passenger car or train.

Section 2. It shall be the duty of conductors on passenger trains in this commonwealth to report the name of any person who violates any provision of the preceding section to the district attorney of the county in which the offence was committed, giving the date of the offence, the names of three witnesses of the commision of the offence, if they can be obtained; and the said report shall be made within five days after the commission of the offence.

Section 3. This act shall not apply to dining cars, buffet cars or private cars.

Section 4. Violation of any provision of this act shall be punished by fine of not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars.

On Tuesday last there was a hearing on this bill before the committee on Railroads. Mr. Storm had charge of the bill, and those appearing in advocacy of its passage were I. Wendell Gammons, president of the Men's club of the South M. E. church, which organization originated the bill; Rev. Thomas Simms, and Rev. E. H. Brady of the Seamen's Bethel. Only two remonstrants were heard, one of whom represented the Boston & Maine R. R. and a railroad conductor representing the conductor's organization. Both remonstrants did not object to Section 1 of the bill.

This law for the best interests of the community and in the spirit of public decency ought to pass, and if necessary Men's clubs in all parts of the state will be asked to cooperate. —Braintree Observer.

Romance of a Shadow.

It is hard to believe that a shadow is probably the origin of all astronomical, geometrical and geographical science. The first man who fixed his staff perpendicularly in the ground and measured its shadow was the earliest computer of time, and the Arab of today who plants his spear in the sand and marks where the shadow falls is his direct descendant. It is from the shadow of a gnomon that the early Egyptians told the length of the year. It is from the shadow of a gnomon that the inhabitants of upper Egypt still measure the hours of work for a water wheel. In this case the gnomon is a lhurra stalk supported on forked uprights and points north and south. East and west are pegs in the ground evenly marking the space of earth between sunrise and sunset. In a land of constant sunshine a shadow was the primitive chronometer. It was also the primitive footrule.—London T. P.'s Weekly.

Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

EDUCATING THE PUBLIC.

A leading daily paper recently did fire insurance the compliment of publishing a letter from a property owner which treated the insurance companies in a very fair and just manner. The property owner in question had the temerity to say that if the insurance question were calmly viewed in all its phases, people would readily find how grossly in error their judgment of the business had been in many instances. He said:

"Experience is an expensive schoolmaster, but its lessons are impressive and enduring. The surviving companies have at length learned that, if they are to pay their losses, expenses and a reasonable return for the risk of capital, the premiums must be adequate to this effect. They have learned, too, that if the premium charges are justly alloted, it must be by making the cost proportionate to the risk; and to this end, as before said, they are now extensively employing, in a comprehensive way, the plain, common sense business method of carefully examining the properties proposed for insurance, and applying to each the charge which revised experience shows to be appropriate to that risk."

The president of a leading American company, who experienced the delightful sensation of seeing something in the daily papers appreciative of the position of the insurance companies, gave expression to the following views: "The better class of fire insurance companies feel deeply the great need of correcting the unfortunate, false impressions which so generally prevail. It is our wish to counteract this feeling by taking the public into our confidence so that our policy holders and others may have a better understanding of what the money, which they are paying for fire insurance premiums is used for. Advertising does not educate the public but if the daily and weekly press could be induced to publish articles explaining the nature of fire insurance, in a simple form, it would accomplish much good. The companies have nothing to conceal, but as a rule, their managers are so deeply absorbed in the problems of the business that they fail to impress upon their patrons the true relations which should exist between the companies and their policy holders.

This is a matter that is worthy of consideration. I cannot do better than here quote the results of the Agency Bulletin's canvass set forth in the paper of Ernest A. Matthews some time ago, on this subject, which was in part as follows:

"First: A person before he is granted a license, should pass a most rigid examination as to his knowledge of the conditions expressed in the written contract of indemnity of the Standard Fire Insurance Stock Policy Form.

Second: He should know the conditions expressed in all the clauses and permits, and their uses, and when to attach to an insurance policy, and their effect upon the policy when so attached.

Third: He should enter into the insurance business and follow it as a profession, not engaging in this line of employment as a side line.

Fourth: He should be competent to make inspections and complete the survey of any risk submitted to him for insurance.

Fifth: He should have the knowledge and experience so that he could write an insurance policy correctly.

Sixth: He should understand the fundamental principles used in compiling mercantile policy form, and have had experience along this class of risks.

Seventh: He should be able to ascertain who has the insurable interest in each risk submitted to him for insurance.

Eighth: He should be thoroughly posted on the subject of rates (this knowledge to vary in accordance with his authority to make or pass upon the equity of the same.")

These qualifications should be required by the companies before they appoint a man as their agent and a similar requirement on the part of the state of such necessary qualifications before a license were issued would very materially elevate the standard and the importance of our business. Some such requirement cannot be far away and most of us would do well to spend some time on these lessons that we may measure up to the full stature of competent Insurance Agents."

BRAINTREE PHILERGIANS.

At the next meeting of The Philergians to be held at the usual hour on February 7th, Ralph L. Wiggin, superintendent of the Braintree schools, will speak on "The Social Order and the Public Schools." At the close of his address there will be an opportunity to ask questions.

This will be an open meeting, which anyone may attend upon payment of twenty-five cents.

The next meeting of the evening course, at which Judge Avery will speak on "The Legal Knowledge of Shakespeare," and Mrs. Avery will sing Shakespearian songs, will be held with Judge and Mrs. Avery on February 14th, instead of the 13th as announced.

Owing to the limited seating capacity of Cochato hall, no guest tickets will be sold for the club dramatics on March 7th. Members of the waiting list may each purchase one ticket at twenty-five cents, and club members will be admitted on presentation of membership cards. Members of the cast may each invite one guest, who will be admitted free.

Mrs. Benjamin J. Loring has resigned as chairman of the social service committee and Mrs. Edith F. Morrison has been appointed to that chairmanship and will take up her duties at once.

Through the courtesy of the New England Woman's Club, a legislative conference will be held at their club rooms in the Chauncy hall building, Copley square, Boston, on Saturday, February 11th, from 2 to 5 P. M., and on Thursday, February 16th, at 2 P. M., a conservation conference will be held there. A card bearing the name of the person presenting it and the name of the club of which she is a member is required for admission to these meetings.

The Philergians have received notice of the Legislative Conference at Chauncy hall building, Copley square, on Feb. 11 at 2.15 P. M. The bills to be considered will be those endorsed by the Federation at its mid-winter meeting. There is to be a conference also on Conservation at Chauncy hall, Feb. 16, at 2 o'clock. The Forestry committees of the Federation, club presidents and all members interested are invited to attend and take part in the discussion. The program will consist of questions, answers and discussion.

Last Monday evening the last half of "Twelfth Night" was read at the home of Mrs. Albert E. Avery, by the same cast as the former evening.

BRAINTREE

Mrs. F. P. Luce and Mrs. Leroy Luce of Dorchester, formerly of Middle street, Braintree, were the guests of Mrs. O. W. Hollis, Thursday.

There is a lecture to be given in Town Hall, next Monday evening under the auspices of the local Improvement Association. It will be illustrated by stereopticon views showing places in Braintree which are not exactly beauty spots and others which have been materially changed for the better by the efforts of said society.

The Men's Club of All Soul's church will meet next Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock. Hon. Elmer L. Curtis, Civil Service Commissioner, will speak on "Civil Service." Thomas Curley of the Mass. Civic League has for his subject "New Boy Building and Man Making, a Protected Public playground."

SAILOR NOT A LABORER

Captain Who Allowed Chinaman to Land Freed by Judge

New York, Feb. 4.—On the ground that a sailor is not a laborer, Judge Hand, in the United States circuit court, quashed an indictment against Captain Jamieson, a steamship master, charged with having allowed a Chinese member of his crew to land in violation of a federal statute.

"There seems to be no doubt that a seaman is not a laborer," says the court. "This has been held in a number of decisions, and it accords with the reasonable usage of words. A sailor does manual labor, but he is certainly not, in ordinary parlance, a laborer, either skilled or unskilled."

W. B. THOMAS
Sugar Trust President
Who Recently Resigned

NO PRESIDENT FOR A WHILE

Sugar Trust Has No One In View For the Position

THE RETIREMENT OF THOMAS

Coincident With Action Taken by National Company, Under Pressure From the American, Against Havemeyer Family to Void $10,000,000 Common Stock Obtained by Man Recognized as Trust's Creator

New York, Feb. 4.—The place made vacant by the retirement of Washington B. Thomas from the presidency of the American Sugar Refining company will not be filled in the immediate future, according to information obtained from an official of the trust. It is declared that no one is in view for the position, and that Thomas has stepped from the presidency into the chairmanship of the board in pursuance of a plan which he had in mind for some time.

It is understood to be merely a coincidence that the retirement of Thomas from the presidency should come at the same time as the action which the National Sugar Refining company, on pressure from the American Sugar Refining company, is taking against the Havemeyer family to void $10,000,000 common stock which Henry O. Havemeyer obtained in the deal whereby three or four independent concerns were merged into the trust in 1900.

The National Sugar common stock was all water, as the concerns merged at that time had joint capital of approximately $8,250,000, paying a return that did not justify a valuation above par, and the National company was formed with a $20,000,000 capital, equally divided between common and preferred stock.

Originally this common stock was parcelled out between various of the associates of Havemeyer, but he acquired the majority of these holdings, and Thomas, to whom 500 shares of the National was issued, voluntarily turned his stock back after the directors of the American had declined to acquire the National common stock on the proposal of Havemeyer.

With the Havemeyer family now pretty thoroughly eliminated from the American Sugar Refining company and in process of being excluded from the National, if the action instituted in Jersey City is successful, the house-cleaning begun under Thomas' administration in the American may be said to be complete. In a word, the sugar trust, upon all its professions and by every external indication of conduct, has determined to "be good."

It is a hard row that the trust has still to hoe. With its record of conviction in civil and criminal proceedings behind it, fringed about by the conviction of its officers and employes, with two federal suits, one criminal and one civil, yet to be tried, the combination can hardly expect to have its professions taken at their face value.

Not only is the American Sugar Refining company indirectly fighting young Horace Hevemeyer for the $10,000,000 common stock issue of the National company, a subsidiary, but it is going to scrutinize the official activities of his father, the late Henry O. Havemeyer, generally recognized as the trust's creator.

$300,000 Gift From Mrs. Sage

Ithaca, N. Y., Feb. 4.—A gift of $300,000 by Mrs. Russell Sage to Cornell university is announced by President Schurman. The money is to be used for a new dormitory for women students.

RYAN IS IMPROVING

Archbishop's Vitality Causes Surprise Among His Physicians

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—The vitality shown by Archbishop Ryan has completely puzzled his physicians. Notwithstanding a bulletin was issued Thursday night saying that the aged prelate would probably not live throughout the night, he awoke yesterday refreshed by several hours of sound sleep.

His condition is now more satisfactory than it had been for nearly a week. Besides receiving half a dozen callers he told a joke on Cardinal Gibbons, and signed his name to an important document.

When Father Kavanaugh chanted mass the patient responded, and later he joined with Kavanaugh in singing a hymn. He paid close attention to the reading of several letters.

BANK MEN ARE HELD

Vice President and Cashier of Robin's Institution Indicted

New York, Feb. 4.—Indictments have been ordered by the grand jury against William L. Brewer, vice president, and William H. Mills, cashier, of the Northern Bank of New York, the Robin institution which was closed recently.

The indictments charge violation of that section of the penal law which prohibits concealment of loans by officials of a bank from the directors or trustees of the institution.

Brewer is already under indictment on a charge of perjury in having certified falsely to a report to the state banking department.

HOUSE TO SUPPORT PLAN OF PRESIDENT

Little Doubt That Panama Canal Will Be Fortified

Washington, Feb. 4.—Opposition to fortifying the Panama canal is rapidly disappearing in the house, according to members who have been canvassing the situation.

Representative Tawney, chairman of the house committee on appropriations, who has opposed fortifications from the beginning of the controversy, is so thoroughly convinced that President Taft will have the support of the house in the matter that the sundry civil appropriation bill, which will be reported to the house in a few days, will carry a liberal appropriation which will enable the war department to begin fortifying the canal during the next fiscal year.

Colonel Goethals, chairman of the canal commission, who favors fortification, appeared before the committee today and the board of fortifications will be heard next week.

TOO MANY "CUSS WORDS"

Women to Have Them Stopped In Town With Bad Record

Pittsburg, Feb. 4.—An ancient enactment has been resurrected from the tomb of "dead letters" by the W. C. T. U. women of Braddock for application to certain numerous citizens of that borough, who have been careless about their language on the streets.

The women claim that Braddock hears more cuss words per head of population than any other town in the state and two women have been appointed a committee to pump sufficient life into the old law to curb the tongues of Braddock's males hereafter.

OPIUM DENS CUT OUT

Will Not Be Exhibited In the "World In Boston" Exposition

Boston, Feb. 4.—There will be no exhibition opium den at the "World in Boston" missionary exhibition at Mechanics' building during the months of April and May. This decision was reached at a meeting of the board of trustees.

It was resolved "That since fears have been excited, and objections raised, they are perfectly willing to accept the suggestion made by one member of the deputation and apparently approved by all, that the opium den should not be exhibited."

PEARY MUST WAIT

Measure Doing Him Honor Will Go Over to Next Congress

Washington, Feb. 4.—Congress may fail to act at this session on the bill to promote Robert E. Peary to be a rear admiral.

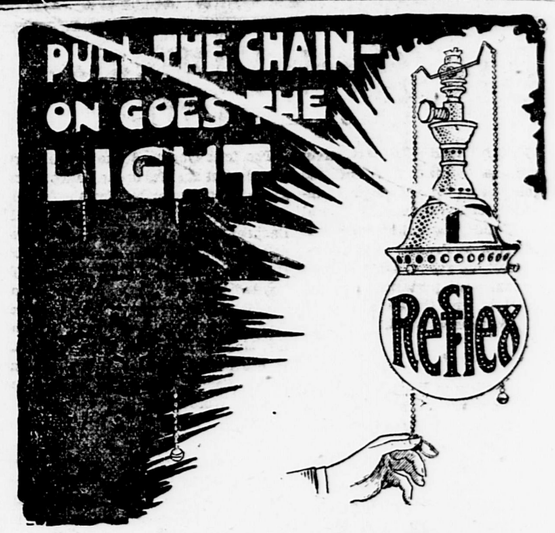

The bill was reached on the private calendar yesterday, but consideration was postponed. It is not likely that private bills will again be taken up before adjournment.

Oregon to Abolish Whipping Post

Salem, Ore., Feb. 4.—A bill to abolish the whipping post for wife beaters in Oregon was passed by the state legislature. This law was enacted four years ago, and since it became a statute wife beating cases have almost disappeared.

ABDUL HAMID SLAYS TWO OF HIS WIVES

Deposed Sultan of Turkey Has Become Violently Insane

Salonica, Feb. 4.—Abdul Hamid Mohammed, former Sultan of Turkey, has gone violently insane, has killed two of his wives and is confined in irons.

The murder of the two women, who were among those who accompanied Abdul Hamid from Constantinople when he was exiled by the Young Turks, was particularly brutal. He choked one of them to death with his own hands and dashed the other so violently against the wall that she died a few hours later.

The exile was subdued only after a fierce struggle in which he himself was severly injured.

When Abdul was sent to the villa here his suite, which was allowed to accompany him, was composed of three full wives, four inferior wives, five lady housekeepers, privileged to go out of the harem, two princes, his daughter and nine servants. This really gave him the allowance of twelve wives.

BEGS FORGIVENESS

New York Man Apologizes In Will For Leaving Small Estate

New York, Feb. 4.—Hugo Napthall, who died Jan. 13, apologized to his wife in his will for not having left her and their daughters a larger estate. He gave to his widow the $900 worth of personal property he owned.

"I beg to be forgiven," his will says, "for not having better provided for her (his wife) and our beloved daughters. Certain faults of my character have prevented my accumulating sufficient wealth to allow me to depart this life in peace of mind."

WANTED A LAST LOOK

Kentucky Widow Charged With Opening Grave of a Lawyer

Stanford, Ky., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Amanda Harrison, who disappeared after the grave of George B. Saufley in Stanford cemetery was opened and for whom a warrant had been issued as the perpetrator of the ghoulish work, was arrested at the home of her uncle in Adair county.

Mrs. Harrison is a widow and it is conjectured that she may have been in love with Saufley and have opened his grave for a last look at the dead man.

DANGER SIGNAL NO. 2 comes from the back. Back pains, dull and heavy, or sharp and acute, tell you of sick kidneys and warn you of the coming of dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Here's Quincy proof:

H. A. Vinton, 1366 Hancock Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills completely cured me of kidney trouble which had been in my system for at least ten years. I had pains in my back and loins and I believed my trouble to be rheumatism. I consulted a doctor and tried many remedies but found only temporary relief. Being advised to take Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a box and began their use. They quickly drove away the pains in my back and my health is better today than it has been for a long time."

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

CHAPTER VI.

THE weeks dragged slowly on for Jimmy Valentine after the momentous day when Rose Lane and Lieutenant Governor Fay visited the prison—weeks of wonder, weeks of hope, weeks of despair.

He concluded that the girl had forgotten him; that her interest in him had been but the evanescent manifestation of a fleeting impulse. Probably "Izzy" Snedden was right after all. Izzy, doing a bit of four for burglary, seemed to know a great deal about women, and he had assured Valentine that "a girl don't know what it means to keep her word, not that she don't mean to, but she just nat'erally talks so much that she can't remember half what she says."

The lieutenant governor, too, had apparently forgotten about the existence of No. 1289, and Valentine began deeply to wish that his hopes had never been aroused. Far better never to have risen to the heights of expectancy at all than on attaining them to be thus rudely cast from them.

But Valentine had not realized how slowly move the executive wheels of the government of a great and busy state. A governor is held to a strict accountability for his official actions, and in the important matter of the pardon of a man convicted to state prison for a felony haste is entirely out of the question. And it was one day when Jimmy Valentine had lost every vestige of confidence in Rose Lane and her uncle and in the lawyer whom he had retained that hurried footsteps resounded down the cell corridor. A paper, a glorious paper bearing the seal of the Empire State, was flashed before his eyes.

"You are pardoned!" came the welcome announcement. "The governor has released you."

* * * * * * *

In one of the parlors of the Ten Eyck hotel, in Albany, within two short blocks of the capitol, Mrs. Webster and Mrs. Moore sat patiently waiting.

"You don't suppose Mr. Valentine would feel uncomfortable in coming to meet our party in a nice respectable place like this, do you?" asked prim little Mrs. Moore of her coworker in the Gate of Hope society.

"No," was the positive response. "That young man wouldn't feel uncomfortable or embarrassed anywhere in the world. This is the first victory for the Gate of Hope, Mrs. Moore, and I trust your report will be such as to encourage others to join us."

"It will be exact, Mrs. Webster, of that you may rest assured. By the way, do you not think we should have had a few reporters here to give public notice of our first triumph?"

"Your report, my dear—we will send that to all papers," and Mrs. Webster smiled proudly as she spoke.

A messenger boy came in with a note from Valentine, who had come to Albany to thank the governor for his release and to meet the people who had worked to secure him his pardon. The note, written from the governor's executive chamber, notified the ladies that he would be with them in fifteen minutes.

Rose Lane and her father, William Lane, an Illinois banker, came into the parlor and greeted the two ladies, who informed the newcomers that Mr. Valentine would shortly arrive. Declining the invitation of Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster to join in light refreshments in the tea room on the mezzanine floor, Rose and her father remained in the parlor, while the two ladies departed.

Rose had not seen her father for months, and on his arrival in the east she persuaded him to accompany her to Albany to assure the governor that if he pardoned Valentine he would guarantee him a good business position. It is more than probable that this attitude on the part of a man of Mr. Lane's standing in the financial world had something to do with the final determination of the executive to sign the release papers. It tended to confirm in the governor his belief in the prisoner's innocence. Mr. Lane and his daughter had waited overnight in Albany after the granting of the pardon to meet the released prisoner, who was coming to the capital for the purpose already mentioned.

Rose, absolutely positive of her one time rescuer's innocence, had made a proposal to her father regarding the future of Jimmy Valentine. Her father, tall, well built, with beard and brown hair streaked with outcroppings of gray, smiled indulgently upon her. He had agreed on her account to place Valentine in a good salaried position, but as yet he had doubts as to whether he dared to secure for the ex-convict exactly the employment the girl demanded for him.

"Now, sit down and listen, dad," the girl said, crossing to a sofa.

"But, Rose, this is a most desperate thing to do—pick up an ex-convict and put him in a bank," Mr. Lane protested.

"Is he an ex-convict if he was convicted unjustly?" argued the girl. "Didn't Uncle George say he was innocent?"

"Not exactly. He said there was a chance that he might be."

"But the governor pardoned him."

"Guilty men have been pardoned." The girl would not be gainsaid.

"But I want you to give this man a chance, dad—a good chance. He risked his life once to save me from insult." She patted her father's shoulder pleadingly and affectionately.

"I know; I know," declared Mr. Lane.

"And you must see him." Rose was becoming fearful of the end.

"Oh, I'll see him, of course, but to put him to work in the bank—why, Rose, it seems like flying in the face of Providence."

"Dad, doesn't it mean anything to you that I want it done?" Tears began to gather in the girl's eyes.

"Why, of course," relented the father. "Your mother left you 40 per cent of the bank stock, and that alone would make me listen did you see fit to even ask it, but who knows about him, and suppose it became known who he was and what he had done?"

"I've thought of all that, and I want you to risk it, and my 40 per cent wants you to risk it."

"And your heart, Rose?" The father's keen eyes searched the young girl's beautiful face.

Rose returned his glance calmly.

"Yes," she cried, rising and meeting her father's eyes unflinchingly with her own; "I've known men who thought they were heroes all my life, who talked of themselves and bored me to death. And one day from a clear sky, when I was struggling in the arms of a blear eyed brute who beat me if I dared move a hand, this man came.

"There was no blare of bugles or anything but utter courage. He made the ruffian leave me. His voice was low. I could scarcely hear what he said, but there was a note of command and a threat of death in it, and the brute disregarded it, and he mastered him, a beast twice his size. He fought silently and killed him. And all my life that man owns me."

Mr. Lane was only half startled at the open declaration of his daughter of her admiration and gratitude for and sentimental interest in the ex-convict Jimmy Valentine. His trained intuition had already told him that she was more than casually concerned in the fate of this mystifying young man, whose record was apparently so bad and whose personality and ambitions were certainly impressive in their good qualities. Truth to tell, Mr. Lane was considerably disturbed at the situation, but he determined to accept it philosophically for the present and to watch carefully the future development.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Chinese Custom of Declaring Debts off on New Year's is Highly Commended—Red Tressed Waitresses Attract Patronage to Restaurant—Hub's Nuhatmas Have a Jab at Hatpin Problem—Something Really Rotten in Boston's Back Bay, It is Feared—A Modest Proposal to Obliterate Punk Pyrographic Perversions.

The frequenters of the old Art Museum in Copley Square who probably feel most keenly the sorrow of seeing the famous landmark disappear are the hundreds of pigeons that have made their homes under its eaves for years. During the work of razing the museum flocks of the birds have been driven from place to place about the building, refusing to leave the ruins so long as there was a nook in which they could find shelter.

The Hub's Chinatown in the South End was gloriously ablaze during the celebration of the celestial New Year. Many a suburbanite who wended his way to his laundry on Monday morning had to carry his bundle of soiled collars and cuffs back home, because his particular "chink" was enjoying the festivities of the occasion in the heart of the city. Firecrackers, sweets and revelry, interspersed with social calls, musical entertainments, and gambling ventures lent excitement to the days and gaiety to the nights. The restaurants were beautifully decorated in honor of the season, all debts were declared off, and everybody was happy. Incidentally why doesn't some intelligent American leader of society institute the custom of declaring all debts off on our New Year? It would simplify matters immensely.

Boston waitresses are wondering if the example of Chicago will be followed in this freak loving town. Reports are gathering of the success of a certain restaurant of the Windy City whose manager employs only waitresses who can produce a crowning glory of flaming red hair. Dye and wigs are even being resorted to, so the story goes, in order to get positions in this restaurant. This original restauranteur finds that customers like to look upon red headed girls when they are eating—it gives sort of a spice to the daily round of viands. The story recalls the bright idea of an enterprising press agent of the Food Fair given in Boston, for admitting red headed girls free on a certain day of the fair. Needless to say, the crowd which attended the fair was largely augmented by other than auburn haired people, drawn thither by curiosity to see the wonders of an aggregation of the kind.

Budapest, Boston's leading rival as the world's model transportation city, now leads her in hatpin regulation, although the solons of the good old Bay State are having lively debates on his much mooted question. The Budapest regulations forbid the wearing of hatpins longer than the diameter of the crown of the hat, and order that the points of the pins shall be closed by a screw cap. Severe penalties are imposed for the overstepping of this regulation. Boston will have to be second in this instance, though by present indications she will be a very close second.

Poor timid Miss Boston is having another scare of her life! Somebody says that the building of the riverbank subway will result in the destruction of the Back Bay through decay of the piles which support that illustrious section. Spirited discussions are under way and both sides of the question are being upheld by scientists and experts. It is claimed by the alarmists that even Trinity Church, the Public Library and other notable buildings in the vicinity of Copley Square will be destroyed or badly damaged by the giving way of the piling underneath due to the shutting out of the water necessary for its preservation. It has been suggested by a bright Bostonian that, since charred wood is practically impervious to decay, a very simple remedy could be furnished for the present difficulty. Let the ground be opened, he urges, and then assemble the owners and workers of pyrographic implements—of which at lowest estimate there must be half a million in this city—and let them get busy executing their artistic ideas on these same piles. When the piles are all well covered with examples of the modern art, let them be deeply, properly and perpetually hidden from sight by the layers of earth, stone and macadam or concrete of the streets and building foundations. Thus two worthy aims will be attained at one blow—the preservation of the Back Bay and the obliteration of at least a few of the pyrographic crimes. Ethel Angier.

SUNNY MONDAY

Cleaner, sweeter, whiter clothes, is the result when you use Sunny Monday Soap.

Sunny Monday is white, and contains not an ounce of rosin, which is one of the chief ingredients of all yellow laundry soaps. Clothes cost more than soap and it, therefore, pays to use the best soap, even for laundry purposes.

Ask your grocer for Sunny Monday.

Ayer's Hair Vigor has no effect whatever upon the color of the hair. It cannot possibly change the color in any way. But it promptly stops falling hair, and greatly promotes growth. Ask your doctor first. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

DIPHTHERIA IS GROWING

Reorganization of Fitchburg's Health Department to Fight Disease

Fitchburg, Mass., Feb. 4.—As a result of the appearance of nearly 700 cases of diphtheria in this city, the authorities have decided to reorganize the administration of the health department.

During the past forty-eight hours nearly 150 cases have been brought to the attention of the authorities. The school physicians are devoting all their time while the schools are in session to the examination of throats of the scholars, and have found that about 10 percent of the pupils are troubled with a throat affection warranting the taking of cultures. Most of the cases of diphtheria so far are light.

AGITATION.

Agitation is the method that plants the school by the side of the ballot box. Agitation prevents rebellion, keeps the peace and secures progress. Every step she gains is gained forever. Muskets are the weapons of animals. Agitation is the atmosphere of the brains.—Wendell Phillips.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Trials are being held this week to pick a team from the Clapp Memorial association of Weymouth to run against the Fore River apprentices at Quincy on Tuesday evening.

J. Emil Johnson and family of 63 Babcock street have been spending the past week in Brockton owing to the serious illness of Mr. Johnson's father who died Friday morning.

Mrs. Lewis P. Webber who makes her home with her daughter Mrs. E. J. Murphy of Russell park is recovering from an illness that has confined her to the house this week.

On account of sickness the Kindergarten class, which meets in the vestry during the morning service in the Wollaston Unitarian church, will omit its session tomorrow and the Sunday following.

Owing to an accident Mrs. Perry S. Starkweather was unable to address the meeting in Boston Friday of the State Federation of women's clubs and her place was taken by Dr. Elliot who spoke along the same line of thought, "Modern industry and child labor." It is hoped to have Mrs. Starkweather at some future meeting of the Federation.

At the annual meeting of the Quincy Choral society Miss Carrie Follett Spear was made an honorary active member in grateful recognition of the fact that she was the first one to start the work of organizing the society which in a short time, has grown to be such an important factor in raising the musical standing of the city. Although nominated for various offices in the society from time to time Miss Spear has always refused to have her name used, preferring to assist the work in her chosen position of active member.

—"New England climate makes the best apples and the best men," said Dr. Frederick W. Hamilton of Tufts College recently before the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston. "I believe the New England climate has been greatly maligned and that it is a tremendous asset to this section of the country. Nowhere in the world can such apples be grown as are grown in New England. Beautiful fruit comes to us from the Northwest. They have developed fruit culture to a high state of efficiency in that new country, but a Western apple has not the flavor of a New England apple. And I see in the history of New England a race of men so sturdy that they can cope physically and mentally with the men of any climate on the face of the earth. New England climate is responsible for the best apples and the best men."

Basketball was very much in order at Woodward Institute last evening. There were three games between school teams and teams of the alumnae. The undergraduate girls proved to be the victors in two out of the three. The third contest was sort of a scrub game but the alumnae have the glory of winning by the largest score of the day.

WILL HANK O'DAY GIVE UP HIS HEAD?

Larry McLean Needs Umpire Skypiece as an Inspiration For His Salome Dance.

WILL OUR NOBLE HERO, MR. M'LEAN, APPEAR LIKE THIS?

L. MANTELL M'LEAN, the noted tragedian of Cincinnati has been urged and implored to play Salome and will probably oblige. Mr. McLean has studied the various Salomes and declares that there is something lacking—something wrong with the way the character is expressed.

"Even Mary Garden," says Mr. McLean, "does not give the soul fire of Salome an adequate presentation. To her the head of Jokannaah is merely wax, not real. Inspiration is all and everything.

"When I play Salome I shall have the head of Umpire Hank O'Day, with a mask on, as my inspiration. While I may not be able to get the real head—much to my sorrow—I shall have the most accurate copy made that high art can supply, place that head on a little pedestal, strike up a little classical music, such as the 'Grizzly Bear,' and I will play Salome that Broadway never saw.

"I will writhe across the stage to that head and bat it one on the chops as the grand climax to a scene that will hold my audience absolutely spellbound.

"I will costume my Salome along different lines from those followed by Mary Garden. Her idea of no drapery is all right—for her—but I'll take no chances of getting a splinter in my shape when I writhe, neither will I fall for bare feet.

"How would I look, stretched out across the stage, my head down near the footlights, my feet back in the wings, and then have Bugs Raymond come along and tickle my toes? What sort of a kick back would that be for art. I'd like to know? I'll take no chances—at least while Bugs is around."

VICTORY BY BIG SCORE

Abington High Taken Into Camp by Quincy High

Quincy High had little difficulty in defeating the Abington High basketball team yesterday. Score 41 to 9. The visiting team was much smaller and lighter than Quincy, but played a good game considering its disadvantages and the fact that the whole makeup of the team is new this year.

"Nil" Chapman was the star of the game. During the first half he caged two baskets, and in the second got six, all of them clean and by no means easy shots. Harold Chapman, with five to his credit was the next best shot, and Tirrell followed close behind him with four. Prout and Trask were unable to appear in the lineup. "Bill" Manning played his usual whirlwind game, turning double somersaults and making high dives from all possible angles. The fact that he shot but two baskets, does not tell a fair story of his exploits.

For the visitors, Brett played the best game. He shot all their fouls and got two baskets from the floor.

The summary:

QUINCY	ABINGTON
H. Chapman, rf.	lb., McKeon
Manning, lf.	rb., McGowan
Tirrell, c.	c., Clark
M. Chapman, rb.	lf., Tucker
Harmon, lb.	rf., Brett
Sutermeister, lb.

Score—Quincy, 41; Abington, 9. Goals from floor—M. Chapman 8, H. Chapman 5, Tirrell 4, Manning 2, Brett 2, McKeon. Goals from fouls—Manning 3, Brett 3. Referee—Bates. Scorer—Rice. Time—15 and 20m halves. Umpire—Newtons. Timer—Roach. Attendance—200.

The next game will be played in the local gymnasium with Durfee High school of Fall River as the opposing team. This team is comparatively an unknown quantity in this section, but in all probability it is strong and will make a worthy opponent for Quincy. It is a large school.

QUINCY VS. LYNN.

Two good games will be enjoyed by the lovers of basket ball tonight when the Lynn Y. M. C. A. teams meet the local boys. Last week Lynn defeated both of our teams at Lynn by close scores, and the local players are out to even up. Lynn, however, has been going at a fast pace for the last month, and the games ought to be closely contested. On Wednesday night Lynn defeated the crack Lowell five by a decisive score, and claim they will repeat at Quincy. Game called at 8.15 o'clock.

The first teams will line up as follows:

QUINCY	LYNN
Gourlie, rf	rf, Newhall
Trask, lf	lf, Soutar
Jenkins, c	c, Legio
Dackers, rg	rg, Perkins
Rich, lg	lg, Zurback

The second teams will line up as follows:

QUINCY	LYNN
Childs, rf	rf, Severns
Newcomb, lf	lf, Moore
Miller, c	c, Gowdy
Dineen, rg	rg, Lane
Holmes, lg	lg, Langville

Englishmen Take Up American Polo.

An innovation in the game of polo as played in England is contemplated. In view of the prospective Anglo-American match the Hurlingham Polo club, one of the leaders in the sport, has suspended the offside rule for the coming season and has invited other clubs to follow suit as an experiment in order to decide whether the American game should be permanently adopted. Many British players consider the American game superior to their own.

"Yes, dad," said the Harvard student, "a flame, but no fuel." Life.

GRAFT.

No city can be injured by the enforcement of the people's laws. To do otherwise is to substitute the will of the official for the laws of the people, and that is tyranny. No state can be hurt by exposing grafting. To do otherwise is to connive at it. There is no secret remedy known for evils of this character. They cannot be cured by hiding them. The disgrace is not in their correction, but in submission to them with supine indifference. It is well for a state to display its virtues and not to parade its faults, but it should not be forgotten that the highest civic virtue is the overthrow of depravity.—Joseph W. Folk.

"FREEZE" AND "BURN."

These Two Words Had a Common Parent in One Aryan Root.

We are likely to consider "freeze" and "burn" as two distinctly opposite effects, but if, for a simple experiment, you will touch your tongue to a bit of heated iron and to a bit of iron that is extremely cold the effects, as shown in the blisters produced and in the sensation of the contacts, will be found to be surprisingly alike.

It is doubtful if our Aryan ancestors when they were planting the seed of the English and its sister languages thought of the scientific relations of what we call heat and cold, but they gave to us the root "prus," which they got out of the sensations produced by burning and freezing. As usual, Aryan roots beginning with the "p" sound change it to "f" on the tongues of the Teuton; so with these our more modern ancestors "prus" became "frus," and from it came our "freeze" and "frost." Again, as is usual, our Hindu brother in his Sanskrit usually preserves the Aryan "p" sound, so he has from this root "prush," meaning to burn.

This root of freeze became "freosan" in Anglo-Saxon, which is our "frozen." In Icelandic it became "frjosa," in Swedish "frysa" and in Danish "fryse." In the Latin the original "p" sound is retained in "pruina," meaning hoarfrost, and in "prunа," signifying a burning coal. Here we see united two apparently opposite meanings growing out of the old root "prus."—New York Herald.

Arrangements Made Whereby Boston Will Give Prompt Aid to Quincy When Needed

And Quincy Steamer Will Go to Boston and Milton

Some months ago it was announced that an arrangement was being perfected to obtain better protection in case of fire, or rather help in case of a serious fire by the City of Boston and the cities within ten miles of Boston which includes Quincy.

This system has now been perfected and it has been announced that it will go into effect the fifteenth of this month. Under this arrangement the steamer from the Quincy fire station will cover for steamer 20 of Neponset on certain alarms, and on other alarms, that is an unusually large fire or two large fires at the same time, the Quincy steamer will go direct to the scene of the conflagration. On other occasions it will go to Milton to cover. In case of a conflagration in Quincy, help will quickly respond from Neponset or Milton as the case may be, or if necessary from both of these places. Under the new arrangement it will be an easy matter for aid to be summoned to Quincy in case of a large fire or two large fires at the same time.

A telephone call from Boston will summon the steamer at any time, or a call to Boston will quickly obtain aid for Quincy.

COSTUME PARTY.

The Junior costume party held at the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday was one of the most enjoyable times the boys have had. About 75 were present, clad in costumes representing Turks, Jews, sailors, cowboys, Indians, Italians, Chinamen and Zulus. The last mentioned made a great hit with the native costume, which, as may be judged were rather scanty. Beads, ear rings, and other paraphernalia added local color. After a grand review of each nation the several tribes did their stunts. The grand parade was led by "Skeeter" Lyons and "Sid" McLaughlin. The cannibals and all concluded afternoon's pleasure by partaking of an excellent baked-bean supper.

EKBLOM---OLSON WEDDING

Reception at Electa Hall Was Largely Attended

Mr. Algot Ekblom and Miss Olga Olson, two well known Swedish young people were quietly married Saturday evening by Rev. S. Elvin,. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage at 7.30, and was followed by a largely attended reception at Electa hall. The bride was attended by Miss Sigrid Dorum, a cousin, and John Olson, a brother of the bride, was the best man. Both the bride and bridesmaid wore blue silk.

Immediately after the cremony carriages were taken for Electa hall where a large party of relatives and friends had gathered to greet them. There was a brief reception at which Henry Sandberg and B. Golbranson ushered, after which a wedding supper was served. Councilman Sandberg was the master of ceremonies, and there were brief addresses by many of those present, all of whom wished the bride and groom a long and happy life. Miss Adelia Johnson of Boston contributed several vocal solos.

Dancing closed the reception, music being furnished by Westland's orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Ekblom received many handsome valuable gifts, and as they took their departure from the hall for a brief wedding trip they were showered with confetti. Mr. and Mrs. Ekblom will reside on Eculid Avenue and will be at home after March 1.

GAINED FAME AS A FIGHTER

Death of Piet Cronje, Greatest Leader Among Boers

BATTLE IN THE TRANSVAAL

Surrender Came Only When His Men Could Endure No More—Stood Off Army of Fifty Thousand Picked Troops With Less Than Ten Thousand South African Farmers—Taken a Prisoner to St. Helena

Klerksdorp, Transvaal, Feb. 6.—General Piet A. Cronje, the noted Boer general, died here.

General Cronje, "The Lion of South Africa," astonished the world by his obstinate resistance of British forces in the Transvaal in the final struggle for Boer independence in 1900.

Some writers called Cronje the Napoleon of the Boer war. With less than 10,000 troops, the flower of the British army, under Roberts and Kitchener, England's two most skilful generals of the era, he surrendered only when he was literally encased in the solid wall of his enemy and further resistance was futile.

Then, burying his face in his hands, he offered up a prayer, and accompanied by his wife, surrendered to Roberts. The British soldiers were so impressed by his modesty and genius that they removed their hats in silence.

General Cronje defended himself for ten days, in a position that was impregnable to assault, but greatly exposed to artillery fire from the surrounding heights. After suffering to such a degree that his men would endure no more, Cronje surrendered on Feb. 27, the anniversary of Majuba Hill.

The British had drawn in closer each night, and a heavy bombardment had been kept up. At 3 in the morning, the Canadians, backed by the Gordons and Shropshires, rushed the enemy's trenches, and three hours later the Boers laid down their arms unconditionally. The prisoners numbered 4000.

Cronje was instrumental in frustrating the Jameson raid at Krugersdorp in 1895-96. He was a member of the executive council and chief native commissioner. He was born about 1835.

Cronje had no school or military education. He was careless about his dress. He was deeply religious. After the death of his wife, who had accompanied him through the Boer war and who was with him at the surrender, he married the wife of a fellow burgher during the World's fair in St. Louis in 1904.

He was a retiring, unobtrusive farmer until just before the outbreak of hostilities in South Africa, when he was made superintendent of natives in the Congo Free state.

After the surrender of Cronje at Paardeberg, Feb. 27, 1900, he was taken under guard to Cape Town, and on April 3 of that year, with 1000 Boer prisoners, he sailed for the island of St. Helena, where Napoleon spent his last days.

June 30, 1902, he took the oath of allegiance to King Edward, and shortly afterward returned to South Africa. On Sept. 2 of that year, at his home in Pretoria, he said that he was contented with the terms of peace, and added that the Boer and Briton would soon be working hand in hand.

During his visit to America, however, in 1904-1905, when he visited Boston, he criticised the draft of the new Transvaal constitution, and called it "a breach of the peace treaty."

ONE-CENT BILL OF FARE

Washington Gospel Mission Begins an Interesting Experiment

Washington, Feb. 6.—The high cost of living in Washington for a time will have an interesting basis for comparison and contrast.

The gospel mission began Sunday to serve meals on a 1-cent bill of fare. The menu embraces bread, coffee, meat, beans, soup, pie, vegetables and fruits. Every article is offered at the uniform price of 1 cent.

A Washington woman has made a gift to the mission with which excellent kitchen facilities, steam tables and a neat, clean dining room have been fitted up and a sinking fund provided to give the enterprise a trial.

EGGS CONSIGNED TO BOSTON BAKERIES

Five Thousand Pounds of the "Frozen" Product Seized

Boston, Feb. 6.—Deputy United States Marshal Waters went to the storehouse of the Boston and Albany freight terminal and seized 5000 pounds of canned eggs.

Information was furnished by Dr. Adams of the pure food department. Dr. Adams stated the eggs are "filthy, decomposed and putrid." The 100 cans of eggs, fifty pounds to the can, were shipped from Chicago and were intended for consignment to Boston bakers.

Dr. Smith of the pure food laboratory explained that the eggs seized were what are known as "frozen eggs" and are used extensively by bakers. Eggs, he said, that are questionable are broken from their shells and placed in vessels and are frozen and are placed in storehouses until sold. The sales of such eggs are large.

Mrs. Gabrielle Mulliner Decides That She Prefers Home.

After a successful career as a lawyer Mrs. Gabrielle Stewart Mulliner of New York has abandoned her office, her briefs and her lawbooks to devote her future time to her home. She had been an attorney for five years, during which time she had become well known and had been kept busy.

"I believe that every woman prefers a home to working for a living, even when the work means the chance of having a 'career,'" says Mrs. Mulliner. "I began the practice of law because my husband became ill and I wanted to help earn the living. I have enjoyed my work, and I have learned a great deal by rubbing shoulders with the world for so long.

MRS. GABRIELLE S. MULLINER.

"But I am glad to return to my fireside to stay. I believe that is the proper place for a woman when circumstances are such that she can stay there. I have no regrets for the past, but I am extremely hopeful for the future."

English Clay Pipes.

The clay pipe, which is vanishing from the Fleet street chophouse, was the only variety smoked in this country until quite recent times. The clay pipe made its appearance in England in the later years of the sixteenth century. Writing about a century later, a French author remarks that the English "invented the pipes of baked clay which are now used everywhere."

"Broseley, in Staffordshire, has been famous for its pipes and clay from the days of Elizabeth," writes W. A. Penn in "The Soverane Herb." "Now all the clay of which white pipes are manufactured comes from Newton Abbot and Kingsteignton, in Devonshire. It is sent to all parts of England and the world in rough lumps about the size of quartern loaves, weighing some twenty-eight pounds each."—London Spectator.

TWO MOTHERS.

The mother of useful arts is necessity; that of the fine arts is luxury.—Schopenhauer.

"EM'LINE'S BUNNIT."

She was a little milliner's apprentice, with a homely, freckled face, stiff, reddish hair, and a thin, ungainly figure; but she had her aspirations.

Not for beauty: when it came to personal charms she seemed so frankly to consider herself out of the race as not even to feel an interest in the question.

"It's a pity Em'line's so homely," said Miss Althea to her trimmer; "some girls now are a real help in the way of tryin' on for customers that just want to get a general idea without mussing their hair; but, lawful sakes! it's enough to put you out of conceit with any bunnit to see it on Em'line. What I can't understand is her bein' so set and determined to have that blue velvet. It ain't no ways suitable and makes her look like all possessed."

"Well," said the trimmer, "I s'pose maybe folks that hain't got any beauty themselves, naturally hanker to get it in something, if it's only a bunnet."

The trimmer glanced into the little mirror hung aslant upon the wall with an air that plainly said that whatever knowledge she might have of such unfortunate people was at best only surmise, and Miss Althea, who was herself plump and rosy, with a complexion which could hold its own against almost any color, smiled indulgently and had her own thoughts about the matter.

As for Emeline their opinions did not effect her in the least. From the moment that marvellous creation of blue velvet and white feathers emerged from the band-box, and was poised on Miss Althea's hand while she gave it a few critical twists and punches, Emeline's adoring soul bowed down before it. She would buy it if it took all her Christmas money; but then her heart sank at the probability that long before Christmas some one else would be the owner of the lovely thing.

"It's a tasty shape," said Miss Althea, "but a dreadful trying shade. It'll do to set off the showcase, but nobody'll want to wear it."

And then Emeline exulted. How Miss Althea had laughed when she first talked of buying it; but when Emeline would in no way be argued out of her fancy, how good-naturedly Miss Althea had pinned upon the glistening strings the bit of paper marked "sold." From that day "Em'line's bunnit" had been the unfailing joke of the shop, and its fame had spread through the village in a way that Miss Althea found quite profitable as an advertisement.

"Somebody'd ought to interfere to keep that girl from throwing away her money on such vanities," said Mrs. Deacon Todd; but there was nobody to interfere but the easy-going, old grandmother, who adored Emeline as the last representative of her family.

"Shoh, Mis' Todd," she said, shaking her fat sides, "I'm able enough to do for Em'line, fur's gittin' her vittles an' clo's, an' what she works for she's free to spend."

"But that bunnit ain't noways suitable," insisted Mrs. Todd.

"Well, I dunno now, Mis' Todd," said the old lady, "bunnits is mostly fer looks, anyway. When I was a gal I had the promise of pickin' out a calliker frock, that I'd earned the money for weedin' onions. I used to look over the calikers every time I went to the store, and when my mother took me down to git it I put my finger right on the one I wanted, a laylock ground with a white sprig—seems to me I never seen any caliker so pretty since. But my mother said: 'Nonsense, Hitty, that ain't noways suitable; and she had the storekeeper put down a lot of dark grounds for me to pick from. I took the very ugliest one of 'em all, but I hain't forgot how hurt I felt for days and days, and how I hid up in the barn chamber and cried. Makes me laugh now to remember how I actilly tried to swear, the way our hired man did when he got mad at the oxen, half under my breath, and then slipped down the ladder and run away to the house, just expectin' to be struck with lightnin' before I got there. Em'line's all I've got, and she's goin' to spend what little money she gits any way she likes for all me."

"No wonder Em'line's queer, with such a perfane old creeter for a gran'mother," reflected Mrs. Todd, as she went about her business.

Christmas was coming very near, and the dull little village brightened under its magic. Even selfish people went about smiling at the thought of some pleasant surprise waiting for Christmas morning. Busy men and women set aside their own affairs that they might help to hide the stained walls of the little meeting-house with festoons of evergreens, and pop-corn, and tissue-paper roses; and stumbling little tongues were struggling with chants, and carols, and recitations.

Emeline sat shirring silk for a lining, and glancing now and then with deep content at the bonnet which had lost none of its charms by the familiarity which is sometimes thought to breed contempt. The door opened and a large, handsomely dressed woman came in, followed by a shy little creature in a faded knit hood. The woman swept on to the trimming room, and the mite hovered timidly near the door, her eyes fixed in awe upon the show-case where Emeline's bonnet was queening it over some humbler companions.

"You goin' to have a new bunnit?" questioned Emeline.

"Only my old one done over. Oh, my, ain't that one nice!"

"That's mine," said Emeline, with deep satisfaction. I'm keepin' it for Christmas; but I'm going to wear it to the entertainment."

Miss Althea came from the trimming room with a battered little straw in her hand, and opened her ribbon boxes with some impatience.

"Don't seem to me its worth doing over, Mis' Snow. It's broke a good deal and faded. Now here's a little brown felt that would trim up real stylish with velvet and a couple of these red-tipped wings, and wouldn't cost much either."

Miss Althea whipped off the hood, and framed the round face in the soft brown felt. Two big imploring eyes looked up eagerly at the woman's face, but fell submissively at what they read there.

"I didn't take Josephine to pamper her vanity," said Mrs. Snow, stiffly, "but to teach her to be a useful woman. The old hat is good enough for anybody in her position."

Miss Althea tied the hood again under the dimpled chin, and pretended not to notice the tears shaking in the brown eyes; but Emeline saw how they presently brimmed over, and were slyly wiped away with a small rough hand.

"My," said the trimmer, when the customer had gone out, "ain't she the skimpinest—the town ought to take that little Josephine away from her. I'd 'nough rather stayed in the poorhouse."

Miss Althea only set her lips closely for a minute and then tossed the shabby little hat to Emeline.

"Press it out a little and bind the edge, and then you may try your hand at trimming it up. I don't care if you put one of them red wings in, seein' its Christmas, though I don't know why I should make Mis' Cap'n Snow a present of what she hain't paid for."

What a forlorn thing it looked when Emeline had snipped off the limp bows and curled up ends of ribbon! Faded and spotted with queer little yellowish spatters, as if it had been sprinkled with tears. Likely enough it had been thought Emeline, as she carried it into the back shop to dampen the brim and get her iron from the little stove where Miss Althea's dinner was cooking.

It was such a bright little kitchen, with a pot of monthly pinks in the window and a sleek cat curled up in the sunshine beside them. A sort of gurgling chuckle came from the depths of the kettle simmering on the stove, and now and then the lid clashed like cymbals as a puff of steam forced it way out and diffused a delicious odor through the air.

"Chicken and dumplin's," thought Emeline, with a sniff of approval. "I sh'd think Miss Althea was rich enough to make that little Josephine a present of a bunnit. Look at that now."

As there was no one to look but Emeline herself she made a contemptuous grimace and pinched the hat viciously.

"Good mind to step on it, or—burn it up—wonder what Miss Althea 'd say—Mis' Snow'd be awful mad. My, but wouldn't I like to see her," and Emeline giggled delightedly at the thought, turning the hat slowly around, while a deep red spot began to brighten and spread on each cheek, and her square chin thrust itself aggressively forward.

"I've great mind to do it," she said, lifting the lid and looking into the stove, and then suddenly thrusting the shabby old hat down among the red coals that made short work of doing it over. She watched it with fascinated eyes until Miss Althea called:—

"You're scorchin' that hat, Em'line"; and then she started and began to laugh.

"I've burnt it up, Miss Althea," she said, coming back to the shop; "I just couldn't help it. I'm agoin' to buy her that brown felt for a Christmas present."

"For the land's sake, Em'line!" said Miss Althea, scattering her lapful of spools and ribbons as she rushed to the kitchen as if she thought the hat might still be rescued. There it lay in the heart of the fire, a golden shell, with a delicate gray film trembling on it, that dropped into shapeless ruin before her eyes.

"You'd oughter give her your own bunnit," said Miss Althea severely.

"I'm goin' to," said Emeline. "I've had lots of fun lookin' at it and callin' it mine; but I'd rather pay the money to git a new one for Josephine. You fix it yourself, Miss Althea; put on three wings, and make it awful pretty."

"What you s'pose I'm goin' to say to Mis' Cap'n Snow?" said Miss Althea, beginning to soften.

"Tell her I scorched that old hat and spiled it," said Emeline, triumphantly; "that'll be the Gospil truth."

"'Twouldn't s'prise me if you landed in a loonatic asylum yit," said Miss Althea, with a last attempt at severity, after which she forgot she was angry, and went about trimming the brown felt with secret satisfaction.

"It's the prettiest bunnit we've sent out," said the trimmer that evening, looking on approvingly as Miss Althea pinned it up in a sheet of silver paper, and delivered it to Emeline, who was half wild with excitement.

"My! won't Josephine be tickled. I wish't I da'st go in and see her try it on; but she'll have it on at the entertainment. I don't s'pose Mis' Snow 'd da'st to make her wear that old hood, fear of folks talkin'."

At the door Emeline hesitated a minute with her hand on the latch, to take one more look at the sacrifice she had laid on the altar.

"Miss Althea," she said, hopefully, "if that blue bunnit don't sell, will you save it for me till next Christmas?"

"Go along, you silly thing!" said Miss Althea, pushing her out at the door. "I do believe you hain't got a thing in your head but pomps and vanities."

But before she reached the corner Miss Althea took down the blue bonnet, incased it in a bandbox, and wrote upon a card in slanting little letters, that seemed to be running a race:—

"Emeline Amanda Dixon, with respects from your true friend,

"Althea Avery."

"There now, Jane Griffin," she said to the trimmer, "you leave that for Em'line as you go by. Goodness knows what she wants of it; but if she can git any satisfaction out of wearing it, she shall have it."

That night at the entertainment two radiant creatures sat side by side upon the rough platform, gazing upon the splendors of the popcorn and tissue-paper decorations, breathing like incense the mingled odors of wet planks, hemlock, and kerosene oil; but, above all things else, absorbed in delighted contemplation of each other. Brown-eyed Josephine looked like a young cherub, with her pink, innocent face set off by the dusky bonnet just brightened by a glow of scarlet. Emeline, her homely face beaming with happiness, her red hair held tightly back by a green ribbon, from which the stiff ends curled up after the fashion of a broom that has seen service, was nevertheless, crowned with the dainty blue bonnet, whose plumes danced and trembled with the wearer's ecstasy.

Across the meeting-house some one had put up as a hint to the charitably inclined the motto, done in red on a white back-ground:—

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these"—

There being no more background, the reader was left to finish the quotation; but it did not occur to either Emeline or Miss Althea that the blessed "Inasmuch" might have been spoken to them.

They never had thought that one might have food and clothing, and home, and yet be hungry, cold, and a stranger, and in prison, for the lack of love and delight.—Emily Huntington Miller, in The Independent.

REPLIES TO SOCIALISTS

Questions Fired at Jesuit Priest at a Boston Gathering

Boston, Feb. 6.—Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston college, pointed out the probable ill effects of Socialism on domestic, personal and national integrity in an address in Ford hall last evening. He spoke for one hour and then spent another hour in answering questions fired at him by Socialists.

Bitter arraignment of the Roman Catholic church and its attitude of opposition to the doctrine of Socialism was conveyed in some of the questions. They were all met with an unhesitating answer, however, by the priest.

The meeting was held under the auspices of a Baptist organization—the Baptist Social union. The topic of the evening was "The Dangers of Socialism."

Capital of Island of Billiton, East Indies, Pillaged by Chinese

Batavia, Java, Feb. 6.—There has been a serious outbreak among the Chinese on the island of Billiton. The capital, Tanjung Pandan, was looted and burned and the chief administrator and others murdered. Troops have been sent to the scene.

The island of Billiton lies east of Banka and west of Borneo, with the Java sea to the south, and has an area of about 2500 square miles. Since 1852, soon after the discovery of tin there the Dutch authorities have given special attention to the island, and it has formed a separate residency.

THOUSANDS ARE DYING

Millions of Others In Danger of Starvation In China

London, Feb. 6.—Shanghai dispatches set forth the situation due to famine in the provinces of Ngan-Hwei and Klang-Si as most serious.

Information received at Shanghai indicates that thousands are perishing from starvation, the dead remaining unburied. Fears are entertained for the safety of many American missionaries.

It is stated that nearly 2,000,000 people are in danger of death unless prompt relief is forthcoming.

Ages of Development

FOR nearly three hundred years the people of New England have been manufacturing goods. Cut off from an older civilization, and with all the complex needs of life to be supplied, almost the first necessity and duty of the Pilgrims was to learn to make things. ¶ For the first hundred years their best thought and energy were devoted to supplying from their own resources and with their own labor the varied necessities of life.

Another hundred years were devoted to the selection of the fittest —of those lines of manufacture for which the natural resources of the country and the genius and environment of the people best fitted them—and to the elimination of those activities which might more successfully and profitably be conducted elsewhere.

And now we are nearing the close of the third hundred years—a century devoted to specialization. This period has seen the genius of a people turned to detail; to the invention of wonderful labor-saving devices; to the discovery and utilization of by-products; to the detection and elimination of every item of waste; and so finally to a rare perfection in the manufacture and quality of its goods.

Thus today New England offers to the world an infinite variety of goods that are the perfect fruition of three centuries of development. These goods find their way into every corner of the world, and answer every need and necessity of mankind.

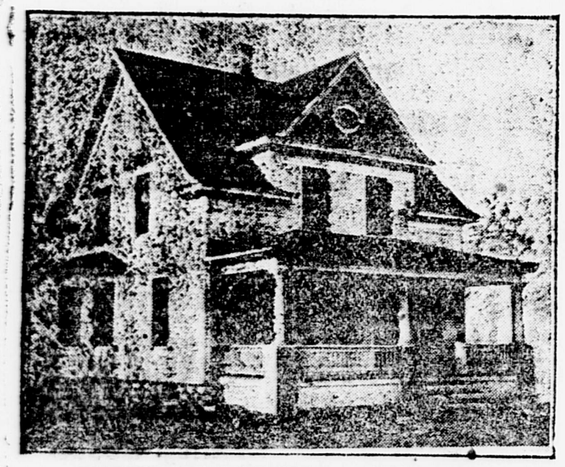

You will find "New England Made" stamped upon huge shovels in Panama that are biting a way through the backbone of a continent; upon the sextant and chronometer that after so many years have guided the weary foot of man over frozen wastes to the apex of the world; upon the diamond drill which bores down and down even into the eternal heat of the earth; and upon the great reflector whose giant eye searches the mysteries of unmeasured space and etches out the canals on Mars.

Thousands of Victims of Plague Are Burned In Harbin

HOSPITAL PEOPLE ARE DYING

Doctors, Nurses and Orderlies Cannot Escape Disease—Foreign Serums Prove Ineffective—Stricken Ones Forced Into Streets to Starve or Freeze—Those Engaged In Sanitary Work Are Masked and Bandaged

Harbin, Manchuria, Feb. 6.—Already nearly 6000 bodies of victims of the plague have been burned or buried in the outskirts of Harbin.

Forty-eight hundred of these came from the Chinese town and 1000 from the Russian quarter.

Yesterday sixteen stacks of coffins and seven pits filled with bodies and oiled logs blazed outside the town.

The mortality among the physicians and the hospital attendants is high, considering the means taken for their protection, and doctors, nurses and orderlies are succumbing to the disease.

The sanitary authorities hope soon to test serum of their own manufacture from the Manchurian bacilli, as the foreign importations have proven ineffective.

The happenings in Europe in the seventh century, when the "black death" swept through the country, are being repeated here.

Fears bordering on panic have gripped the Chinese. At first they defied the medical officers, and kept their sick and dead hidden for the purpose of carrying out the ancient funeral rites.

Now it is brother against brother, father against son. The stricken ones are forced into the streets, to starve or freeze, or to fall perishing from the swift and deadly attack the plague makes upon its victims.

Passersby avoid them, but sometimes those engaged in sanitary work, masked and bandaged, reach them before they die and cart them to the pest house, or if they are dead to the funeral pyres.

Not infrequently an outcast is to be seen kneeling and making his last obeisance before the grave of an ancestor, in sight of a pile of bodies, of which he is soon to become one.

NEW JOB FOR CHOYNSKI.

Former Pugilist Becomes Athletic Director of Pittsburg Club.

Joe Choynski, once a well known pugilist, recently has been made the physical director of the Pittsburg Athletic club, an organization that has just moved into a new $1,500,000 clubhouse. Choynski has recently been training Miles McLeod, another "white man's hope."

Choynski was regarded as one of the cleverest heavyweights that ever entered the ring. At one time he claimed the "light heavyweight" championship. He fought Jim Corbett, Kid McCoy and Bob Fitzsimmons, making a good showing against each of them. Corbett knocked him out in twenty-seven rounds, and Fitzsimmons admitted that he was compelled to spar for time in order to avoid a knockout.

Some years ago Choynski appeared before the Chicago Athletic club and was matched against a promising amateur. "Go after me as hard as you please," said the pugilist. "Depend on me to take care of myself. We will give the spectators something to see."

The amateur was a husky youth, and he went after Choynski with such vim that for three rounds he had the best of the argument. The go was scheduled for four rounds and when time was called the fourth time there were some expecting to see Choynski knocked out. Hardly had the men stepped into the ring than Choynski landed a punch on the amateur's jaw that put him to sleep for ten minutes.

Choynski afterward apologized for the blow. "I had to do it," he said, "for you put up such a stiff fight that if I had not knocked you out my reputation would have been ruined."

Attack on Juarez Is Expected to Occur Early This Week

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 6.—Major Lapowski last night sent the following dispatch to Adjutant General Hutchins at Austin:

A CRAZY MAN'S DIET

Surgeons Take Fourteen Iron Spoons From His Stomach

Vienna, Feb. 6.—An unusual surgical operation was performed here at the Franz Josef hospital by Professor Lotheisen upon a man of 40, named Tacha.

He had been confined ni a public insane asylum, where, about three months ago, he secretly abstracted fourteen iron spoons and swallowed them. The spoons were missed, but nobody suspected their whereabouts until he confessed that he had swallowed them.

He was taken to the hospital. A small opening was made in the abdomen, and one by one the large spoons were extracted. They weighed altogether 2¾ pounds.

BRAIN FOOD FINE FOR PIGS.

Improves Their Manners and Pork, Too, Experiment Shows.

It pays to feed hogs with food that will develop their brains, in the opinion of the faculty of the Ohio state agricultural station at Wooster after an experiment with forty "brain fed" hogs.

The station experts' theory is that if hogs are fed certain foods which will produce bigger brains they will rise above their present state of mud wallowing and garbage eating and become intelligent and polite and be better pork.

The forty selected hogs were put in sanitary pigpens and reared on stuff looking like breakfast food and made especially for them from selected grains. They were kept clean and led gently into more cultured ways. Their meat has been pronounced by experts to be the best ever tasted.

"WHITE MAGIC" WAS LIBEL.

Styrian Woman Wins Suit Over Witchcraft Charge.

A farmer named Gollup has been sentenced to twenty-four hours' imprisonment by a court in Styria for a curious form of libel. When his young daughter died recently he declared to the gossips that a neighbor, Frau Holymann, had caused her death by witchcraft and stated that she had been seen when she visited the sick child to pierce a candle with a needle and hold it in the fire until it melted, muttering spells the while.

Frau Holymann when bringing the action swore that she practiced only white magic and that any charms she used were with the object of securing the child's recovery.

MOTHER GOOSE IS TEACHER.

Her Characters on Tiles In Atlantic City School.

Fathers on the Atlantic City school board are responsible for the fact that the tiles in the new Richmond avenue school bear pictures of the heroes and heroines of nursery rhymes. The kindergarten youngsters on going to school were joyful on discovering the old favorites.

There were many "oh's" and "ah's" as the youngsters beheld Old Mother Hubbard and Jack and Jill and Tom-Tom facing them from the walls. The new school has also a department of cooking, athletic teaching for children and other up to date branches.

MISSIONARIES.

A large and well trained corps of native missionaries, brought from "the land of the heathen," educated here according to Christian doctrines and inoculated with love for Christian living and sent back to their homes to preach by word and example the enlightenment of Christianity, would be far more potent preventive of "dangers from without" than the whole United States navy and could be done at one-tenth the cost. The Christian religion is responsible more than any other thing for this nation's position in the world, its progress and the greatness of its future.—William J. Bryan.

Character Lessons to Train Youth

By JAMES TERRY WHITE.

[Copyright, 1909, by the Character Development League.]

XIII.—Self Control.

JAMES T. WHITE.

ALMOST the first thing to be learned in life is self control. Self control is having one's faculties and especially one's inclinations and emotions under the control of the will. Obedience is the first evidence of moral growth, for the child can disobey, but has chosen what has the moral sanction of authority. Obedience to authority is the foundation of all government, but moral character requires obedience without authority—obedience to the ideal, within—and that is self control.

Self control is largely a matter of the will and serious determination is needed to acquire it. It is perhaps most important to control one's temper, for that bears so directly upon the happiness of those about us. One should learn to control his tongue. Profanity is a vice for which there is no possible warrant or excuse. Editor Jordan says: "The second most deadly instrument is the dynamite gun; the first is the human tongue. The gun only kills the body, but the tongue kills reputation and ofttimes ruins character."

One can attain self control in great things only through self control in little things. Strength of character consists of two things—power of will and power of self restraint. One of the best methods of strengthening will power, thereby gaining self control, is by compelling oneself to do instantly the thing we shrink from, as jumping out of bed the moment one awakes or taking a cold shower bath. The practice of these two simple actions is a wonderful assistant to self control.

If one wants to be well he must control his eating. Eating too much is gluttony, and drinking too much of what is intoxicating is intemperance. Intemperance is one of the most loathsome and contemptible habits one can fall into, and it is due entirely to the lack of self control.

There is only one safe course for those who wish to grow into successful and happy manhood, and that is to touch nothing that will intoxicate. It should be shunned as a contagious disease.

So as regards the use of tobacco. If a boy wants to grow up with all his faculties unimpaired he must let tobacco alone. Life is of vastly more consequence than athletics, and yet when a boy goes into athletics his trainer says, "Cut out cigarettes if you want to make the team." And life enjoins the same rule if one would "make" a fine character.

Self control gives presence of mind, which enables one to instantly decide new situations and new problems. No situation happens twice; there is no next time. The self control in the daily round of school days will give self control all through life.

A shipping merchant said to a boy applying for work, "What can you do?" "I can do my best to do what you are kind enough to let me try," replied the boy. "What have you done?" "I have sawed and split my mother's wood for nearly two years." "What have you not done?" "Well, sir," the boy replied after a moment's reflection, "I have not whispered in school for over a year." "That is enough," said the merchant; "I will take you aboard my vessel, and I hope some day to see you captain. A boy who can master a wood pile and bridle his tongue must have good stuff in him."

Practice.—Let each child compel himself to keep silence when called names. Let him jump out of bed the instant he is first awakened or called in the morning. Let him compel himself to do every day some one thing he does not want to do. When angry count twenty before answering.

There is no easy method of learning difficult things. The method is to close the door, give out that you are not at home and work.—Joseph de Maistre.

He who cannot resist temptation is not a man. He is wanting in the highest attributes of humanity.—Horace Mann.

At each moment of a man's life he is either a king or a slave. As he surrenders to a wrong appetite, to any human weakness, to any failure, he is a slave. As he day by day crushes out human weakness, recreates a new self from the sin and folly of the past, then he is a king. He is a king ruling with wisdom over himself.—William G. Jordan.

When you have spoken the word it reigns over you. When it is unspoken you reign over it.—Arabic Proverb.

Conviction, were it never so excellent, is worthless till it converts itself into conduct.—Carlyle.

The Cup That Cheers.

A business girl who wished to brew an occasional cup of tea in her own room hit upon this happy device: She went about among the secondhand furniture shops until she found an old machine table with the treadle removed. The top of the table she covered with asbestos, and on this she installed a small gas stove. The machine drawers were used for holding knives and forks, small tea, coffee and sugar canisters and paper napkins. Screw hooks fastened to the under side of the table hold tea and coffee pots, a saucepan and a frying pan, and curtains act as a screen. A compact and useful device is this, says the Woman's Home Companion.

Cockney Chivalry.

There was a crush in the pit, and the anaemic looking girl stood with the late comers behind the last bench. The young man in front of her, comfortably seated, was not too absorbed in the musical comedy to note that the girl looked tired as she doggedly stood out the first act. He rose when the curtain fell. "Would you," he asked, pushing past her, "like to mind my seat while I go out for a drink?" The age of chivalry is not past.—London Chronicle.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Advising a whitewash-seeking Senator to resign is like telling a drowning man not to catch at a straw.

Mr. Watterson's departure for Europe in this crisis must mean that he leaves Champ Clark and the next Democratic House to its dreadful fate.

The foreign born voter, however, doesn't seem to have anything on those voters of pure American stock in Adams county, Ohio.

It is said that there is a colored man in Adams County, Ohio, who did not sell his vote. We are not told whether it was because he was in jail or not.

It is said that Senator Aldrich is in very poor health. Working overtime in the interest of the trusts and unlawful combinations does not pay in the long run.

Those Democrats up in Maine are not through rubbing their eyes yet. Sixty-three years is a long time to stand on the outside looking on, while the other party elects all the Senators.

There is not a worthy cause today of any kind that is not dependent in a large degree on the newspapers for its very existence. Shut off the printing press and the publicity and assistance it gives to the church, the school, the reform movements, the industrial enterprises, the social organizations, the fraternal societies and every other agency of progress and development and we should have a nation of people groping in darkness, feeling feebly for each other's hand and trying to reach a common understanding by slow and painful effort, with snail-like progress and infinitesimal results.

The young people have been very fortunate thus far this winter in having so much good skating. While the weather most of the time has been cold enough to keep the ponds frozen there has been comparatively little snow and it has been an exceptional season for ice sports. Now, to get down to more serious questions, we hope the cold weather will continue steady enough to enable the ice dealers to harvest a good crop. We are perhaps not very partial to ice just now but it will look good to us next summer and a scarcity will mean high prices and to poor people a consequent privation.

That Temporary loans by cities, which extend into the next year, are more expensive than loans which mature during the calendar year, is very clearly shown in the case of Marlboro below. One loan is made for two months longer time, but the discount varies nearly one half per cent. It will be noticed that the amounts are exactly the same:

Marlboro has awarded a temporary loan of $40,000, maturing on Nov. 1, and one of $40,000, maturing on Feb. 1, 1912, to the Old Colony Trust Co. The Nov. 1 bonds were awarded at 3.22 percent discount, plus 25 cents premium and the Feb. 1 bonds at 3.68 percent discount.

Every year a large number of strangers move into the territory in which this newspaper circulates. For a time they feel the chill of loneliness. But when they subscribe for "the home daily" the new tie becomes as strong as the old, and they adopt the common interests of the older residents.

The family that lives among us, but never reads a home newspaper regularly, gets few ties here. It knows little of what people are doing outside of a very limited circle. It fails to find those common interests, those identical impulses of progress, and improvement, and common ambition, that ought to bind us all together.

The home newspaper is thus a tie and anchor which takes isolated units and binds them into a community of common interests. Whenever you cooperate with the newspaper, by advertising, by subscribing to it, by writing letters for publication or suggesting news items you help strengthen the community's strongest unifying force.

WHY THE DEADLY HATPIN?

The custom prevalent among women, of wearing small sized spears and javelins in the public streets, under the name of "hat-pins," is receiving wide attention from city councils and legislators.

"If I were to carry a fish knife down the street as long as one of those things, they'd arrest me as a dangerous character," said a Massachusetts legislator at a hearing.

The newspapers have reported some cases where men have sacrificed an eye to this bloody feminine vanity, and cuts and scratches are common.

The philosophical theory of dress is that its gayer and more glittering forms are worn to fascinate the other sex. Habits of this type are by no means confined to one sex. Of course no man ever sold more goods or won political favor by wearing fancy waistcoats. On the contrary, wearing a dress suit at a political rally has killed many a hopeful candidacy. But many a man shows evidence of overstudy of color harmonies in dress, so that one can conclude that he is seeking for triumphs other than those of business and politics.

In so far as the costumes of women are designed to attract the other sex, let them beware of anything suggestive of claws. A protruding hat pin gives a certain feline appearance. It suggests the treachery and heartlessness of the cat, which with all its silky grace and sinuous curves, conceals the pointed talons that can draw a weltering wound across your face.

Women are naturally far more tender hearted than men. A little campaign of education should abate this nuisance. Quite likely it is due to woman's ordinary inability to estimate distance, and her greater interest in beauty than in measurements.

When the ordinary pretty girl enters a store to buy a hat pin, the glitter of a fascinating bit of jewelry so fills her mind, that she never stops to ask whether it is six inches or a yard long.

ENTERPRISE.

Our wide-awake and enterprising merchant H. L. Kincaide put up a pretty big proposition to the Ledger late Friday afternoon—a two-page ad for the Saturday paper. With the weekly Patriot about going to press and Braintree Observer being made ready for Saturday morning, the usual rush on the Saturday Ledger, besides a great amount of job printing it looked at first like an impossibility. The Ledger seldom gets stumped however and said yes and then all hands proceeded to make good. The hearty cooperation of the full force put the ad into type and the Ledger came out on time. Naturally with many at work, and all hurrying, a few errors crept into the advertisements as was to be expected but on the whole the result was pleasing and well worth the effort. Come again Mr. Kincaide.

Mr. Kincaide is the first Quincy merchant to advertise wholesale, that is a whole page and at his first venture he did not start at one but took two pages. He has always advertised and been a firm believer in a liberal use of printer's ink and has done an ever increasing business which would seem to point a moral. The growth of his business has been steady, increasing year by year, and the firm name has become known far beyond the city limits. May the increase in advertising enterprise mean even greater prosperity in the future. Here's success to the H. L. Kincaide & Co.

MISSED BY SCHOOLMATES.

The funeral services of Arthur Hendrickson were held at the Swedish Lutheran church Sunday afternoon at 2.30. The services were conducted by the pastor of the church, Rev. S. N. Elvin. Eight boys, fellow members of the confirmation class acted as pall bearers, and eight girls also members of the confirmation class sang "The flight of time." The casket was covered and surrounded with many beautiful flowers contributed by friends of the boy and his parents. The church was crowded with friends who gathered to pay their last tribute to him who had passed on before.

CAPTAIN W. H. PRESTON.

Captain W. Henry Preston of Neponset for many years a hepless cripple died Feb. 3d of heart failure. He was for many years an inspector of boilers for the Hartford Steam Boiler Co. Previous to which he was at one time an engineer on the steamboats running to Nantasket and later Captain of a government steamer employed in building light houses and breakwaters. Mr. Preston had a large circle of friends in many orders, He leaves one brother Mr. A. J. Preston of Wollaston who was with him at the time of his death.

MILTON CARNIVAL.

A grand mid winter carnival will take place in the East Congregational church, Adams street, East Milton beginning Wednesday, Feb. 15, and lasting through the week. There will be a special feature every evening, exhibition and sale of arts and crafts work, luncheon and refreshments and a general good time. The matter of arrangements has been left to committees and there are enough committees to give a proper balance to the work.

The head of the general committee is Austin W. Greene, master of the Gridley Bryant school in West Quincy. Mrs. Jesse B. Baxter heads the arts and crafts committee, Miss Elizabeth W. Hill will direct the serving of luncheon and refreshments. Austin W. Greene is at the head of the committee on printing and advertising.

A mock trial will be given on Wednesday evening. On Thursday evening Miss Elsie Leighton Livermore will entertain with original monologues. "Romantic Mary," a comedy in three acts will be presented Friday evening, and a "Children's festival" will take place on the closing evening of the carnival.

Arts and crafts exhibitions and sales will be held every afternoon. Refreshments will be on sale at the conclusion of every performance. Luncheon will be served every afternoon except Wednesday from 5 to 6 o'clock.

The entertainments for the different evenings are in charge of clubs connected with the church. The Men's Club, the Ladies Aid society, the Alpha club and the Neighborhood club are holding themselves responsible for the special features on the four nights of the carnival.

WHY WE ARE INERESTED.

Members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce agree that a steamship line from Boston to South America established under the ocean mail bill would mean a three-fold advantage to New England—a ready market for our manufactured goods, with much quicker service to southern points than that now existing; a better means of getting South American wool and hides, which are so essential to many of our large industries; and increased business to local shipbuilding yards, inasmuch as the construction of such steamers as are required by law would make it necessary for them to be built on lines for which the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy has accommodations.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY.

Rev. Irad B. Hardy of the East Milton Baptist church will have change of the praise service at the East Norfolk C. E. union rally, this evening. Rev. R. G. Davis, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, will conduct the devotional exercises.

Rev. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple will be the speaker of the evening. Dr. Myers is considered one of the ablest speakers in New England. Special music will be rendered by Miss Eva Steeves, contralto soloist, and Roy Cunningham of Holbrook, 'cellist. The largest and most inspiring young people's rally ever held in Quincy is anticipated.

BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET.

The Board of Trade is anticipating that the annual banquet and ladies night on Tuesday evening at Alpha hall will be the best yet. The same caterer and the same menu as at the banquet to Admiral Bowles is a guarantee of a good dinner. An orchestra of five pieces has been secured, and a notable array of speakers. Gov. Foss heads the list, and ex-Representative Robert Luce of Somerville, ex-Mayor John T. Coughlin of Fall River, John H. Corcoran of the State Board of Trade and Mayor William T. Shea of Quincy, will make address. Members of the Argentine naval board will be among the invited guests. It is announced that dress will be informal. The reception will be at 6.30, and the banquet at 7. All men and women interested in the work which the Board of Trade is doing to advance Quincy are invited and urged to attend. Tickets should be secured in advance. A large attendance is already assured.

CENTENARIAN NOT AFRAID OF HIS WORK

Stuck to His Job Until Accident Cuts Off His Life

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 6.—One hundred and two years old and still doing a man's work every day was the record until ten days ago of Daniel Short, who died at the Cambridge relief hospital. He was injured while at his work and complications set in which prevented his recovery.

Short, who was a native of Ireland, had been in this country sixty-two years. He was employed as a tip-cart driver by the National Biscuit company.

On four previous occasions Short met with serious injuries while at his work, having been thrown from his team and hurt, and once was run over, but soon recovered. His last injury was received in the same way.

The company for which the old man worked repeatedly offered to pension him and let him take life easy, but he insisted that he was still fit and must do a man's work for a man's pay, so he stuck to his job till he landed for the last time in the hospital.

GOING BEFORE GRAND JURY

Eight Persons Arraigned In Connection With Dynamite Disaster

New York, Feb. 6.—Seven officials and employes of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Du Pont-de Nemours Powder company, and Captain Healing of the Katherine W., the destroyed powder boat, arraigned on charges of manslaughter in connection with the disastrous dynamite explosion at Communipaw, waived examination before Judge Queen of the second criminal court in Jersey City, and were ordered held under bonds to await the action of the Hudson county grand jury.

Following their appearance in criminal court the eight men were taken before the court of oyer and terminer to furnish bail.

Judge Carey fixed bail at $2500 in every case. It was furnished by surety companies for the powder and railroad companies' men, and by William Cahill, a merchant, for Healing.

HANDS OVER $3300

Cashier of Big Restaurant Yields to Demand of Masked Man

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Rector's restaurant, one of the widely known Chicago downtown cafes, was held up early Sunday and the cashier robbed of $3300 by a masked man, who pointed two revolvers at the employes, got the receipts of Saturday night and escaped. There were no patrons in the cafe at the time.

The robbery occurred when the restaurant would have the fewest persons present and the largest sum of money on hand of any time during the week. The cashier, John P. Adams, who was forced to hand over the money, believes the robber a former employe.

CHRISTMAS IN COMMAND

Honduran Rebels Take Over Administration of Puerto Cortez

Puerto Cortez, Feb. 6.—General Lee Christmas, the revolutionary military leader, arrived here with part of his forces to take over the administration of this city, evacuated several days ago by the government forces and held by the international troops pending the arrival of the revolutionists.

GLOVER'S CLAIM DISPUTED

Answer Filed by Executor and Trustees In the Eddy Suit

Concord, N. H., Feb. 6.—An answer to the bill in equity by which George W. Glover of Lead, S. D., seeks to have the residuary bequest in the will of his mother, the late Mary Baker Eddy, founder of Christian Science, declared invalid, was filed in the superior court by counsel for the executor of the will, Henry M. Baker, and for the trustees, Messrs. Dickey, McLellan, Chase, Stewart and Dittemore, all of whom are named as defendants in the original bill.

The answer disputes the claim of the petitioner in the bill in equity that the statutes of New Hampshire and Massachusetts prohibit the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, from legally receiving the residuary bequest.

White Girl Not Discouraged at Frustration of Plans

She had slipped out of Chicago and had gone to the side of her Indian sweetheart, only to find that word of her coming had preceded her. The path of love quickly was strewn with obstacles, but these have not broken the determination of the girl, who declares that it has been foreordained ever since she was a little girl that she was some day to be the mistress of a tepee.

Making Sure of the Job

THE live workman with a telephone earns more money than the man without one. It enables him to snap up the best chances without loss of time or energy.

Men who hire workmen usually have telephones. The man reached first gets the work. The cost is only a few cents a day.

It is worth a great deal to any workman to have a telephone in his home. It pays the largest dividends of any investment he can make. The great Bell system reaches every part of the United States, and toll rates are low.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Anniversary Sermon by Rev. Charles P. Marshall

Rev. Charles P. Marshall preached his first aniversary sermon as pastor of the church, Sunday morning. His text was John 12:22—"We would see Jesus." The thought brought out was that in the constant striving to support the church and to attend to its physical needs we forget what the church is really for. The object of the church is implied in the text, to get a vision of Jesus and to attempt to be like Him. The church was not intended merely to have sermons on Sunday and suppers and socials during the week to pay the minister. Now that the new year is beginning let us not do less in attending to the physical needs of the church for they are needs and it is important that they should be attended to, but let us emphasize more the spiritual side, let us have our church a church supported by prayer during this coming year. There are great forces at work in the church, what we do, what we say, what we are and what we pray for, and the last will determine the other three. As we enter upon the new year let us support the church by prayer as well as by attendance.

At the evening meeting George B. Huntington of Wollaston, associate secretary of the Baptist Board of Foreign Missions, gave a very interesting address on "The World in Boston." The meeting was well attended.

A missionary meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. T. W. Lincoln, Jr., 618 Washington street, Thursday afternoon at 3. Rev. W. F. Leavitt of Nebraska will be the speaker. Mr. Leavitt is connected with the Congregational Educational society.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The Sunday morning sermon at the Wollaston Unitarian church took the form of a tribute to American, poets, and especially of an appreciation of our own Whittier. "Religion" said Rev. Carl G. Horst "has always found its best expression in poetry, which is not logic but insight; not dogma and creed, but vision." The highest and most profound religion expresses itself in poetry, and our best religious teachers are the poets, who live broadly, think nobly, feel deeply, and look always to life values.

Paying tribute himself to the beauty and strength of Whittier's poems, the preacher stated that Oliver Wendell Holmes was known to have said that no minister in Whittier's time did as much for the cause of anti-slavery as did the Quaker-poet with his ninety poems on that subject. At the present time our own America is furnishing the best hymns and religious poetry of the day, Frederick L. Hosmer and William C. Gannett being two who are perhaps making the finest contributions. Especial mention was made of the many memorial poems written by Whittier, which are in no wise melancholy and depressing, but are rather, great uplifting psalms of trust, bearing witness to a belief in immortality and to truth of eternal worth. The sermon was interspersed with quotations of some of the finest and most widely known of Whittier's poems, the hymns sung being also from his writing. Two solos "O, Rest in the Lord" and "Just for today" added greatly to the worth of the service.

On account of the new cases of scarlet fever the session of the kindergarten was omitted Sunday and there will be no session next Sunday.

Two beautiful soprano solos were finely rendered by Mrs. R. L. Turner at the morning service of worship.

At the meeting of the Wollaston Young People's Religious Union" on Sunday evening, Albert L. Barbour, superintendent of the Quincy schools, gave an interesting and pregnant talk upon "Social optimism." In it he defined the stand taken by the social optimist and pessimist and their respective views upon the questions of the day. Superintendent Barbour had some very pertinent things to say regarding the tendency of Metropolitan newspaers in their Monday morning editions to emphasize the sensational Sunday sermons of certain ministers that put a pessimistic aspect on current questions. During the evening vocal solos by Miss Meryl Daniels, accomanied by Miss Mildred Polk were enjoyed. The evening's program was in charge of Lucien H. Thayer.

—Out in Nebraska four millionaire cattlemen found guilty of fencing government land, and sentenced to one year in the county jail, have been permitted to furnish their quarters to suit themselves with nice carpets and furniture—including a billiard table and to hire a Japanese chef to do their cooking. This is a disgrace to the government, and one of the things that is leading this country toward socialism.—Athol Chronicle.

Previous to that time he had followed the sea and had visited nearly every important port in the world. Since residing in Brockton he has been especially interested in church work, and was one of the prime movers in 1867 when steps were taken toward the formation of a Lutheran society in that city. He was a man of sterling character; One who made friends wherever he went, and was held in high esteem not only by Swedish people but by all who knew him. Besides two brothers and a sister he leaves two sons and a daughter.

AT HOME.

When a man's tired
In body and mind,
Home's the only place
That he's anxious to find.
It may be a palace,
A cottage or hut,
It makes little difference
When he's tired, but It's home.

There are numerous clubs
And pleasure resorts
That provide entertainment,
Refreshments and sports;
There are houses of worship,
With music and prayer,
But when a man's tired
He seeks refuge from care
At home.

At home he is greeted
By affection's caress;
He doffs all pretensions
Of manners or of dress;
He tosses the baby
And torments the dog,
He goes to bed early,
And sleeps like a log—
At home.

The home is the heart
Of our comfort and cheer
Made so by the presence
Of those we hold dear;
By the thought that we're shut in
From all that annoys,
And nothing can enter
To disturb our joys—
At home.

TOLD IN PANTOMIME.

The Worth of a Chinese Royal Gift to Li Hung Chang.

The late empress dowager of China was something of a humorist. The author of "Behind the Scenes in Peking" tells a story of how Li Hung Chang, after concluding the treaty of Shimonoseki, was presented by the empress with a cloth of gold bag containing some heavy article. The treasure turned out to be a large vase, and Li, who was an enthusiastic collector of Chinese ceramics, at once sent for his secretary, Mr. Pethick, to come and examine the new acquisition.

Some time was spent in a careful examination to determine the dynasty during which this treasure was produced, but the date of this especial paste was lost, with its other technical classifications. After a long time Mr. Pethick lifted it gingerly, placed it on a table, put himself in front of it, drawing a wrap round his shoulders, and slowly, very slowly, held his hands up to it, turning them in the attitude of warming at a fire.

Chinese need few words. Li understood and was heartbroken. The pantomime indicated to him that the supposed priceless vase was only a clever reproduction made in Paris, and the secretary, warming his hands before it, meant it was so fresh from the pottery furnace that he could still notice the warmth.

CONEY ISLANDERS BOW TO ROCKIES

World's Leading Amusement Thrillers Now In Mountains.

CLERGYMAN STARTS CRAZE.

Pushes Railroad to Top of Mount McClellan, In Colorado, and Intends Reaching Gray's Peak—Ore Buckets Utilized For Passengers by One Thrifty Mine Owner.

Those enterprising individuals who have devised so many mechanical devices whereby the public is given thrills at summer amusement parks seem to have been outdone by western railroad men.

Recognizing the appeal of daring engineering feats to the average mind, these railroad men are taking advantage of the natural opportunities afforded by the Rocky mountains and are endeavoring to outdo each other in the construction of railroads and trams that will give the tourist a mingled sensation of wonder and fear.

Amusement purveyors of this sort even have their eyes fixed gloatingly on the farfamed Royal gorge in the Canon of the Arkansas. A trolley line from Canon City, Colo., to the top of this gorge is planned. A bridge will span this cleft in the rocks, which is almost as narrow at the top as at the bottom, where the railroad could not find room to build its track on solid footing and had to suspend a bridge between the granite walls. When the trolley cars spin across the chasm and the tourist looks down on the transcontinental trains crawling hundreds of feet below a new sensation will be provided for the tireless American thrill hunter.

Clergyman Starts Thrillers.

The man who started the work of turning the Rocky mountains into a sort of Coney Island is the Rev. E. J. Wilcox, who stepped from the ministry to mine promoting and from mining to a new form of railronding. Mr. Wilcox was interested in a mine not far from Silver Plume, Colo. A tiny narrow gauge railroad had been built from Silver Plume to the mine. Mr. Wilcox was enchanted with the view unfolded on his first trip over the line, which was used solely for the transportation of ore.

Mr. Wilcox realized at once the advantage of extending the rails on to the very crest of Mount McClellan, which is a shoulder of Gray's peak, and which is only 200 or 300 feet lower than that mighty mountain. Railroad experts shook their heads, but the enthusiastic promoter raised the money for extending the line in a series of switchbacks to the altitude of 14,000 feet. Today the line ends on the very summit of Mount McClellan.

It is the highest regularly equipped and operated railroad in the world. There is a higher line in South America, which is not used for passenger service and which is not operated regularly, but this Colorado line to the top of a mountain peak is used for mail as well as passenger service and is in every respect a genuine railroad.

To Reach Gray's Peak.

It is intended to pile one thrill on another, however, by extending this line still farther. From Mount McClellan it is intended to extend the line along the rocky ridge extending to Gray's peak itself. Gray's peak is one of the highest mountains in the Rocky mountain range, and years ago was used as a weather station by the United States government. The peak is considernbly higher than Pike's peak.

The utilization of the mine railroad for passenger traffic suggested an idea to other mine owners on Mount McClellan who transported their ore in trams. One of these concerns, whose steel cable stretched a mile or more up the steep side of Mount McClellan, began carrying passengers up in the ore buckets. Here was a new thrill with a vengeance, and the mine owner soon began reaping more profits from human freight than from his ore. Now he does a big business all summer long, swinging people up and down the mountainside in huge, heavy ore buckets.

John Brisben Walker, former magazine publisher, is responsible for a mile long railroad near Denver that has more thrills per foot than any other line in the world. Mr. Walker conceived the idea of hauling passengers to the top of the front range of the Rocky mountains, overlooking the plains that stretch eastward toward the Missouri. He installed a power plant on the summit of Mount Morrison, that towers over the foothills west of Denver. By means of steel cables two heavy cars are hauled to the top of this mountain and are lowered again with their human freight.

Moscow Street Cars Pay.

The Moscow municipal electric railways made a net profit of $1,440,455 in the first eight months of 1910, a gain of $450,000 over the same months of 1909. New lines are under construction, and the system promises to be one of the best in the world after completion of the lines proposed.

Russia Loses Mongolia Trade.

Russian trade in Mongolia has gone all to pieces, the Chinese absorbing it. Caravansaries are entirely empty. Mansions of former Russo-Mongolia trade millionaires are boarded up and falling into dust.

New Rulers of India Have Long Been Friendly

BETTER times probably are dawning for the empire of India, where 300,000,000 of the subjects of King George, representing every conceivable race and creed, live and have their being. The reason for hoping for better times is found in the fact that the two men who will have most to say about the government of the swarming millions are close friends and are not likely to have clashes that will retard the progress of reforms and interfere with the administration of the government.

India is governed primarily from London by the secretary of state for India, though the viceroy of India, who is stationed in Calcutta, naturally has an important voice in Indian affairs. Lord Crewe is the new secretary of state for India, having recently succeeded Lord Morley of Blackburn. Sir Charles Harding is the new viceroy of India.

LORD CREWE.

These men were classmates at Harrow and at Trinity college, Cambridge, and have long been intimate friends. Each of them is renowned for tact, and there is hardly a chance that they will not be able to do their work without any dispute of authority.

Heretofore when the viceroy has been a man of strong character, like Lord Curzon, for instance, he has resented the authority and influence of the secretary of state. Being on the ground, he believed that he was better fitted to decide questions of governmental policy, and when he was not allowed to do so he usually made such a vigorous kick that his resignation was forced. This resignation was usually regarded by the natives of India as a disgrace.

On the other hand, a secretary of state for India remaining in London has been able to make the viceroy merely a figurehead without the prestige absolutely essential to his success in a country where caste and prestige count for so much. Under these circumstances the viceroy, discovering that his efforts were futile, has been glad to retire. Repetitions of these circumstances have done much to prevent the successful administration of Indian affairs.

VICEROY HARDINGE.

For this reason it is safe to say that India will see better times in the immediate future. Lord Crewe in London and Lord Hardinge in Calcutta form a combination that will avoid friction, and there is little likelihood of the usurpation of authority in either place. Being old cronies, they are expected to work in harmony.

Lord Crewe is a tremendously wealthy man, the family fortune owing its foundation to the cloth trade. During the eighteenth century the Milnes family practically controlled the cloth business at Wakefield, and the present Lord Crewe, then Robert Milnes, was known some years ago as a clever business man and as a poet of considerable ability.

Lord Crewe has been married twice, his first wife leaving him three daughters. They are all married and are about the same age as their stepmother, who was Lady Peggy Primrose, the daughter of Lord Rosebery.

AFRICAN LIONS.

They Often Hunt In Couples to Start and Capture Their Prey.

Lions in Africa go hunting often in couples and then rather systematically. When, for instance, a couple of lions have traced out a kraal—that is to say, a place fenced by small cut thorn trees, where flocks of asses or oxen, goats or sheep are shut up for the night—the lioness approaches cautiously, profiting by every tree or bush to hide herself. At the same time the lion himself lies watching on the opposite in the distance.

Now the lioness exerts herself to arouse the cattle—which is not difficult, as they become excited merely by smelling a beast of prey—till the cattle are tormented to the utmost by fear and horror, break through the kraal on the side opposite to the lioness and thus fall an easy prey to the lion.

The lion chases his victim and throttles it by springing on its neck or breast and biting his teeth into this part. The hunted animal falls, and the lion now tears open the flanks. The lioness appears and has her share of the meal. Very often they cannot devour their victim in one night; then they come back to the place where the remains are on the following or the second night.

The lion's favorite food is zebra, quagga (of which there are few left in Africa) and wild ass. The meat of these three kind of animals is something alike in taste.

WASTED.

HOLLAND OPEN TO GERMAN INVASION, ENGLISH ASSERT

ALTHOUGH the Dutch government has been vociferous in its protestations that it had not yielded to any foreign influence in calling upon the states general to vote a sum of $40,000,000 for the fortification of Flushing, at the mouth of the Scheldt, and of other points along its coast, yet there are few either in the Netherlands or abroad who do not construe the rejection of the bill by parliament, the resignation of General Cool, the minister of war, who sponsored it; the withdrawal by the cabinet and the refusal by Major Colign, the new minister of war, to reconsider it in any shape or form otherwise than as a severe defeat of the kaiser's military scheme and as a check to the ambitions of Germany.

Nor can the existence of this widespread and very general impression create very much surprise at Berlin, for these fortifications, which would have converted Flushing into something very much akin to a second Gibraltar in point of military and naval importance, would have proved of inestimable advantage to Germany in the event of any war between her and Great Britain.

They would have been works not merely of defense, but also of offense, against England and could not possibly be regarded as aimed against any other nation than against Great Britain and her ally, France, this understanding being emphasized by the significant fact that Holland's eastern frontier, bordering Germany, has been left wholly unprotected.

Secret Treaty Possible.

In fact, the extraordinary defenselessness of the eastern boundaries of the Netherlands goes far to confirm the belief that, while there is no actual treaty in existence between Germany and Holland permitting the military occupation of the latter by the kaiser's troops in the event of his going to war with Great Britain, he has nevertheless some sort of a secret understanding with the Dutch crown which is equivalent to an offensive and defensive alliance.

If, however, the Dutch dislike the English—they have always borne a grudge against Great Britain for the part which she played in encouraging the secession of Belgium and its transformation into an independent kingdom—they fear Germany more. The one dread of the people of Holland is the loss of their political and economic independence through absorption by Germany.

They realize that the peril to their neutrality comes not from England, but from Germany, and that the fortifications for which they have been asked to pay so heavily would in the event of a conflict between these two great powers endanger rather than safeguard that neutrality.

Were Flushing converted into a second Gibraltar it would not fulfill any national necessity in connection with the defense of Holland, but would only serve as a naval base to Germany for an attack upon England and others.

Not only England, but France and Belgium as well, were menaced by the project of converting Flushing into a powerful stronghold. As the most cursory glance at the map will show, a fort at Flushing, while it could not serve the defense of Holland, would enable the power in possession thereof to shut off access from the sea to Belgium's principal port—namely, Antwerp. Belgium's neutrality is guaranteed by several of the great powers, notably by England, which in 1870, at the time of the Franco-German war, notified both belligerents that she would consider any violation of Belgian neutrality as a casus belli.

The only manner in which Great Britain could come to the assistance of Belgium in her hour of need for the purpose of putting into execution the guarantee of the integrity of her territory would be by way of the Scheldt. Once the mouth of that river, which gives access not to Holland, but to Belgium, is closed by a citadel at Flushing, Belgium would be cut off from any assistance by the English fleet and army and would be at the mercy of Germany.

Sea Defenses Good.

Holland stands in no danger of any attack by the sea. The approaches to Rotterdam and to Amsterdam are already strongly fortified. Moreover, the waters of her coast line are so shallow as to render naval operations by warships, save of the very lightest draft, impracticable. And even were England or France to succeed in pouring a force of soldiers into the Netherlands by means of shipping of small draft, which is improbable, the invaders would find themselves confronted by the Dutch army of nearly 200,000 men, who, with a perfect knowledge of the country, of its canals, its dikes and its dams, would be well able to hold their own.

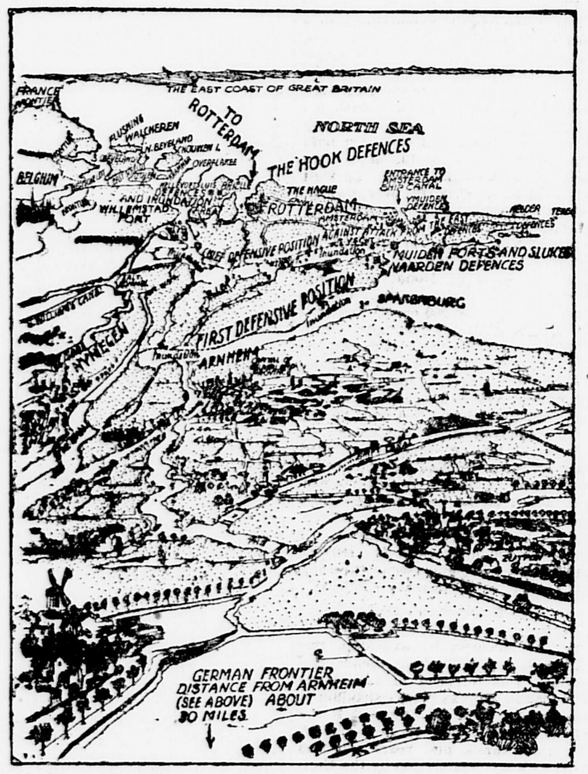

On the other hand, the eastern defenses of Holland are in an absolutely deplorable condition, so much so that they have repeatedly excited the amusement of foreign military experts and have at the same time given rise to all sorts of speculation on the part of foreign statesmen and diplomatists as to the reason of this neglect. True, there is supposed to be an elaborate arrangement for cutting the dikes and for placing the greater part of the country under water, thanks to the fact that probably half of the kingdom lies below the level of the rivers, of the canals and of the sea.

William of Orange flooded Holland in 1574 and by so doing drove out the Spanish invaders, and the policy was adopted on the occasion of the French invasion of 1672. The process of inundating the country then was a matter of weeks. The Dutch have been taught to believe that in these modern times it would be a matter not even of days, but of hours, and that the inundation could be brought about by the mere turn of a key at The Hague.

Cavalry Faster Than Flood.

It is perfectly true that modern methods have been adapted to this means of defense of the Netherlands from the foreign invader. But up to date and ingenious as are these contrivances, they are incapable of accomplishing miracles, and it would take forty-eight hours at the lowest estimate to submerge the country to such an extent as to prevent the advance of the enemy.

But within a few hours a swift moving force of German cavalry, light infantry and horse artillery would be able to reach the first line of defense by inundation—in time, indeed, to arrest and prevent the latter, especially since there are no fortifications of any modern type along the eastern border to prevent their progress. The Germans, indeed, boast that they would be able to reach not merely Arnheim, but even Amsterdam, before the necessary steps had been taken at Amsterdam to flood the kingdom.

PRESSURE ON CONGRESSMEN

Will Be Exerted to Secure Defeat of Reciprocity

ACTION BY NATIONAL GRANGE

Million Farmers Expected to Indorse Action of Legislative Committee in Opening Fight Against Measure Which Is Declared to Be Contrary to Their Best Interests—General Reduction of Tariff or None Is Wanted

New York, Feb. 6.—The machinery of the national grange, an organization claiming a membership of 1,000,000 farmers in thirty states, has been started to defeat the ratification by congress of the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

The legislative committee of the grange, at a special meeting at the Hotel Manhattan, adopted a resolution protesting against the enactment of the reciprocity bill, called upon the membership to exert pressure upon congressmen from their various districts to vote against the measure and decided to go to Washington to map out a campaign there.

The legislative committee is composed of three members. Ex-Governor Nahum J. Bachelder of Concord, N. H., chairman; Aaron Jones of South Bend, Ind., and T. C. Atkeson of Morgantown, W. Va.

As soon as the terms of the proposed treaty became public they exchanged telegrams, agreed upon New York as a meeting place and left their homes without delay to head off any possible campaign that might possibly be started for the bill's enactment.

Mr. Bachelder said that the national body was composed of 7500 granges scattered throughout the northern half of the United States from Maine to California, and that it was his opinion that the granges would support the committee unanimously.

"We are not opposed to a general reduction of the tariff," Atkeson said, "but we are opposed to any arrangement which will make fish of one industry and flesh of another. Reduce the tariff, yes; but do it all at once, and not by a reciprocal treaty with a country which exports agricultural products almost exclusively.

"Remove the tariff on steel and iron and manufactured articles along with farm products, and we won't object. But we don't think it fair to compel the farmers to compete with foreign products and allow the manufacturers to derive the benefits of a high protective tariff.

"Acting along these lines, we have decided to oppose the enactment of the bill. The committee issued a statement which will be sent to every one of the 7500 granges in the organization. These have a membership of from fifty to 100 farmers each. We shall ask every member to write his representative in congress, urging him to vote against the bill. I think we can defeat it in this manner, but we are not going to take any chances, and the committee has decided to go to Washington and work from that end."

To Receive Protests Till Thursday

Washington, Feb. 6.—That the Canadian reciprocal agreement must stand or fall as a whole in the house committee on ways and means has been made clear by Chairman Payne. A poll by Representative Fordney for an amendment to the lumber schedule and another one for an amendment making barley free were met by the unequivocal statement of the chairman that the committee would sanction no change of any item.

Notwithstanding this the pressure brought to bear on the committee has resulted in granting hearings to all persons who appear in Washington prior to 5 o'clock next Thursday. This date was fixed to permit Pacific coast lumbermen to reach Washington and make statements.

Rhode Island's New Senator Is Real Yachtsman

HENRY F. LIPPITT, who will take Nelson B. Aldrich's seat in the United States senate, is a member of a family that has been identified with Rhode Island since the earliest days. One of his ancestors, John Lippitt, arrived at the Providence Plantations in 1638, two years after Roger Williams.

Senator Lippitt was graduated from Brown university in 1878, when he was twenty-two years old. He made a tour of Europe and then returned home to learn the cotton business. One of the things he learned was how to dye turkey red, the only known process of dyeing cotton a red that would withstand sun and water. He successively worked in mills in Woonsocket and Lawrence, being superintendent of the Lawrence mills, employing 500 hands, when he was but twenty-four years old.

His principal recreation has been yachting. He has owned some famous racing boats and has sailed them himself. He is a real yachtsman and has held the tiller on many boats that have won cups.

When Sir Thomas Lipton first came across the ocean to try to "lift" the America's cup Mr. Lippitt was appointed to represent the New York Yacht club on the Shamrock during the races. He sailed on the Irish baronet's yacht in all of the races of that contest, which, owing to light winds, lasted three weeks. In the other efforts that Lipton made to win the world's greatest yachting trophy Mr. Lippitt has served as an expert advisor of the regatta committee of the New York Yacht club, of which he is a member.

"BIG BILL" GETS A MEDAL.

Carnegie Hero Fund Honors Man Who Caught Gaynor's Assailant.

William H. Edwards, better known as "Big Bill," has been honored by the presentation of a Carnegie hero fund medal for his bravery in arresting Gallagher, the man who shot Mayor Gaynor of New York last summer. The official announcement of the award tersely describes the incident on the dock of the steamship at Hoboken and says that Edwards probably saved the lives of one or more of the persons surrounding the mayor.

W. H. EDWARDS AND HIS HERO MEDAL.

Mr. Edwards, who is the street cleaning commissioner of New York city, had accompanied the mayor to the steamship on which Mr. Gaynor had booked passage to Europe. He was standing near the mayor when Gallagher approached and began shooting. Edwards, who was formerly a football player on the Princeton team, grappled with the assassin. During the struggle a bullet from Gallagher's revolver grazed his captor's arm.

Good Form

Fiancee's Family Must Call.

Unless severe illness in his family prevents, a girl who has just become engaged must wait for her fiance's family to call upon her. The reason for this is obvious. She is about to become a member of another family. If she is welcome here he members will hasten to greet her; if she is not they will stay away, says Roxanne Schuyler. She may not make the first call, for then she is in the position of forcing her acquaintance upon them, and if they are inconsiderate she may be subjected to snubbing.

Courtesy and good form demand that, even if a girl is not altogether welcome to her future "in-laws," they shall call upon her as soon as they know of the engagement, for if they fail to do so it is an announcement to the world that they are displeased. It is always the part of wisdom to keep knowledge of private family matter from the public, and so it is that a woman will go to see her son's fiancee, even though she may wish the engagement did not exist.

The only justifiable excuse for the older women's not going at once is illness on her part or that of her family or a good and sufficient reason why she should not receive the girl. A woman of any experience will hesitate before she will make such a sweeping condemnation of a young woman whom her son expects to marry.

If a young man's father should call upon his future daughter-in-law it is considered a mark of courtesy, but is not required, for the visit of the older woman means his sanction to the engagement.

If a young man who has become engaged has any sisters they, too, must call immediately upon his fiancee, even though they may not have known her previously.

On her part she is to receive such visits with cordiality and good feeling.

If for any reason she has not cared much for her fiance's family and has known them any former lack of friendliness must be removed even at the cost of effort, for it is both ill bred and stupid for a girl not to be on good terms with her future husband's relatives, and if necessary she must overlook everything not inconsistent with self respect in her endeavor to have peace, even if only on the surface.

If the young man's family live in another city they are supposed to make their welcome through letters written at once to the girl. She may not be the first to make any move then she is to call.

A Dinner Dance.

For a dinner dance the hostess issues two different sets of invitations, one to those persons whom she wishes first to entertain at dinner, and invitations to these would be her regular engraved dinner cards, with the words "dancing at 11" written in the lower left hand corner, and one to those whom she wishes to ask in for the dancing only, and these would be her regular "at home" cards, with "dancing at 11" written in the lower left hand corner. Or for a small party she may use in place of the latter her visiting card, with the date under her name in the lower left hand corner, "Dancing at 10:30."

When a dance is to be the occasion of introducing a young woman into society either the first or the second of the forms given above may be used.

A hostess in sending out invitations for a dance should carefully consider what dancing space she will have at her disposal, whether the entertainment is to be given in her own house or in a hotel suit rented for the occasion. To crowd a small, narrow, ill ventilated drawing room with dancers is a grievous mistake. Two small dances will please better than one unpleasant crush.

Etiquette Points.

A man should never speak of his sister or fiancee as Miss Anybody, but just her Christian name. If you are engaged to Agnes Williams and are announcing the fact, don't say you are going to marry "Miss" Agnes Williams, but Agnes Williams.

A woman should not speak of her husband as "Mr. Seymour." It is pretentious, but the custom is so thoroughly ingrained in this country as to make people oblivious of its impropriety. For a woman to speak of her husband as "Mr." So-and-so to any one but an inferior is a species of snub. A woman should always say "My husband" to acquaintances and "Ben" or "Fred" to her friends.

Signing One's Name.

"Should a widow use her husband's name on her visiting card or her own christian name? Should she be Mrs. Cyril Smith or Mrs. Charlotte Smith? In signing one's name to a letter how is it usual to indicate whether a woman is married or single?"

A widow may use her discretion. At present it is customary for her to continue using the same form she did in her husband's lifetime. In signing your name write it simply Mary Brown or Emma James, and put Mrs. in brackets in one instance and Mrs. John or Robert in brackets in the other.

HALL OF FAME FOR FARMERS

Maine to Honor Some Son of Soil Each Year.

A hall of fame for Maine farmers was suggested recently during a meeting of the various agricultural organizations at the statehouse at Augusta by President Robert J. Aley of the University of Maine and met with instant favor.

It was proposed that once a year a bust, bas-relief or tablet be placed in the wide hall of the agricultural building at the university, with suitable exercises.

President Aley thought this action would instill in the minds of youth a greater liking for agriculture. He understood there had been already a number of prominent men in the state who had made their mark along agricultural lines, and he felt that these men after they had passed away should be honored in the hall of fame. Dr. George M. Twitchell of Auburn suggested as one of the first men to be thus honored Ezekiel Holmes of Winthrop. He also suggested that a memorial be placed for E. A. Gilbert of Greene, who has done more to shape agricultural legislation than any other man in Maine.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

"Rose!" the father exclaimed as the girl concluded her statement. While he had realized her attraction toward the released prisoner, he had not guessed of the depth of her feeling for him.

"It's no good to be shocked, dad," answered the girl. "It's true. And then he went to prison on the death rattle of a beast like that, and I'm going to make it good to him if he's a man. And he is; every drop of my blood tells me so."

"And you don't even know his name?"

"Yes, I do."

"He gave you one, I know, but even that"—

"Well, what of it? Does a name mean anything to real men and women? No. The one comes—the one in all the world—and, well—that's all there is to love."

A pause ensued. The father was first to speak.

"Do you think he knows how you feel?" he asked sympathetically.

"No, nor he never will—unless you some day—believe him—worthy of me."

"You promise that?" relievedly.

"I promise, dad."

"Will you wait until I see the governor, Rose? Let us go to see him and ask his opinion of the matter."

"Gladly, and he will believe in him, I know," said the girl enthusiastically. She heard a step behind her, and she turned.

There, with his hat in his hand, well groomed and wearing a well cut suit of brown clothes—light brown, the fashionable color—there stood Jimmy Valentine.

"Mr. Valentine!" exclaimed the girl.

"Miss Lane, how do you do?" stepping quickly forward, extending his hand.

"This is my father." She presented Valentine to Mr. Lane, who welcomed him pleasantly.

Further conversation by the three was interrupted by the entrance of Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster, returning from the tea room. Mr. Lane and Rose departed to go to the governor's chamber, and the two members of the Gate of Hope society and Jimmy Valentine seated themselves.

"And now, Mr. Valentine, concerning your future," began Mrs. Webster, "what do you contemplate doing?"

"Get a position."

"We have already arranged that for you, Mr. Valentine," announced Mrs. Moore complacently.

"That is very thoughtful, ladies, but"—

"Mrs. Moore did not exactly convey the entire facts," interjected Mrs Webster.

"No?"

"We have a choice of three positions for you, Mr. Valentine," went on Mrs Webster. "One is in a grain elevator."

"Yes," smiled Valentine "I can imagine that would be a safe place for one under suspicion of robbing a bank."

The ladies failed to detect the veiled note of sarcasm.

"The second," informed Mrs. Moore, "is as a bookkeeper or checker in a scrap iron yard."

"Still under suspicion, I see," commented Valentine dryly.

"And the third as the first male officer in the Gate of Hope society," Mrs. Webster proudly declaimed.

"Yes," agreed the other charity worker.

"Treasurer?" the ex-convict queried significantly.

"No; secretary!" both the ladies cried simultaneously.

"I hold that honored position now," resumed Mrs. Moore, "but were you willing to accept it we would pay a salary. We agree that your knowledge of the—the"—

"The inside," suggested Valentine.

"Exactly—would be a great help to us."

"Doubtless."

"Then you accept, Mr. Valentine?"

"No, ladies," decisively.

"You refuse the position?"

"Yes, ladies. In fact, I decline all your positions."

The Gate of Hope representatives rose and assumed expressions of extreme indignation at the unexpected repulse and refusal of their well meant but ill advised offers.

"Ingratitude!" they exclaimed.

Valentine, who had deprecated their advances because of their evident mistrust of him in spite of his pardon, as shown by the nature of the positions they had offered him, resolved on a course of action that would, he thought, dispose of them and at the same time afford him a long craved amusement.

"No; please do not say that," he protested elaborately. "No, no. I refuse the positions you offer me because I fear the world would misunderstand."

"What do you mean?" asked one of the ladies.

"Oh, you see," went on Valentine whimsically, "if I accepted help from you ladies the world might say that you—er—you were in love with me!"

"Oh-h-h!" ejaculated the astonished ladies.

"Let the world say what it dare!" proclaimed the pedantic little Mrs. Moore, lifting her chin defiantly.

"And so goodby, my dear ladies," said Valentine, bowing almost to the floor.

With anger in their glance and their walk, chins and noses pointing almost toward the ceiling, the two members of the Gate of Hope society stalked out of the hotel parlor.

Jimmy Valentine, chuckling in his amusement, sank into a chair to await the return of Miss Lane and her father. Miss Lane—Rose Lane—the girl who had saved him from the horrors of that "bit of ten" at Sing Sing. How beautiful she was, he murmured. She had a heart. And she cared something for No. 1289; that was apparent. Just how much did she care? Just what did she care? If a man lived straight he might in time win such a girl for his own. Yes; that was life. And Jimmy Valentine now had his chance to "go straight," he reasoned. Stranger things had happened. The girl had revealed already, had she not, that she knew a prison sentence could not kill the good in a man if a single germ of it yet lingered in him? The old life was behind him now. The future gleamed bright and beckoned him on. Never again would he—

"Jimmy! Jimmy!" A harsh whisper hissed its way into his ears.

Jimmy Valentine started up in amaze. That voice, that whisper! He had not heard it since the night the Hartford "bulls" had broken up that midnight surprise party in the vaults of the Fifth National bank.

Hardly believing his ears, hardly daring to turn, yet he did turn, and he saw, crouching half behind one of the red velvet portieres of one of the hotel parlor entrances, the figure of Red—the face and the brick red hair of Red Flanagan, his old time coworker.

CHAPTER VII.

JIMMY VALENTINE slowly recovered from the shock he experienced at beholding before him the man who had in the old days been his accomplice in many questionable adventures. No; he had concluded wrongly. No; he was not yet free from all the associations of the years past—those years which he was endeavoring to forget.

"Hello, Red," he finally addressed Flanagan. "Come out from behind the curtain. The coast is clear for you. How did you know I was here?"

Red came forth. "Oh, leave it to me, Jimmy, to keep track of an old pal." He held out his hand, which Valentine listlessly shook.

Red could not understand his former companion's indifferent manner.

"What's wrong?" he asked.

"Nothing."

"Aw, cut it out. Somethin's got you guessin', an' so don't try to kid me."

The released convict looked meditatively at Red. Then he spoke.

"Red, did you ever 'do a bit?'"

"Sure—Joliet."

"And you have been in one of those rotten holes and still think it's a good game?"

"You've weakened—eh?" sneered Red.

"I've turned square."

"You're crazy."

"No; it's only the man who thinks he can beat the law who's crazy," said Valentine.

"You'd a won out if it hadn't been for that Cotton, who blew on you because you beat him out of a dame."

Valentine turned and clutched him by the arm.

"You rat, don't you ever speak of her again or I'll murder you." He threw Red roughly away from him.

"Now, get out of here and forget you know me."

"Good God, Jimmy!" exclaimed the other, "I wouldn't say anything to hurt your feelings. Why, I'd do anything for you; I'd a done your bit if I could have. Why, I'd go to h—l for you."

"Will you turn square with me? That's all I want of you now. Let's you and I start now and from this minute on go square. If we starve in the streets. Will you do that, Red?" Valentine spoke in intense earnestness.

Red hesitated. "One job to get a stake and I'll go you," he said eagerly.

Valentine appreciated the characteristic unwillingness of Red to leave his lifelong vocation—that of riffling strong boxes and safes deemed by their manufacturers to be "fire and burglar proof." True, the flames were sometimes foiled by the thicknesses of metal and asbestos, but rarely had Red Flanagan been foiled by mere inanimate metal or time locks—rarely, indeed, when accompanied by No. 1289, the man who, as Warden Handler described him, opened safes solely by the sense of touch. Valentine know the hold that the unlawful life he, too, had followed invariably secured on its votaries, and he was not surprised when Red hesitated to leave it for the dubious rewards of "going straight."

"No," answered Valentine; "nothing for me but work from now on—work, honest work, hard manual labor if necessary. I've quit the old game for keeps, Red."

Red, plainly nonplused at this revolutionary change of heart in his former "pal," stood speechless for a moment. Jimmy Valentine, the best man in the country in his line, had "turned square." Merciful saints! Was the world coming to an end? At last he recovered his ability to talk.

He had an inspiration that he thought might win Valentine over, might make him come to his senses.

"What about the coppers?" suggested Red. "Are you dippy enough to think they'd let you turn square?"

"Yes. Why not?" retorted Valentine like a flash. "What have they got to do with honest men?"

Again did Red find cause to actually doubt the sanity of his ex-confederate, for here he was overlooking entirely in his childish reasoning the remorseless, dismal certainty that the detectives would force him to "peach" on his old pals or any one else in the underworld of whom he could obtain information desired by the police. In short, Valentine had overlooked the "stool pigeon game," the despair of every crook who had ever tried to "go straight."

"Aw, don't kid yourself," warned Red. "The copper 'll let you be square if you're a stool pigeon, if you tip off old pals. No other way."

"Absurd! How, for instance, could they 'do' me?"

"Absurd, eh? What about Kid Steele? He turned square, but he wouldn't squeal, and job after job they threw him out of till he was hungry in the street. Then a copper offered to stake him to a feed if he'd 'turn up' an old pal. And he murdered the cop on the spot, and now he's doing life. Turn square, eh? That means be a stool or a bum in our game."

Red raised his hands protestingly and turned his face away from Valentine.

"Beat the coppers," insisted the other. "Get away where they can't find you. We can do that."

"Yes, we can." Red again faced his friend. "Why, Doyle is in town to see you now."

"Doyle here?" in alarm.

"Yes. I met him when he got off the 'rattler.' He's going to give you your orders, and you'll have to do as he tells you if you turn square. He knows you bent it. He was laying for Avery when he came out and told him to report once a month. And what about Avery? You sent him to me, and we've been at work on something."

"Where is Avery?" asked Valentine quickly.

"Want to see him?"

"Yes; I can explain better." Valentine crossed the parlor and peered through the portieres.

Red went to the opposite doorway and softly called, "Oh, Bill!"

Avery, dressed in a roughly cut ready made suit of clothes and looking in much better health than he did on the day he defied Detective Doyle and finished his term in Sing Sing, came slowly into the hotel parlor.

"Hello, Bill! You're taking a chance," greeted Valentine, "and you are, too, Red."

"I had to see you," returned Avery. "I have just been telling Red"—

"Sure, I heard you hand out that 'square' talk. I suppose you want me to join you in this 'going straight' business, too, eh?"

"I don't think the crooked game is any good. And you are getting old for clever work."

"Think so, eh?" snarled Avery suspiciously.

"He isn't too old to be an 'outside man' with us," put in Red.

"We don't need any outside man any more, Red," decided Valentine.

Avery glared into the speaker's face. "So you're out now, and you're going to throw Red and me out, eh? All this turning square talk I heard was a stall to get rid of me because I am old, eh?"

"I don't have to stall you, Avery."

The old thief leaned threateningly toward Valentine, shaking his withered fist as violently as the flabby muscles, sapped by years of prison air and prison fare, would permit.

"Like the d—l!" he cried, choking in his wrath. "I'm old, that's your dope. Going to throw me for a rookie, eh? Well, I'll show you. When guys start stalling me I'll show them up. From now on I'm a copper, and I'll show you up, Valentine. I'll get you, too—I'll get you good!"

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Hard Ginger Bread. Soften two-thirds cup of lard until it can be mixed well with one and a half cups of molasses, then add one-third cup of milk. Sift together two and one-half cups of flour with three level teaspoons of baking powder and two level teaspoons of ginger and stir into the first mixture. Roll out about half an inch thick, cut in squares with a knife dipped in flour and bake in a moderate oven.

Dainty Baked Apple. Peel apples, take out core, leaving apples whole, place in baking pan and fill cavities with sugar and flour mixed. Fill pan almost half full of boiling water and bake until tender. Just before taking from stove place marshmallow in cavity of each apple and leave in oven long enough to brown slightly. The marshmallows give the apples a delicious flavor.

Drop Cookies. One-half cup of butter, one cup sugar, two-thirds of a cupful of sweet milk, one egg, two teaspoonsful baking powder, two and a half cups of flour. Drop with a spoon and put a raisin in the center. Bake quickly a light brown.—Elizabeth H. Clay.

Corned Beef Hash. To two cups of chopped cold corned beef add two cups of chopped cold boiled potatoes. Heat three tablespoons of bacon fat in a frying pan and add the meat and potato, add pepper and salt, if necessary, and moisten with water. Cook slowly until a nice brown underneath. Roll from the pan on to a hot platter. Garnish with parsley, and serve with pickled beets.

Curry Cakes. Rub some cooked potato through a sieve, place it heaped up on a tin in the oven to brown; when quite crisp on all the surface remove it to the chopping board and dust with curry powder, the right quantity being one tablespoonful for every half pound. Chop up half a sharp apple and one small onion. Butter some little upright tins and after mixing the potato and other ingredients with one beaten egg, fill the tins up with this, spread butter over and bake for 15 minutes. Turn out and decorate, if desired, with dice cut out of hard-boiled eggs.

TRAIN WRECK AND FIRE

Five Employes of Grand Trunk Meet Death In Collision

Paris, Ont., Feb. 6.—Five men were killed and one was seriously injured in a head-on collision on the Grand Trunk. A train running from Buffalo to Goderich met a light engine running east three miles from Paris.

The victims were all members of the passenger train's crew. The baggage car was piled on top of the wrecked engines and the mail car broke in two. The wreckage caught fire and was consumed.

Raising of Check Alleged

Boston, Feb. 6.—George C. Drouin, charged with raising a $25 check to $2500 while a bookkeeper at the Hotel Bellevue, was brought back to Boston from Rochester, N. Y., where he was arrested. He protests innocence.

Fined For Alleged Nuisance

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 6.—A fine of $2400 for smoking was imposed by Judge Bosworth upon the Springfield Street Railway company, the chimneys of whose power house have aroused the ire of the city officials.

Tolstoy's Intensity.

Everything in Tolstoy's character, says a Russian writer, attains titanic proportions. "As a drinker he absorbed fantastic quantities of liquor. As a gambler he terrified his partners by the boldness of his play. As a soldier he advanced gayly to bastion four, the bastion of death at Sevastopol, and there he made dying men laugh at his witty sayings. He surpassed every one by his prodigious activity in sport as well as in literature."

A SPRING COSTUME.

Showing New Fad of Using Many Materials In One Frock.

FROCK OF BLUE AND WHITE FOULARD.

The new fad for combining materials reaches the art of high expression in the frock sketched. The soutached motif in foulard, blue and white in this instance, is used for the deep skirt hem, while the upper part of the jupe is of plain blue messaline. These combined fabrics are blended in the waist portions together with a tucked white chiffon collar and jabot. A handsome decoration of Irish lace trims the reverse side of the waist. The skirt ruching is of navy blue chiffon cloth.

New Millinery.

This huge sombrero shape, designed by Georgette of Paris, is going to be a smart model in the spring and is typical of the hats to be worn when the tiny hugging caps are discarded. The model is made of good colored silk, over which is shirred black chantilly lace flouncing, the edge of the flouncing forming a frilled cap, which rests on the hair under the sweeping brim. Around the top of the crown is plaited a band of black velvet, and over this is draped a festoon of heavy gold cord.

Cheap and Pleasant Pastime.

That 25,344,000 soap bubbles can be produced from a pound of soap has been figured out by a mathematical genius.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MISS LIZZIE J. WILDE.

After more than two years' illness from an incurable malady and for the past four months a victim of agonizing pain Miss Lizzie J. Wilde of Franklin street, South Braintree, passed away Friday night, Feb. 3, soon after 10 o'clock. She has made her home for the past two years with Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Miner of South Braintree and during all the days of her illness has been most tenderly cared for by Mrs. Miner who proved faithful to the end. Miss Wilde was the daughter of Paul and Sarah Wilde and was born in Braintree in August 1849. She spent her early years in her native town and at the age of nine went to Monmouth, Maine, where she lived until she was twenty years old. She came back to South Braintree at that time and kept the home for her father until his death which occurred eight years ago.

After that she cared for an invalid aunt until about two years ago when she came to reside with Mr. and Mrs. Miner. A woman who seemed fated to experience nothing but trials and suffering she persevered through them all a cheerful and uncomplaining disposition and welcomed death as a deliverer and the gateway to brighter days.

The funeral services were held from the South M. E. church Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, preceded by a prayer at the house. The services were conducted by the Rev. George H. Parkinson, pastor of the church and there was also a short service at the grave. The bearers were, Messrs. A. T. Miner, H. F. Cushman, Woodworth and Benfield.

It is a pathetic fact that the funeral arrangements, hymns, etc., were planned and chosen by Miss Wilde when she was brought face to face with the knowledge that only death could end her sufferings. A duet, 'When we get to the end of the road' was beautifully rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Parkinson as was also the solo by Mrs. F. R. Swallow, "When I meet my Saviour face to face."

The twenty-third psalm which was always a source of great comfort to Miss Wilde was read and a touching vocal selection was rendered by the young ladies of the church choir. Mr. A. E. Dudley of Lewiston, Maine, a cousin of the deceased woman made the long trip to attend the funeral arriving Sunday forenoon and being obliged to leave before the services were over as imperative business duties demanded his attention at home.

Among the many floral offerings were noticed:

Panel of pinks, Epworth League.
Wreath, George Tenney Wilde.
Wreath, Mrs. Cyrus Young.
Spray of pinks, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Perkins.
Spray of pinks, Ladies' Aid.
Spray of pinks, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dudley.
Panel of pinks—Mr. and Mrs. J. G. S. Carleton.
Lilies and violets, Carrie F. Wilde.

MEET OF SHIPYARD MEN

Fore River and Electric Boat Draftsmen to Compete

The draftsmen of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company and the Electric Boat Co. will hold their second annual Athletic meet Thursday evening in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

Preparations have been under way for some time and the committee in charge has endeavored to make it the banner inter-department event of the season. In fact the local association will be practically turned over to the draftsmen for a series of athletic events and basket ball contests in the gymnasium and a battle for bowling supremacy on the alleys. Refreshments will be served in the Association hall and a general social time enjoyed.

A meeting of the committees from each department was held Saturday evening at the Y. M. C. A., when a program was adopted and final arrangements completed. It was voted to award a handsome prize cup, "The Draftsmen's Cup" to the winner of the highest number of points in the individual events; silver medal fobs for first places in individual events and to winners in the inter-department championship relay race; prize ribbons for second and third places and for winners of basket ball contests. Special prizes are to be selected for the bowling tournament.

A liberal entry list from each department has been received, and an interesting struggle is promised for the individual prizes and inter-department championship. Friendly rivalry has always existed among the men and keen competition is insured.

Owing to the capacity of the gymnasium the attendance is limited to the draftsmen, of whom, some three hundred are expected. Admission is by ticket only. The committee in charge includes: B. G. Barnes and J. J. Floyd of Hull department, J. Buckley and S. Torrey of Engine department, C. B. Webber and J. A. Mahoney of Electric Boat Co.

The program includes: 15 yd. dash, running high jump, three legged race, potato race, three round boxing exhibition by Wm. Volk, National A. A. U. 135 lb. champion and Daniel McLaughlin; obstacle relay race (5 men per team), fat men's race, inter-department championship relay race (4 men per team, each man to run 220 yds.), and basket ball.

The honorary judges will be: E. C. Bennett of Hull department, C. Fox of Engine department, G. E. Edgar, L. B. Doane and H. E. Greishaber of Electric Boat Co., A. B. Cassidy of Bureau of C. and R.

RALLIED IN LAST HALF

But Quincy Was Defeated by Lynn 38 to 24

The Y. M. C. A. first team pulled themselves out of an overwhelming defeat Saturday evening by rallying in the last half. As it was the home team lost by a score of 38 to 24. At the end of the first half the score stood 21 to 2 in favor of the visitors. The lone basket for Quincy was scored an instant before the whistle blew.

In the second half the story was different. Captain Morris started the ball rolling with a basket and a foul. Trask and Jenkins found their eye and short several baskets in rapid succession. During the latter part of the game Lynn did no scoring, but Quincy was unable to overcome the big led. Jenkins with five baskets to his credit was the star man. Trask, with three deserves great credit. Dackers and Rich played well as backs.

The summary:

SECOND TEAMS.

The second team seemed to have a little aphasia in the first half of their contest, although they showed much better than the first team. Miller proved to be the stronghold of the Quincy team in the opening period, shooting four baskets.

The second half was all Quincy. The visitors were fagged, and the Quincy basket was troubled very little. "Tooty" Dineen ripped off seven baskets during the half. It was his first appearance at forward, and he certainly performed creditably. Miller got three more baskets and Childs caged four. Holmes shot a beauty from the middle of the floor. Tirrell who supplied on the Lynn team was unable to shake "Chic" and did not get a shot at the basket.

The summary:

QUINCY		LYNN

INAUGURATION DAY.

Today is Quincy's second inauguration day. That is, the day upon which the Mayor's official family for the year 1911 assume office. As the officials are largely the same as they have been for the past three years, there were no new officials to be introduced into office this morning.

Y. M. C. A.

The Saturday morning meeting for Juniors was attended by 200 boys. Several beautifully illustrated songs were sung and the stereopticon story of "In His Steps" by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon was told by Mr. Clee.

The Sunday afternoon meeting for older boys was one of the best in the history of the local association. About 100 fellows were present to listen to a wonderful address by George S. Paine of Brockton, probation officer of Plymouth county.

A meeting of the conference delegation was held immediately after the service.

AN OLD KID.

The City Clerk receives some queer answers to some of the blanks he sends to parents upon which to report any births that have taken place in the family during the past year. One of those received this morning came from an Italian family, who in answer to the question as to color, sex and if a twin, replied:—"Color brown, black hair, no twin." Date of birth "24 June, 1892."

ROUGH GAME AT ABINGTON.

The Makaria-Abington game ended very unsatisfactorily, owing to the incompetence of the referee. The game was rough from the start, Green of Abington tripped Marden, both falling to floor and exchanging blows. Martin and Hanson of Abington ran over and hit Marden while he was on the floor. Umpire Bonney ordered both players, Marden and Green off the floor. Referee Williams Claimed that Green did not foul Marden and refused to put him out of the game. The decision is against the rules which clearly states that when two players fight both shall leave the floor. Makaria refused to continue unless both men should be taken out of the game. Referee Williams of Abington repeatedly called fouls on Makaria and did not call any on Abington although the rough playing was evenly divided.

MORRIS AFTER BIG GAME.

Now "Hops" to Be Given Trial Against Some Good Heavyweights.

Promoters are going to find out whether Carl Morris, the 235 pound giant of Sapulpa, Okla., who recently pulverized Marvin Hart, is a real pugilist or not, one who may be regarded as a possible champion of the white race. So far Morris has realized the hopes of his most sanguine admirers, who are justified in regarding him as the one man seemingly destined to restore the heavyweight championship to the Caucasians.

Promoters are anxious to match him against Tony Ross, Jim Barry, Al Kubiak, Jim Flynn or even Al Kaufman. If Morris defeats several of the men mentioned he will be recognized as the man to take the chamionship away from Jack Johnson. He has engaged in seven fights, and all have resulted in knockouts.

CARL MORRIS, NEW HEAVYWEIGHT FIGHTER

Morris has advantages over every other heavyweight in the world. He is six feet four inches in height, has a reach of eighty-four inches and weighs 235 pounds. He is only twenty-six years of age, has never indulged in liquor or tobacco and has always observed carefully the rules of good health.

GRANITE MANUFACTURERS MOVE FOR FEDERATION

A Proposition That All the Members Unite with the Quincy Board of Trade

A largely attended meeting of the Granite Manufacturers Association of Quincy was held Monday evening. Aside from the regular routine business, and "shop talk," the association discussed for a hour or more the development of the water front of Quincy, and federation of the business men's associations of the city.

The discussion was precipitated on a motion of John L. Miller who moved that the president and secretary of the Granite Manufacturers Association apply to the Board of Trade for membership in that organization for all the granite firms and that the treasurer be authorized to pay from the treasury the dues in the Board of Trade.

Mr. Miller explained the need of more concerted action on the part of the business men of the city that improvements might be secured—better facilities for transportation, reduction of the cost, etc, etc.

Sme of the members thought Mr. Miller had proposed a radical measure, and were inclined to criticise the Board of Trade for its short comings.

Mr. Miller defended the Board of Trade, and asked the granite manufacturers what they had ever done as an association for the advancement of Quincy . The Board of Trade has but a small membership, it is limited in funds, and experiences difficulty in meeting current expenses for maintenance of rooms, telephone, printing, clerk etc. It needs a permanent secretary at a good salary. As an association we should not expect much from the Board of Trade unless we are willing to help. The Board of Trade is active on the abolition of grade crossings, better freight facilities, the development of the water front better train service, better street railway service, reduction of rates for gas and electricity and many other improvements. The Granite Manufacturers Association has been selfish and worked only for itself, and has given the Board of Trade little encouragement.

FEDERATION COULD IN UNITED ACTION ACCOMPLISH MUCH FOR ADVANCE OF QUINCY

President Murray, James Joss, Thomas Bishop and others favored development of the water front.

Mr. Miller's motion to apply for membership for all manufacturers did not prevail, but it was voted that President Murray and Secretary Dunphy be a committee to confer with the Board of Trade, Merchants Association and other organizations relative to federation, particularly to secure united action on development of water front and the establishment of a municipal dock.

PROGRAM A SURPRISE

Ladies of Catholic Club Give Minstrel Show

When the gentlemen friends of the ladies of the Quincy Catholic club hear what the entertainment was at the regular meeting Monday evening they will wish for once that on that evening they had been ladies. The entertainment presented was a surprise to the members, for but few had any idea of what it was to be until ten young ladies with blackened faces marched into the hall in lock step and presented a ministrel show that would have done credit to professionals.

The meeting was held in the Knights of Columbus room in the Savings Bank building, and after a short business session the entertainment committee, who were in another room, were notified by telephone that the members were awaiting their pleasure. It was one of those meetings where mere man was rigidly excluded, although reporters who are styled as privileged characters were welcome.

A few seconds elapsed after the telephone call, when the door opened and the trope entered. First came Miss Anna J. Walsh, the interlocutor, followed by the bones and tambos, and the members of the circle. All faces were blackened and as they marched in with lock step the applause that greeted them was almost deafening.

As stated above, Miss Anna J. Walsh was the interlocutor, Miss Mary R. Lyons and Miss Lou Crowley rattled the bones, and Miss Gertrude Crowley and Miss Helen H. Gavin shook the tambos.

In the circle were Miss Bertha Trepanier, Miss Elizabeth Walsh, Miss Nonie O'Connor, Miss Margaret Gal-

SPEECH BRIEF AND COLORLESS

King George Has Little to Say In Opening Parliament

PLANNING JAPANESE TREATY

Government Will Keep Track Clear For Action on Constitutional Changes —Suffragettes Disturbed Because They Were Not Mentioned and Laborites Have a Grievance—Queen Sits Beside Husband on the Throne

London, Feb. 7.—King George and Queen Mary for the first time in their reign proceeded in state yesterday afternoon from Buckingham palace to Westminster, where the king read the speech formally opening parliament from the throne in the house of lords. During the ceremony the queen was seated at the side of the king.

Though the day was dark and chilly, an immense throng was gathered in St. James' park and in Whitehall, where the gorgeous procession passed. Other thousands surrounded the parliament buildings. The king and queen rode in the gilded state coach drawn by eight cream-colored horses.

An escort of life guards preceded the state coach and yeomen of the guard followed. Regiments of the guard lined the route and as the procession moved on the artillery regiments fired the royal salute. The crown and sword of state were borne from St. James' palace to parliament in the royal carriage under the escort of the guards.

The house of lords was packed when the imperial procession entered from the robing room at 2.30 o'clock. A number of peeresses had seats on the floor with the peers. The bishops and ambassadors with their wives occupied seats at the left of the throne.

Speaker Lowther and as many of the members of the house of commons as could, crowded the floor and stood in the aisles. All the officers of state, in regalia, escorted their majesties into the chamber and were grouped around the throne during the ceremony. The Earl of Beauchamp, first commissioner of works and public buildings, bore the sword of state before the king.

The king's speech from the throne was brief and colorless. It opened with a filial reference to the death of King Edward. The only references to foreign affairs were a mention of the fact that negotiations had been opened with Japan for a new commercial treaty, and an allusion to the friction in Persia over the disturbance of British trade routes. A casual expression of interest in the approaching imperial conference was made.

Only two proposed legislative measures were mentioned specifically. "Proposals" said the king, "will be submitted without delay for settling the relations between the two houses of parliament, with the object of securing an effective working constitution." Legislation would also be had, the king said, to provide insurance against sickness and unemployment.

In making the declaration of faith, King George used for the first time the amended form adopted at the last session of parliament, which omits the traditional reference to the Catholic church which was offensive to the adherents of that faith.

From the paucity of the legislative proposals, it is evident that the government has determined to allow nothing beyond necessary financial measures to interfere with action on the veto bill. The suffragettes are already threatening a renewal of their activities because they were not mentioned in the speech, and the laborities are much put out for the reason that it contained no promise of a bill dealing with the hated Osborne judgment. That the Nationalists are satisfied with their position was indicated when at a meeting held late in the day they decided not to introduce any private bills during the present session.

A RECONCILIATION.

The suburban trolley company was to lay a line through the village of Dexter and two routes were under consideration. One necessitated the buying of property that Moses Allen would be very glad to sell, and the other, if chosen, would mean the same accommodation for Nathan Wood. Moses and Nathan had been fast friends for a life-time, and each having an only child, they desired to cement this good-fellowship by uniting the two families in marriage.

"It don't make no difference which way the trolley goes," said the townspeople, "the Allen place and the Wood farm will be all one some time, anyway."

But it evidently did make a good deal of difference, as they were destined to find out. The question was discussed rather vigorously in town meeting; Nathan's friends wanted the village authorities to induce the company to select his route, while others were bound that the Selectmen should espouse the cause of Moses Allen. It was plain that neither had the slightest intention of abdicating in favor of the other. A sort of partisan warfare followed, nearly all the town-folk ranging themselves upon one side or the other. It was the subject of much spirited argument at "the store," and it gave Joe Gibbs and Cy Mosely, upon opposite sides of the controversy, unlimited opportunity for a general settlement of old scores, while Herbert Rice and Horace Taylor buried the hatchet and shook hands upon the strength of their mutual sympathy for Mose Allen. The women wondered if Ned Wood and Jessie Allen would walk home from meeting together next Sunday, as usual, or if the match would be broken up.

Ned and Jessie were, in truth, wondering the same thing themselves; for the girl's father had told her that "if that blame chump's son" came sneaking around his place again, he would set the dog on him, and Ned's father had warned his son against having "anything more to do with Mose Allen's girl, Jessie." So it was with an abstracted air that Jessie attended service, on the memorable Sunday, and with a furtive expression that young Allen awaited her coming outside the church door. Nearly everyone else waited, too, "to see what would happen," and it was with unusual control of her nerves that the plucky girl said, firmly, "Good morning, Ned! Lovely day, isn't it?"

Some of the parishioners breathed a relieved sigh, deciding that there must have been a Saturday night reconciliation; others were frankly nonplussed, but a discerning few noted the calm despair in the young lovers' manner and predicted trouble ahead for them.

"I wondered, if you would wait for me," remarked Jessie, when they were out of earshot.

"Why shouldn't I'" asked Ned, deflantly. "Of course my father told me not to—not to—"

"O yes, mine did, too," helped Jessie "But that won't make the slightest bit of difference—dear," he added gently, touching the hand that hung close by his side. "Will it?"

"I—I hope not," answered Jessie. "But I must confess it took courage for me to disobey father. He's awfully worked up."

"It must not make any difference, and it won't if you do what I ask. I have a plan, Jessie, to fix everything all right."

"O, I knew you would have," she cried in glad confidence. "What is it? Of course I'll do whatever you say."

"Well, you may not exactly approve, Jessie; it might seem sudden, and it will take grit," preambled the young man doubtfully, "but it's the quickest and surest way to a peaceful settlement, I know."

"Then of course I'll do it," she assured him. "Tell me, Ned. What is it?"

"Why I thought, Jessie, that if we just got married right away secretly, and then told them that we were married, they'd see that there was no use quarreling any longer when the two homesteads were to be all one anyway, and shake hands over it."

Jessie drew a long breath. "I didn't quite expect that plan." she said, disappointment evident in her tone.

"No, I knew you didn't sweetheart, but don't you think it a good one?"

"Why, yes, I do, only—"

"Only what?"

"It seems dreadful and wrong too, to be secretly married that way—just like in a book—"

'I don't call it dreadful at all," coaxed Ned. "It will be our laugh on the whole village. We were to be married next fall, anyway, and if we don't do this, goodness knows when the row will end; we'll never be able to get married in peace. Really, it's the only way to settle it, Jessie."

There was a long pause, which the girl spent in reflection, turning the matter over in her mind, looking upon all sides of it, and considering all possible results. Finally, she answered slowly but decidedly, "Yes, I think it is a good idea, Ned; I will do it."

"Ned's plan orter hev carried, ef his father wuzn't sech a fool," remarked Cy Mosely, sententiously, drawing out the words between long puffs of his pipe.

"Wall, her father might hev give in when he see how things stood," was the quick terse response from Joe Gibbs, who considered—and rightly—Cy's observation as a personal aggression pointed against himself. "Mose Allen didn't want thet mor'n a cat wants two tails."

"I'm glad Allen got his way 'bout it, jest the same," chuckled Herbert Rice. "It's done me good to see Nath Wood beat for once."

"We've hed enough talk 'bout them for awhile, I reckon," interposed Jim Sweatland to prevent further argument. "They're both old fools." He, for one, was totally impartial. "How's the young folks gettin' on?"

" 'Twas kind o'hard on the girl, gettin' married thet way, no mother or weddin' or nothin'," said Horace Taylor. He spoke with authority; his own daughter had just been married with all due pomp and ceremony. "She must think a heap o' Ned Wood."

"Wall, she's got cause to set consid'ble store by him, she won't want for nothin' while he's got a good right arm," retorted Joe staunchly. "They'll git' long all right."

Which prophecy came true, though getting along was a troublesome proposition for a while. But Jessie was a model housewife and manager, knowing just where to place a dollar to make it go the farthest, and she took in sewing to help; while Ned, always an exemplary young fellow, was an excellent and thrifty workman. The first Christmas after the hasty marriage, Ned and Jessie were sure that their parents' loneliness would force them to relent; but they were disappointed in the matter. On the Thanksgiving following, when their baby was a few months old, the young couple plucked up courage enough to drive out to their old homes, hoping that the sight of a grandson and the recollection of former happy Thanksgivings—which the four had always spent together—would melt the old men's hearts; but at each place the reception was the same, or rather, there was no reception at all. The old men both seemed to have received the same inspiration; each bolted his door when he saw them coming. So the years went on and it became an old story in the town, settling into the fate of many a nine-days' wonder. The people now merely wondered who would get the property when Wood and Allen died. Some thought it would be left to the town, others to the church; but many declared that, in spite of all, "blood is thicker than water," and that some day the rightful heirs would come into their own. The property question troubled Jessie and Ned not half so much as their parents' unnatural estrangement. Jessie especialy, worried over it continually, and many a time secretly regretted their sudden marriage; but her gentle heart never upbraided Ned for the plan that he had thought best. She guessed at the true state of affairs with the old people, that each was waiting for the other to take the first step. Jessie originated many schemes by which to ensnare her own father, but none seemed to succeed, and each year the case appeared more hopeless than ever.

One consolation she had, however, and that was in talking to little Nathan about his grandfathers. Many a time, in their rambles, she and the little one walked by the two places, when Jessie told the child all about her childhood at the old home, and raised his hopes for the day when he would be invited to visit them.

"When can I go to visit my Grandfathers?" the wondering little one would ask.

"O, sometime," was Jessie's answer, always the same.

The young mother did not at all realize the pitch to which she had aroused her child's curiosity. He meditated much upon these aged relatives. All grandfathers, to his mind, were old men with gray beards; but some of them could tell wonderful stories about bears and Indians, and always managed to extricate some peppermints from the depths of a marvelous pocket. Charlie Hart's grandpa was of this kind, and Nathan liked him immensely. Others, he knew, were cross and chased people from their orchards. Of which sort would his prove? Nathan really was quite concerned to know.

One November day, when the boy was hardly five, he heard his mother talking to Mrs. Hart. The word "grandfather" arrested his attention—it always did.

"Both of Charlie's grandfathers want us for Thanksgiving," Mrs. Hart was saying, "and I'm sure I don't know how to settle it. Of course I'd rather go to my own father's and Charlie would, too; he likes Grandpa Snow the best. But it doesn't seem quite fair, although he does live much nearer; we spent last Thanksgiving with him."

Then Nathan made a wonderful observation—that tears were in mother's eyes, as she said:—

"I wish both of my boy's grandfathers would invite us to Thanksgiving dinner, or let us invite them here."

When Nathan cried for anything, he wanted it quite badly; he applied his own experience to mother's case. That gave him an idea. Without waiting to hear more, he walked out of the house deliberately, up the long well-known road to where Grandfather Allen lived. The hard furrows of frozen mud felt rough to the little feet, but he plodded sturdily on, and without the slightest trepidation opened the door of the old farmhouse and walked in. The place seemed to be deserted, but Nathan minded this not at all. In fact, the house itself, on the interior, was such an object of interest to the little lad that he forgot, momentarily, the prime object of his visit, which was to interview the owner. An older person might have observed that the rooms were untidy, but the boy found them a veritable curiosity shop, glorying in the miscellaneous trappings strewn promiscuously about.

"Get out!" cried a sharp cracked voice, interrupting his inventory.

The child looked all around and finally, upon raising his head, discovered a parrot in a cage suspended from a high hook. His glee was uncontrolable. He laughed and shouted back:

"I won't!"

"Get out!" repeated Polly.

The little one was looking about to see how he might elevate himself to the bird's domain, when the parrot cried out vociferously:—

"Polly wants a cracker!"

Now, if Nathan wanted anything, he usually got it, so he saw no reason why Polly should not have a cracker. He therefore made his way out through the kitchen into the pantry, and after much rummaging and upsetting, he found the desired morsel. There were many interesting things in these nether regions which he noted mentally, with a view to exploring later, but at present he must hasten to Polly's relief. At the risk of his neck, he climbed on to a hopelessly confused table, and was endeavoring from this pinnacle to reach Polly's cage, when a rude voice made him aware that he stood within the august presence of Grandfather Allen. The old man had just come in from the barn.

"Wall by gum!" he exclaimed, "I call this cool! Who be you?"

"I'm Nathan Wood," replied the undaunted boy, 'and you're my grandfather. Mother says you're going to invite me to visit you sometime, but I guess you forgot. I been waiting for a long time. So I came."

"So you came, hey?" The proprietor of the invaded territory was completely astounded. "Wall, by gum!"

"Yes, I came today," resumed the boy, still speaking from his shaky pedestal, "because mother cried when Charlie Hart's mother said they were going to their grandfather's Thanksgiving, so I thought it I'd make you remember maybe you'd invite us now. Mother says you will sometime."

Had the minister, Deacon Hartwell, and all the other influential personages of the town combined forces to persuade Moses Allen as to the error of his ways, he would have found arguments and answers for each and all; but beside this child, he stood mute—powerless. The two looked into each other's eyes, straight and deep for some time. The old man spoke at last.

"You got yer ma's cool head all over again," he said, musingly, more to himself than to his audience, "and she uster hev yaller curls, too. They wuz 'bout so long when Mandy died." He touched one of the golden locks. "Come, boy," he said, taking the little one from the table, "let's talk it over. Je-rus-alem! It's a long time since I held a baby in my arms."

"I ain't a baby, and I can't stay very long," protested the child, rather doubtful as to whether he would like this grandfather or not.

"What's yer hurry?" queried the old man, holding him close.

"I'm going to see my other grandfather," replied the boy, "maybe he'd invite us."

Had Nathan been a strategist, he could not have played a better card.

"Wall, now, I guess I ain't a-goin' to leave thet for him to do," was the indignant response.

"Well, I'm going to see him, anyway," declared young Nathan emphatically, struggling to his feet.

Grandfather Allen stroked his beard and meditated until the child opened the door.

"Guess I'll go 'long with you an' show you the way," he said, rousing up suddenly.

"Did he invite you?" was the innocent question.

"I don't reckon he did," replied Mose Allen, a smile flitting across his rugged old features, "an' I don't calc'late he'll be expectin' me exactly. But I'll go 'long all the same—he can't do more'n put me out."

"That wouldn't be polite, would it?" asked the child, turning his great frank eyes upward. "I sent Charlie Hart out of my yard one day and mother said it wasn't polite. He's bigger than me, too," the child concluded triumphantly.

"Wall, I gum! You hev got the right stuff in yer. But thet ain't no-how wonderful, though, they ain't no better folks round then the Allens—an' the Woods," he added jerkily.

So, hand in hand, the two went over the stubbly November fields together, and entered the old red brick house for a memorable visit, eventful to the one because of an unusually large bump of curiosity, and to the other because of the long dread silence since that last stormy interview six years ago. They were met at the kitchen door by Nathan Wood, and whether his arm or Moses Allen's was the first to be extended in greeting is still a question for debate; but it is established beyond a doubt that the two shook hands heartily above a little head of yellow curls.

"Reckon I been a durn fool long 'nough," vouchsafed Moses.

"Jim Sweatland said we wuz both numskulls—guess he wuz right for once," observed Nath Wood. "He looks jest like Ned, don't he?" irrelevantly.

"I kind o' thought he favored my girl a heap," drawled Moses, but his tone was most conciliatory. "She uster hev yaller curls—"

"Ned's eyes is brown an' they uster luk at you thet way," interrupted the other.

"We'd better not git to arguin'," advised Grandfather Allen. "And anyway, Jessie must be a-stewin' 'bout him runnin' away so. He says she didn't know he come at all. S'pose we both of us take him home?"—Rosemary Hoar.

CHINA IS PREPARING TO TEACH IN MODERN STYLE.

Contemplating Creating National University and Smaller Schools.

Already the Chinese government has gone further than is generally realized outside of China in making effective its edict of educational reform, issued five years ago. The Hongkong plan appears to be in anticipation of the general scheme for colleges and universities.

Under the governmental plan each province is to have its university, which starts with the elementary schools in each village, the higher or grammar grade schools, the high schools, in ascending scale, all controlled by provincial boards of education, which act more or less directly through subordinate boards in each taotai's and submagistrate's district.

Few government establishments have yet reached full college grade, largely because of lack of money, but in many cases because of lack of students who have progressed in western learning far enough to begin proper college work.

Late statistics report the total number of educational institutions in China at 35,188, of which primary schools number 34,210, high schools, colleges, girls' seminaries and industrial schools making up the balance. They report 63,937 persons engaged in educational work, 55,240 being at work in elementary grades. In these several institutions there are 874,642 students, of whom 780,325 are of elementary grade. Taking 406,180,000 as the population of China, this gives one student for each 464 inhabitants.

FOOD AND DIGESTION.

Civilized Man Needs Cheerful Surroundings at His Meals.

Robust people so long as they get what suits their own uncultivated taste are apt to make very light of what they call "fancies" about food and overlook their real importance. Feeding on the part of civilized man is not the simple procedure which it is with animals, although many animals are particular as to their food and what is called "dainty." The necessity for civilized man of cheerful company at his meal and for the absence of mental anxiety is universally recognized, as well as the importance of an inviting appeal to the appetite through the sense of smell and of sight, while the injurious effect of the reverse conditions, which may lead to nausea and even vomiting, is admitted.

Even the ceremonial features of the dinner table, the change of clothes, the leisurely yet precise succession of approved and expected dishes, accompanied by pleasant talk and light hearted companionship, are shown by strict scientific examination to be important aids in the healthy digestion of food, which need not be large in quantity because wisely presented.—Sir Ray Lankester in London Telegraph.

RELIGION.

Religion is anterior to society and more enduring than governments. It is the focus of all social virtues, the basis of all public morals. It is stronger than self interest, more awe inspiring than civil threats, more universal than honor, more active than love of country.—Cardinal Gibbons.

PILES

"I have suffered with piles for thirty-six years. One year ago last April I began taking Cascarets for constipation. In the course of a week I noticed the piles began to disappear and at the end of six weeks they did not trouble me at all. Cascarets have done wonders for me. I am entirely cured and feel like a new man." George Kryder, Napoleon, O.

SUCCESSORS TO WALKER

Thomas of Quincy Claims a Big Lead

The State House man of the Herald says:

Representatives Thomas of Quincy, and Underhill of Somerville do not like the way a certain weekly paper referred to the speakership situation. The paper said: "There are at present five candidates in the field for speaker—Cushing of Boston, Washburn of Worcester, Cavanagh of Everett, and Haigis of Montague."

Neither Thomas nor Underhill is to be sneezed at when it comes to simple addition, but try as they would they could not make five out of two and two—Cushing and Washburn, Cavanagh and Haigis.

"Ha!" said Thomas, "a plot to eliminate me."

"I see Norman White's hand in this," quoth Underhill. "But they can't lose me. I'm Walker's logical successor."

Thomas is betting 10 to 8 that he will be the next speaker. He says he has 55 of the new members of the House pledged to him, and is so far ahead in the race that the others are in the also ran class.

From the road it looks as if Thomas has a bad case of optimism.

IT'S WORTH ALL IT COSTS.

The world wide work of the Y. M. C. Association is on of the great forces of our day. It is recognized, endorsed and sustained by thousands of the most intelligent, keen and practical people; kings, presidents, noblemen and noble women of all nations and sects.

Quincy has shown her confidence in this work for her young men and boys in the past and will continue to do so by getting into this week's campaign for 5000 new dollars and 200 new members, and make a success of it from the start. It's worth all it costs of time or money.

BRIDGE APPORTIONMENT.

The State House correspondent of the Brockton Enterprise reports that the promoters of the bill for the apportionment bridge over the whole of Fore River bridge over the whole of Plymouth county, instead of upon the northern towns alone, have won the first round in their contest. This was before the committee on rules. The committee had reported that the rules should be suspended and the House suspended the rules and admitted the petition without opposition.

Senator Keith of Plymouth, Representative Norbeck of Brockton, Bowker of Hanson, Harding of Whitman, Bodfish of Wareham and others protested against the admission of the bill of Representative Nickerson of Hull, which was supported by the towns of Marshfield, Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham.

Mr. Nickerson puts an entirely new face upon the matter by saying that it was never intended to distribute the burden upon all the county, but that the petition was drawn broadly, as all petitions should be, in order to be sure and cover the case. The real purpose, he says, is to make the Fore River Ship Building Company pay its share. After his explanation, he says, the Plymouth county men withdrew their opposition, and the fact that the rules were suspended shows that they have trusted his statement and taken him at his word. The real contest will come with the company.

CUBA HAS A TREE CURSE.

Prize of $30,000 Offered to Discoverer of Cocoanut Blight.

President Gomez has approved a bill offering a prize of $30,000 to the individual, native or foreign, who discovers the origin of the disease which attacks and kills the cocoanut trees in the island of Cuba and the means necessary for its cure and prevention.

The prize is to be paid when it is shown to the satisfaction of the government that the discovery has actually been made and that the cure is effectual.

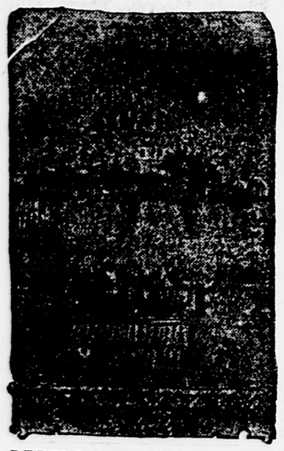

The disease in question is a kind of bud rot, which is said to have made its appearance in Cuba prior to 1871, and although repeated efforts have been made to put an end to its ravages no effective means has yet been found except the destruction of the plant affected.

To Teach Coal Industry.

Backed by a $50,000 endowment fund, the University of Leeds, England, has established a chair of coal, gas and fuel industries.

The Revolt Against Diaz Attracts World's Attention

REBELS ARE RETREATING

Outgeneralled by Federals, Who Are Fortifying Juarez

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 7.—Couriers sent out to ascertain the plans of General Orozco, the revolutionary leader, returned here with the report that the insurgent army had withdrawn from the vicinity of Juarez and was in retreat westward, apparently having given up the attempt to storm the city, which the rebels had already proclaimed the capital of the provisional government.

Martial law was proclaimed throughout Ciudad Juarez by Colonel Robaga, leader of the federal reinforcements, which arrived there after cutting their way through the revolutionary forces, headed by Orozco. Active preparations were at once begun for a conflict with the besieging insurgents. Robaga was hailed everywhere as the savior of the city.

MEASURE DIRECTED AT "PEEPING TOMS"

Indiana Senator Would Have Heavy Fines Imposed

Indianapolis, Feb. 7.—Senator Wood has introduced a bill directed at "Peeping Thomases." It provides that it shall be a misdemeanor for anyone to enter the inclosed or uninclosed premises of another for the purpose of peering, peeking or looking into the house through the windows, or in other ways.

A penalty of not more than $50, to which not more than sixty days' jail imprisonment may be added, is provided.

The trespass statute provides that a demand to leave the premises must be made, and not complied with, before the offender may be fined.

CRIPPEN ESTATE TIED UP

Wife's Relatives Object to Miss Leneve Serving as Executor

London, Feb. 7.—A unique tangle has been reached in the legal battle over the disposition of the estate of Dr. H. H. Crippen, who was executed for the murder of his wife.

Counsel for Ethel C. Leneve, the typist for love of whom Crippen is said to have killed his wife, and to whom practically all of the estate is devised, declared that the whole case might have to be retired.

This, he said, might be necessary if Mrs. Crippen's relatives continue their efforts to oust Miss Leneve as executor. It would be necessary, he contended, to prove wilful murder and the certificate of Crippen's conviction would not be admissable.

DROPS WITH AEROPLANE

German Army Lieutenant the Forty-Second Aviator to Die

Berlin, Feb. 7.—Lieutenant Stein of the German military aviation service was instantly killed while making a flight over the military aviation field at Doeberlitz. The aeroplane dropped from a height of sixty-five feet. The lieutenant's skull was crushed.

The total death roll in heavier-than-air machines is now forty-two, if Cecil Grace, who was lost in the English channel on Dec. 22, is included in the list. Of these forty-two, thirty-eight have fallen to death in motor aeroplanes, and four have been killed in gliders. Thirty-one were killed the past year.

Croker Must Pay Alimony

New York, Feb. 7.—Fire Chief Croker is required to pay his wife $300 a month alimony and a counsel fee of $400 pending her suit for separation, according to a decision rendered by Justice Gerard of the supreme court.

PROBE BILL KILLED BY REPUBLICANS

Deadlock When It Goes Back to Massachusetts House

Boston, Feb. 7.—The senate, by the votes of fourteen Republicans, blocked the Walker order which would give to Governor Foss the right to employ experts to investigate the state departments and institutions.

This action took place after a brisk debate lasting several hours, which would have resulted in a straight party line-up had not Senator Tinkham started an insurgent fight which brought his vote and that of Senator Nason over to the Democrats.

The real situation is coming when the matter goes back to the house for concurrence. There Speaker Walker will take his own stand again and he has votes enough to hold the senate bill up. Then will follow a committee on conference. Meanwhile Foss will get no experts and the state appropriations are effectually hung up.

MAYOR SPEER IS ACTIVE.

Chief Executive Has Made Denver a "One Collar" Town.

Robert W. Speer, who will finish his second four year term as mayor of Denver in 1912, has made a record as a "mayor who does things." While he has been the chief executive of the Colorado metropolis the city has made tremendous strides in the direction of beauty and cleanliness. It is now known as a "one collar" town, which means that a man can wear one collar all day and it will still be tolerably clean at night.

Mayor Speer was mentioned at the beginning of the senatorial contest as a man who would properly represent Colorado at Washington, but he did not show any enthusiasm over the proposition. He had previously said that he was preparing to retire after having been in office continually for a quarter of a century. He began as postmaster of Denver in 1885, was afterward president of the fire and police and the public works boards and was elected mayor in 1904.

Denver gives its mayor unusual powers. He appoints the members of the boards who direct the city affairs and can remove them at will. This naturally makes him a "boss" and enables him to construct a political machine that is effective. It also enables him to carry out civic improvement plans, as is shown by the extensive public works completed in Denver during Mayor Speer's terms.

Why Spiders Fight.

When two spiders fight there is generally a good reason for the attack and the vigorous defense that follows. It is not generally known that after a certain time spiders become incapable of spinning a web from lack of material. The glutinous excretion from which the slender threads are spun is limited; therefore spiders cannot keep on constructing new snares when the old ones are destroyed. But they can avail themselves of the web producing powers of their younger neighbors, and this they do without scruple. As soon as a spider's web constructing material has become exhausted and its last web destroyed it sets out in search of another home, and unless it should chance to find one that is tenantless a battle usually ensues, which ends only with the retreat or death of the invader or defender.

RICHES SEEN ON USELESS ISLAND

Canadian Principality of Frenchman Worth Fortune.

ANTICOSTI BEING DEVELOPED.

Wood Pulp to Be Exported to United States, as Menier's Property Is Not Amenable to New Dominion Law. Half a Million to Be Expended on Improvements.

Anticosti, the Canadian island principality of Henri Menier, the French chocolate man, is shut off from the outside world for another season, the last boat having arrived in Quebec from there, and nothing more will be heard from it till navigation in the lower St. Lawrence and gulf is opened in the spring. Great changes are going on in the island, which is rapidly becoming important industrially.

Henri Menier has tried many things to make the island self supporting. Included in these enterprises have been lobster and other fisheries and even the breeding of silver foxes, only to result in failure.

New Markets Opened.

There is a great amount of sprtice and fir timber on the island, but it is for the most part not of a size suitable for deals, and until now the haul from Anticosti has been considered too long for successfully marketing the pulp wood.

But with the adoption by the province of Quebec last spring of its policy of prohibiting the exportation of pulp wood from crown lands there came a boom on the island, and now great plans are on foot for the exportation of pulp wood to the United States in vast quantities, beginning next spring.

Mr. Menier is building one of the largest rossing plants in the world, with a capacity of 400 cords a day. Rossing plants are mills in which the bark is removed from pulp wood by machinery, the logs being cut into two foot lengths and these two foot blocks held against a rapidly revolving disk in which are set knives which cut the bark away.

Not Affected by Law.

As Mr. Menier owns the island in fee simple the prohibition of the export of pulp wood from the province of Quebec does not affect him, such prohibition applying only to wood cut from the crown lands. Not less than 30,000 cords of this rossed wood will be shipped from Anticosti next season, all of it going to points in New York state on the upper St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario.

The population now numbers 1,200. Mr. Menier will spend next summer on the island, and he is planning to expend $500,000 in improvements, including the construction of twenty miles of railway. Miles of new railway will be added each year till the road runs the whole length of the island.

Six hundred laborers are employed this winter in cutting pulp wood. A wharf a mile long has been constructed at Ellis bay, where it will be loaded on to steamships.

DISCOVERS NEW MINERAL.

Princeton Professor Names It Gageite, After a Trenton Man.

Dr. A. H. Phillips, professor of mineralogy at Princeton university, has announced the discovery of a new mineral in the vicinity of Franklin Furnace, N. J. Professor Phillips names his discovery gageite, in honor of R. B. Gage of Trenton, through whose efforts sufficient material was gathered to make the necessary analysis. The new mineral is said to belong to the family of leucophoenicite, and its probable existence has been predicted by mineralogists since 1900.

Gageite is found in a transparent crystalline formation and possesses a high vitreous luster. Thus far none of the mineral has been found anywhere but in the Parker shaft near Franklin, where it was discovered lodged in the walls of small cavities and in fan shaped groups.

It is not believed that the new mineral will be of any value commercially

LIBERTY TREE MADE OF ZINC.

Haiti Bound to Have Durable National Emblem.

In front of the presidential residence in Haiti is a giant cocoanut tree, but its leaves are always in the same condition. In storm or sunshine their serenity is never disturbed.

The tree is the republic's tree of liberty. When the republic was established it was thought that a tree should be planted to signalize so great an event, but Haiti, it seems, has but one tree, and that the cocoanut tree. But the cocoanut tree is hardly the species to be chosen for a tree of liberty, for it grows to a good height and becomes bare as its age increases.

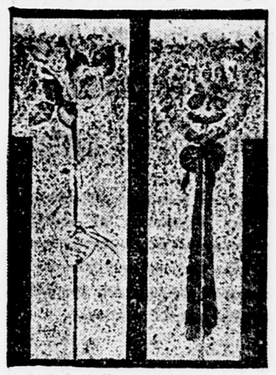

How was the difficulty to be overcome? It was a very simple matter. One of the council suggested that an imitation cocoanut tree made of zinc should be ordered from London, with the leaves, etc., painted to represent nature. The idea was adopted.

VALENTINE FAVORS.

New Effects For Cupid's Celebration on Feb. 14.

ROSE FAVOR AND HEART SHAPED PINCUSHION.

St. Valentine now claims attention, and one must be original in the art of gift making to attract this little god of love who at some time or other shoots his arrows at every boy and girl. Can you sketch? If so, then make out a valentine menu card for the absent friend. An appropriate menu would be something like the following: Candy kiss souffle, heart salad, turkey in the straw, nectar of the gods (coffee), trifles (cakes), returned affection (ice cream), jealousy (pickles), and create anything else that has a bearing on the day. Then sketch a picture of each item, using India ink. The saucy waitress should be drawn with a platter above her head, and she should be placed at the top of the card. Next sketch a salad and mark the ingredients with sigh, hopes, fears, etc. As you begin the work you will discover countless ways to decorate each menu.

To paint a pretty card show Cupid pushing a wheelbarrow full of love up a steep hill. At the top of the hill have a girl and tiny signpost showing the town or city in which she lives. Write beneath the picture the words, "Love's heavy burden."

Another suitable picture for a postal could show Cupid with an immense sack on his back just departing from the mail box on the corner. Write the recipient's name on the mail bag.

If a fancy bag is desired cut a heart shaped piece of cardboard, cover it with satin ribbon and shirr a ribbon to the heart to make the bag. Gather it at the top and place a draw string of cord or ribbon at the top. A miniature china Cupid can be tied to the draw string.

A dainty picture to send to some dear old lady is that of an old couple sitting side by side. Near them is Cupid keeping up the fires of love. The sentiment "Love never grows old" is appropriate for a picture of this kind.

The favors illustrated, used in the Delineator, are unique and pretty for the St. Valentine cotillion.

Here's a Dainty Gown.

Lingerie gowns seem to be an indispensable part of the summer outfit, and the illustration shows the last word in these costumes. It is very smart with its combined laces and insertions of heavy and thin materials and is not half as much work to make as the simple looking hand embroidered frock that means hours of patient labor and perhaps much eye strain. This model is more elaborate than most of the summer frocks so far displayed, for simplicity of the difficult to achieve sort is to be the vogue.

RED CROSS NO LONGER TO AID SAUSAGES AND SHOES.

Enforcement of International Copyright to Be Commenced.

The American Red Cross has requested the solicitor general of the United States to advise it as to the proper steps for the enforcement of that section of its federal charter relating to the use of its emblem and name for advertising purposes by manufacturers, retailers, physicians, charitable organizations, barbers and others.

It is believed that many persons who use the emblem or the name of the Red Cross for advertising purposes do so in ignorance that such use is forbidden by law, with penalties for violation which in aggravated cases may be a fine of $500 and imprisonment for one year.

The United States has a treaty with all the civilized governments of the world to prevent the use of the emblem and name of the Red Cross except as above stated, and this law is intended as a means of complying with the terms of the treaty.

There are evidences that public sentiment is responding to this movement to respect the peculiar significance of the Red Cross and to protect it against abuse. The American Medical association, the American Hospital association and the Association of Military Surgeons have put themselves on record in favor of the movement. Ambulances in New York have given up the Red Cross and have adopted the green St. Andrew's cross instead. The Retail Druggists' association and the Master Barbers' association have passed resolutions urging their members to refrain from the use of the symbol of the Red Cross.

From many sources are coming protests against the use of this emblem as an advertisement of such things as dynamite, sausage casings, kindling wood, washboards, stoves, shoes, mineral water, toothbrushes and the like.

MISFITS.

If you choose to represent the various parts in life by holes upon a table of different shapes, some circular, some triangular, some square, some oblong, and the persons acting these parts by bits of wood of similar shapes, we shall generally find that the triangular person has got into the square hole, the oblong into the triangular and a square person has squeezed himself into the round hole. The officer and the office, the door and the thing done, seldom fit so exactly that we can say they were almost made for each other.—Sydney Smith.

"Yes," said the fair maid, "my parents want me to marry Mr. Oldgold, but I'm not going to do it. I shall marry whoever I please."

"Then it's up to you to name the day," rejoined the young man, "for you certainly please me."

With a constantly aching back;
With annoying urinary disorders.
Doan's Kidney Pills make work easier.

They cure backache.

They cure kidney ills.

James P. Daugherty, Hammond Place Quincy, Mass. says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and am glad to let other sufferers know what they have done for me. I was bothered a great deal by backache and had but little strength or energy to get through with my day's work. I took many so-called kidney cures, but did not succeed in finding relief until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at the Cox Drug Store. I was surprised and gratified by the prompt way in which they relieved me. My back was soon strong and free from pain and I felt better in every respect. I would go to considerable trouble to get anyone to use Doan's Kidney Pills, as I have so much confidence in their merit."

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

A man at Plainfield, N. J., has sold half a dozen eggs for $125; and egg-nog season is over too.

What will Oklahoma lawyers do for business when Gov. Haskell and the Indians are gone.

A London editor finds our sailors "thin faced and sad." The ones he saw must have stumbled upon a copy of London Punch by mistake.

Being a man of quiet tastes, the new president of the steel trust may be able to worry along on a reduced salary of $50,000.

A young man named Roosevelt has dramatically appeared in the New York senate, leading the Democratic insurgents against Sheehan. The country sits up and watches him.

While the standpatters in the Senate continue to oppose the election of Senators by popular vote, the people are electing them without the Senate's permission.

William E. Corey has resigned from the Presidency of the United States Steel Corporation. And it's such cold weather for a man to tramp the streets looking for a job. Poor fellow.

The eyes of the industrial world will be fixed on the state of Washington if the employers' liability bill pending before the present legislature becomes a law. The proposed statute would revolutionize the present method of paying damages for injured employes and not only are the proprietors of industrial plants studying the proposed measure with keen interest but labor union leaders and advocates of industrial arbitration are considering the probable effect of such a law

Under the proposed act every line of industry employing men around machinery or on risks deemed at all hazardous will be assessed a percentage based upon pay rolls for the three months preceding October 1 each year.

The revenue is to be handled by a state commission which shall have full power to investigate all damage claims and to settle same without action at law. The powers of the commission are most sweeping. They may compel attendance by subpoena and have practically all the power of a superior court. An extensive auditing and information bureau is provided for. The lines affected include everything from printing offices to tunnel and bridge work.

One of the alleged objectionable features is the claim that such a law would put a premium on immorality because damages paid on account of the death or disability of a married man are so much greater than in the case of an unmarried man.

D. T. Ham, a prominent business man of Spokane, says he has talked with several persons who have observed the workings of such a law in England. In their opinion the law has thrown thousands of married men out of work. It is understood that the proposed Washington law is almost identical with the laws in effect on this point in England.

BROOM MAKES ATHLETES.

Domestic Course at Girls' College Gives Them Fine Records.

Domestic training, especially sweeping, makes athletes. Domesticity and athletics are anything but foes. Lake Erie college at Painesville, O., furnishes proof of these statements.

The new official record of field athletics shows that Lake Erie holds five women's collegiate records, more than any other girls' institution in the country except Vassar, which has seven. Lake Erie is the only college holding records at which domesticity is a compulsory part of the course. At Lake Erie practical housework holds a place on the curriculum equal with literature, art and science. Every girl at Lake Erie must do thirty-five minutes of housework every day.

CHIEF'S GRANDDAUGHTER NOW AN OFFICEHOLDER.

Watched Chippewa Relatives Fight Uncle Sam—Now Works For Him.

From a life of hardship and danger among the Indian tribes of South Dakota to the position of adjuster of claims in the office of the Indian affairs of the department of the interior is the unique life history of Mrs. M. L. Baldwin, granddaughter of a chief of the Chippewa Indians and relative of many of the famous Indian warriors of the west.

Until she was fourteen years of age Mrs. Baldwin slept only in an Indian tepee or in the open air. Many times when she was a girl she saw members of her family shot and scalped and one of her own brothers tortured. From the shelter of sand pits she, with other women and girls of her tribe, often watched the braves fight Indians of other tribes and soldiers of the United States.

Mrs. Baldwin's mother was a pure Chippewa Indian and her father a French Huguenot. Her grandfather formerly lived at Osseo, N. D. He also served as scout for many excursions for government troops. He was one of the most famous chiefs of the tribe. Her father later moved to Minneapolis, where he was made a judge advocate. He is now attorney in Washington for the Turtle Mountain band of the Chippewas. Mrs. Baldwin has held her present position for five years.

—The Salem board of trade is discussing the advisability of holding an industrial exhibit in that city.

CONGRESSMEN FOR SENATORS

Lodge Says Direct Vote Merely Means Substitution

HE OPPOSES STATE CONTROL

Declares That New Proposition Strikes at Very Foundation of National Government—Twenty-Three States, Including Perhaps Only Minority of Population, Could at Any Time Stop All Government Operations

Washington, Feb. 7.—Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, who was recently re-elected to the United States senate after a bitter struggle, made a sharp attack on the resolution providing for the direct election of senators. His colleagues listened attentively while he presented a vigorous argument for the retention of the present method of election to the upper house.

"I have never exaggerated the significance of the alteration proposed in regard to the election of senators of the United States," said Lodge.

"Reduced to its simplest form, an amendment providing for the choice of senators by direct popular election is merely a proposition to convert the senate into a second house of representatives, with two congressmen-at-large from each state, who are to be called senators and to hold office for six years. The only difference between these senators and the members of the house would be in the size of the constituency and in the greater length of the term.

"It may easily be the first step in a radical change which will lead to the destruction of the equality of the states in the senate, and to the consequent consolidation of the government, but as it stands in itself and by itself, it merely substitutes congressmen at large for senators.

"This proposition is to take from the United States, by striking out from the first paragraph of section 4 everything relating to the election of senators, all power to regulate the time and manner of holding senatorial elections. Not content with this, the resolution goes on to give affirmatively all control over the time, place and manner of electing senators to the legislatures of the states.

"This change is not an alteration in the mechanism of the system. It strikes at the very foundation of the national government. It is now proposed to put the United States government, so far as the election of snators is concerned, at the mercy of the states. It is proposed to take from the United States any power to protect its own citizens in the exercise of their rights, no matter how great the need might be for such protection.

"If this amendment should become a law twenty-three states, including perhaps only a minority of the population, could at any moment arrest the movement of the government and stop all its operations.

"To change the mechanism of choosing senators, and presidents, or representatives is a serious matter, requiring careful consideration, but this new proposition strikes at the very root of the national government.

"To call such a scheme as this progress is a mockery; it is retrogression and reaction of an extreme kind. If adopted, it would carry the government back to the controversies and the struggles out of which the constitution was born, and which beset and endangered the infancy of the United States."

A great reception was given McCurdy at the Albisu theatre. Vice President Zayas presided and presented McCurdy with a purse of $5000 given by the Havana Post for his attempted flight from Key West to Havana.

Shields Is Formally Charged With the Murder of Kenney

Warren, N. H., Feb. 7.—J. W. Shields of Philadelphia, who is charged with murdering Christio Kenney of Lancaster, pleaded not guilty when given a hearing before Justice Williams in the local police court.

The Shields family is a prominent one with considerable wealth. During the past few years Shields has traveled extensively. He had a stated amount as an allowance and with this went as he pleased here and there.

BLACK POWDER ON LAUNCH WHISTLER

Much Dynamite Is Also Found to Be Intact

New York, Feb. 7.—The launch Whistler, which was sent to the bottom of the North river by the disastrous explosion in Communipaw, was brought to the surface yesterday afternoon by a wrecking tug.

All doubt as to the presence of black powder on the scene at the time of the disaster was removed by the finding of three cases of this explosive in the vessel's bow. Near the unbroken powder cases were found 200 pounds of dynamite in four cases. The dynamite was intact.

The timbers of the boat were sprung from stem to stern and there was a large hole in the stern. The boilers and machinery were intact, however.

Prosecutor Garven, who is conducting the investigation, said that he was satisfied that there had been no explosion on the Whistler and that she had been sunk by the explosion on the Katherine W., nearby.

IRON ORE MINES FOUND

Preparations For Development Being Pushed on Large Scale

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 7.—Immense bodies of iron ore, of higher grade than Bessemer, have been discovered in a solid mass 300 feet by 300 feet on the surface, and known to have a depth of 1000 feet, and several other nearby bodies, at Ironton, on the Cayuna range in Minnesota. The principal body is on the Weyerhauser property and a royalty arrangement has been made which will further enrich that many times millionaire corporation.

This discovery as well as four other new properties belong to independent concerns, and preparations for development are being pushed on a large scale. This will undoubtedly have a great bearing on the price of iron, as the product just found far excels in quality that of the United States Steel Corporation, now operating on the famous Vermillion and Messaba ranges. The town of Ironton, which was not in existence four months ago, now boasts of several thousand population.

GRAFT FOUND IN ELEPHANT HUNTS

Odd Case From Burma Before English Privy Council.

LORD CHANCELLOR WONDERS.

Worldwide Spread of Political Peculation Astounds Jurist—Superintendent and His Assistants Who Padded Payrolls on Government Slaying Expedition Stands Convicted.

The judicial committee of the English privy council has been wrestling with a case of alleged graft in elephant hunting in Burma. The lord chancellor, after hearing the evidence in London, is said to have asked Lord Atkinson in a voice of wonderment if there is any remote spot on earth or any occupation, however strange, to which graft has not extended.

Graft Old as World.

"I fear, my lord," replied one of the counsel, "that graft is merely the modern expression of a human instinct as old as the race itself."

The case came before the privy council on appeal from the chief court of lower Burma. The acting superintendent and his assistant and the chief clerk of the Kheddah department—the principal business of which is the conduct of organized hunts of wild elephants—were all three accused of having padded the payrolls, commissary, etc., of a large elephant hunting party.

The government asserted that there were only 292 hunters in the expedition. The defendants, it was alleged, had cooked up the accounts so as to make it appear 348 men had taken part in the hunt.

Trial Lasted Three Months.

After a trial lasting almost three months, and in which pretty much all the expert elephant hunters in that part of Burma testified on one side or the other, the defendants were found guilty. The charge was that there had been a criminal breach of trust under section 409 of the Indian penal code.

The defendants appealed to King-Emperor George through the privy council, which has decided that the prisoners put up a poor case on appeal and must stand convicted.

SEES THROUGH GLASS EYES.

Artificial Substitutes For Natural Lenses Prove Successful.

Dr. William C. Winslow of Boston, noted writer and former Episcopal minister, who lost his eyesight four years ago, has recovered his vision. Two artificial glass lenses have been substituted for the natural lenses, and he can see through them.

With the cataracts the natural lenses of his eyes were removed. Glass lenses were substituted. These serve as well as the real ones. The operation is regarded as one of the most remarkable ever performed and is the first of its kind. The glass lenses flash to the brain the picture upon which the eye rests. Without them there is nothing but a glare of light.

The smallest and most delicate knives imaginable were used in the operation. It was very difficult to find a suitable antiseptic, the organism being so delicate. The surgeons used white of egg and nitrate of silver. Cocaine was used as a local anaesthetic.

—One of our exchanges says the Athol Chronicle has had a clipping from an old Boston Journal, July 18, 1850, sent in which contains an advertisement of Jordan & Marsh, occupying only two inches space, offering in a general way seasonable goods which had just arrived by ships. The advertising of Jordan & Marsh has always kept pace with their business and they must be convinced that their immense busines has been obtained through advertising or they would not now be occupying two pages instead of two inches, in some of the Boston daily papers, at a cost of several hundred dollars for each insertion.

MAY RESTORE HISTORIC GATE

London Agitates Return of Temple Bar to City.

An agitation is being made to restore old Temple Bar to London—not to where it formerly stood for more than a couple of centuries, at the junction of the Strand and Fleet street, but to erect it in some place such as the public gardens on the Thames embankment.

Temple Bar was one of the most historic of the city gates. It had on it statues of James I., Elizabeth and the two Charleses, and in the stirring days of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries many a human head decorated its upper spikes. Its existence is still recognized, for whenever the British monarch wishes to enter the city he has to pull up where the old gate stood and ask permission of the lord mayor.

In 1877 it had become so serious an obstruction to the traffic it was removed. The city sold it for a trifling sum to Sir Henry Meux, who re-erected it at the lodge of his country home, Theobald's Park, Essex, a royal hunting place in the days of the Stuarts.

It was built by Sir Christopher Wren, the architect of St. Paul's cathedral, in 1670. Now that, with the death of Lady Meux, who survived her husband, the estate is to be sold, the city is being strongly urged to buy the old bar back.

LEAVES BABIES TO BACHELOR

Young Lawyer Puzzled Over Problem of Six Infants.

F. Carroll Fow, Philadelphia bachelor and lawyer, in his early twenties, fails to see the joke in being bequeathed six babies, whose future lives somehow or other he must arrange. The babies are the inmates of the Prince of Peace Maternity hospital of the Quaker City.

"I guess their ages are somewhere between six weeks and six months; I'm not sure," he said. "I—I can't tell how old a baby is by looking at it, you know, and I—I can't run a maternity hospital, now, can I? It isn't—why, it isn't at all in my line."

The hospital was a private institution, financed and maintained solely by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Draper, its owners, who were philanthropists. Mrs. Draper died last year and her husband on Jan. 8, only a few weeks after his wife's demise. Attorney Fow was a friend of the Drapers, and to him the husband left the care of his estate, hospital, babies and all.

A Pretty Compliment.

His incessant work, his avoidance of all rest and recreation and his rigorous self denial made Joseph Pulitzer in his days in harness the despair of his family.

In this connection a pretty story is told about the famous journalist's son Ralph. Mr. Pulitzer had refused to take a holiday, and Mrs. Pulitzer exclaimed:

"Did you ever know your father to do anything because it was pleasant?"

"Yes, once—when he married you," the young man gracefully replied.—Washington Post.

The Tiny Shoes She Wanted.

"Now, madam, what size shoe will you have?" asked the salesman as soon as he was at liberty.

"The smallest and shiniest you have," she said.

The other women buying shoes sniffed.

And when the clerk returned with a pair of the tiniest imaginable the woman accepted them with the remark, "I guess baby's eyes will open when she sees these on her feet."—Buffalo Express.

JAPANESE BALL TEAM COMING

University of Keio Players to Tour This Country Next Season.

The Cornell Athletic association has received a communication from the manager of the baseball team of the University of Keio, Japan, relative to scheduling a game with the Cornell baseball team some time in May. This Japanese team is contemplating a tour of the United States next spring, planning a series of games with various American colleges from coast to coast.

The Keio team, according to the manager, is one of the strongest teams, amateur or professional, in Japan. The manager is especially anxious to make it known that this is not the same team which was beaten by the University of Chicago aggregation when the westerners visited Japan recently. The Keio team did not meet Chicago. The question of scheduling this game will be taken up by the athletic council at its next meeting.

Many Old Timers In Game Next Season

Cy Young, Hughey Duffy, Connie Mack, Jake Beckley, Jimmy McAleer, Lave Cross, Patsy Donovan, Arthur Irwin, Billy Hamilton, Jesse Burkett, "Deacon" McGuire, Hughey Jennings and Tommy Daly, who were active as players twenty seasons ago, will be in the game again next season.

CONSERVATION.

The conservation of our natural resources is clearly necessary for our welfare as a nation now and hereafter. Conservation implies both the development and the protection of resources, the one as much as the other. The idea which underlies it is in harmony with the true spirit of this nation. It expresses a deep seated national conviction, latent until it came, that we have inherited from our forefathers both an opportunity for ourselves and a duty to those who come after us. Conservation demands the use of common prudence and common foresight in dealing with that upon which our present and future welfare depends. The essence of conservation is the application of common sense to the common problems for the common good.—Gifford Pinchot.

Red Blood For Pale People !
A big supply of red blood corpuscles is what helps to make any man or woman have a healthy, pink complexion and cherry red lips. Resort to paint and powder are totally unnecessary and besides that, are harmful. Three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, if used regularly for several months, seem to create a greatly added number of millions to the red and white corpuscles of the blood, and not only improve the color, but add increased flesh to the thin and frail body. These tablets promote assimilation, absorption and digestion, and this splendid aid to nature's forces transforms the complexion and figure. They are prescribed by physicians, but being of a perfectly harmless character, self-administration is being followed by many, who obtain them direct from any well-stocked apothecary shop.

EXPENSIVE TO GOVERN

But Quincy Is Making Progress and All Right

The following letter of Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston to the Post is self explanatory, and a prompt correction of a false report, which shows that Boston's executive is a friend of Quincy:

To the Editor of the Post:

Sir:—I desire to correct a statement which appeared in the Sunday Post in the report of my remarks before the New England Travelling Men's Relief Association, Saturday evening.

In discussing the proposed annexation of the town of Quincy, which I said was brought to my attention by the chairman of the Board of Trade of Quincy, I was quoted as saying, "I don't want to see Boston enlarged by any such an undeveloped, unprogressive town as Quincy."

My remarks, as quoted are a great injustice to Quincy, as well as to myself, as I have the highest opinion of the progressiveness of the government and the business of that city. I said that the annexation of Quincy at this time would be undesirable from Boston's standpoint, because Quincy had but 35,000 inhabitants, a small valuation and a very large area.

The street mileage of Quincy is nearly 150 miles, and its total area of 15 square miles is almost one-half as big as all of Boston. I told Mr. Stone if Quincy were annexed to Boston it would mean the policing, schools, fire protection, street cleaning and watering of this immense territory up to the Boston basis, at an increased compensation for every person employed by Quincy.

I showed him the areas of the cities and towns surrounding Boston. Cambridge, with its six square miles of territory and three times the population of Quincy, and Chelsea with a little over two square miles and about the same population. I told him Quincy is a costly city to govern on account of its immense area and because of this fact it was at least a debatable question with me whether or not it should be annexed.

Its tremendous waterfront if properly developed would more than compensate for these disadvantages, but, like Boston, there has been little development.

I never said that the city was unprogressive. I believe its business men are among the most progressive in this part of the country. Last summer at Providence, when I attended the waterways convention, I met Mr. Crane and other representatives of the Quincy Board of Trade.

Last fall at Washington, at the Atlantic waterways convention, I met Mr. Crane and other members of the Quincy Board of Trade, and the other day at the State House Mr. Crane and the Quincy representatives were about the only ones to appear there to favor the petition urging action by Congress on the project to deepen and widen the waterways between southern ports and Boston.

This project is important to this part of the country, yet Quincy's representatives were the only ones there. Mayor Shea of Quincy has been more active and vigilant in this same line than any of the Mayors whom I have met of any of the other cities and towns.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company is located in Quincy, and this is one of the most progressive shipbuilding organizations in the world today. In fact, I have said more than once that this community of ours would be much further advanced commercially and industrially if we had more men of the type I have come in contact with in Quincy.

I, therefore, hope that you will publish this statement of mine in justice to Quincy and its citizenship.

John F. Fitzgerald.

HIGH SPEED PREDICTED

Graham White Puts It Over Two Miles a Minute

The year 1911 will be a wonderful year in the science of Aviation. Mr. Graham White gives the London Magazine his opinion as follows:

"By the beginning of 1911 aeroplanes will have emerged from the experimental and exhibition stage, and will have proved that they have reached a position of assured commercial utility. I regard the Daily Mail 10,000 pounds contest of 1911 as of the greatest value in proving this. I think it will be found that this contest will produce, not one or two skilled men, but a large number, who will be able to fulfil the exacting conditions of the contest. Governments, following the lead of France and Germany, will be placing orders for military aeroplanes, and I anticipate a great advance in the matter of speed. I think aeroplanes in 1911 will have attained speeds of 120 to 150 miles an hour, owing to increased efficiency in engine design."

ent. The Calvary Baptist society with 87 percent was second. Then followed Wollaston Baptist with 778, Atlantic Memorial with 77, Park and Downs 74, Braintree Baptist 68, United Presbyterian 64, Randolph Baptist 60, and so on. The four Swedish young peoples societies were well represented, and the Finnish society sent a delegation. All the Epworth leagues of the city sent a quota of their membership and various other churches of different denominations sent representatives. The Clark Christian Endeavor Union, which includes the Weymouths, Hingham and Cohasset, was represented by about 25 young people. In all, about 30 churches and young peoples societies were represented in the audience.

Dr. Cortland Myers, pastor of the Tremont Temple Baptist church of Boston, was the speaker of the evening. His address was based on the famous hours of trial mentioned in the Bible. The testing of Peter and his denial, Pilate's opportunity to win eternal glory and his cowardice in the face of it, and Judas' betrayal of his Lord were told with a vividness and force that could not fail to make a deep impression on his hearers. "Modern Pilatism" may be considered the subject of the address. Dr. Myers pointed out the up-to-date methods of denial. "It's easy enough to be a Christian where everybody else is a Christian but the real test comes when you're out in every day life." Many instances were cited in which everyday people like ourselves deny our Lord daily. "Whenever you show by word or deed or by refraining from word or deed that you are ashamed of Jesus Christ, you are denying Him just as surely as Peter and Pilate and Judas did, and you are much less excusable than they were. A simple illustration came to my attention the other day, a boy came up to me with a shamefaced air and said he had a confession to make. He said 'Mr. Myers, a fellow came up to me the other day and examined that button on the lapel of my coat "T. B. C. what does that stand for" he said. And I told him it was the Temple Ball Club." What it did stand for was the Temple Bible class and the boy was ashamed to tell the other fellow that he was a member of a Bible class. That's what I mean. He was denying his Lord and he prepared a lot of misery for himself.

A number of incidents were told in which men were firm for the right in the face of temptation. The speaker ended his address by making a plea for a more manly and womanly defense of Christ among us. Before closing the service a brief evangelistic service was held and some 25 asked for prayers. After an earnest prayer by Dr. Myers the benediction was pronounced by Rev. R. J. Davis.

The next meeting of the Union will be held on April 3. Although it has not been definitely decided, the place of meeting will probably be the First Presbyterian church on Water street. The Cabinet meeting will be held on the 6th of March, probably in the East Milton Baptist church. Rev. J. Spencer Voorhees, former, President of the State Union, and now acting as Field secretary will be the speaker.

INVESTIGATION BY GOVERNOR

Discussed by Representative Norman H. White

The present tangled condition of affairs relative to the State budget formed the basis of Representative Norman H. White's address before the Men's club of Christ church, Monday evening. Mr. White explained this subject to his audience and clearly and distinctly stated his position on it. He stated most emphatically that he had no objection whatsoever to the Governor being given power to investigate, with or without the aid of experts, the acts of his committee, the Ways and Means, or the acts of any other committee. But he also stated, and stated just as emphatically, his firm belief that the same power of investigation given the Governor should be given the committee or committees involved.

REPRESENTATIVE WHITE.

Mr. White in part spoke as follows:

"I have no objection, whatsoever, to the Governor being given all the power he wants to investigate, with or without the aid of experts, all the institutions, commissions or boards of the state, and if he wants it, similar power to investigate all the acts of the various committees on Beacon Hill as well, provided that the same power to investigate is given to the committee or committees involved. So far as I am concerned the Governor can have all the power he wants to investigate the recommendations for appropriations made by the Ways and Means committee, if similar power is at the same time given to that committee, which alone is responsible for recommending appropriations.

"But to give this power alone to the Governor would be unfair to the Ways and Means committee. It is that committee which is primarily responsible to the people for the state expenditures. Any statement to the contrary is utter folly. The Governor is not responsible, and, under the Constitution, cannot be responsible.

"If the Governor is to base his recommendations on the facts as they are reported to him by his experts, then the Ways and Means Committee should be afforded the same opportunity of basing its recommendations on the facts as reported to it by its own experts. It is not fair that the Ways and Means committee, which alone is primarily responsible to the people, should be forced to base its recommendations on the facts as given by the Governor's experts unless it also has opportunity to investigate the findings of these experts. That opportunity it does not now have.

"Why has Speaker Walker attempted to give the Governor power to investigate bills to be presented to the Ways and Means committee alone, and why does he object to that committee having the same power of investigation when he knows that in the event of his resolve becoming law it is that committee which would have to act upon the results of the investigation conducted by the Governor's experts, and so act without the aid of expert advice itself?

"The state has many committees which report on various measures. The Ways and Means committee reports financial bills, bills having to do with the expenditures of the state. The Railroad committee report on railroad legislation. The Committee of Public Health report all bills pertaining to public health. The Committee on Counties attends to county affairs. The Committee on Judiciary makes recommendations effecting the entire judiciary of the state. It recommends the creation of new courts and the annihilation of old ones. If the Governor is to be given the power to investigate, with the aid of experts, one committee, why not all.

"All of these committees work hard. They sit long and late and they do not change as governors change. The chairmen of these committees work up to their office through years of service. The experience they thus gain gives them an insight into the affairs coming before their committees that the Governor does not possess. Robert Luce only became chairman of the Financial committee (the Ways and Means) after nine years' service in the House. The present chairman of the committee is serving his fifth year in the Legislature. Furthermore, these committees are composed of members of both Senate and House.

"Governor Foss, in his inaugural address, strongly expressed his opinion that the Boston Holding Company bill, which effected the merger of the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads, and to which I am opposed, should never have been passed. This bill came from the Committee on Railroads. Why did not Speaker Walker's resolve confer upon the Governor power to investigate the legislation of this committee as well as the acts of the Ways and Means Committee."

Mr. White also spoke on the railroad merger legislation, the savings bank insurance law, the nurses' registration bill, etc., in which he has been prominent.

President Turner presided at the meeting and there was an attendance of over 100 men, including large delegations from Quincy Point and Houghs Neck, and others from Wollaston, Quincy and South Quincy.

A rising vote of thanks was given to Representative White. Refreshments were served.

Ego.

An ego is a Latinized I. All men are created egos and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable somethings of which neither statute, ukase, edict, injunction, beggar, magnate, book agent nor promoter can deprive them. He who steals my purse steals trash, but he who filches from me my ego takes that of which he already has enough and makes me not at all.

Women without votes have egos and, strangely enough, would still have them if they secured the votes; hence egos are not a political issue.

An ego is what a man is when he has nothing and is nothing else; that is to say, he is then first person singular and no particular gender.

An ego is neither soul, body, spirit, family, country nor race. It is neither moral nor pathological. A criminal has just as much ego as a person and no more. Some egos are better than others, chiefly our own. Life.

"Captain, we are entirely out of ammunition," said an orderly sergeant, to his commander, on a field day.

"What? Entirely out of ammunition?" exclaimed the captain.

"Yes, entirely out," was the reply.

"Then cease firing," said the captain.

HEARINGS AT STATE HOUSE

Postponement Secured Relative to Party Designations

There were several hearings at the State House of local interest on Monday, all of which were attended by Mayor Shea and City Solicitor McAnarney. The first hearing was on the bill to have the State contribute toward the building of the new bridge over Weymouth back river between Weymouth and Hingham ordered by the Navy department. Mayor Shea and City Solicitor McAnarney favored the bill from the Quincy standpoint, as did also Water Commissioner Crane, and County Commissioner Merrill. There were also representatives present from Weymouth, Hingham, and Cohasset, all of whom favored the bill and there was practically no opposition although the hearing was adjourned to a later date.

The petitioners claimed that the bridge at the present time is in good condition and would meet all wants for many years. That the government had ordered the draw to be widened to a width of fifty feet, and that if this was to be done the best thing was to build a new bridge. As this was entirely for the government, the petitioners felt that the towns should not be obliged to contribute for it, but that it should properly be a state improvement.

LIBRARY PETITION.

Before the Committee on Libraries there was a hearing on the petition of the Thomas Crane Public Library for authority to hold more than $100,000 of property. There was no opposition to the bill and the Mayor and City Solicitor explained that the library had been given much property and was likely to receive more in the near future, and for this reason the bill was desired.

There was still another hearing upon which the general public, that is in Quincy, were not aware. That was on the bill of Mayor Shea to eliminate party designations at municipal elections. The hearing had not been advertised in Quincy and it was only by accident that the Mayor heard of it. He appeared before the committee, and put up a kick, because the hearing had not been advertised in the local papers, and insisted that the city had not been treated fairly. After some further talk the hearing on the Quincy bill was postponed to a later date to be announced, and the committee promised that it would be advertised in the local papers.

Councilman Studley offered an order for a gravel sidewalk on the southeast side of East Howard street from the Fore River office to Newcomb square. Referred to Committee on Streets.

HELMETS FOR FIREMEN.

Councilman Cherrington offered an amendment to the fire ordinance establishing a rule that all permanent and call men of the fire department shall wear helmets when at a fire, and fixing a fine of $1 for the violation of the rule, unless the offended can furnish evidence that no helmet was to be obtained. He moved the suspension of Rule 25 that the order might pass.

Upon request Chief Williams appeared before the Council and answered questions regarding the use of fire hats. The Chief said that the hats at the Central station had become dried up and that the men preferred not to wear them. In reply to questions, he said that he did not know of any man being cut on the head at the Masonic building fire, and that in small rooms where the firemen often went, the fire hats would be in the way.

Councilman Cherrington asked the Chief if he would be willing that a member of the Fire department should appear before the Council and testify in regard to the need of helmets, and if, when first appointed three years ago, he had not immediately removed all fire hats at the Central station.

The Chief said that the men could appear if they wanted to, and that he did remove the helmets shortly after, because the men did not want to wear them. He had no objection to the adoption of the rule.

The motion to suspend the rule was lost, 7 voting yes, and 11 no. The order was read and referred to the Committee on Fire Department.

WASHINGTON STREET.

Councilman Histen offered an order requesting the Mayor to prepare a plan and estimate of the cost of widening Washington street, between Temple street and Chubbuck street and present the same to the City Council. Adopted.

Councilman Sodergren offered orders for lights on Squantum street between Huckings avenue and Ocean street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Bailey offered an order for two lights on Fayette street. Referred to the Executive.

TEEL POND.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order requesting the Commissioner to prepare a plan and estimate of the cost of the permanent improvement of Teel pond in Ward Six. Adopted.

A public hearing was held at 8.30 on the petition of the Angier Mills for permission to build a track across Old Colony avenue and for permission to build an overhead bridge across the same street. R. H. Hall appeared in favor of the petition and no one against. The hearing was then closed and the order recommitted to the Committee on Streets.

LICENSES.

Councilman Smith moved that the Committee on Licenses be requested to report on matters before them at the next meeting of the Council.

This brought Councilman Richards to his feet, on a question of privilege. He said that he presumed under the rules that he was obliged to act as Chairman of the committee, but he preferred not to do so, and he asked that he be excused from serving as its chairman.

On vote of the Council, he was excused from serving as chairman of the License committee.

President Bryant then appointed Councilman Bailey as chairman of that committee.

Adjourned at 9.05 until Feb. 20.

EATING LESS.

[Believing Americans suffer from overeating, Mr. De Cunha of New Jersey would limit by statute the amount of food a person may swallow at a meal.]

I ordered up a sirloin rare,
With mushrooms on the side—
It was the finest form of fare
That ever I had tried—
When, lo, a man in brass and blue
Said, "You must cut that steak in two,
And just one-half of it must do
Or into jail you'll slide."

When on a sultry summer night
The youth and maiden fair
Would eat all the ice cream in sight
Upon the bill of fare
The watcher says, with iron will,
"Not one more spoonful of vanill',
Because, according to the bill,
You've had your legal share."

O diners at the annual feed
Of Gotham's Old third troop,
What torture's of stomachic need
You'd suffer in a group
If as you gulped the oysters raw
The toastman rose, held up a paw
And groaned, "It's specified by law
We finish with the soup!"

It seems a blow at pleasure, this,
Within the banquet hall,
And yet one economic bliss
We see in dinners small.
The beef trust's downfall will be viewed
If we offset the price of food
By making of ourselves a brood
Who do not eat at all.

RICHEST SECTION IN COUNTRY

Virginia County Puts Out Boast of Amounting to Something.

"One county in Virginia—Accomac—is, I believe, the most prosperous county in the United States," declares William A. Anderson, former attorney general of the Old Dominion. "I don't mean, of course, to say that it is the richest, but I do assert that there is probably no other county in this country, or, for that matter, in the world, where every man in the county—and it is a county of 35,000 population—can within twenty-four hours raise $100 or more.

"Potatoes have made Accomac county. Last year the potato production of Accomac county was worth more than $2,000,000. Forty years ago the entire output of the county was not worth $500,000.

"Persons may talk about the opportunities presented in the western states, but I tell you that in the east and south there are hundreds of chances that are being overlooked. Do you know that in Virginia—in Suffolk—there is the second richest bank in the United States? I doubt if even the Chemical National of New York pays greater dividends than the Suffolk National of Suffolk, Va. The shares of the Suffolk today are worth nearly $3,000.

"The development of the peanut industry has been largely responsible for the prosperity of the country surrounding Suffolk."

UTILIZE OLD INUTILITIES.

Employment Devised For Abandoned Tin Stoppers For Bottles.

The latest home industry is making doormats from the tin stoppers of beer and other bottles. Boys and girls all over New York are collecting the stoppers, and if the fad continues bottle stopper doormats are likely to be a drug on the market.

The stoppers are nailed to a board with the tops downward, leaving the rough underside up. They are placed closely together and will quickly take off and receive all dirt and mud from shoes scraped on them. They form a most effective doormat, are very simple and cost little or nothing. Anybody with a board, tacks and the stoppers can make a doormat of this kind.

Where the idea originated is not known, but with it use has been found at last for the stoppers of beer and other bottles which have been heretofore thrown away.

IF WAR COMES TO GERMANY.

Eight Per Cent of Population Is Trained to Fight.

Calculating on the census taken Dec. 1, Colonel Gaedke declares Germany is able to send 5,200,000 trained soldiers and sailors into action.

That number includes only a portion —400,000—of the "substitute reserves." The total represents 8 per cent of the population of the empire. Colonel Gaedke calculates that Germany in 1911 will have under arms a total of 714,000 soldiers and sailors. Without calling upon the "substitute reserves," Colonel Gaedke states, Germany can now put 4,806,000 trained men in the field from the 6,004,000 who have done service during the last twenty-five years.

HOUSEKEEPER GETS $500,000

Will of Ex-Mayor of Lowell Surprises His Friends

SISTERS ALMOST FORGOTTEN

Two Receive $70,000 Jointly, While Nieces and Cousins Are Not Provided For—Friends of Fifield Say He Was Not Mentally Sound When Will Was Made—Charge of Undue Influence Is Made

Lowell, Mass., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Dora A. Chase, aged 50, for the last six years housekeeper of the late George W. Fifield, ex-mayor of Lowell and head of the George W. Fifield Lathe Engine company, has been made executrix of the will of the deceased, and a beneficiary under it to the extent of upwards of $500,000.

The will was filed for probate in the Cambridge court yesterday afternoon. The sum bequeathed to Mrs. Chase is seven times as large as the amount designated by the testator for his two sisters, Mrs. Fannie Wilson of Wentworth, N. H., and Miss Abbie Fifield of Belmont, N. H., who are to receive $70,000 jointly. Mrs. Chase and Fifield's two sisters are the only personal beneficiaries in the will.

The will sets aside, beyond the three personal bequests, $20,000 for the St. John's hospital at Lowell. The Lowell general hospital is to receive the same amount, while $50,000 is to go to Grace Universalist church. No provisions are made for the three nieces of the deceased and his four cousins.

That the comparatively small amount given to the sisters of Fifield will result in a contesting of the will by the latter is the general impression among close friends of the family.

Personal friends of the deceased have claimed he was somewhat mentally unbalanced within the last year. It is declared that Fifield, owing to the failure of his mind and his suffering shortly before death, was not in a sound state of mind when the will was made.

A further ground on which it is claimed that the will may be contested is that of undue influence on the part of Mrs. Chase. The charge is made that Mrs. Chase carefully guarded Fifield in his last illness to the exclusion of his relatives. On no fewer than three occasions Miss Abbie Fifield, the sister of the deceased, was denied access to him.

The body of the will sets aside $50,000 for Mrs. Wilson and $20,000 for Miss Fifield. In the codicil annexed to the will Mrs. Dora A. Chase is mentioned for the sum of $50,000.

The salient feature of the will is, however, not expressed in figures. The codicil further provides that Mrs. Chase be residuary legatee.

Friends of Fifield estimated that his estate was valued at more than $650,000. The public bequests and the sums intended for the two sisters, made a total of $115,000. The $50,000, and the residue of the estate, specified for Mrs. Chase, would, therefore, be upwards of $500,000. Added to this was the fact that Mrs. Chase was to be executrix.

Fifield died Jan. 30. He was mayor of Lowell for two successive terms from 1893. He was married twice, but had no children. About six years ago Mrs. Chase became his housekeeper. During all this time she held aloof from all the neighbors. Little was known about her and she was very uncommunicative.

HAS TUBERCULAR MALADY

Rumor In Connection With Popular German Crown Princess

Berlin, Feb. 7.—Intense disappointment has been caused in Germany by the necessity of breaking off the crown prince's sojourn in the Far East. His projected visits to the courts of China and Japan were expected to produce substantial political results for Germany.

One story in connection with the cancellation hints of a disquieting state of health of the crown princess, who is spending the winter in Egypt. It has been rumored in Berlin for some time that the popular princess is suffering from some tubercular malady which necessitates her residence in a southern climate for an indefinite period.

Burton Takes an Opportunity to Say Something For Cullom

Washington, Feb. 7.—A defense of Senator Cullom of Illinois formed the most striking part of a speech made in the senate by Senator Burton of Ohio, in opposition to the report of the committee on privileges and elections by which Senator Lorimer of Illinois was exonerated from the charge of obtaining his seat by means of bribery.

The reference to Cullom, who is Lorimer's colleague, was called out by a statement made by Senator Bailey of Texas. Speaking of the existence for years of a "jack-pot" fund in the sessions of the Illinois legislature, Bailey, who supports Lorimer, said that the means used to elect Lorimer were the same as employed in the election of Cullom.

The Ohio senator discussed the allegations against Lorimer largely on legal grounds. He proceeded upon the theory that certain facts had been proven and then undertook to show that the election by the Illinois legislature had been tainted and therefore was invalid.

GIRL LISTENED TO ABUSE

Railway Company Must Settle Because of Torment Endured

St. Paul, Feb. 7.—Because Miss Rose Chadima, a South St. Paul girl, was forced to listen to abusive language while riding on a car, Judge Finehout has directed the street railway company to pay $300 damages to her. The case grew out of the failure of the conductor to eject the man who annoyed her.

Otto Valrath, recognizing Miss Chadima as the daughter of a man with whom he had had dealings, took a seat beside her and began to upbraid her.

Several passengers appealed to the conductor, who refused to interfere. Miss Chadima was compelled to listen to the abuse all the way to South St. Paul. She sued for $500.

HELEN KELLER AS POET.

Blind Girl Writes Poem That Is Favorably Received.

Miss Helen Keller, born blind, deaf and dumb, has recently published a poem called "The Chant of the Stone Wall," which has received favorable notice from critics in England as well as in America. The poem is somewhat in the style of Walt Whitman, and the author was untrammeled by any requirements of meter. At times she drops into a natural rhythm, and there are lines that are excellent blank verse. This is true of the beginning of the poem, which is as follows:

Come, walk with me, and I will tell
What I have read in this scroll of stone.
I will spell out this writing on hill and meadow.
It is a chronicle wrought by praying workmen,
The forefathers of our nation—
Leagues upon leagues of sealed history awaiting an interpreter—
This is New England's tapestry of stone.

The scope of the poem is not well indicated by the title, which requires explanation. The wall or walls which have inspired Miss Keller are those built by the men of the Mayflower and the early settlers and are of familiar stone fence type. The author takes these old walls as the text for her earnest and often strikingly beautiful reflections on the past and present of the northern states. The note of cheerful optimism and of personal joy in life and nature is one of the most remarkable features of the poem—

I am bone of their bone, breath of their breath.
Their courage is in my soul.
The wall is an Iliad of granite. It chants to me
Of pilgrims of the perilous deep,
Of fearless journeyings and old forgotten things.

Miss Keller is a graduate of Radcliffe college, the woman's department of Harvard university. She was recently appointed a member of the Massachusetts Commission For the Blind.

Mrs. Taft's Dream Came True.

On June 19 next the president and Mrs. Taft will celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. The last event of the kind in the White House was in the administration of Rutherford B. Hayes. Mrs. Taft was there as a young girl, and it is on record she told President Hayes, who was her father's law partner and her godfather, that she would never be married to a man who would not become president. Hayes advised her to become an Ohio man's wife if she wished to realize that dream.

$20,000,000 IN MISSISSIPPI DAM

Keokuk Project to Be Second Largest In World.

TO BE COMPLETED IN 1913.

Government's $8,000,000 Canal Will Be Obliterated and Father of Waters Transformed Into Lake Fifty Miles In Length and Five Wide—Huge Locks Planned For Navigation.

A date has been set for the completion of the mile wide $20,000,000 dam in the Mississippi river which is now in construction at Keokuk, Ia. It is July 1, 1913.

Hugh L. Cooper, the engineer in charge, states that thirty months of work carried on as actively as it is now will see the Des Moines rapids harnessed and 100,000 horsepower developed. The total development is to be between 200,000 and 250,000 horsepower, of which 60,000 has already been contracted for delivery to St. Louis, 200 miles distant. Mr. Cooper states that Keokuk and vicinity are to have the first call on the balance of the power.

The locks of the Keokuk and Hamilton Water Power company show that 750 men are now employed in building the big dam, the first to extend entirely across the Mississippi river, for which it was necessary to secure a franchise from congress before work could be started. By the 1st of July 2,000 men will be at work.

$8,000,000 Canal to Disappear.

Five hundred are now at work on the Iowa side, the first task consisting in building three miles of side track on which to transport the innumerable tons of building material required and constructing a temporary bridge across the canal, which was built by the United States forty years ago at a total cost of $8,000,000 and which is to be completely drowned out when the dam impounds the waters of the river.

The river from Keokuk north will be changed from a mile wide meandering stream into a lake from three to five miles in width and about forty or fifty miles in length. Thousands upon thousands of acres of lowlands along both the Iowa and the Illinois shores will be submerged, but the water power company has been securing options on this property and buying tracts quietly for the past two or three years, until today it is stated that it has provided (either by outright purchase or by option) for 99 per cent of the property which will be inundated. Altogether almost $2,000,000 has been spent or will be spent for riparian rights.

Mr. Cooper stated that the possibilities of the project were only beginning to be realized. He predicted that within twenty years there would be from 700,000 to 800,000 people living on the shores of the lake which will be formed when the dam impounds the river's waters. He said that water power of no greater magnitude supports a population of 2,500,000 in Switzerland.

Dream of Years to Be Realized.

It is only after three-quarters of a century of hoping that Keokuk at last sees its water power dreams being realized. As long ago as 1848 the Mississippi River Improvement association was organized, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, for the purpose of improving navigation and harnessing the water power that might be developed in the process. Years and decades passed, however, and nothing came of the plans until within the past ten years the project was revived and Keokuk went at earnest on the proposition. After considerable maneuvering a franchise was secured from congress giving the right to dam the river and develop the power of the Des Moines rapids. It was to make navigation possible and safe around this dangerous stretch of the Mississippi that the government built the nine mile canal in the seventies and has maintained it ever since at an annual cost of $50,000.

Before the franchise could be secured from congress it was necessary for the promoters to agree to replace this canal and its three locks with one immense lock, which would allow the boats and rafts to ascend or descend from one water level to another, replace the present drydock with another and furnish electric power to operate both the new dam and the new lock for all eternity, absolutely free to the government.

The dam which is being built will be the largest in the world, with the single exception of the Assuan dam built across the Nile, in Egypt, by the British government. The Keokuk dam will be a mile long and thirty-seven feet high, with seven feet of the foundation imbedded in the solid rock of the river bottom. The dam will be between thirty-five and forty feet in width. The power house will be 1,400 feet long.

Police Critic of Drama Has Had Varied Career

GEORGE H. QUACKENBOS is perhaps the most versatile man on the New York police force. He holds the rank of sergeant, but his duties are varied. He is a graduate physician, and since he has been a policeman he has saved several lives by rendering first aid before the arrival of an ambulance surgeon.

Just now he is acting as a sort of police censor for plays about which there is any dispute. When the question was raised concerning the production of "La Samaritaine," in which Sarah Bernhardt appeared, Sergeant Quackenbos was directed to see the play and make a report on it. For the first time in America an actor was to be seen on the stage impersonating Jesus Christ.

Sergeant Quackenbos saw "La Samaritaine," and he wrote a review of the play that would have done credit to any dramatic critic in the country. He expressed the opinion that there was no objection to the drama on religious grounds, and the police commissioner accepted his decision and paid no further attention to the matter.

Though he comes of Dutch ancestry, Sergeant Quackenbos is a thoroughbred American, for his family came to America in 1600. He was born in Chicago, where his father was professor of ancient and modern languages in St. Mary's university. He probably inherited his ability to learn languages, for he showed an early aptitude for them, and today he speaks in Latin, French, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Greek and several Indian tongues.

Quackenbos returned to New York twenty odd years ago and taught languages and higher mathematics in many schools and colleges. He had learned the sign language used by the deaf and dumb and had also learned the articulation method by which the deaf read speech by watching the lips, and for a time he was an instructor in the New Jersey School For the Deaf at Trenton. He has been a policeman since 1896.

CZAR BLESSES THE NEVA.

Nicholas Appears In Public to Revive Ancient Custom.

Czar Nicholas of Russia, who has been in partial retirement for some years, owing to the revolutionary movement, has emerged from seclusion to go through the impressive ceremony of blessing the waters of the river Neva. For several years this has been done hurriedly, but the other day the czar and the members of his family joined in the observance, and the occasion was one of old time splendor.

The river Neva flows through the center of St. Petersburg and plays an important part in the life of the city. During the summer there is much traffic on the water, and the islands that dot the stream are used as pleasure grounds. During the long winter, when the river is frozen, it serves as a highway for sleighs and sledges and is really the fashionable drive of the Russian capital. The elite of the city then throng the stream, and tests of speed by drivers of blooded horses are common.

WEALTH.

An accession of wealth is a dangerous predicament for a man. At first he is stunned if the accession be sudden; he is very humble and very grateful. Then he begins to speak a little louder, people think him more sensible and soon he thinks himself so.—Cecil.

If heaven had looked upon riches to be a valuable thing it would not have given them to such a scoundrel.—Swift.

If wealth come beware of him, the smooth, false friend! There is treachery in his proffered hand; his tongue is eloquent to tempt; lust of many hearts is looking in his eye; he hath a hollow heart. Use him cautiously. —Tupper.

A Heartless Interruption.

A young Parisian, noted for his grace and readiness as a second in many duels, was asked by a friend to accompany him to the mayor's office to affix his signature as a witness to the matrimonial contract. He consented, but when the scene was reached forgot himself. Just as the mayor was ready for the last formalities he broke out: "Gentlemen, cannot this affair be arranged? Is there no way of preventing this sad occurrence?"

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence. Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1,762, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor. Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red Flanagan had won a continent wide reputation as a "smooth worker." He was one of those painstaking, conscientious burglars who followed habitually the laudable practice of looking after details. His employers, among whom had been Jimmy Valentine, "Chicago Whitey" and other leaders in their profession, had in the past shown a flattering willingness to recommend him (not in their own handwriting, to be sure) as a thorough artist, an untiring student and one who one day would probably revolutionize the business of caring for other people's money. In a word, Red was thorough, which means a great deal in his line.

So, true to his reputation, Red, fearing complications because of the pitch to which Avery had unconsciously raised his voice, had stepped behind the portieres to keep watch on the short hallway that led to it. This hallway opened out into the main hall of the hotel, at the far end of which was a carriage entrance. At the opposite side of the parlor was an exit leading to a dining room, which in turn had an opening directly next to the main entrance of the hotel. Red realized that a casual passerby might become suspicious of Avery's words should they be overheard. Besides, the implacable Doyle was in town. A friend of his, a "runner" for Doc Slater's faro bank, had so informed Red that very morning.

Red suddenly issued a warning hiss. "Duck, Avery! Here comes Doyle!"

The two thieves, having no opportunity to do better, hastily concealed themselves behind the portieres.

Valentine, very much disturbed, made an effort to calm himself. He seated himself beside a convenient table. He picked up a magazine and began to peruse its pages in seemingly unconcerned fashion.

"Hello, Jimmy!"

With these words Detective George Doyle entered the room. Garmented in the latest cut of fashionable clothing, panama hat and patent leather ties with batwing laces, he appeared the dilettante, the man about town, rather than the tracker of desperate men—the man of leisure, every inch of him, an uninitiated observer would have pardonably judged not only from his attire, but also from his debonair, blase manner. Any one describing Doyle as the man who broke up the "Five Points" gang and the "Whyo" gang in New York city would have been laughed at for his folly, yet such was his record. His work in scattering the troupes of election and primary day "floaters" and "repenters" in some of the most disreputable districts was equally meritorious.

And yet Doyle had his other side. He was growing fond of the easy life that came from having a staff of "stool pigeons" to do his work for him.

Jimmy Valentine turned his head slightly to answer Doyle, who, he well knew, came on no errand that would benefit a released prisoner.

"How are you, Doyle?" he replied indifferently.

Doyle's shifting, farseeing eyes, however, caught the nervous twitching of Valentine's fingers as they ran over the edges of the magazine.

"You're perfectly innocent now, I hear," went on Doyle, a sarcastic note coming into his voice.

"Perfectly." Valentine's voice was as even as though conversing with his most intimate friend.

"So you told the governor?" commented the detective.

"Oh, yes!"

"I've seen the governor too."

"He didn't have much to do this morning, did he?" humorously.

"Very pretty, Jimmy. Let me ask you a question. Do you think I would be your friend if I could?"

"Do you think so yourself?"

"Yes, if you were willing to exchange the ordinary courtesies between friends."

"Meaning exactly what?"

"Favors. Now, I'll do the first one." He seated himself opposite the ex-convict.

"Thank you," in gay mood.

"Sarcasm won't win you anything with me, Jimmy. I said I'd do you a favor."

"What is it?" Valentine began to inspect his visitor anxiously.

The detective paused momentarily. Then he said deliberately:

"I'll—forget—that—job—you—did—at—Springfield—three—years—ago."

The detective leaned back in his chair, inserted his thumbs in the armholes of his waistcoat and gazed fixedly at Jimmy Valentine.

The eyes of the man addressed became directed at the cover of the magazine he still held, but only for an instant. He shot a defiant glare at Doyle.

"I was never in Springfield in my life," he said indignantly.

"Which, Springfield?" asked Doyle significantly.

"No Springfield."

"You dodge it nicely."

"I don't see how."

"Now, which Springfield did I think you were going to shy?"

"I have no idea."

"Good again. Well, I'll tell you," continued Doyle. "I meant Springfield, Mass."

Valentine raised his brows doubtingly, innocently.

"I don't think I was ever in the state of Massachusetts."

"I can prove you were in Springfield, Mass., the night the safe in the savings bank was grabbed."

"Oh, no, you can't."

"Believe me, Jimmy, I can. The witness may be a bit disreputable, but I can prove it."

"You can job me, you mean. You can get fake witnesses?" Valentine asked excitedly.

"I can send you for five at least, my boy."

"But you won't if I do you a favor?"

"You are a very good guesser, James."

"Well?"

"I want Avery."

"Avery?"

"Bill Avery, who finished a nine year stretch a month ago and joined up with your old friend Red Flanagan."

Bill Avery, concealed behind the portieres with Red, gave a violent start as he heard Doyle's words. Red had all he could do to quiet him. The aged thief, however, managed to draw a 38 caliber revolver from a side pocket in his coat—quicker to get at than the hip pocket, and then this arrangement enables a man to stand with a hand carelessly thrust into a pocket and to discharge the pistol through the coat when dire emergency threatens.

"Curse him!" he whispered to Red. "I told him I'd get him if he turned square, and when Doyle goes I'll bore him through the mouth and into his brain."

"Serve him right!" hissed Red. "And two chances for a slick getaway. No guy can go on the square without goin' crooked with his pals."

CHAPTER VIII.

LITTLE knowing of the serious conspiracy that was forming but a few yards away behind the thick velvet curtains, Valentine gave verbal and mental battle to the detective. Already he was beginning to see that the way of the transgressor was hard not only while he was in the legal toils, but also after he became free and supposedly in a position to build a new life if he so desired. But Jimmy Valentine was only at the beginning of a knowledge of the conditions and trials and setbacks he must face, for so long as men make laws and administer them so long will the guilty and the innocent as well suffer and endure, sometimes justly and sometimes unjustly. This also is a law of life.

Valentine went on to insist that he didn't know where Avery was, hadn't seen him since his release from Sing Sing, was glad of it, didn't care where he was and didn't purpose to care. Of all this he was absolutely sure.

"THAT'S A LIE! YOU KNOW WHERE HE IS."

"Well," stated Doyle, "he held up a citizen just three days after he got out, and I want him."

"And I'm to tell you where he is and you will send him up for highway robbery?" questioned Valentine.

"The man he stuck up may die."

"And you expect me to hunt him up and deliver him to you?"

"And you are going to. That's the odd part of it. And possibly I'll make an eyewitness out of you."

"It would be odd if I sent Avery away for life. It would indeed!"

"Then I'll slough you for that Springfield job." Doyle rose abruptly.

"Then you may as well do it now," said the other defiantly.

"No hurry. I've got a little work on the case yet, and I'll find you when I want you." Doyle's grin showed his teeth.

"I'm not going to run away."

"Look here, Valentine, this Avery isn't worth this. He's as wrong as ever lived. He'll cross you or any one else. I should think when a bum resorts to blackjacking an old man that would put him out of your class."

"I don't know where he is. I don't know that he did blackjack anybody, and I wouldn't know him if I saw him."

"That's your spiel, eh?"

"That's the truth." Valentine rose as though to end the distasteful interview.

"That's a lie! You know where he is better than any one. If you don't find dope, and I want him. One month to turn him up, and if you don't I go after you, and if I go after you I get you."

"Well, get me."

"I will. It will take a little time—a year, perhaps ten—but as long as we're both alive I'm after you. Good day." Doyle strode angrily away.

As the broad shouldered form of the "headquarters man" disappeared Valentine stood gazing reflectively after him. His back was turned to the portieres. Bill Avery, seeing his chance, crept stealthily out. In his right hand gleamed the barrel and the chamber of his 38 bulldog. He felt secure. He had the versatile Red to aid in the necessary getaway. The hotel corridors were opportunely deserted and the noise of the elevator and of the street cars outside would dull the sound of the bulldog's bark.

Another step; he raised the weapon; his forefinger began to tighten on the trigger. But Valentine's keen ear caught the sound of the creak of Avery's stiffening elbow joint as it straightened. Wheeling with his old time alacrity, the ex-convict saw his danger, struck down the firearm with his powerful left hand and wrested it from his would be assailant's grasp. He broke the weapon open and saw that all the chambers were loaded. Snapping it shut, he thrust it into his pocket and hurled the now cringing Avery from him to the floor.

"You fool!" sneered Valentine. "Get up and be a man."

The former prison mate of his conqueror stiffly regained his feet.

"I'll kill him—I'll kill him yet!" he exclaimed to Red, who had followed him from behind the curtain.

"Too bad you didn't get him," growled Red disgustedly.

Valentine, however, cut short their talk by warning them of their loud tones. At his pronouncement that they were both crazy Red reminded him of what he had told him about the detectives and their stool pigeons.

"It was a lie, too," put in Avery. "I never stuck that old man up. I'm talking on the level."

"I knew Doyle was lying," answered Valentine reassuringly. "It's a hard game we're up against."

Red agreed with the speaker.

"Well, now, maybe you believe that it ain't so easy to turn square. Listen, Jimmy. Avery and me have got a job worked out. We know every twist and turn of the joint. I've prowled it twice. We were going to use the soup." He showed a bottle. "See, old nitroglycerin, but we heard you were going to be sprung, and we waited. You can grab that gopher tonight, and you can bet with us outside no one can get to you."

Red and Avery eyed him anxiously, expectantly.

"I've opened my last safe, Red," was the calm rejoinder.

"So you're going to work, eh, with a copper at your heels?" snarled Red.

"I'm going to work, and I won't be a stool pigeon."

"You're going to give up the game, a graft like you got—you, with your"—

"I'm done."

"Well, what in heaven's name—I got it—it's a woman!"

"I have met a decent girl, Red, the kind I knew as a boy—my sister's kind. It was she who got me out of that hole at Sing Sing, and I have promised myself"—

"You don't think she or her folks would stand for you, do you?"

"If I was on the level she just might."

"With a copper telling lies about you to her folks unless you delivered me or Red?" interpolated old Avery.

"Jimmy, for God's sake don't go against that straight girl game. It'll only break your heart, then what?" asked Red earnestly.

The released prisoner was thoughtful a moment.

"I've thought it out," he finally said. "She'll be back any minute, and I'm going her way, boys. Yes, and if I do there's a chance that I may win her some day and be able to take her to my old home and my father and mother, who haven't heard of me for years. They didn't seem quite to understand me when I was a lad, boys, nor I them, but I can see now that they meant all right by me. I've learned it all from this girl, though she's almost a complete stranger to me"—

Valentine's voice began to waver, and he inclined his face to one side to hide the evidences of the emotion that threatened to overwhelm him.

To Red Flanagan and Bill Avery the situation was a trying one, desperate indeed. One of them was all too young and inexperienced to execute alone the delicate, sure, nerve racking "inside" job of a safe looting sortie, the other was too old and feeble for anything but a berth as "outside" man, to detect approaching danger and give due warning thereof. They absolutely required the partnership of Jimmy Valentine.

Woman's World

Miss Alice Bennett, Champion of Conservation of Water Power.

MISS ALICE BENNETT.

"The women of this country can do anything if they will set their minds to it."

This is the foundation upon which Miss Alice Bennett, advocate of water power conservation, bases her hopes of preserving for the people their rights and interests in the water power sites of the country. To her mind the subject is one of the highest importance to all the people of the nation, affecting, among other matters, the cost of living and the preservation of the fundamental rights of citizenship. In her advocacy of her cause she unites the zeal of her Connecticut ancestors of the seventeenth century with the broadmindedness and store of information of a woman of the second decade of the twentieth century.

It would be wrong to call Miss Bennett's interest in the conservation of the water power sites and the preservation of the people's rights in them her hobby, for that word would belittle, according to her ideas, the prime importance of the subject. But it is her hobby in the sense that she is devoting to it all her time and is working very hard to interest the women of the country in the matter. She is going from city to city lecturing and is devoting the rest of her time to the preparation of literature bearing on the matter. Her work is meeting with the approval of many women's organizations, and she displays with pride a letter indorsing her work sent to her by Mrs. Lillian M. Hollister, president of the National Council of Women, the central governing body of the women's clubs and federations of the country. Among the other organizations which have become interested in Miss Bennett's propaganda is the Woman's National Rivers and Harbors congress, an auxiliary of the men's national body. The congress has 40,000 members.

It is Miss Bennett's ambition to organize throughout the country, in cities, towns and villages, clubs or associations of women awakened to a strong realization of the importance of the subject which she is agitating. To her mind very few other questions, if any, overshadow it in importance and present interest. The utilization of the water powers of the country and their retention in the hands of the people are questions attracting a large and ever growing amount of attention from scientists and publicists. On the proper utilization of these water power depends, according to many authorities, the solution of important problems, such as the conservation of the coal and wood supply of the country, the use of electric power ("white coal") in household work and others. Proper use of the water power, rescued or saved from monopoly, means a saving of 75 per cent of the coal used at the present time, all within ten years, declare the scientists.

In her work of interesting the American public in the matter which she has taken up with so much zeal and diligence Miss Bennett is a "free lance." That is, she works independently, seeking the co-operation of all interested organizations, but not allying herself with any one of them. "Women saved the falls of Niagara, the trees of California and the Palisades and established state forestry bureaus in the face of organized lumber interests," she declares, "and there is no reason in the world why they should not save the water power of the country."

Miss Bennett has been a nurse, a settlement worker and welfare worker. She has a record of things accomplished in various lines in several cities. One of the matters in which she is especially interested and which she considers of great importance to this country is the settling and distribution here of the Italian farmers coming to our shores.

The Youngest Divorced Couple.

The youngest divorced couple in the world is to be found in the court of Abyssinia. On May 16, 1910, the Princess Rodmanic Onosk was married to the Prince Lidj Eyassu, the heir apparent, the bride then being eight years old and the bridegroom fourteen. Now they have been divorced. It is not a question of fault on either side, no incompatibility of temper, none of the causes which figure so frequently in our divorce division. The princess happens to be the niece of the Empress Taitu, and this lady is not popular with the regents of the country. So to prevent the empress exercising any baneful influence upon the future ruler's wife the statesmen have required the prince to divorce her.

The "Open Door" to Opportunity

STUDENTS of industrial development tell us that in the eagerness to build up newer territories, the opportunities of older sections are frequently lost sight of. Whatever is at a distance seems to be imbued with greater attractiveness and value than that which is near at hand.

Thus as imagination pictured the unexplored deserts and mountains, the vast, uncultivated stretches of rich prairie, the unharnessed waterfalls, the unconquered kingdoms of virgin forest and undeveloped industries of the mighty, unknown West, there wakened again the old adventurous spirit of the Pilgrims. And out from many a town and farm poured for many a day the flower of New England's youth, while out from many a bank and counting room flowed a golden stream that seemed to have no end.

A half century rolled by, and the prospector and the settler had conquered Nature's vast western domain—the capital of older sections performed miracles of development. The South and West were rapidly becoming rich and well-settled communities—and the investor in his search for undeveloped possibilities came to realize that he had looked far afield and neglected the opportunities at his very doorstep, and with this realization a new day dawned for New England.

And now the tide has definitely turned, and is flowing back—back to New England and her undeveloped opportunities, back to the wealth of field and stream, of mountain and seashore, uncanvassed and uncounted, waiting in those many years for their turn to set the giant wheels of commerce in motion, that they too might fulfil their destiny.

New England's greatest glories are not of the past, but in the future—a future yet but dimly realized, wherein every field and stream and forest and hill shall contribute its quota toward a mightier empire of organized agriculture, industry, and commerce, employing to the full the unlimited resources of New England capital, and the brains, skill, and energy of all her diversified population.

NEW OFFICERS DO FINE WORK

Initiation Follows the K. of C. Installation

The officers of Ave Marie council, Knights of Columbus, of West Quincy, which was instituted some weeks ago were duly installed Monday evening at St. Mary's hall in the presence of State Deputy William J. O'Brien and a large number of visiting knights from councils in the immediate vicinity.

The installation was performed by Deputy Grand Knight Charles J. Brady assisted by John S. Quinn as deputy grand warden. During the installation ceremonies music was furnished by a quartet composed of James J. Flynn, William Burke, Robert Wall and John McElroy. The installation ceremony was performed in a manner that reflected great credit on the deputy and his suite.

After the installation, the officers exemplified the first degree upon 17 candidates. It was the first time they had worked the degree but the work was exceptionally well done.

After the business session a banquet was served, and there was a musical entertainment and addresses by State Deputy O'Brien, District Deputy John E. Hannon of Dedham, J. J. Cunniff grand knight of Quincy Council, Rev. Henry T. Grady and Rev. William J. Duffy.

lagher, Miss Bessie Mahoney and Miss Mary F. Burns.

The program opened with a chorus arranged by Miss Mary McConarty, the accompanist.

The program was as follows:

End song, "Put your arms around me, honey," Miss Mary R. Lyons
Ballad, "Bring me a rose," Miss Mary F. Burns
Song, "Eliza," Miss Anna J. Walsh
End song, "Mix on the glow-worm," a topical song, Miss Helen H. Gavin
Finale, Military drill by chorus
Solo, "Goodbye, Betty Brown," Miss Bessie Mahoney

The hit of the evening was the topical song by Miss Helen H. Gavin. It was brim full of hits, and it was noticed that many of the shafts found their mark. They were directed toward club members, although one or two allusions were made to outsiders.

After the performance there was a social hour, during which refreshments were served. It was one of the most enjoyable evenings of the many held by the club and reflects great credit on the committee in charge who composed the young ladies who presented the minstrel show.

After the performance Miss McConarty was presented with a brooch by the "minstrels" in appreciation of her services as musical director.

A REAL SNOW STORM

The First Real Wintry Day of the Winter

Quincy in common with New England is experiencing what promised this noon to be the most severe snow storm of the winter up to the present time. The first indication of snow came Monday afternoon in the vicinity of 4 o'clock when there was a slight fall of snow. It did not accumulate much however. The weather looked threatening but the air seemed too cold for much snow. It was at 5 o'clock this morning when the present storm began. The weather at this time had moderated considerable and as the morning advanced the storm increased, so that at 8 o'clock a real snow storm was in progress.

It continued to snow all the morning, and the lack of a high wind made the snow fall even. At noon six or seven inches had fallen, and there were no signs of a let up. The snow was of the damp kind making it easy for the street railway to handle, and the street cars experienced but little difficulty. The no-school signal was sounded at 7.30 and again at 11.30.

At 2 o'clock it was still snowing, although the sky looked as though the weather might clear before night.

Should King George of England decide to adopt ancient customs at his coming coronation there will be some quaint and medieval ceremonies on that occasion. A nobleman of the manor of Heydon, in Essex, is entitled to the honor of bearing a towel for the king when the monarch washes for the banquet. The holder of the manor of Addington, in Surrey, is charged with the duty of serving a mess of gerout or dillegrout to the sovereign before the immediate formalities of the banquet are begun.

The chief butler of England, a post of no mean honor in spite of the title, has, according to a well established claim, the right to call upon the lord mayor and twelve citizens of London for such aid as is necessary on the great day.

Competition Is Great.

There were two distinguished claimants for the post of chief butler at the coronation of King Edward in 1902. One was the Duke of Norfolk and the other Lord Mowbray and Stourton. In presenting their claims to the office these men quoted the records of previous coronations for several centuries and produced musty court documents of great antiquity, which were submitted in proof of the righteousness of their contentions. The Duke of Norfolk is the premier duke of England and the most prominent Roman Catholic. He is also very wealthy.

The court of claims, which has to do with the settlement of procedure at the coronation function, is now in session. It is guided in its decisions by established precedent. The court dates back to the reign of Richard II., 1377, when John Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, the lord high steward, kept his court in Whitehall. Beginning with the coronation of Henry VIII., commissioners were appointed to decide the questions, and these commissioners were later succeeded by the court of claims. The only record of the court is the coronation rolls, on which the claims are set down in some detail.

At the coronation of King Edward there were three claimants for the honor of carrying the great spurs. The court refused to allow the claims of any of the three, leaving it open for the present court to restore the right to a claimant. Carrying the spurs meant more in the days when English kings were fighters than it does now. The king has plenty of spurs, but they are without the glamour which comes with victories in the field.

Many Rival Claimants.

Most of the claims of right were allowed subject to the king's approval, but in some cases there were rival claimants. For instance, both the Duke of Newcastle and the Earl of Shrewsbury claimed the right of supplying the glove for the king's right hand and supporting his majesty's right arm while he is holding the scepter, and the first named claim was allowed.

Three claims were made to the office of hereditary standard bearer of Scotland, the petitioners being the Earl of Lauderdale, Henry Scrymgeour Wedderburn and the Rev. R. C. Wedderburn. Mr. Wedderburn's claim was allowed, and he was commanded to attend the coronation and did so. The Earl of Lauderdale, however, challenged the decision by bringing an action against the successful petitioner in the court of session, Scotland. He succeeded there, but on appeal to the house of lords the question was decided against him.

Another interesting claim was that of the Walker trustees to exercise the office of usher of the white rod, which was bequeathed by Sir Patrick Walker, a former holder, and held by trustees incorporated by act of parliament. They were allowed to be present by deputy to be approved by his majesty. A partial revival of an ancient privilege was seen in the decision by which the barons of the Cinque Ports were allowed to carry a canopy over the king should his majesty be pleased to have a canopy.

MACHINE MADE PLUM PUDDING

English Housewives Need Not Make Trouble Any More.

English housewives may grow up in ignorance of the secrets involved in compounding the greatest of all English dishes, plum pudding, but science with its ingenious mechanism will keep the pudding supply up to the demand.

United States Commercial Agent John M. Carson writes from England that "plum pudding, so dear to the English heart and so trying to the average stomach," promises to become of sufficient importance in the foreign trade of the kingdom to be specifically named in official reports.

SIMS EXPLAINS DYNAMITE PERIL

Communipaw Disaster Probably Due to Freezing.

EXPLOSIVE IS VERY PECULIAR.

All Sorts of Pranks Can Be Played With It Under Certain Conditions. Hudson River and Its Mud Acted as Cushion For Railway Tubes, but Air Did Not Prevent Broken Windows.

W. Scott Sims, one of the most distinguished experts in high explosives in the world, inventor of the Sims dynamite gun, the Sims wireless torpedo, the Sims-Edison dirigible torpedo and many other methods of putting high explosives to use, believes the recent $1,000,000 explosion at Communipaw, on the New Jersey shore opposite New York city, in which thirty-four were killed and hundreds injured, occurred because some of the dynamite on the pier was possibly frozen. In this condition it is most dangerous, he claims, explaining it by saying:

"Under ordinary conditions you can break a stick of dynamite in two or drop it on any surface from even a great height and nothing will happen. Fresh dynamite is as safe as safe can be—except," added the inventor, with a smile, "when it isn't. Once in awhile it will go off even under the best conditions from some little shock which ordinarily wouldn't budge it, but usually new dynamite at a temperature above freezing is absolutely safe to handle in every way. Why, I've carried it around in my pocket, and so have all of us who live with explosives. I have even seen men touch a match to the end of a sliver of the stuff and light a cigar with it as it burns."

Freezing Causes Danger.

Mr. Sims explains, however, that freezing makes dynamite most unstable. The best grades, called gelatin, are composed of about 90 per cent nitroglycerin, 7 per cent guncotton and 3 per cent camphor. The dynamite on the Communipaw dock, thought Mr. Sims, was probably of a more common grade, usually employed for blasting.

"My idea of the explosion is that the man who were shifting the boxes from the car to the lighter grew a bit careless perhaps, as those of us who handle explosives always seem to do. Several of the boxes of dynamite may have been frozen, and if that is so a good jar in sliding one of them down to the lighter might have set it off. If the men had already knocked off work for the noon hour it might have been some other thing—a boiler explosion on one of the boats perhaps, but with the frozen dynamite getting the force of the shock, small as it may have been."

"How about the other car of the explosive on the pier that didn't blow up?" he was asked. "Isn't that peculiar?"

"Not at all," was the inventor's answer. "It is entirely normal and natural. It is very possible that only a few sticks of the stuff that did explode were frozen. The other carload, however, was probably at a normal temperature, and therefore even the force of ten or fifteen tons of it going up at even a little distance away didn't disturb it."

"How about the force of a big explosion?" the inventor was asked. "Why did the blast break windows all over Manhattan and still not disturb any building foundations or even shake the tubes under the Hudson.

Explosive's Force Is Great.

"Let me explain," he answered. "The force of any explosion is in the direction of least resistance. An explosion on the surface of the ground therefore exerts its greatest force up into the air, not down. Most people think the force goes down because they can see the hole in the earth. What they cannot see is the far, far greater hole in the air.

"One can realize what this force is by remembering that the pressure of a seventy-five mile an hour wind is only about two pounds to the inch. After this air wave comes a practical vacuum, racing behind it through space. This is what gets the windows, and this vacuum explains why glass falls out instead of in. The windows can stand the first onslaught—in Manhattan it might have amounted to five pounds extra to the square inch—but what they cannot stand is the sudden backward snap as the low pressure follows the first force of the blow.

"The tunnels under the Hudson did not feel the explosion primarily because its chief force was exerted up and out into the surrounding air; secondarily, because water itself in great masses is a good cushion, and, thirdly, because the tubes must lie under some fifteen or twenty feet of mud and slime on the river bottom, which is the best sort of a cushion in itself."

RED SOX LOSE FOUR

Jones' Tigers Do the Trick by Score of 1950 to 1864

The Tigers put it all over the King's Red Sox, the leaders of the Makaria league, on Monday evening. They took the first string by 15 pins, the second by 54, and the third by 17, giving them a lead of 86 on totals. Both teams did their best work on the third string, but the 175 by Lee Brooks won for the Tigers 680 to 663. The Tigers were the first team to take four points from the Red Sox.

MERKLE TELLS FOR FIRST TIME WHY HE DIDN'T TOUCH SECOND.

For the first time since that lamentable incident which lost New York the pennant in 1908 Fred Merkle, the Giants' first baseman, has given his side of the affair. Until recently he had never said a word, but it is known that he lost twenty pounds and came near to an attack of nervous prostration through worry caused by the national attack on his so called "bonehead" play.

"I'll tell you the truth about that play," said Merkle, "and I don't think that I was to blame, because other ball players had been doing the same thing for twenty years or more. I was on first base and Harry McCormick was on third. When Al Bridwell shot that long single into center that won the game I started across the grass for the clubhouse. Mathewson was near me, and when Evers began shouting for the ball he noticed that something was wrong. He caught me by the arm and told me to wait a minute. We walked over toward second base and Matty spoke to Emslie.

"'How about this, Bob?' asked Matty. 'Is there any trouble with the score or the play?'

"'It's all right,' replied Emslie. 'You've got the game. I didn't see anything wrong with the play.'

"Matty then took me by the arm and we walked away to the clubhouse."

During the hearing of that famous case Merkle was not called before the commission, and up to this time he has never said a word about the incident. On account of Harry Pulliam being present at the game evidence was not considered necessary.

Work of Board of Trade Reviewed by President Stone at Grand Banquet

Reciprocity Will Not Bring Immediate Relief Says Luce

The tenth annual banquet of the Quincy Board of Trade was the most successful in the history of the association. Over 200 were in attendance, and it would have been difficult to accommodate all if the weather had been favorable, for many tickets issued were not used. The speakers were ex-Representative Robert Luce, Senator George L. Barnes of the Quincy district, his predecessor, ex-Senator

EX-SENATOR SPRAGUE

Eugene H. Sprague; H. G. Smith, the general manager of the Fore River shipyard; ex-Mayor John O. Hall and President Stone. The blessing was asked by Rev. C. P. Marshall of the Quincy Point church.

While the guests were enjoying the following bountiful spread served by Whittemore, an orchestra on the platform rendered popular selections which were frequently encored:

Grape Fruit
Chicken Salad Lobster Salad
Roast Turkey
Hot Potato Cranberry Sauce
Croquettes with Peas
Banana Fritters
Celery Biscuits
Harlequin Ice Cream
Frozen Pudding Sultana Roll
Coffee

POST PRANDIAL.

President Stone thanked the guests for coming out such an evening, as he only expected to see half a dozen. He reviewed what the Board of Trade had been doing in its ten years which seemed to include all the prominent improvements which have been accomplished or agitated, namely: Abolition of grade crossings, new freight yard, new court house, reduction of railroad fares, new Hancock street bridge at Atlantic, free transfers on street railways, lower freight rates, ship canal to Naragansett bay, revision of telephone rates, better freight yard facilities for granite, lower gas rates, lower rates for electricity, etc., etc.

In fact the Quincy Board of Trade had been a very active body for quite a number of years. Today it is interested in the development of the water front, the establishment of a municipal dock, the proper solution of the grade crossing problem, a boulevard along the shore to Boston, the ocean mail bill, the widening of Washington street, etc.

Our population is small compared with the large area of the city, and it was important that Quincy should grow. We do not want annexation to Boston, but some form of federation or borough government might be of benefit to Real Boston.

Because of the weather and colds, Mayor Shea and other speakers were absent, but others have volunteered.

DOING GOOD WORK.

Ex-Senator Sprague who was first introduced told several "Down East" stories. He had compliments for Robert Luce, a colleague in the Legislature. As has been said, we need to get together in Quincy for there is nothing that 35,000 banded together cannot accomplish if they will. The Board of Trade has not been appreciated as it should be, for we have many examples of good work it has done and is doing.

Ex-REPRESENTATIVE LUCE

Senator Barnes reviewed some of the measures before the present Legislature, touching on the petition to regulate hat pins, defeated today; the bill relative to the taxation of bacheiors, and the bill to restrain drunkenness. All bills, however trivial, must be heard and reported in the Massachusetts Legislature which is different than in some other States and in Congress, but a custom and practice not to be lightly done away with. He could testify that the Quiacy Board of Trade had been active in affairs that concern Quincy; for example, the bill to widen the draw of the Fore river bridge, the bill relative to the new bridge over the Weymouth Back river which should receive government help, the new court house bill last year, etc. There has been splendid cooperation of the city officials, the Board of Trade, and others.

THE BOARD OF TRADE SHOULD NOT BE EXPECTED TO DO EVERYTHING IT NEEDS YOUR HELP

SHIPYARD APPRECIATED.

H. G. Smith said he had first attended the Board of Trade banquet seven years ago. At that time there was some doubt about town of the success of the Fore River shipyard. He was glad to note that the time had long passed of doubt. Today we find the Board of Trade taking an active interest in our success. In these seven years our hall numbers have advanced from 107 to 196, and we have done 35 to 40 million dollars worth of work. On an average 3,000 men are employed at a pay roll of $6,000 per day. He told of the success of Quincy built battleships, of the development of the Curtis turbines, and of the apprentice school which now include 54 percent Quincy boys.

Ex-Mayor Hall anounced a "Real Boston" meeting to be held at Colonial hall, Feb. 28, at which all would be welcome.

ROBERT LUCE

Was introduced as a future Governor of Massachusetts. He thanked the speakers for their kind remarks; as a private citizen he was trying to be of service where opportunity offered. He said he came to speak to the ladies. He had no sympathy with the fool bill to tax bachelors; taxes were levied for benefits received, therefore he would tax married men. He complimented the ladies for attendance on such a night, and in allowing their husbands to attend meetings of the Board of Trade. It was an era of combinations, of getting together and civilization has developed. The people are giving more and more time for public good. He hoped to see the Quincy board enrolled in the State Board of Trade.

THE MAN WHO THINKS THERE IS NO USE IN LIVING, IS THE ONE THAT'S MOST AFRAID TO RISK HIS LIFE IN ANY ENTERPRISE.

The "Real Boston" question should be considered. We should keep our local government for the control of local affairs but it was better to unite for good railroad service, telephone service, parks, health, fire protection, education, etc.

Mr. Luce, who was on the State commission last year to investigate the cost of living devoted most of his address to that theme. As he is an expert and always sincere his views were convincing. Those who favor reciprocity with Canada and those opposed, both exaggerate their case. We would not see any reduction in prices for at least twelve months if the reciprocity measure should prevail. Our investigation showed that the cost of living was as high in Canada as in the United States for the same quality of supplies. In Canada prices have risen faster than in this country. The facts are that the food supply has diminished because a much smaller percentage of the population is now engaged in agriculture. The value of reciprocity will come in years to follow when either country has a shortage in crops. In time, reciprocity should work out well; therefore he endorsed President Taft's program. We ought to have free access to food supplies whereever thy can be obtained. Protection worked out well relative to industries, but not to food supplies.

In our investigation of the cost of living, some said it was because of the tariff, others because of labor, others the trusts. It was none of the three. It was almost impossible to

VAUDEVILLE AT ST. JOHN'S

Unusually Interesting Program Presented by Matthew Ott

Many braved the elements to attend the refined vaudeville entertainment at St. John's hall on Tuesday evening. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the district one committee of the bazaar and was by far one of the best things of its kind ever presented in Quincy. The program was given under the personal direction of Matthew Ott, the well known Boston dramatist, whose home is in Wollaston. There was not a dull moment in the two hours' program, and it is safe to say that many would have remained longer.

The program opened with eccentric dancing by six young misses from the Walter Kee school of dancing. They were Misses Lindstedt, Keene, Wenneberg, Laurence, Birmingham and Pool. Their first number was a Japanese dance, and their second a Parisian dance. Both of these afforded excellent opportunity for fancy steps, and the young misses were as light on their feet as birds, several encores were demanded.

Miss Mildred Robert's Dunton in recitations immediately won a warm place in the hearts of her hearers. Her first number was a medley of selections from Mary E. Wilkins stories, being a study in characters. For her first encore she gave a sketch from a Salem street clothing store. It was a dialect story true to life. For her third number she gave a baby story.

IF YOU HAVEN'T ANYTHING ELSE TO BE THANKFUL FOR, BE GLAD THAT THEY HAVEN'T PUT A TAX ON OZONE

Perley McGregor in Hebrew and Italian dialect monologues, convulsed the audience with laughter.

Miss Bessie Pool gave a clever clown dance and Miss Lindstedt, assisted by Misses Birmingham, Poole, Laurence, Wennerberg and Keene, gave a dance, a la chanticleer, that was very laughable.

Lary Stedman and Nat Prescott in songs and stories were very clever. Their songs were "Kate McCree" and "The barn dance."

Both were original songs and well received.

The unique quartet composed of Miss Estelle Walker, Joseph Ecker, Arthur L. Willis and Frank H. Walker gave a number of selections, consisting of solos by individual members and quartettes. Miss Walker in her solo played her own accompaniment on the guitar.

Little Miss Clarice Cutcliffe gave several novelty dances that received a hearty encore.

The closing number on the program was a one-act farce written by Mr. Ott entitled, "The Gibson Girl." In the cast were Sam Walker, Leonie Dueth Parry, Suzanne Ott, and Matthew Ott. The farce was a very laughable one and the audience was convulsed with laughter throughout its presentation. It was brim full of funny situations, but like all stories came out all right in the end.

At the conclusion of the farce Mr. Ott sang "The chef song," assisted by the young ladies who appeared in the dances. In this song the chef told how to make raspberry pie, apple turnovers, sponge cake and mince pie.

The various assortment of things used in the composition of these well known articles of food were stickers to the ladies, many of whom doubtless pride themselves on being good cooks, and it is doubtful if they attempt to use Mr. Ott's recipe, but will stick to their own.

Mr. Ott thanked the audience for braving the elements that they might be present.

GREAT THRONG AT WEDDING

Services of Two Hundred Policemen Necessary to Hold Crowd In Check Near St. Bartholomew's Church—Wedding Dress the Most Costly Ever Worn In This Country—Gifts Under Guard In Gould Mansion

New York, Feb. 8.—Attired in the magnificent wedding gown of American make, in which as Lady Decies she will be presented to the court of King George V, Miss Helen Vivian Gould, the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, was married late yesterday afternoon to John Grahame Hope de la Poer Horsley Beresford, Lord Decies, of England, in St. Bartholomew's church.

Under a heavy guard of mounted policemen, Miss Gould left her home and was driven to the church. Lord Decies, who left the home of Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., who married Miss Marjorie Gould, declined a police guard which was offered him.

Thousands of persons thronged Madison avenue and the cross streets near the church and struggled to get near the main entrance of the edifice.

Two hundred policemen, most of them afoot, were detailed to act as a guard at the wedding. The bluecoats who were at the church had their own troubles, for a large part of the crowd was composed of women who insisted upon getting right up to the front.

Special trains brought in the last of the 3000 guests, making an assemblage more brilliant than any other which has gathered for a social affair this season. Among the guests were English nobles, titled Canadians and the leaders of American society.

Detectives were detailed to duty in the Gould home during the reception after the ceremony and others to protect the bride and bridegroom when they left the residence. Decies had met the threats against his life as a joke. Nevertheless, no precautions were spared to guard the party.

LADY DECIES AND ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S CHURCH

Miss Gould's wedding gown was the most costly wedding dress and perhaps the most brilliant ever worn by a bride in this country. It is of French white satin embroidered with pearl orange blossoms. The train, five and one-half yards long, is embroidered with pearls, and the gown is bound under the arms with another rope of rare pearls.

Scores of automobiles had been retained to bring in those who were to assist at the ceremony. Among those were the officiating divines, Bishop Greer of the Episcopal diocese of Long Island, Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, the boy choir of the Cathedral of St. John, the chorus of the Metropolitan Opera company and Ricardo Martin, the American tenor.

Lord Decies' best man was Lord Allstair Grahame, son of the Duke of Montrose, and the ushers were Earl Percy, Lord Camoys, Robin Grey, Phoenix Ingraham, Moncure Robinson, Robert W. Russell, Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., and Francis W. Crowninshield.

St. Bartholomew's church was a bower of flowers decked out in English ivy, southern smilax, palms and lilies, and there were great boughs of forsythia spring branches with their tiny yellow flowers. Trails of orange blossoms hung from the chandeliers.

Miss Gould gave a luncheon at the Gould home to her attendants, including Miss Edith Gould, maid of honor, and the following bridesmaids: Miss Louise Cromwell, Miss Hannah Randolph, Miss Allison Pierce, Miss Amelia Holmes, Miss Anne D. Graham and Miss Hope Hamilton.

The gifts were under guard at the Gould mansion. They consisted principally of rare jewelry. It is estimated that the gifts are worth upwards of half a million dollars.

A change in the honeymoon itinerary was announced when it was made known that Lord and Lady Decies would leave immediately for Jekyll island, Ga., instead of going to Egypt.

There was a change in the personnel of the bridal attendants for Miss Gould. Miss Beatrice Claflin is ill, and her place was taken by Miss Anne D. Graham.

Of course the ushers headed the procession, coming after the choir boys, and Lord Decies was waiting at the chapel steps for his bride, and was attended by his cousin, Lord Graham.

The musical service at the church was most elaborate.

The reception at the Gould residence, 857 Fifth avenue, followed the ceremony.

Three countries contributed to the making of the Gould-Decies wedding cake, and the story of this interesting international alliance is cleverly told in allegorical form.

TO KEEP FARMERS BUSY

Indiana Legislator Wants Line Fences Kept Clear of All Weeds

Indianapolis, Feb. 8.—That the shiftless farmer will have to "get busy" in at least one line of farm culture will be imperative if a bill introduced by Senator Lamont passes the upper house.

The measure provides for the cutting of all dock, burrs, thistles, shrubs and weeds along line fences between July 1 and Aug. 1 of each year. In case a farmer fails to comply with the provisions of the act the township trustee is empowered to do the work himself or hire it done and charge the cost up to the farmer.

Gatling Gun Placed Before Courthouse to Protect Accused Negro

Weston, W. Va., Feb. 8.—A Gatling gun, grimly commanding the main approach, was stationed before the Lewis county courthouse to prevent a mob attack during the trial of William Furbee, a negro accused of attacking Flora Anglin, a farmer's daughter.

Townspeople have threatened to lynch Furbee, and he was brought here under guard of militia from the Moundsville penitentiary.

BULLET IN HIS LUNG

Policeman Shot by Another Officer While Chasing Robbers

Boston, Feb. 8.—The condition of Patrolman Richard J. Gallivan, who was shot in the lung by Patrolman Patrick A. Hanley while they were chasing a gang of yeggs early yesterday morning, remains unchanged, though the doctors hold out brighter prospects for his recovery.

The shooting of the officer resulted from an effort on the part of the two officers to round up and capture four storebreakers, who had broken a window in the liquor store of Rabello & Co., 147 Federal street.

The men were in Milton place and one of the officers went around a building to head them off, and during the chase that followed, Hanley fired a shot at the storebreakers that accidentally went wide of the mark and lodged in Gallivan's breast.

The storebreakers were rounded up and sent to Station 2. They were afterward arraigned in court and held in $2000 bail each.

EGGS SHELLED A YEAR

Federal Authorities Make Another Heavy Seizure at Boston

Boston, Feb. 8.—Another large shipment of eggs from Chicago, claimed to be in violation of the pure-food law, was seized by United States Deputy Marshal Waters at the Boston and Albany freight houses. Dr. Smith of the pure food bureau is of the opinion that the eggs were removed from their shells more than a year ago.

The shipment, consisting of 34,000 pounds, was in cans and came from the headquarters of the Ford Howard company of Chicago, consigned to the local business place of that concern.

WOMAN ATTACKED BY LEOPARD IN THEATRE

Severely Lacerated Before Rescued by Attendants

Norfolk, Feb. 8.—Atacked by a leopard as she was about to do her act at the Majestic theatre, Mlle. Pauline, an animal trainer, had a narrow escape.

The beast sprang at her as she was entering the cage and before she was rescued her neck and face was severely lacerated. The audience became panic stricken and a stampede was averted with difficulty. Several women fainted.

Mlle. Pauline was rescued by attendants, who beat off the leopard with iron bars. She was severely injured.

Albany, Feb. 8.—Harry K. Thaw's appeal from the decision of the appellate division adverse to his contention that he is being illegally detained in the state hospital for the insane at Matteawan has been dismissed by the court of appeals. This practically sweeps away his last hope for release.

Mrs. Thaw, in her petition to the court, set forth that she believed "that the health and person of her son is in constant danger," and sought his release because of the "unprecedented and inhuman treatment of a sane, acquitted man in an institution for the criminal insane."

FAMOUS HOLIDAYS

Clever and Original Ideas For Feb. 14.

WASHINGTON BIRTHDAY FUN.

Amusements Suitable to Every Age. Flag Drill For the Children—Charades or Tableaux With Colonial or Revolutionary Subjects—A Unique Twenty Questions Game.

Cupid, that enterprising boy, has surpassed himself this year in the production of novel designs for valentines. Many of them, indeed, are remarkably clever and ingenious.

For instance, there is a new valentine that represents a trunk tied up with a big ribbon and bow of indubitable honeymoon significance. It is flat (being designed in perspective), but on being unfolded discloses a picture of Cupid himself inside.

Some of these valentines that unfold are quite wonderful—for example, one that shows on the outside the back of a little girl who is looking through a hole in a fence. When the outer leaf is turned back the face of the girl is seen. She looks very cross, and no wonder, for, on turning over the leaf that represents the fence, two other figures are disclosed—a small boy and another little girl who is being hugged! It was at this spectacle that the first little girl was peeping.

Another very clever idea is a valentine that smiles. It is likewise ingenious in a mechanical way. The design represents a huge daisy with a face in the middle. On a ribbon hanging beneath are the words, "You Are a Daisy." When this ribbon is pulled the face alters its expression entirely, the mouth expanding into a smile and the eyes opening with a bright expression.

Stunts For Washington's Birthday.

If you have an entertainment on for Washington's birthday and do not know how to amuse your guests here are several stunts suitable to every age.

For small children provide colonial uniforms for the boys and Martha Washington caps and fichus for the girls. These may be cheaply and quickly made from tissue paper, using the colonial colors, buff and blue.

Have a flag drill, using the flags of the thirteen original colonies. Train some of the older ones to dance the minuet.

If there are children who can sing teach them Revolutionary ballads and war ditties, which they may sing in costumes.

Equally good are charades or tableaux with colonial or Revolutionary subjects. These can be made great fun if impromptu. Washington crossing the Delaware, at Valley Forge, chopping down the famous cherry tree or leading the Custis children in the dance; the capture of Andre, Putnam's ride, with a hobbyhorse for steed; Moll Pitcher at her tasks—all would make good pictures easily guessed even by the young student of history.

For older people or children alike have an array of colonial flags numbered and give to each guest a blank card with corresponding numbers, in which is to be written the name of the state to which the flag belongs.

Pictures of well known colonial heroes and heroines should be pasted around the walls, each one numbered, for the guests to guess.

Have a historical "twenty questions" If your guests are not bored by such tests of wits and information. Consequences may be amusingly played by using well known historical characters in place of present company in answering the questions and making them do and say things utterly foreign to their times or dispositions.

There is a splendid interior arrangement, comprising eight rooms, a bath, a small den or sewing room, as well as a large pantry and entry. There is a side entrance into the dining room. The first story is finished in red oak or birch and the second story in pine to paint. There are birch floors throughout. Size twenty-six feet wide by thirty-four feet deep. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $4,000.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 927 for $25.

AVIATION BREAD.

Something New in the Airship Line For Housekeepers.

This is a newcomer in the culinary world—aviation bread—the graham-white variety.

For the white part soften three-fourths of a cake of compressed yeast in one-fourth of a cupful of water, mix thoroughly and add to one cupful of scalded milk cooled to a lukewarm temperature. Add also half a teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of butter and about three cupfuls of white flour. Mix with a knife and when enough flour has been worked in turn upon a floured board and knead until smooth and elastic, says the Boston Cooking School Magazine. Cover and set aside to become light. For the graham part soften one and one-fourth cakes of compressed yeast in one-fourth of a cupful of water and melt one tablespoonful of butter in a cupful of scalded milk. When cooled to a lukewarm temperature add one-third of a cupful of molasses, half a teaspoonful of salt, the softened yeast with the water, half a cup of white flour and sifted graham flour to form a dough that may be kneaded. When smooth and elastic cover and set to rise. When the dough in both bowls has doubled in bulk cut down and shape each into a loaf that will fit a bread pan. With a sharp knife cut each loaf in halves lengthwise. Butter two bread pans. Set half a loaf of graham and half a loaf of white dough in each pan. Press the two halves together side by side or one above the other. When nearly doubled in bulk bake about one hour. The graham bread rises more slowly, hence the larger quantity of yeast.

NEW CANADIAN RECIPROCITY BECOMES BIG POLITICAL ISSUE

United States, the Dominion and England Stirred by Agreement For Reduction of Customs Duties.

Democrats and Progressive Republicans Join With Liberals In Support of President Taft's Measure.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

CANADIAN reciprocity as agreed upon by President Taft and the Dominion government promises to be one of the biggest questions injected into American politics for many years. Already it is agitating the entire country, and especially that portion of it along the Canadian border, and is forcing new alignments in congress. There is serious doubt as to whether the president's recommendation will be approved by both houses at this session. It may not get through either house. The general opinion in Washington is that it will be passed by the house of representatives, however, and will be hung up without action in the senate.

Properly speaking, the agreement is not a treaty at all. It is simply a recommendation by the two governments that their respective legislatures enact into law certain tariff provisions affecting the two countries. The bill embodying these recommendations must take exactly the same course as any other tariff measure. In the case of our own congress this means that it must originate in the house and be passed by that body before it goes to the senate. A majority vote in each house will carry it to the president for approval.

If the understanding were really a treaty it would not go to the lower house at all, but would require ratification only in the senate, which would have to pass it by a two-thirds vote. Under the circumstances it is extremely fortunate for the reciprocity agreement that it is not a treaty.

Senate Doubtful of Status.

There was a question raised in the senate on this very point, and as a result the president's message was taken from the finance committee and referred to the foreign relations committee, which is the course a treaty would have to take. It was understood, however, that the foreign relations committee would simply pass on this one proposition, after which the measure would be returned to the finance committee.

As the matter now stands a majority of the Democrats favor the proposal and many of the Republican, including some of the insurgents, oppose it. Champ Clark, who will be speaker of the next house, came out flatfootedly for Canadian reciprocity, and most of his supporters cheered his declaration. In the senate William J. Stone of Missouri has taken a similar stand. Among the Republicans Hale, Heyburn, McCumber, Oliver, Young and other regulars are unalterably hostile to the proposal. Beveridge, progressive, is for it, but some of the other progressives are in an embarrassing position.

On the one hand, Canadian reciprocity represents a step in the direction of tariff reduction, which they have long demanded; on the other, it takes the tariff from wheat and other farm products. These men come from agricultural states. Their contention is that it is not fair to remove the tariff from the things the farmer raises and leave it on manufactured products. They assert that the only benefit the farmer will receive from the arrangement is cheaper lumber. They also fear that it will increase the exodus of American farmers into Canada.

Price Reduction Predicted.

The advocates of the measure say that it will reduce prices and at the same time make it more difficult to corner the necessaries of life, that it will build up the market for American goods across the border and that it will lead to better trade relations and more cordial feelings between the two countries. The railroads running into Canada and their connections in the United States are especially favorable to the agreement on the ground that it will increase their business.

Incidentally your Uncle Sam is somewhat doubtful also. Canadian trade looks good to him, and he needs or soon may need those vast wheatfields to help feed his millions. But when he thinks of his own farmers and wonders what the change will do to them the old man falls into a brown study.

There is one comforting thought. We are not the only ones in a quandary. The Canadians and the English are also doing a bit of thinking. The Conservatives in Great Britain are making a roar compared with which some of our own objections are mild. They see the loss of Canadian trade, the dearth of Canadian wheat, the stifling of Canadian industries and the entering wedge that may ultimately mean the annexation of the Dominion to the United States.

England "Jollying" Canada.

In this dilemma they welcome the selection of the king's uncle, the Duke of Connaught, as the new governor general of Canada. The Dominion is just now assuming an unwonted importance in their eyes. They are even feeding the Canadians with large and assorted varieties of verbal taffy. Here is a sample: In fifty years the Dominion may so far outstrip the mother country that the king himself will reside in Montreal. This sort of pabulum does not go far with the hard headed Canadian farmer, however. He smiles cynically as he reflects that in the past the Dominion has given Great Britain everything and has received in return nothing but three cheers.

The Liberals in England take a far more composed view of the situation. Many favor the proposal of Canadian reciprocity with the United States on the ground that it will be a step in the direction of freer trade. The same general alignment is observed among the Canadians themselves. The Liberals support the measure; the Conservatives oppose. As the Liberals are in control both at London and Montreal, the groanings of the opposition will probably have little effect on the outcome. It is not without significance that it should be the Conservatives in Canada and England who fight the proposition and the standpatters who are against it in the United States.

Many Important Reductions.

The articles made free under the agreement generally cover foodstuffs and the necessaries of life, including all kinds of live stock, grain, fresh vegetables and fruits, poultry, butter, eggs, fish and sea food, cottonseed oil, lumber and wood products, wire, some kinds of machinery, coke, wood pulp, print paper and other kinds of paper.

Articles not on the free list, but considerably reduced, with the same rates applying to both countries, include all kinds of meats, flour, clocks and watches, automobiles, farm machinery and building stone. Reductions are also made on bituminous coal and other articles, but with different rates between the two countries.

There is confusion as to the wood pulp schedule for the reason that some of the Canadian provinces require that timber cut from crown lands must be manufactured into wood pulp in the province. An effort will be made by the Canadian government to have these restrictions removed. John Norris, representing the American Newspaper Publishers' association, believes the agreement if ratified will materially reduce the price of print paper.

The part President Taft has played in the negotiations has been notable. It will be recalled that last year he spent a memorable two days at Albany in consultation with the governor general of Canada, the minister of finance and other Dominion officials. It was then that the general outlines of the agreement were fixed, the commissioners from the two countries afterward working out the details. Second to the president perhaps the most important figures in the negotiations were W. S. Fielding, minister of finance for Canada, and Philander C. Knox, American secretary of state.

The president's second big play was his special message to congress recommending the approval of the agreement. The third move was his McKinley day speech, in which he quoted the dead president's reciprocity sentiments uttered the day before his assassination in Buffalo.

Will Mr. Taft's next move be to call a special session of congress? He has intimated that he is prepared to take that step if there is not a vote on the proposition in both houses of congress during the present session. He believes that the longer the country has to think over the proposal the more it will favor it and that eventually the agreement will be ratified. There is no doubt that he is ready to make a fight for the measure similar to that which he conducted for his legislative program in the last session.

Success Seems Assured.

With the large Democratic accessions in both houses in the new congress there is a belief that the proposal must ultimately go through. At least a part of the progressives are certain to favor it, and it is even possible that a majority will take that course. In addition many of the regulars will also line up with the administration.

The exact status of the agreement seems to be this: It must be ratified as a whole or rejected as a whole. There can be no amendments. It must receive a majority in both houses of congress. The new Democratic house will pass it without question, and it is probable that the present house will do the same. So far as the attitude of the present senate can be arrived at, it is hostile. The new senate will be more favorable, the only question being as to whether there will be enough new accessions favoring the proposal to carry it.

There are two views as to the effects of Canadian reciprocity on American farmers. One is that the tariff on farm products is of little or no benefit to the farmer since he produces a surplus above the amount needed for home consumption and the prices received are therefore fixed in the markets of the world. Advocates of this theory believe that the adoption of Canadian reciprocity will have a negligible effect on our farmers. At the same time it will not materially reduce prices to consumers. It will tend, however, to prevent grain corners and stock market manipulations.

The other view is that the free importation of Canadian farm products will reduce American prices and will attract hosts of American farmers to the cheaper lands of the Dominion. Supporters of this idea aver that the only American beneficiaries of reciprocity will be the consumer, the railroad and the manufacturer. In the matter of

How one woman says a contemporary, must hate another woman when she speaks of her as "that thing."

"There's the rub!" The fair co-eds in the University of Missouri are being given a course in wash-tub work.

Manuel, formerly of Portugal, is to be paid $50,000 a year for not being king. Talk about sinecures.

Dr. Wiley the agricultural chemist says emphatically that he will retract nothing he has said about whiskey. Boil the whiskey!

We have no objection to an increase in the membership of the House of Representatives, provided its statesmanship capacity is increased also.

Missouri's legislature is in session without a single lobbyist in sight. There cannot be any important bills pending.

The person who asks, "What good has the board of trade ever done me?" should be answered by the question, "What good have you ever done the board of trade?" A man gets out of such an organization exactly what he puts into it.

The Sultan of Sulu is one foreign visitor that does not critise this country. He hastens to write President Taft upon his return to Jolo how delighted he was with his visit to the United States. The Sultan enjoys a snug little pension from Uncle Sam.

"What is the political situation throughout the country?" asks Brother Charles Bryan, editor of the Commoner," notes the Providence, (R. I.) Journal. Can't says exactly what it is, but we know what it isn't and that is Bryanish.

A Mansfield dealer in smokers supplies has got the right idea and setting an example to others to do likewise. In the past an array of pipes was displayed before the customer, and unconsciously the patron would put the stem of every pipe that appealed to him in his mouth and give a splendid exhibition of his method of smoking. When he found a pipe that had the right draw he would buy it. This practise was a custom and it took an unhappy, sloven, dirty looking man to impress upon the store owner that sampling of pipes was not the acme of cleanliness. He issued an order to his clerks to allow no more tests of pipe drawing. The customer may think he is buying a pig in the bag, but he can be satisfied that he is the first man to put the pig to test, and need have no fear of playing second fiddle or closing his mouth over thousands of hungry germs.

BUSINESS CONFIDENCE.

The big business men who have been shivering around with ear muffs and mittens ever since the railroad rate and trust cases have been pending, ought to feel more courage, since the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific executive committees voted to spend $75,000,000 in double tracking.

The timidity of some of our financiers often reminds us of a farmer whose extreme caution was reported to us during the hard times of 1907-8. He had made it a custom for years to buy a litter of two or three little pigs to fatten for the pork market.

But that year when the swine dealer came around, he had altogether lost his nerve. "Looks like hard times ahead," he groaned, "don't believe I'll take my pigs this year."

A moderate slackening of the restless business pace every few years in the long run promotes prosperity. If all our industrial enterprises run full time for several years, more manufactured goods are produced than our people have the money to buy. The reason is that a lot of people who would better be hoeing corn, are so dazzled by the profits reaped by successful manufacturers, that they rush into overcrowded lines of business, and enlarge the capacity of our factories beyond the buying power of our people.

But any sensible business man should know that no possible decision on the railroad rate and trust cases can undermine the value of securities that represent actual property, and not merely hopes of a future increment.

When the Northern Securities case was pending, the brokers skulked in their bomb proofs like the ground hog in his hole on a sunny Feb. 2. But after the decision was announced, it affected business life about as much as an explosion of stage gun powder.

Thus it will be with the coming important industrial decisions. There may be a new deal, but it will be more a matter of paper and names and corporate fictions, than of any change in the value of property, and the country's volume of production will be affected very little.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C. Feb. 3, 1911.

An extra session of Congress after the 4th of March is more than probable. Congress is pulling in several different directions. Certain Senators and members of the Lower House are kicking and balking. The lesson of the last congressional election is unheeded or misunderstood. Such a self-evident proposition as the desirability of reciprocity with Canada is opposed by a Senator from Texas and the Speaker of the House from Illinois and by a recently elected Senator from Massachusetts; and all of them have some backing in Congress. Senator Bailey of Texas and Senator Brown of Nebraska have both given the Senate to understand that they are itching to fillibuster, and it is evident that within the three short weeks remaining the appropriation bills cannot be passed without making concessions to recalcitrant elements in Congress.

The President wants a tariff commission. The Democratic majority that will control the House after March 4th wants no tariff commission, but wants to pass a tariff bill of their own invention and construction, though how they can do it with the Senate and White House in opposition, no man and not even any woman knoweth.

There is prospect of the passage of a homoeopathic parcels post bill. Well let us be thankful for small favors. For many years the monarchies of Europe have enjoyed an excellent parcels post bill, as have also some of the semi-barbaric nations of Asia. In fact, it seems that this blessing is possible in nearly all the despotisms of the Old World. But in our own despotism of interests with representatives in Congress it cannot be had. With forty thousand rural mail carriers with their pockets barely full of letters and newspapers, many of them driving carts or four wheelers, an excellent equipment for carrying packages of eleven pounds each to the farmers and other rural residents, this blessing necessary to country people and necessary to the Postmaster General in order to enable him to extinguish the postoffice deficit, is not attainable. It is too good for American citizens.

Reciprocity as the next thing to free international trade would be the next best thing in the world. With reciprocity, fleets and armies might be discharged, custom houses abandoned, taxes reduced to one-fifth their present enormity, and living expenses turned back to the minimum cost of our great-grandfather days. The reason this country is superlatively prosperous today is because of the unhampered reciprocity between the states. Then why not a little reciprocity with our good northern neighbors? Why? Because of Congress, politics and the devil. How long will Americans be beguiled with the lie that we are a free country when we are governed by a bedlam legislature body, many of the units of which are incapable of looking much beyond the little corners of the nation in which their several districts are situated.

But this is not the whole of the ugly truth. Many of them are under the influence and the pay directly or indirectly of the corporations that have contributed to send them to Washington. They are not the representatives of the people, but the attorneys of trusts who serve their masters by robbing the people. How otherwise could the United States be so long behind the monarchies of Europe and Asia in the enjoyment of a cheap parcels post? Give us reciprocity, give us a parcels post, give us free coal, free lumber, free wool, free raw material and free cooked material. Cease legislation in favor of interests. Discontinue the traditional Chinese policy now abandoned even by the Chinese of shutting out the rest of the world in order that internal robbers may unmolested play.

A statesman of the first magnitude has appeared on the horizon, and the nation is looking toward New Jersey.

There is prospect for the passage by Congress of a curfew law for the national capital. The people of that infested town are earnestly in hope that the law may retire cats as well as children.

KING'S DAUGHTERS

Brokenshire, State treasurer of Massachusetts of the International Order of Kings Daughters and Sons conducted the devotional exercises and gave the Kings Daughters service to eight new members. The service was beautifully and impressively given. The thought of the devotional exercises and of the service was taken from I Chron. 4:23. "There were the potters, and those that dwelt among the plants and hedges; there they dwelt with the King for his service."

In welcoming the new members into the circle Miss Brokenshire was assisted by Mrs. Farley.

The musical program of the evening was beyond criticism. Miss Laura R. Harrig, violinist, a pupil of Loesler and Mr. Frederic Kennedy tenor, soloist at the Rogers Memorial church Fairhaven, are both masters along musical lines, and it would be folly for one not well versed in music lore to attempt to criticize their contribution. Let it be sufficinet to say that the different selections gave one a feeling of perfect satisfaction. All of them were encored.

The musical program was as follows: Legende, by Wieniawski; Humorske, by Dvorak; Nordischi Soge, by Carl Bohm; and a mazurka by Minarski; were played by Miss Herrig. Because, by D'Hardelot; Absent, by Tirindelli; Mary, an old Scotch song, and, In a Garden, by Hawley, were rendered by Mr. Kennedy. Happy Day was given by Mr. Kennedy and Miss Herrig as a tenor solo with violin obligato. Mrs. Jennie Hocking Hunt acted as accompanist for all the selections.

Mrs. Bernard P. Raymond, State secretary of Rhode Island, was the speaker of the evening. She expressed her pleasure at being asked to participate in the service of the largest circle in Massachusetts. Her subject was "Memories of King's Daughters." The founding of the International Order by Miss Margaret Bartome was touched upon briefly. On January 13, 1886, ten consecrated women, with Miss Bartome as leader founded the first circle "In His Name" and ever since it has been growing wonderfully. Not long after its foundation, it became International, since circles were formed in Canada. The secret of its success lies in the religious basis and in the fact that it is inter-denominational, knowing no sectarian or social lines. The good deeds are done the kind words spoken the smile is given, by all of us but the thing that makes them count is that the deed, the word, the smile are In His Name. The daughters of the King came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and wherever a little silver cross is seen you know that some good work is being accomplished by its bearer. In conclusion, Mrs. Raymond offered as her prayer that Kings Daughters throughout the length and breadth of the land might do greater and better work In His Name.

WASHINGTON.

No gilded dome swells from the lowly roof to catch the morning or evening beam, but the love and gratitude of united America settle upon it in one eternal sunshine. From beneath the humble roof went forth the intrepid and unselfish warrior, the magistrate who knew no glory but his country's good. To that he returned happiest when his work was done. There he lived in noble simplicity; there he died in glory and peace. While it stands the latest generations of the grateful children of America will make this pilgrimage to it as to a shrine, and when it shall fall, if fall it must, the memory and the name of Washington shall shed an eternal glory on the spot.—Edward Everett.

Hints For Housekeepers.

To clean rusty and blackened knives use half a raw potato dipped in brick-dust.

Do not use a brass kettle for cooking until it is thoroughly cleaned with salt and vinegar.

Tumblers which have contained milk should first be rinsed in cold water before washing in hot water.

Never put meat directly on the ice, but always on a plate, as direct contact with the ice will destroy its flavor.

Granite ware should not be left to dry over a hot fire, as the heat in expanding may cause the outside to scale.

Fish, lemons and cheese or any strongly flavored food should not be placed in the same compartment with milk and butter.

When material is being dyed it should be stirred well. This allows the dye to penetrate to all parts alike, thus producing an even shade.

To take out dye stains from the hands use cornmeal, pumice stone or fine sand or a little chloride of lime in water. Many stains can be removed with vinegar or lemon juice.

RESIGNATION IS DEMANDED

Treasurer of City of Taunton Is Under a Cloud

SHORTAGE SHOWN IN BOOKS

Accused Man Says Several Persons Had Access to Cash and Opportunity to Alter Books In His Department—Has Been Interested In Several Enterprises Which Have Proved to Be Falures—City Council Backs Mayor

Taunton, Mass., Feb. 8.—Following a special audit of the city books, conducted by James T. Swan of Boston, Mayor Wood of this city sent a letter to City Treasurer Edward H. Temple, demanding his immediate resignation. It was stated that a discrepancy of approximately $5000 between the cash books and books of warrants and abatement were discovered in the investigation, which has been progressing two weeks.

Admitting that there may be ground for criticism of the system of the work, Temple declares there was no wilful dishonesty in his department. He said that several persons have had access to the cash account and have had a chance to handle the money. The city treasurer said that employes in the office had the opportunity, if they so desired, to alter the books.

Upholding the action of Mayor Woods in requesting the resignation of Temple, the city council last night adopted without dissenting voice an order declaring vacant the office of city treasurer and collector of taxes and "removing for cause" Temple.

Temple has been treasurer of the city of Taunton for fifteen years. His salary is $2500 a year. He has a beautiful summer home at Point Independence. He has a yacht and an automobile. He has just ordered a new touring car.

Temple was formerly president of the Taunton Safety Deposit and Trust company, which failed while the city had $30,000 deposited in it.

Temple was one of the directors of the Taunton theatre, an enterprise which flourished a few years ago and then went upon the financial rocks. This was his first financial disaster.

Then the Safety Deposit and Trust company was formed and Temple took the presidency. The trust company went into the hole as has been described.

Next he was made president of the Taunton Ice company. The ice company went bad, too, and Temple, it was learned, had been heavily loaded with thousands of dollars' worth of stock.

At about this time he was compelled to get an advance of his salary for several months. It is also learned that one year ago the city treasurer quietly took the poor debtor's oath, and yet within a few months had bought his first automobile.

He belongs to several clubs and secret societies and was probably the best dressed man in town. Temple is about 50 years old. Originally he had been a street car conductor.

BOARD OF TRADE

separate good and bad trusts. Drastic legislation does no good. The Canadian idea for regulation of monopolies by publicity should be adopted. It provides the machinery to put in motion an inquiry, and as a penalty takes away patent rights and protection. It is the people who create public opinion. Quincy has had leaders. I recall the temperance work of the late Henry H. Faxon and his successor Delcevare King, also the work of Eva Brown; they are known throughout the State. Women share in creating public opinion. Only as we hold high these old traditions of Masachusetts will the state preserve its exalted place.—(Applause.)

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

With next Tuesday's meeting the Quincy Women's club enters upon the last half of its season's program. So far an entertaining program has been presented and the calendar indicates more to come. In March Miss Elizabeth Pooler reads the play "Miss Hobbs" and also occurs Federation day when the State President Miss Bacon and many club presidents will be guests of the club. In April a man prominent in the affairs of our country Hon. Louis Brandeis is to speak and the season ends this year with an election which always interests.

The speaker on Tuesday will be Madame Mary Hallock who is to speak on, and illustrate good music and bad music. A social tea will be served.

Notices have been sent out by the Philanthropy committee to the various charitable and brotherhood organizations of the city to see what each would do toward the support of a paid secretary. One is much needed that the charitable work of the city be done systematically and not overlap. It is hoped the response will be generous and prompt.

The current event lecture will be given tomorrow afternoon by Mrs. Ward at three o'clock at the clubhouse.

ADAMS CHAPTER.

Adams Chapter Daughters of the Revolution were most hospitably entertained on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Oakes A. Bridgham, South Braintree, she and her sister Miss M. E. Potter being the hostesses for the meeting. There was a good attendance of members from Quincy, Randolph and Braintree as members always enjoy the Braintree meetings.

The usual business was carried out after which there was a short miscellaneous program. Miss Annie K. Dyer gave a bright monologue and there was a contest in guessing the kind of cake certain people would enjoy eating. Naturally the housekeepers were quick with their answers and five were correct and had to guess again to prove which was the better the winners receiving pretty souvenirs.

Sandwiches, cocoa, cake and ices were served by hostesses bringing to a close a most enjoyable meeting. Pots of tulips and daffies in all the rooms made Mrs. Bridgham's home seem springlike although the snow was falling outside and it was undoubtedly midwinter.

MRS. PERRY STARKWEATHER.

Club women who were disappointed because an accident prevented Mrs. Starkweather of St. Paul, Minn., from delivering her lecture at the State Federation meeting on Friday afternoon will be interested to know something about her work in Minnesota as told by Nan Russell Dunnigan in the following article:

"Minnesota's foremost feminine citizen." That is what those who know of her great work in the North Star state call Mrs. Perry Starkweather, assistant commissioner of labor of the state of Minnesota and head of its department of women and children.

Four years ago the late Governor John A. Johnson, appreciating the interest which Mrs. Starkweather had always taken in things which pertained to the welfare of the woman and child in industry, appointed her to investigate the conditions that surrounded them and recommend legislation for their benefit. For two years she devoted herself exclusively to this work. She traveled from one end of the state to the other. Places where women and children were employed she visited, inspected and scrutinized. No phase of the industrial or economic problem escaped her. The conditions which she found were such as would be expected in a state where women factory inspectors were unknown.

But most of all her work brought her to see the necessity of a department where women and children might come for relief from conditions which they shared with others as workers, or for advice, direction or help as individuals. Her idea was to make this department a clearing house for the troubles which beset the woman and child in industry, as well as a place where any and every information concerning children and women at work in Minnesota could be catalogued and recorded. Much has been heard of the "National Children's Bureau," the establishment of which the government has long contemplated. In its department of women and children the state of Minnesota has already organized such a bureau and is fast perfecting it.

Having gathered her statistics, Mrs. Starkweather went before the state legislature in 1909 and presented her plan. "You protect your fish and game and live stock,' she said, "are not your daughters, the mothers of the coming generation, worth as much to you?" The department of women and children was created and she was placed at the head of it.

This department consists of Mrs. Starkweather and four women factory inspectors, whose duties consist of more than mere factory inspection. They follow up the work of the factory inspection with personal visits to the homes of the workers and thus come in touch with other than the laboring side of their lives. In this way they are not only in a position to assist the working girl in time of trouble and sickness but they also gain a greater insight into the industrial conditions as they affect the individual.

In the case of a child who is removed from an industry, his home life is investigated and if it is found that it is not absolutely necessary for him to work, he is compelled to attend school. If a school permit is granted such work is obtained for him as will not overtax his strength. In this way child loafing, which is often caused by removing a child from industry, is completely done away with in this state. The following up of cases and the help which is accorded the individual is looked upon by Mrs. Starkweather as the most important phase of her work. Not to be a factory inspecting machine, but to be a human being and give such human aid as is possible, is the idea of this broad-minded and big-hearted woman of the middle west, and her idea is said to be the latest thought of social service workers.

Although this department is but one year old, 2,618 places have been visited where women and children were at work and in every instance general conditions have been improved. Medical attention, dental work, legal services, attention of oculist and aurist have been secured for needy girls. In three instances girls who died away from home and friends were saved from the potter's field and given a respectable burial by this department. Money has also been secured to send dependent girls back to their homes. Five thousand and fifty-three children were placed in school throughout the state and a school census taken in one of the larger cities involved 6,657 children. This was done to get exact data on child labor and child loafing. In one city a night school was started with 130 pupils. This year it has been continued by the local board of education.

Mrs. Starkweather believes that both the moral and industrial problem would be largely solved if girls were kept in their homes until they were old enough to be safely self-supporting. To aid in this work and protect the young girl who comes to the city for employment she has had signs printed and, by the courtesy of the railroad companies, hung in every railway station in Minnesota. According to Miss Simms, national president of the Young Woman's Christian association, the display of these signs is the most far-reaching idea ever conceived for the protection of the unsophisticated girl.

"Teach your girls to be home makers, prepare them for wifehood and motherhood; educate them toward the home, not away from it," is the advice Mrs. Starkweather invariably gives when speaking to a gathering of women. She is one of the most brilliant orators in the state. She has a magnetic personality and a charming stage pdesence. This coupled with a rare sense of humor and the ability to tell a dialect story with professional finish makes her delightful on the lecture platform. With a complete knowledge of her subject she is sincere and convincing. She addressed the last biennial convention of woman's clubs at Cincinnati, and was one of the few women who spoke before the conservation congress which was held at St. Paul, She also addressed the New York Federation of Women's Clubs at Ithaca in November and will speak before the clubwomen of Boston and Baltimore in February.

Mrs. Starkweather has been active in public life in the northwest for the past ten years. Her first important civic work was in obtaining a building at the Minnesota State Soldiers' home at Minnehaha Falls, for the care of old soldiers and their wives. At that time Mrs. Starkweather was chairman of the Soldiers' home committee of the Woman's Relief corps. Not only did it seem the quintessence of cruelty to her, to separate old couples at the very sunset of their days, but it was impractical from an economic standpoint. If the husband was cared for by the state at the Soldiers' home, the county in which the couple lived would be obliged to make provision for support of the aged wife. Planning carefully Mrs. Starkweather obtained by the courtesy of a telephone company a long-distance telephone in her residence. When not engaged in making pies or darning socks the telephoned the different county commissioners. In this way she reached and had a personal talk with every county commissioner in the state. The result was that the legislature appropriated $75,000 for the home. She later obtained $10,000 to furnish it. It now stands a monument to the zeal of this capable and energetic woman.

Mrs. Starkweather comes of illustrious New England stock. On her paternal side she is related to both the Whittier and Emerson families. She has a family of grown children and her duties as wife and mother always come first in her plans.

"I am a mother and a step-mother and a step-grandmother," she often says, "and then there are my adopted children, and no matter what life has held for me its sweetest pleasures have come from 'mothering.'"

STATE FEDERATION MEETING.

At the meeting last week in Boston, one of the principal speakers was Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York, who made a plea for the children in his subject "The Newer World for the Child."

"The first right or a child is to be well born," he said. "No child is well born whose father is underpaid or whose mother is overworked before and after its birth. No child is well born who is born into a home which has not been fitted for its coming; whose parents have not consciously and earnestly prepared themselves for the sacred duties. Childhood has a right to be well housed and ought not to be compelled to dwell in death-dealing tenements. Hundreds of children in New York alone are damned to life.

"The Genesis of the playground is the Exodus of the gang. No right of childhood is more important than the right to play. No state is worthy the name which will deny the growing children such pleasures. Every child who labors is denied the right of childhood. The first right of a man is to work; that of the child is not to work. The state must be radical in dealing with the life of a child. It will put away the uncertain and tinkering methods. Some day a wise state will introduce a system of child pensions or child bounties, which would really be home pensions, and thus maintain the home and leave a sole parent to keep the family together. Some homes of multi-millionaires ought to be broken up for the better safety of the state, but to doom a woman widowed through industrial inevitability to part from her children is a consummate cruelty on the part of the state. Tuberculosis is like war; anti-social disease and yet 35 out of 100 women applying for aid to a certain society last year were widowed by it, and the state must help pay the penalty. Stop sweating of women and men workers and you will stay this deadly plague. Signs prohibiting spitting will not do it.

"Child-labor protection ought to be national; not sectional. Sixty-six hours a week is the programme for many children. We sent money to the south, built up an industrial order and asked a bonus, in the lives of little children. Well may the words of Theodore Parker, the great apostle of freedom, come to mind: 'Thy money perish if it destroy thy soul!' Northern capitalists are guilty of what Professor Ross has called wireless sin. The south is becoming, alas, a dumping ground for northern capital, and it is unconsciously taking its revenge in crushing out the lives of little children. Democracy and religion and a new conscience must unite to save the child for itself. Child-labor is to be immediately repressed and ultimately suppressed, that justice may be done them as individuals. It ought to be abolished not so much for the safeguarding of the republic, but rather because of the duty of the republic to safeguard its children."

Dr. Wise took occasion to speak in warm praise of the great army of public school teachers who are carrying on such a mighty work for the children. The school, he declared, must help to liberate each individual mind. Instead of petting and coddling the "dear little infant industries," more time ought to be spent in considering the welfare of human beings, who are often slaves of industrial wrongs. In closing he quoted Longfellow's "Children's Hour," and said that the present age is "between the dark and the day-light," when little children are beginning to get the rights which properly belong to them.

INSTALLED BY QUINCY MAN.

A novel feature was introduced at the big meeting in Boston Tuesday evening held under the auspices of the Real Estate Exchange. President Taft was unable to be present at the banquet, but telephone connection with the White House was secured and seven men seated at the head table, with receivers at both ears, heard the message sent by the Chief Executive. This was the first time anything of the kind had ever been attempted in Boston, but it worked very successfully none the less. The circuit was installed and operated by Ernest E. Sodergren of Quincy, councilman from Ward Six. Mr. Sodergren is an expert electrician connected with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co., and the fact that he was chosen to do the work in this instance speaks well for his ability and the confidence which the telephone company has in him.

—The Boy Scouts of America may be so organized and trained as to take advantage of the instinct to work in gangs, which often becomes pernicious, and elevate it to a high place in education. To make of an active boy a useful man it is necessary to cultivate the instinct of obedience, the love of order, a prejudice in favor of cleanliness, both of body and mind, and a great desire to become a useful and active member of the community. Now the Boys Scouts may be so organized as to take advantage and put to use all such things as go into the training of newsboys, messengers, sailors, soldiers, and all those who are subjected to discipline. One of the great benefits of the Masonic and other fraternal orders comes through the discipline which is given to every member of a lodge. The Boy Scouts may be trained to a pernicious form of militarism but this is no necessary part of their education and in America will not form any probable part of it.—The Christian Register.

WORK BY PAST GRANDS

They Fill All Chairs at Initiation of Mt. Wollaston Lodge

Tuesday night was "Past Grand's night" at the meeting of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows. That is every chair was occupied by a past grand. These officers worked the initiatory upon one candidate in an unusually impressive manner. Music during the degree was furnished by a quartet composed of Richard Bishop, Archie Parsons, Charles Vauner and Charles Prout. There was also a solo by Charles Prout. Many of the officers who officiated during the work of the degree were brothers who in other years had obtained considerable prominence by the excellence of work they performed in their particular office. The past grands to officiate at the work were:

Noble Grand—Abel S. Gomez.
Right Supporter—Charles F. Harwood.
Left Supporter—Alexander Shirley.
Vice Grand—William Patterson.
Right Supporter—John W. Nash.

ALL READY FOR CAMPAIGN

Big Metre Raised Today by the Y. M. C. A.

Things are booming at the Y. M. C. A. getting ready for the big campaign which opens Thursday night with a banquet to the workers and interested friends. The teams are being made up rapidly and will be announced on the opening night.

The "Big Metre" goes up today and shows the goal "$5,000 in three days." The Taunton Y. M. C. A. has just raised $41,000 for their work in a 10 days' hustle and still the good work goes on.

F. W. Ganse, who is to be the chief speaker here Thursday night, has helped set up three such campaigns. He made the principal speech in Montreal two years ago when they raised half a million. He did the same trick in Manchester, N. H., and in his home town Newton later, when they raised over $150,000 in each city. He knows his job and can get his audience. All who hear him will have a treat. If you haven't sent in your acceptance do so now.

BRAVE OFFICER.

Officer Sandberg of the Boston police force ,who is a brother of Councilman Edward J. Sandberg, was one of the officers concerned in the arrest of the four men on Milton place, Boston, Monday night, during which Officer Gallivan was shot. Officer Sandberg was on duty on Summer street, and was sent by the Sergeant Laffey to assist officers Gallivan and Hanley when they were notified of the trouble. Almost single handed he covered two men while he captured a third.

NEW COMMODORE.

At the annual meeting of the Wollaston Yacht club held Tuesday evening in Brasee hall, Louis E. Crosscup was chosen commodore for the ensuing year. Frank W. Taylor was elected vice commodore, Arthur N. Potterton, the secretary, F. W. A. Schultz the treasurer, J. Walter Coombs, member of executive committee for three years, and Bert Seymour, a member of the executive committee for two years.

The flagship of the fleet will be the Corneta. Vice Commodore Taylor's yacht is the Leda. It was the intention of the executive committee to have the cups won during the season publicly awarded at the meeting, but owing to the small attendance the ceremony was deferred until a later meeting.

SCARLET FEVER WAS FATAL

Takes an Only Child Who Was Sick Only Four Days

A very sad occurrence took place in Wollaston on Tuesday, when little Leland Shunk, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert C. Shunk of Safford street, died of scarlet fever after an illness of four days. The little fellow was playing about happily on Thursday of last week, when he suddenly felt sick. He was put to bed and the doctor was summoned when he grew worse. A consultation was held on Monday and every effort was made to save his life, but the struggle was fruitless, and the boy died at 10.30 Tuesday morning. Owing to the nature of the sickness it was necessary to have the funeral at the earliest possible moment. A simple service was conducted by Rev. Joseph A. Walther and the burial took place at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The loss is a very heavy one, not only to the parents, but also to the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Leland, for he was an only grandchild. Leland was always a bright and cheerful little fellow and a source of great pride to all who knew him. He had attended the Wollaston kindergarten.

The loss will be mourned by many friends of the boy and of those who have been bereft. Mr. Shunk, who is the well known newsdealer of Wollaston, is the centre of a wide circle of friends, who are extending their deepest sympathy to him and to Mrs. Shunk in the midst of their affliction.

"Like the snow so pure and white,
Such was little Leland's life
He has gone to God who gave
Who alone our lives can save."

QUINCY POINT DEBATE.

World reciprocity with Canada be a benefit? Is the subject for debate at the meeting tonight of the Men's club of the Quincy Point church, and two gentlemen competent to handle the subject have been secured, so that it promises to be of unusual interest. P. J. Conlan of Dorchester, recommended by Col. Clark of the Home Market club, will speak for protection, and George Biddle of the Harvard Law School will favor the free trade side.

BRAINTREE DEATH.

George W. Osgood, a well known resident of South Braintree died at his home 137 Franklin street Feb. 7. Mr. Osgood was a member of Delta lodge A. F. & A. M., Pentalpha chapter, Royal Arch Masons, South Shore commandery, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is survived by a widow, a son and a daughter.

A Kitchen Convenience.

There is a new device for the kitchen which is most convenient. It is a neat nickel plated bender to attach to the faucet, and as the hot water passes through it you have a most perfect suds always at hand. It can be so arranged as to turn on and off so that you can get the clear water for rinsing, but there is no trouble about having to "make" suds. Moreover, it saves soap, for every particle is utilized, and even the smallest rims can be placed in the "maker" and answers the purpose as well as does a whole bar otherwise used.

A MOTHERHOOD CLASS.

In an English school they have added to the curriculum a class which may be called "mothering, practical and theoretical." A real, live baby has been engaged as the "subject," while a trained nurse from one of the hospitals explains to the pupils the best way to bathe and clothe it and generally how to be a good mother.

Girls must be 17 or over to enter this class. Each girl takes her turn in looking after the baby, a plump little girl, aged 13 weeks. Every little duty which the careful mother has to attend to in the home is taught the girls by the trained nurse. How to bathe the baby, how to cut out and make clothes for it, how to mix foods, scientific feeding and hygiene, cooking for the home and how to detect illness. They are taught to distinguish the the "teething" cry from the "stomach" cry, the "pin" cry from just plain temper.

That all this is valuable training even the old-fashioned ones must admit. Our schools are turning out thousands of girls every year that are in no essential fitted for matrimony. Every woman should know about the care of babies, whether their own or those of some one else.

LYNN PHILANTHROPY.

The reported intention on the part of a Lynn charitable organization to establish a loan agency in philanthropic competition with what are known as "mortgage loan sharks," is neither new nor novel. Wherever these remedial loan agencies have been started, they have promoted in gratifying degree the helpful ends of their promoters. Not only in the excessively high rates which are charged by the "sharks" but as well in the extortionate fees demanded for the making out of necessary papers, are victims of these Shylocks financially bled. And such is the hold which the later oftentimes secure upon their unfortunate clients that the original loan is paid over and over again in so-called "interest charges."

The practical philanthropy which seeks to protect men and women in the manner described has been able, through legitimate charges, to earn a fair return upon the money devoted to these loans. What has been done in other cities in thus seeking to protect unfortunate persons from merciless extortion can be repeated in Lynn. At the rate at which the "sharks" have been increasing, calls upon them must be large and growing in volume. In the light of this fact, the more the assurance that the practical philanthropy here discussed will be successful, once it is put into operation.—Salem News.

WORN IN NEW YORK.

The New Short Coats—The Vogue of Volle—Cord Girdles and Trimmings.

Half the writers on things sartorial begin by saying that there is nothing new in fashions at this time of year, when the fact is that advance models are all prepared and only the trying out is needed to see which modes will catch on.

THE NEW SHORT COATS.

Very freakish in line and makeup are many of the new short coats that appear as part of the suit or as an extra wrap to be worn with numerous frocks. Of these latter the coat of black satin is the leader not only for its smartness but for practicality. A skirt to match will convert this into the satin costume that introduced last fall promises to be a leading mode for smart street suits this Spring. These are successful only when made of very good quality material. The wide wool backed satins are particularly suitable and trimmings of braid, or of fancy designs outlined in silk cord are the first choice.

THE BUTTON CRAZE.

Buttons of all sorts are used for the trimming effects quite as much as for fastenings and embroidered buttons and those covered with various materials vie with fancy designs of metal, pearl, and mock jewels to emphasize a line, or give a note of style to an otherwise simple garment.

CORD GIRDLES AND TRIMMINGS.

Cords of all sorts play an important part in garnitures both for millinery and dress. Girdles of cord in metal, jet, or silk have been a leading favorite of this winter, and the new gowns of cotton voile and linen show an even greater use of the cord, not only for girdles, but as trimmings for both bodice and skirt where they are employed braid fashion, in striking designs and contrasting colors. Beads of all sorts are used with such designs, those of wood variously colored being newest and quills such as the Indians use in their embroideries, are a very novel feature seen on the gowns that will be worn at Southern Resorts for the next few weeks. The cords for girdles are the heavy upholstery sorts, and those for braidings one fourth as heavy but loose twisted. In many cases the strands are separated and couched onto the goods with matching or contrasting threads.

SLIPS OR LAWN AND SILK.

Slips of lawn are quite as much used as are those of silk, in fact with some materials the lawn produces a better effect, and all the host of mercerized and half silk weaves make the most desirable sort of under slips. One can procure any desired shade in these while the texture is exactly right for the straight clinging lines of present day modes.

ORIENTAL COLORINGS.

The Oriental colorings and types of design, used in embroidering dresses and "tops" is, if anything, more pronounced than ever in the new models which are saved from garishness only by the delicacy of their white or tinted back grounds. The kimono cut sleeve is universal. One sees hardly a model where the sleeve is cut entirely separate from the body of the garment. This lends itself especially well to bordered materials, and to embroidered flouncing and lace insertions. Waists of all over embroideries with the long shoulder line carried down on the sleeve by some sort of a trimming band are very stylish and becoming.

THE HIGH CUT SKIRT.

The raised belt and high girdle effects are evidently to be prolonged through the summer, and Eton trimming effects as well as the little jackets themselves in loose kimono style are decidedly "it" once more. The liking for very strong color contrasts manifests itself in waists that blend rather than match coat and skirt suits. Where color harmony has been for so long the proper caper, one now sees vivid contrasts which are somehow brought together by the girdle which goes with each.

HAT PROPHECIES.

Very coarse straws in curious color blends which require little trimming are in the new showing. Very high crowns and almost no rims contrasting with saucer shapes that are all rim and no crown to speak of. Willow plums are passe, while made trimmings of silk, velvet or lace are as usual to the fore at this time of year.

Lucy Carter.

WINDOW DRAPERY.

There is just as much art in the hanging and draping of window curtains as there is in selection of materials to be used. For when the lines of the panes are long, and the frame is broad, treatment should be wholly different from that given to a "cottage" window, or the effect will be grotesque.

In the latter there must be dainty plaits and twists, while the former must be formal.

For a formal drawing room, such as is usual in a town house, draperies should be heavy, and they must hang straight to the floor. Whatever of lightness is introduced comes in the under set, which should be of lace or net.

If thin draperies are ruffled at the edges, they may be looped back. To permit them to hang straight would give an unfinished appearance. But unless the ruffles are decidedly scant, the "pull backs" must be placed high for grace. When the under curtains are thin they should be, as a rule, short, not coming below the sill. When they do hang to the floor the pullback must be low, just above the sill itself. When short and with full ruffles, the pull should be four or five inches above the top line of the bottom sash. The proportion is better maintained at such angle.

If short curtains, by which is meant those coming only to, or just below the sills, are employed, and they are ruffled, the edges must be twice as full as usual, if they are to have grace. Less than that appears scant. In looping that back the upper edge is to be pulled out a little so that instead of hanging back in a sharp angle they will scallop, as it were.

Such draperies are never to have any more stiffening than is required to give them a little body.—Portland Express and Advertiser.

FOR CHAPPED HANDS.

Dissolve thirty grains of borax in two ounces of extract of witch hazel, add one-and one-half ounces of glycerine and one ounce of cologne. Add a little oil of rose to perfume. Mix one and one-half ounces of glycerine with two ounces of the thick mucilage made by soaking Irish moss in cold water, and stir this slowly into the first mixture.

BREATHING THROUGH MOUTH.

If girls could be made to realize the ill effects on both health and looks, of bad breathing they would instantly strive to acquire the habit of breathing correctly. It is difficult to overestimate the harm that mouth breathing does.

The girl who breathes through her mouth doubtless considers that she has merely formed a bad habit. She gives it no more serious thought than to hope she does not snore!

But it is a habit that if continued will surely lead to disease. Not only does it bring upon one the annoyance of a dry, irritated throat, it also plays havoc with one's looks, and if girls cannot be made to realize its dangers in regard to health, they may perhaps be persuaded to see its harmful effect upon beauty.

The girl who is a habitual mouth breather is prone to have a sallow, leaden complexion, eyes that lack lustre, skin that is heavy and rough, wrinkles and nerves, not to mention a brain that is insufficiently nourished!

The digestive organs, the lungs, the muscles, the heart, and the skin are all bound to suffer from the effect of bad breathing. It is said that even one's teeth are damaged by it. Why, asks the girl who has a passion for reasoning, should so many ills result from one poor little habit, bad though it is?

Because to breathe properly is one of the most important functions we have to perform. If we fail in this then the entire body suffers in consequence. The whole of respiration is not contained in the mere taking of air into the lungs and then breathing it out again.

Once the air reaches the lungs the oxygen is distributed through their lining and taken up by the blood, which carries this life-giving food to every cell in the body. Then all impurities are thrown off in the expired air.

Since the nose is to the lungs what the mouth is to the stomach, it is only wise to acquire the habit of taking several meals of fresh air a day. Try breathing deeply and see how quickly you will feel the stimulation of it. If dizziness or fatigue results from it, practice it less vigorously until you can expand the chest to the utmost capacity without discomfort.

If every girl would acquire the habit of good breathing she will soon see its beneficial effect in better looks and better health. One has only to give it a little thought and a few moments of time every day.

It can be done while one is walking, or after one has gone to bed at night, or just before retiring, when one is letting the fresh air in for the night. Stand erect with mouth closed and inhale slowly the fresh air; then with equal slowness exhale it. Many people do this too rapidly. The only truly good result is obtained when it is done with the utmost slowness. Surely when one considers the improved looks and better health that good breathing brings to one this simple habit, so pregnant with importance to all of us, seems worth acquiring.

Neglect it, and the sagging jaw, with its vacant expression, will take up its abode with you, bringing with it a heavy skin, impaired digestion and shattered nerves.

THE NARROW SKIRT.

It is said that a garment is never fashionable to a woman when it becomes too fashionable. From this argument is predicted the downfall of the narrow skirt. It is even hinted that this is the psychological moment for the appearance again of the crinoline.

But even if this disaster does not descend upon fashionable woman it is argued that a reaction in favor of a more capacious skirt is inevitable. All these agitators forget the fact that woman is not always swayed by whims, and the comfort and hygiene of the moderately narrow, short skirt is too pronounced to be quickly discarded by even the most fickle.

CHANGE YOUR SHOES.

Few women seem to know the relief that results from changing the shoes as soon as one goes indoors. There are two reasons for resting power produced by changing the shoes. One is that in the street are worn heavier shoes than are required in the house; the other is that a slight difference in shaping permits the pedal cords and muscles to relax. Shoes for the street should never be worn indoors any longer than is necessary to change them. Women should give at least half an hour each day to complete relaxation. Late in the afternoon is the best time, anywhere from 4.30 to 7.

COMPANY SAID TO BE BANKRUPT

Investigation of Coal and Power Concern Is Begun

SERIOUS CHARGES ARE MADE

Land Which Cost Less Than Four Thousand Dollars Said to Have Been Sold For About Four Millions—Whereabouts of Men Credited With Originating Scheme Unknown—Discovery of an Electrical Engineer

Boston, Feb. 8.—Amazing methods of frenzied finance, alleged to have netted the promoters thousands of dollars, are revealed in an investigation of the Cumberland-Mansfield Coal and Power company, a $5,000,000 corporation organized in August, 1909, under the laws of the state of Maine.

Sixty-seven acres of land near Mansfield, Mass., purchased, it is said, by the promoters at an average of less than $57 an acre, was, according to those interested, sold to the company for $74,626 an acre, and the capital stock taken in payment, peddled out to the investing public.

Serious charges against some of those concerned were made by the attorneys representing the various interests involved, during the course of a two-hour fight over the appointment of a trustee by the referee in the United States bankruptcy court yesterday.

The offices in the John Hancock building have been given up and the corporation has been petitioned into bankruptcy as the result of the investigations of James H. Cary, an electrical engineer. Cary invested nearly $50,000 before he became suspicious, then the original promoters made him treasurer and finally president. But in this way he got access to the records and books and engaged an attorney.

The names of seventy men and women in Boston and New York who invested in the stock of the concern are now known. Many others are believed to have purchased stock from the original promoters, who seem to have unloaded their immense holdings as soon as the corporation was organized and they had sold the company their sixty-seven acres of land.

James V. Dignowity, a Mexican mining promoter, and his son, James V. Dignowity, Jr., are credited with originating the scheme. The exact whereabouts of the two Dignowitys is now unknown, although it is said they are somewhere in New York.

The other organizers of the Cumberland-Mansfield Coal and Power company are Walter G. Morey, Alfred M. Meincke, Nathaniel B. Wales, Lyman W. Harrington and George W. Hall.

The corporation was organized with Morey as president, Dignowity, Jr., vice president; Meincke, treasurer, and Harrington was made manager. With the others they were also directors.

At the present time Morey is treasurer and Harrington vice president. The Dignowitys resigned. There were some very bitter controversies, so it is claimed, before the resignations were handed in. The other promoters believed Dignowity and his son were holding markdown sales of their shares in the stock pool.

They, or someone, it is claimed, sold out about 80,000 shares at from $1.75 a share down to 10 cents a share. Scarcely a stroke of work was ever done on the "mining lands" owned by the Cumberland-Mansfield Coal and Power company.

This was the situation when Cary took hold. He spent his own money in locating an actual coal vein thirty-seven feet below the surface on a North Attleboro parcel of land. He bought with his own funds a tract adjoining to afford room for the operation of digging out about fifty tons of real coal. None of this has ever been sold. The curious neighbors burned some of it, two barrels full were shipped to the Boston offices to exhibit to tentative investors, and the rest was sent to various places as curios and samples.

Hundreds of handsomely lithographed prospectuses exploiting the scheme were mailed over the country. It was announced that the coal dug right on the premises would be utilized in immense plants built there to develop gas and electricity, which would be sold to the surrounding towns and cities as far as Boston and Providence.

The Yankee Knack

THE story of American industrial development has no more fascinating or impressive chapter than that devoted to the discoveries and improvements resulting from the extraordinary inventive genius of the New England workman. He is never content with things as they are. He is forever experimenting — and successfully. He searches until he finds the soul of the machine, and from this intimate acquaintance he begins to eliminate and improve. He accomplishes the paradox of perfecting a perfect article. If there is a practicable way to make one part do the work of two, if some added device will simplify a process or improve a product, he will not rest till he has worked out the problem.

This passion for invention has been from the first a vigorous characteristic of the New England mind. The early settlers were artisans rather than tillers of the soil; and when by a bitter struggle with an undeveloped country they had supplied their immediate wants, they naturally turned again to manufacturing; and this mechanical bent, stimulated to alertness by a vigorous climate, resulted in course of time in an almost incredible mechanical ingenuity — the "Yankee Knack."

This genius for simplification of processes, this wonderful knack of devising machinery which will do the work of the human hand, has multiplied the output of our factories; and this in turn has increased wages and decreased the hours of labor, and so brought a great uplift into the lives of our workmen; given them the power to provide better homes for their families, better education for their children, and greater leisure in which to work out a broader destiny for themselves.

As in the past, so in the present and the future. The "Yankee Knack," which long since turned New England into a vast workshop, is still at its age-long task — simplifying, improving; lowering cost of production, never raising quality of product — and all to the end that the average American family shall enjoy today what were luxuries but yesterday, and justify in their turn the yet undiscovered desires of tomorrow.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Yet here was Valentine, as Avery described him in a reproachful whisper to Red: "Here he is, crazy stuck on a skirt, an' him th' only man in

HE WRESTED THE WEAPON FROM AVERY.

America as can open a twelve bolt safe by th' sense o' touch. Ain't it th' limit fer a geni-oos like him to waste his talents an' go on the square?"

Valentine faced his friends of the past.

"When did you see her—the girl?" queried Red Flanagan of him.

"Right here today." Jimmy Valentine's face brightened as he thought of her. "Met her father too. She said she would be back."

"And you think she'll come?" sneered Red. "Why, we been here a half hour, and it's a cinch Doyle has reached her father."

Valentine gave a sudden start. Red inwardly rejoiced as he saw that his shot had taken effect.

"Doyle!" gasped the released convict. "I wonder if he"—

"You can bet on it," put in Avery.

"A little sympathy, Jimmy, that's all," suggested Red. "She just came to cheer you on the right path. Ain't you on?"

"Don't say that, Red. Don't you say that."

"It's a cinch Doyle has queered the play," went on Avery.

Valentine moved angrily at the speaker.

"It wasn't a play, Avery. I'll strangle you if you speak that way again."

Red was again scornful and said:

"Oh, rot! They're playing you, and you don't see it. And for being spoken like to you're going to blow the softest graft a man ever had."

"I know what I'm doing," insisted Valentine, who began walking nervously up and down the floor.

"Yes, you do. If you had a chance—I'd stick, and you know it, don't you?"

"I don't know anything about it."

Avery, catching a significant glance from Red, continued the shrewd attempt to cause Valentine to lose faith in Rose Lane.

"Did the girl wear pink roses," he said excitedly, "and was the guy with her gray haired and carried a gold headed cane?"

"Yes."

"When you was talking to Doyle here and we was planted there"—he indicated the portieres—"I saw them pass here going toward the depot."

Valentine stopped short in his nervous pacing. He glared in astonishment at the old thief, who stood at one side of the room gripping the rim of a slouch hat, one that could be pulled down over the eyes, to partially conceal the face when the wearer was in a public place.

"They went to the station," Valentine gasped. "Then—they—are—not—coming—to—to"—

Red saw the impression Avery's words had made on his former pal. He saw that possibly very little would now be needed to cause No. 1289 to return to the old ways with the old friends.

"Surest thing you know, Jimmy," he announced. "I saw them too. She had on a shimmery dress with pink flowers in her bonnet, and she looked perfectly happy, too, like she was glad to get away from this town."

CHAPTER IX.

A SILENCE ensued. Valentine was plainly suffering from the blow. Then an expression of confidence came into Valentine's face. He seated himself on a sofa at the left of the room.

"She'll be back," he said. "You fellows are just like Izzy Snedden. He always said women didn't amount to much. Guess that was because one of the barmaids at the Cheshire Cheese in London peached on him to the Scotland Yard bulls, and he had to make a quick getaway hidden under the coal in a freight steamer. But this girl is different from the kind of women you and I have known, boys. She saw there was something good in me, even when I wore the stripes, and she took me out of the reach of Warden Handler and 'solitaire'—'solitaire,' boys. Does that mean anything to you?" Valentine's voice rose higher. "Yes, and she's going to do one thing more for me. She's coming back to help me start on the square."

Red stepped close to Valentine, gripped his arm and hissed determinedly into his ears: "You know she won't. You don't think a straight girl would stand for a crook like you, do you—you, with the coppers always after you on account of some of the old stuff we did? Don't kid yourself, Jimmy. It's no go."

"If any other crook had dreamed a dream like that, what a laugh it would be, but now you go, Red—you and Avery."

Red rose quickly.

"What do you mean?" suspiciously.

The light of resolution shone in Valentine's eyes.

"I've quit," he said.

"What!" snapped Red and Avery together.

"I've quit."

"What about Doyle?" put in Avery.

"He's heavy on your mind, ain't he, Avery? I can beat Doyle."

"You ain't going to lose that coin I've got staked out for an hour's work?" wailed Red. "Seven thousand if there's a dime!"

"Yes, I'll lose that."

"And a trip abroad to brace you up—a month in Paris?"

"Yes; I lose that too."

Red went on excitedly, bending tensely toward Valentine:

"But you won't lose the old thrill of going into a bank just before dawn,

"AND SEEING THE OLD SAFE OPEN UP LIKE AN OYSTER."

landing the watchman and feeling out a combination in the dark?"

"And hearing the coppers pass and try the door?" reminded Avery eagerly.

"And seeing the old safe open up like an oyster and grabbing the dough?" said Red alluringly.

"And make a clean getaway?" followed Avery.

"And the long jump and the landing in at a swell cafe, Jimmy—eating the breakfast of the millionaire?" sang out Red.

"With the coin in your kick?" added Avery.

"And reading the papers and laughing our heads off at what suckers we made of the coppers—you ain't going to lose that, Jimmy?" Red pleaded, with every ounce of effort he could control.

Indecision had begun to show in Valentine's face, and now his surrender was complete.

"You got to me, Red," he announced, then added eagerly: "Where is this layout you got? Can we get to it tonight?"

"Sure! It ain't two hours from here."

"It's a cinch," commented Avery delightedly.

Jimmy Valentine had surrendered indeed. His two one-time accompices had cunningly played on his weakness for the thrills of the "crooked game." The thrills of it to him were more precious than the rewards. They were his rewards. Besides, the girl had not returned. She had paid the debt she owed to her rescuer, and that was all. Well, let her go, reasoned Valentine. Never again would he commit the folly of placing faith in a straight girl!

"Wait!" he cried. "My hands are pretty tough. I couldn't feel the tick of grandfather's clock the way they are now, but I can beat that. I can sandpaper them down till I can feel the pulse in a dead man's wrist. Where's the"—

"We got him," whispered Bill Avery exultantly to Red. "We got him, an' he'll stick."

Hardly had Jimmy Valentine made his declaration to again join interests with Red Flanagan and Bill Avery than a bellboy entered the parlor, paging the name of "Mr. Valentine." Jimmy stepped forward hastily, seized an envelope bearing his name which the boy carried and excitedly tore it open. He found a brief note written in feminine penmanship. He read these words, and the color surged to his cheeks:

Please don't leave till I return. I inclose you a note Mrs. Webster asked me to give you. We saw her at the depot, where we went to reserve sleepers for tonight. ROSE LANE.

"What is it?" asked Avery, drawing near. "Something from Doyle, I'll bet."

"Yes, what is it?" questioned Red.

"It is the return of hope," answered Valentine, his emotion causing his voice to shake.

"You've weakened again?" sneered Red.

"No; I'm strong again."

"You mean that's from the girl?"

"She is coming back, Red, and there's nothing on this earth or in h—l that can make me go wrong. You said a minute ago that if you thought I had a chance you'd stick."

"I said it."

"Then I hold you to that."

"Good God!" exclaimed Avery. "You're not goin' to turn square, too, Red?"

"I'm going with Jimmy. If I'd do a bit for him I got to go if he asks it."

"What am I goin' to do?" asked Avery plaintively.

Valentine drew close to him.

"I've got you a job, Bill, a good one," he announced.

"Me a job! Where?"

Valentine read from a note Mrs Moore had left with him.

"Listen," he said. "This will introduce the man you promised the position as watchman of one of your grain elevators. The wages at $2.50 a day are satisfactory to him.'"

Intense disgust spread over Bill Avery's face.

"Two-fifty a day," he sneered. "A man can't live on that."

Valentine laughed.

"It costs 31 cents a day to keep a man in Sing Sing," he reminded the thief.

"I don't want a job," snarled Avery. "Only the suckers work for a living."

"Yes, you do want one," returned Valentine, "and this is just your kind, Avery. And let me tell you something that you think I don't know. You're tired of being a crook—tired to death. I knew that when we were inside. But you are afraid of what a lot of old pals will say. Well, let them say. What they got? Did you ever see a crook with anything? What do they amount to? They haven't the standing of a house dog. You're tired of it, Bill, and ashamed of the years you've lost, and I know it. Now here's your chance, your day of salvation. There's the letter and here's the coin to get there." He handed Avery some bills. "It's way out west where no one knows you, and you've got a chance. Just think, back to a mother and then ahead to"—

The hardened look began to fade from the thief's face.

"Give it to me." He clutched the money in his hand. "I'll try, by God. I'll try." Tears trickled down Avery's prison paled cheeks.

"That's the talk—that's the heart," spoke Valentine sympathetically.

"And if I fail I'll end it," said Avery.

"You won't fail. It's only the suckers that fail. Make the next train—beat Doyle. Get away."

Avery turned toward one of the entrances.

"Goodby, Jimmy. Goodby, Red," he cried, and he was gone.

"I tell you, Red," said Valentine, looking after him, "there isn't a crook you know who wouldn't go straight if he could."

"God," exclaimed Red feelingly, "but you know what's inside of a man."

"I know what's inside of me, and I dare face it."

Jimmy Valentine crossed to a window and peered out into the street. No one in sight that he knew, yet he had lost all doubt that Rose Lane would return. Her message had calmed his fears, and, more than that, it had come in time to save him from thrusting aside the one chance in the world to redeem his lost years.

Another thought rose strong within him as he returned to the sofa, seated himself and saw Red standing disconsolately near the table. Something had to be done for Red—that was certain. Red Flanagan was young—barely twenty-five—and he had many characteristics that were not at all bad. Valentine was convinced that his friend would remain loyal to him if he could take him with him and that he would become a man of honor and integrity if he received the proper encouragement. He felt it his duty to do this much for Red—give him a chance, the chance that would turn square half the thieves in the prisons if they could but obtain it.

And so he resolved that he would take Red with him wherever he went if possible to arrange it. Together they would hew a way out of the morass of degradation and misery into which they had been plunged.

Red had been unfortunate in his early environment. Here lay the cause of his lawbreaking career. Left an orphan in a crowded tenement on the east side of New York city at the age of thirteen, he had been taken care of by his uncle, a retired police captain who operated a gambling house in Thirty-third street.

Four years later Red was placed in charge of the buffet in this establishment, which occupation he followed until a new district leader was elected. One night during horse show week the sound of lusty ax blows on the armored front door struck terror into the hearts of the employees and the fashionably attired players of faro, roulette, baccarat and poker.

"I KNOW WHAT'S INSIDE OF ME."

The lad's truthful testimony at the trial which followed so enraged his uncle that Red no longer found a home with him. Cast on his own resources, he was attracted by the glittering promises of an expert poker and faro dealer whom his uncle had employed. He joined with him in several trips on coasting steamers, "sitting in" with the gambler in poker games with the passengers and exchanging signals with him concerning the cards they held. He learned the art of denting the corners of the aces, kings, queens and jacks with his thumb nails so that in dealing with fingers sandpapered or worn almost to the bleeding point with pumice stone he could detect these indentations and know when and to whom he was dealing the high cards. From this it was only a step to a partnership with the great Jimmy Valentine, the man who could "cop a gopher" without any artificial aids.

All this was well known to Valentine. He himself had drifted into bad company in a manner somewhat similar. He could see in the lessons of his own experiences that Red's misdeeds were not entirely blamable on Red.

He was about to inform Red of his intention to aid him in a new career when he heard in the corridor the voice of Rose Lane addressing some one he believed must be her father.

"Here she is, Red," whispered Valentine, rising quickly. "You must get out till they go." But too late. At that instant Rose Lane entered, followed by her father. They saw Valentine standing by a suspicious looking young man with very red hair.

Valentine, realizing that he was on the verge of absolute ruin in the estimation of the girl and her already suspicious father, for he could hardly explain Red's presence, turned coldly toward the thief.

"I'm very sorry, sir," he said in indifferent tones, "but I don't know the man you are inquiring for. Never heard of him. Guess you had better inquire of the clerk at the hotel office."

Red, catching the hint, replied, "Thank you, sir; I will do so," and went out of the room, concealing a grinning face behind his hat.

Fine Gingerbread.

Afternoon guests at a certain house look forward with satisfaction to the soft molasses gingerbread that is often part of the tea service. This is the rule by which it is made: Two cupfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of soda are sifted together, and a teaspoonful of ground ginger is added. Three-quarters of a cupful of molasses is turned in, with two tablespoonfuls of melted drippings and half a cupful of hot water. The batter is turned into a shallow pan, shredded nuts are sprinkled over the top, and the cake is baked for twenty minutes in an oven that is not too hot.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

The Balalaika, a Queer Russian Music Maker.

Perhaps some of the young folks have seen a Russian balalaika, but that is unlikely. It only recently came to this country, and it was brought here by an orchestra that has played at the czar's court. The balalaika has a triangular body and a long, slender neck and is played, like a guitar, by picking the strings. It is related to both the zither and the mandolin, and its music is a sort of combination of the two. The instrument is made in different sizes that range from the small and shrill instrument down to the big double bass. While classic music may be produced with the balalaika, it is most commonly used in rendering the simpler melodies of the folk songs of the Russian peasants.

Anecdote of Washington.

In the fall of 1775 General Washington and his staff visited Chelsea, near Boston, to study the land thereabouts. They stopped for rest and refreshments at the home of Mr. John Dexter. The house sat back fifteen rods from the street and had many stately elms growing in a regular park in front. When Washington and his suit alighted the horses were hitched to the trees while their riders partook of the luncheon inside. When the party came out to remount their horses one of the men accidentally knocked a stone from a wall which ran from the house to the street outside the row of trees. Washington remarked to him that he had better replace the stone. The officer, having remounted, replied, "No; I will leave that for somebody else to do."

Washington then went quietly and replaced the stone himself, saying as he did so, "I always make it my rule when visiting a place to leave things in as good order as I find them."

Etiquette of Washington.

It being necessary to advise or reprehend any one, consider whether it ought to be done in public or private, presently or at some other time, also in what terms to do it.

In reproving any one do it with no sign of choler, but with sweetness and mildness.

Mock not nor jest at anything of importance.

Break no jests that are sharp and biting.

Laugh not at your own wit.

Wherein you reprove another be unblamable yourself, for example is more impressive than precept.

Use no vituperative language against any one.

Avoid all blasphemy.

Be not hasty to believe disparaging reports against any one.

Avoid all gossip and scandal.

The Kaiser's Toy Warship.

When the emperor of Germany was a boy he had a toy which afforded him and his brother great pleasure. It was a full rigged three masted warship, fifty-five feet long, which drew four feet of water and had a capacity of thirty tons. The Royal Louise, as the little frigate was called, named after the Prussian Queen Louise, was given to the present emperor's great-grandfather, Frederick William III., by William IV., king of England, who had it built on the Thames river at Woolwich, England, in 1832 and towed by steamer to Hamburg. Then it was taken to Potsdam, where it has been ever since. The emperor and his brother Henry used to have a fine time on this tiny man-of-war and gained on it their first taste of life on the wave. The ship is an heirloom in the imperial family of Germany.

NEIGHBORS.

All the grasping and the greed of this world come from not regarding our fellows as our neighbors. One doesn't trample his neighbors. He works with them to a common end. We must come to look on all the world as our neighbors. We must do away with the idea of classes. There isn't any justification for class lines in America. They are unjust, unwholesome, unrighteous and un-American. Why should we have class lines here in this country and one man despise another just because he has been lucky enough to make a little more money? A man has some right to be proud of what he makes with his own hands and his own brains, but he hasn't any business putting on airs over what he is merely trying to spend.—Jacob A. Riis.

Let us thus celebrate February 12, the birthday of Lincoln.

BE UP AND DOING.

Trust no future, howe'er pleasant!
Let the dead Past bury its dead!
Act—act in the living present!
Heart within and God o'erhead!
Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.
Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.
—Longfellow.

—In 1890 it cost New York hospitals $1.17 a day to provide for an average patient. Last year the average daily cost per patient was $2.06. This comparison is broadly applicable to American hospitals in general. They have not increased their charges in proportion to increased expense, and the task of making both ends meet is increasingly difficult. Considering the free treatment they give, it is surprising that more is not bequeathed to them by the philanthropically inclined.—Boston Record.

CRITICISED MINISTERS

And Outlined Plan for Upbuilding Merchant Marine

President Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., speaking before the Commercial club at Providence on Tuesday night criticised the action of the Massachusetts ministers in signing a petition to Congress against increasing the size of the navy. He said: "It is just as aparent that the United States needs a navy as it is that New York needs a police force." "Without a navy our commerce would be taken away from us much the same as Germany took away the commerce of China."

Turning his attention to the merchant marine, which he declared was coming although he did not believe that the proposed ship subsidy system would bring it about, he outlined his plans for the upbuilding of the merchant marine, which included the reduction of tariff on goods carried on American vessels and the permitting of the flying the American flag on foreign ships upon payment of a small tariff.

"I am of the opinion," said President Bwoles "there is no other market in the world which offers a better field for American exploitation than South America. Stock exchange reports state that England last year took $250,000,000 in dividends from the country which you gentlemen don't know anything about.

"The trade of Argentina last year was $700,000,000, while that of Brazil was but $450,000,000, Argentina being almost double, while Mexico, Chile and Cuba had but $200,000,000 each."

A Spring Fancy.

The woman who is keen on bargains can put to use every "marked down" she picks up nowadays and incorporate it in her spring and summer costumes, for it is to be a season of combinations both in trimmings and fabrics. In short, a frock is not smart made of one material, but must show at least three or four different fabrics in its makeup.

The stunning model of foulard pictured is an up to date instance of the combination fad. The lower part of the skirt is of green and white foulard, the silk appearing in various trimming touches on the tunic of pale green chiffon veiling pale gray satin.

Rows of green and silver trimming braid show through the green chiffon, and silver gimp edges the foulard trimmings. The turban is of pale gray straw in a new shape which plainly displays the face and hair. Silver trimming and green plumes artistically trim one side of the creation.

HOME TRADE WILL HELP QUINCY AND EVERYONE IN QUINCY.

HACKETT EASY WINNER

Only for One Lap Did Bruce Lead Him

For a stormy night the indoor meet at Music hall Tuesday evening drew a crowd of about 200 to witness some good races. The floor of this hall was never made for running, but considering the extreme difficulties the men entered did remarkably well.

The first race was a one-mile relay for championship of Quincy, contested by the Y. M. C. A. and Fore River Apprentice teams, each man running six laps.

Floyd, running first for Y. M. C. A. against Blackwood ran even. Nilson second lost a half a lap to Hackett. Prout the third man up, gained a little and so down to last man for each team. Phelan opened upon Johnson and succeeded. in making the race a tie. After some little argument it was agreed that Phelan run Johnson six laps. Phelan won by one-fourth of a lap. Time for dead heat 4m., 8 3-5s.; for the last six laps, 1m., 1 2-5s.

The second race was a five-mile (2 men team) relay race. Team 1 included Catelemo and Lilley; and Team 2, Morrison and Henninghan; all of No. Dorchester A. A. The race was won by Team 1; time 23m., 3 3-5s.

In a 3-mile race, Jones of East Weymouth, against Donato of Boston, after a number of fouls had been called, Jones dropped out, and Donata completed two miles and was awarded the race; time 10m., 45s.

Another 3 mile race was Domenico Fossi running 3 miles against Domenico Verditti and Frank James, each running one and one-half miles. In the first mile and half run by Frank James, he opened up a half a lap and held it for his partner, who was able to keep it until the last two laps when he lost most of it, but managed to retain a sufficient amount to win the race; time, 16m.; 11 4-5s.

The final race of the evening, between Hackett of the Marathon fame, and Frank Bruce, the plucky boy of this city was over a ten mile course. Hackett winning the toss took the pole and started right out in the lead, but Bruce kept right to his heels and in the second mile passed Hackett, only to keep the lead for one lap. Hackett, taking the lead, retained it for the entire race. In the ninth mile Bruce gradually weakened, and after Hackett had lapped him four times in the 18 lap of the ninth mile, Bruce dropped out giving Hackett the right of way. Hackett finished the 10 miles in the remarkable time of 52m., 8 3-5s.

Hackett's time at the end of each mile was as follows:

	Min.	Sec.
First mile	4	45
Second mile	10	7
Third mile	15	27
Fourth mile	20	40
Fifth mile	26	00
Sixth mile	31	16
Seventh mile	36	48
Eighth mile	41	53
Ninth mile	46	48
Tenth mile	52	08

FOUR QUINCY BUILT BATTLESHIPS IN THE ATLANTIC FLEET

The 21 Ships to Rendezvous in Cape Cod Bay in July --- One Should Come to Quincy On the Fourth of July, and Again at Launching of the Argentina Battleship That Month

The battleship New Jersey, built at Quincy, will join the Atlantic fleet this year which already includes the North Dakota, Vermont and Rhode Island built at Quincy. Navy orders of Thursday say:

The following tentative schedule is announced for the work of the Atlantic fleet for the coming summer. The vessels of the fleet will leave their respective home yards about May 1 and proceed as follows:

First division—Base on Narragansett bay; operate between Cape Cod and New York.

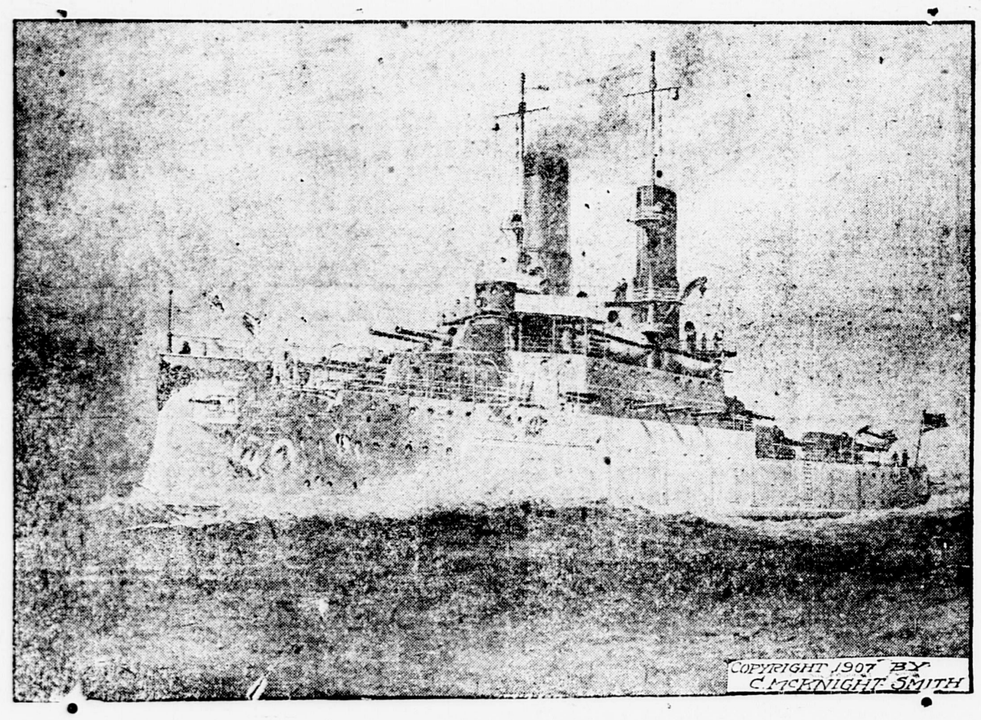

Second division—Base on Hampton roads; operate between New York and Southern drill grounds.

WITH THE HUMORIST.

An evening of mirth and jollity was in store for those who attended the Quincy Mansion school Wednesday evening, where Warren G. Richards, America's humorist, gave a series of his musical sketches. To say that his audience laughed long and loudly would be putting it mildly. In a most natural manner, simply by a change of facial expression and modulation of voice, Mr. Richards typified the various characters he represented.

Mr. Richards was also an adept with the violin and the old songs and plantation melodies he drew out in the respective sketches of "The old Hoosier and his fiddle" and "Plantation days in Dixie" met with hearty applause.

At the close of the program Mr. Richards received an ovation seldom tendered an entertainer. The evening's pleasure was augmented by a vocal solo by Miss Bertha Schaff and a piano duet by the Misses White and Schaff, pupils of the school.

MAYOR SHEA GETS HOT

Ready to Talk When He Gets at the Facts

Mayor Shea was hot this morning when he read the following article that appeared in a Boston paper Wednesday evening:

"Diverting from his speech on the various proposed subways between Dorchester and South Boston, before the joint committee on metropolitan affairs, Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston scored the city of Quincy as "undervalued."

"This came in reply to a question of Representative Thomas of Quincy, a member of the committee, who asked if it were not a fact that the taxes of valuation of the city of Boston were not made up by nearly one-half of outside residents.

"No," said Mayor Fitzgerald, "pointing his finger at Thomas. "In a talk with the president of the board of trade of your city the other day he admitted that property in Quincy is greatly undervalued. Moreover, I drew out of him the fact that if your assessors were honest the city of Quincy would show a far greater property taxation."

When asked what he wanted to say on the question, he said nothing at present. He said that his telephone had been working over time this morning with citizens calling him up in regard to the article.

It was a pretty broad statement to make, and before he attempted to make any answer to it, he desired to hear what President Stone of the Board of Trade, and Representative Thomas had to say on the subject. He had been unable to reach either of these gentlemen this morning. Mr. Stone was in New Britain, Ct., and Representative Thomas did not come home Wednesday night.

He doubted somewhat if Mr. Stone made such a statement, and if he denied it, why it was up to Mayor Fitzgerald to back water. He could not understand how any citizen could make such a statement, and when he got at the facts of the case he would have something to say.

TALK QUINCY!
WITH FAVORABLE AND CONVINCING ARGUMENTS
GOOD RESULTS WILL COME.

Taxpayers will agree with the Daily Ledger that real estate in Quincy is not undervalued. The general complaint is that it is overvalued and transfers and auction sales show that property is generally sold below assessed valuation.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Young friends of Master Laurence James Whitehead of Kemper street gave him a surprise party Monday evening to celebrate his tenth birthday. Miss Dorothy Cole presented him with a beautiful volume of Longfellow's poems. A jolly evening was spent playing games. Prizes were won by Ruth Cahill, Dorothy Cole and Everett Whitney. Refreshments of ice cream, cake and oranges were served. At the party were: Ruth Caldwell, Dorothy Cole, Lucy Shay, Violet Shay, Jannette Shay, Katherine Mullaney, Rose MacDonald, George Cole, Everett Whitney, Hubert Whitney, Sidney Morgan, James Mullaney and Sumner Besse.

—Rudolph Spreckels told the Boston chamber of commerce about his experience in fighting the grafters at San Francisco and expressed the opinion that many business men are no better than politicians, so-called, when it comes to putting up questionable deals. Mr. Spreckels declared that there never was a corrupt political deal that did not have corrupt business at the back of it. "If we are to hope for honest government for our cities," he adds, "we must first ostracize and condemn the corrupt men in business."—Chelsea Record.

QNINCY POINT FAILS TO SOLVE PROBLEM

Reciprocity with Canada Debated by Experts at Men's Club

All Sides of the Question Presented—Vote a Tie

The pro and con of reciprocity were made clear at the Point church debate, but the country will be unable to form its decision just yet, because when a vote was taken on the merits of the question it resulted in a tie. The question was: Resolved that reciprocity with Canada would be of benefit to the United States.

George Biddle of the Harvard Law school, and a member of the Free Trade league, spoke on the affirmative; and P. J. Conlan of Dorchester a member of the Home Market Club, took the negative.

QUINCY A CITY OF NATURAL ADVANTAGES.
WHY NOT DEVELOP
ALL THESE ADVANTAGES.

A summary of Mr. Biddle's argument is as follows:

1—Importance of the subject at this particular time.

2—Identity of interests between the two countries.

3—Great commercial waste caused by tariff, since it necessitates the production of articles in certain places when they could be made cheaper elsewhere.

4—Need of a market for surplus products. As the country grows, the great agricultural areas are turned over to manufacturing industries.

5—Difficulty of the East competing with the West in certain industries, because of the nearness of raw materials in West. A necessity of a market near at hand.

6—Canada now has as many people as the United States h ad 100 years ago. Canada will grow faster in the

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

To go around the world in 37 days is "going some," but whether it is worth while is another question.

That new soprano whom Schumann Heink has riscovered among the Cherokee Indians ought to be very good on Lo notes.

One of the most forceful arguments against the Aldrich financial scheme is that it is the Aldrich financial scheme.

If it is true that Mr. Bryan declined an invitation to the Baltimore Democratic banquet because he did not want to break bread wit hsome of the other guests he might have gone ahead and had them serve batter-cakes to him.

Let ball in Barre, Vermont must rival foot ball in strenuousity judging from the following editorial in the Times: "With one player taken out because of a broken nose, another with a sprained ankle and a third carried off in the arms of his fellow-players, the game of basketball in this city Saturday evening cannot be classed in the mollycoddle category. We should say not."

SHIPYARD CONTRACT.

The taxpayers of Quincy may be surprised to learn that the Mayor contemplates a thirty-year contract to give the shipyard an unlimited supply of water for $1,000 per year, which also gives the company the right to sell an unlimited amount of water to any other industry at Quincy Point. The report of the Council meeting shows that no questions were asked. Do the Councilmen know that the city may be losing its largest water taker; that the water receipts may be reduced $2,000, $3,000 or more; that in years to come they may lose $10,000 or even $20,000 annually? Why is it necessary to make such a long contract? Why should the Fore River Co. be permitted to supply other industries; possibly at a big profit? Would not some other industry be willing to pay over $1,000 per year for a term of thirty years? Possibly the Granite Manufacturers Association would pay over $1,000 if it had the privilege of supplying the different plants of its members. Possibly the Tubular Rivet & Stud Company would pay over $1,000 per year. Why does the Mayor, after selling the right for the paltry sum of $1000, find it necessary to tie up the city to a thirty-year contract which cannot be revoked unless favored by two successive City Councils, and a referendum to the voters, and one year's notice to the company?

The city is not allowed to go into the electric light or power business in competition with the Quincy Electric Light Co. Neither could it go into the gas business in competition with the Citizens Gas Co. And no other company could obtain the privilege to furnish electricity or gas in Quincy. But the city would establish the Fore River Co. in the water business as a rival of the municipal plant. Certainly the city is generous to the shipyard. But this action delays the day when the Water department of the city will be self supporting.

Before passing the order the City Council should read the present contract between the city and the Fore River Co for water; it should know how much the company is paying the city for water annually. It should know whether it is contemplated to continue the contract at as low a figure. It should investigate the income of the Water department and ascertain why it is so small.

A recent letter of A. L. Baker has occasioned considerable surprise, but brought out no reply. Mr. Baker was informed by the Metropolitan Water Office that 141,116,845 cubic feet of water were supplied to Quincy in 1910. He figured that at $2.25 per 1000 cubic feet that the revenue should have been $337,512.80, when as a matter of fact it was but $115,-766.57. Who will explain? Is it a fact that some large consumers receive water below what it actually costs the city?

HORACE GREELEY.

The 100 anniversary of the birth of Horace Greeley fell Feb. 3, and his career is being retold. It is singular that a man whose warmest admirers would admit to have been erratic, emotional, and unbalanced, should have scored possibly the greatest success in American journalism.

The half million readers that the New York Tribune had in his best days, was a larger audience for the size of the country than that of any modern newspaper.

He disproved the old proverb that clothes make the man. With his extreme rustic disarray, no make up for the "Rube" of modern vaudeville could look worse than Horace.

No more was it schooling. Greeley parted company with the scholastic world at the age of 10, when he quit the stunted education of an old time hill town school. The luster of his career should rebuke supercilious college men who imagine the world will prostrate itself before a college degree.

Nor was it a long sighted all embracing sagacity. Few men were more dogmatic in talking about things concerning which he knew little.

One must attribute Greeley's power largely to his habit of speaking his own mind. In our days a paralyzing fear of being in the minority seizes most people. The morning after election, most of the friends of a defeated candidate will conceal the fact, if they can, that they voted for him. To be "licked" is to be wrong.

The majority of our newspapers as a consequence represent not so much the editor's opinions, as his effort to size up the feeling of the majority of his readers, tinged by a mild effort to win them to his personal view.

As a writer Greeley's power lay in his use of the language of the common people. While education broadens the range of allusion, it is apt to weaken style. Portentous general phrases take the place of the red blooded picture words in which the mass of the people voice the facts of life experience.

DRIFT OF OPINION

Harvard's new plan for admitting candidates to the college is a response to the changing conditions of public school education that was needed, and that does credit to the perception of the university. Harvard admission requirements have not only been high but they have been difficult to meet in what is almost a merely mechanical sense. The public high school, necessarily shaping its course of study for the great majority who have no idea of going to college, has been unable to prepare those who have wanted to go to Harvard. The new plan makes powerfully for unifying of the whole educational system. Strictly administered, it will benefit both the high schools and the college.—Milford Gazette.

The present legislature may act favorably on a proposition to provide counsel for persons accused of murder who are too poor to pay a lawyer. Such persons do get counsel, but it is usually a long time after the crime is committed. The new plan looks to the prompt appointment of lawyers to defend the prisoners, and it is reasonable. The LeBlanc case of course is used to support the reform desired by its advocate, and there are others which may be cited to show the need for the change proposed. It is not necessary to have any sympathy for those charged with taking human life, in order to favor a measure in the interest of ordinary justice. Even murderers are entitled to that.—Framingham News

C. E. SOCIAL.

A large number of Endeavorers enjoyed themselves at a social of the Christian Endeavor in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church Wednesday evening. The entertainment consisted of guessing and other games, followed by a cracker race, in which the contestant had to eat a number of dry crackers and then whistle. The evening closed with an auction of basket luncheons under the hammer of William Bullock, assisted by Nathan Drew. The bidding was spirited and over five dollars was realized by the society. Hot chocolate was served by the members of the entertainment committee, composed of Marion E. Corey, Eleanor Dunn, Nathan Drew, Dana Cahill and William Bullock.

DAY NURSERY VALENTINE

Annual Party at Music Hall Very Enjoyable

Stormy weather was in a great measure responsible for the smaller attendance than usual at the annual valentine dance Wednesday evening. The affair was held in Music hall and was for the benefit of the Quincy Day Nursery. Although not as largely attended as usual, it was nevertheless a very pretty party and fully as enjoyable as those of other years.

Dancing was from 8 to 11.30, the musical accompaniment being Pool's orchestra. The matrons were Mrs. Edward E. Jameson, Mrs. Clarence Burgin and Mrs. Eben W. Seppard. Both Mrs. Jameson and Mrs. Sheppard wore black net over white, while Mrs. Burgin was in pink forming a pleasing contrast as the trio stood near the platform and received.

The ushers, who were distinguished by a pretty boutoniere were: C. H. Baker, J. H. Barbour, Clarence Burgin, J. M. Barraja-Fraenfelder, G. M. Follett, A. P. Homer, C. Homer, L. B. Hardwick, T. Sampson, Morton Smith, Carl Sheppard, W. P. Thompson, R. Wetherell.

The committee in charge were Mrs. Walter E. Burke, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. Charles E. Haskins, Mrs. John H. Johnson and Mrs. Edward E. Jameson.

The patronesses were: Mrs. R. H. Allen, Mrs. E. H. Angier, Mrs. H. S. Barker, Mrs. H. L. Bigelow, Mrs. E. B. Bird, Mrs. F. H. Corey, Mrs. J. W. Davy, Mrs. H. R. Drinkwater, Mrs. H. M. Faxon, Mrs. H. WOMEN TAKE ACTIVE PART

Movement to Have Mayor of Seattle Recalled Is Successful

Seattle, Feb. 9.—As a result of the first test of the recall in this state, Mayor Gill of Seattle must relinquish his office at once. The votes of the newly enfranchised women voters played a prominent part in the result. George Dilling was elected over Gill and will take office immediately to serve out the unexpired part of Gill's term.

It was alleged by the recall leaders that Gill and Chief of Police Wappenstein farmed out the vice privilege to a syndicate.

A large proportion of 22,000 women who registered cast their ballots. They stood in lines at booths and appeared to be as apt and quick at casting their votes as the more experienced men voters.

As soon as it was announced last November that the woman suffrage amendment to the constitution had been adopted the movement to recall Gill under a provision of the city charter took active form and the women entered vigorously into the campaign.

SNORE FURNISHES CLUE

Woman Locates Her Erring Husband by Familiar Sound

Pittsburg, Feb. 9.—When it was shown in criminal court here how John Werner, the very rich dyer, had been located with his affinity by his wife only through his snore, with which the wife was very familiar, Werner pleaded nolo contendere to serious charges made against him, and the court announced a postponement of sentence.

Werner had been caught in company with a young woman named Mabel Carr by Mrs. Werner, who with detectives had trailed the pair all over Pittsburg.

All was made plain by Detective Guenste. On the stand he told how he and Mrs. Werner, once getting inside the house, located the rooms occupied by the pair by Werner's snoring.

BATTLESHIPS

designated later, to spend the Fourth of July.

The four divisions, together with the armored cruisers (fifth division,) scouts and torpedo fleet, will rendezvous about July 6, probably in Cape Cod bay, for fleet exercises during July and August. On July 1 the New Jersey, Maine, Missouri, Ohio and Utah are scheduled to joint the fleet and the 21-ship fleet organization will become effective.

The Daily Ledger would suggest to the Quincy Fourth of July committee that they endeavor to secure one of these battleships for the holiday. Many Quincy people have not yet had an opportunity to inspect a fully equipped battleship although four have been built in Quincy. Then again the mammoth Argentinan battleship will be launched here about that date. Quincy should begin now to plan for that big event which may be attended by the President of the South American republic and his cabinet. President Taft and Gov. Foss should be invited. Quincy will keep open house on these dates and welcome all friends.

SUNNY MONDAY

Rosin soap hurts your clothes, and all yellow soaps contain from 20 to 40% rosin. Sunny Monday is white, will double the life of your clothes and contains not an ounce of rosin.

Which would you prefer to use on your clothes—a soap containing one-third rosin (a cheapening ingredient), or Sunny Monday, in which the cheap rosin element is replaced with expensive fats and vegetable oils which do the real cleansing and are kind to clothes?

TAKE TIME TO CONSIDER.

If the plan for state-wide direct nomination is to go into effect this fall, and the people are to take on themselves the duties and responsibilities hitherto borne by their delegates to the state convention. Republican voters must be careful not to pledge themselves too early to any particular candidate for governor. The Republican party is passing throught an extremely critical period. Last fall the governor was lost and the legislature was saved by a small majority. This year the Republican party is to come back to its own or is to lose its present power and influence in the state, according as policies and candidates are wisely chosen. Already there are a number of candidates in the field, anyone of whom would make an acceptable governor providing he can be elected, but the party this fall cannot be satisfied with a merely good candidate; he must be the best and strongest that can be secured.

This candidate may be Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, who has demonstrated his hold on the people by being thrice elected lieutenant-governor; he may be Speaker Walker, whose progressiveness and fairness have raised up a host of vigorous friends; he may be our own Robert Luce, who, far from being eclipsed by his defeat in the convention of three years ago, is more powerful in the councils of his party and more than ever possesses the confidence of the people; he may be Representative Norman White, President Treadway, of the senate, Congressman Lawrence of North Adams, or Congressman Weeks, of Newton, or some other great citizen; perhaps one who has never ventured in the political field, yet whose character, culture, and ability are known to all familiar with the greatness of Massachusetts. Whoever the candidate may be he must be the best the Republican party can produce.

With this in mind, Republicans will do well to sit in judgment for a time on the array of candidates for governor, to listen attentively, think deeply, and speak sparingly, doing nothing that will tend to pronounce in February a decision that is due in September.—Somerville Journal.

SIX GENERALS SHOT

Summary Execution of Leaders of the Revolution In Hayti

Cape Haitien, Hayti, Feb. 9.—General Millionard, the head of the revolutionary forces, and five other rebel generals were taken from the prison at Trou and shot to death.

General Millionard is the second prominent army officer excuted as a traitor during the present rebellion in Hayti. Cape Haytien advices describe him as the leader of the revolt. He was formerly of considerable influence in the Haytian army and probably cooperated with General Guillaume in the capture of Trou. Guillaume was captured by government troops as he was advancing to attack Cape Haytien and was summarily shot.

The executions at Trou make it evident that the government has again occupied the town. According to the latest advices, Quanamin was still occupied by the rebels, though an attack by President Simon's soldiers was imminent.

Worms

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. He then got a box and in three days he passed a tape-worm 45 feet long. It was Mr. Matt Freck, of Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pa. I am quite a worker for Cascarets. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood." Chas. E. Condon, Lewiston, Pa., (Mifflin Co.)

PATRIOTISM.

The religion of patriotism may sound blasphemous to some ears, but that patriotism be less than religion is the conception which has prepared the way for the civic corruption of the last decade. We are to serve the state not only with our bodies as soldiers and policemen nor even with our bodies alone as voters, but, as Thoreau has put it, with our consciences as citizens. Ours ought to be a religion of patriotism, for America is not a land alone nor a country nor a people, but a hope, a vision, an ideal. What nobler religion can there be than the pure love and unselfish service of the noblest, freest commonwealth the world has known?—Rabbi Stephen S. Wise.

WATER ALL AROUND BUT NONE TO DRINK

Break in Houghs Neck Main Shuts Off the Water Supply of the Beach

Commissioner Bainbridge's Men Do Quick Repair Job

Houghs Neck was dry this morning, and for a few hours it became quite a problem to get water enough to make coffee for breakfast. The cause of this scarcity of water was due to a break in the ten-inch water main that supplies this section of the city and Nut island. The break occurred about 5 A. M. at a point between Palmer street and the causeway.

The break was discovered by the engineer at Nut island who being unable to get water called Commissioner Bainbridge. It was evident that a break had occurred and a gang of men were hustled towards Houghs Neck. They had no difficulty in locating the break, for a big hole had been torn in the street by the water. The first thing was to shut off the water at the gate near Palmer street, and also at the gate near the Willows so that what water remained in the pipes between these two streets might be drawn off and the break repaired.

Examination of the pipe after the water had been shut off showed that the pressure of the water had blown out a piece of pipe several inches square.

The Fire Department was notified of the break in the main, and a large gang of men immediately sent to the scene to make the necessary repairs. Commissioner Bainbridge said this morning that the break would be repaired before noon, and that then Houghs Neck would get all the water it wanted.

As this main also supplies Fort Andrews with water there was some inconvenience experienced there.

DEBATE

next 100 years than the United States has in the last 100.

7. In spite of the tariff, the exports to Canada have increased 300 percent. At the same time exports of England to Canada have increased 30 percent. Reciprocity will increase the trade for the United States still more.

8—The Gloucester fishermen say they will be injured by reciprocity, but they are only 400 out of 140,000 fishermen in the country.

THE NEGATIVE.

Mr. Conlan's argument:

1—Canada gets $5,000,000 from us; we get less than half that sum from her.

2—Wages much lower in Canada than in United States. Cost of production much less there than here.

3—An English free trader said that what he saw in this country disproved his theories.

4—Tariff does not interfere with trade.

5—Fisheries and allied industries, farming, lumbering, mining—occupy a large part of the industrial scheme of our country.

6—Sixty percent of the population of the country is in the working class. If there is to be any privileged class it should be the lower one.

7—There is no such thing as raw material in the industrial world.

8—A trial of lowered duty proved unsatisfactory. Prices went up and wages down.

9—All nations, but England and Holland are protected and England will have a tariff within five years.

IN REBUTTAL.

Rebuttal of affirmative:

1—Not tariff but natural resources of every state that has made country prosperous.

2—If free trade is good between the states why not good between sister countries of similar natures.

3—By the removal of a 50 percent tax one gets just so much more for his money.

4—If tariff is going to injure the working class, why are the Gloucester fishermen the only ones heard from.

5—If tariff is removed we can get wheat cheaper from Canada and can sell all our wheat if desired, to other countries.

Rebuttal of Negative:

1—Canada and the United States are not sister countries but wholly separate.

2—If the United States is sufficient unto itself why go outside.

3—If wage scales were the same in both countries free trade would be all right. But such is not the case. Prices would be lower but there would be no money to buy with. The Canadians would flood our market. If wages were higher in Canada free trade would be all right, but they are lower.

4—Cleveland's administration should be lesson enough in free trade.

5—If all were on a level the bloodiest time in history would ensue.

Several of the club members aired their views at the conclusion of the debate, and then the doors to the back vestry were thrown open and a hundred tongues were silenced for a few wminutes while their owners devoured the refreshments served by the committee.

The debate was of unusual interest both on account of the nature of the question, and the difference in the debaters. Mr. Biddle was a young man with many theories. Mr. Conlan was a man of forty years' business experience. The combination was delightful and refreshing, and an excellent opportunity was given those who attended to get all sides of the question.

The next meeting will be held on Feb. 22. Col. Edward Anderson will give an address on Lincoln and Washington.

CITY WITHOUT TREASURER

No Pay For Taunton's Employes Until Vacancy Is Filled

Taunton, Mass., Feb. 9.—Taunton finds itself, for the first time in the city's history, without anybody in authority to pay out money.

The removal of City Treasurer Edward H. Temple, following the report of Special Auditor Swan, leaves nobody in authority to sign checks. The same is true in regard to notes. It is likely that city officers and employes in various departments will go without pay this week. All salaries are payable weekly. It was on account of this that the special election was ordered for so early a date as next Tuesday night.

City Auditor Leonard is in charge of the office and has authority to receive money due the city. Only one name has been mentioned to date for the vacancy created by Temple's removal. This is ex-Mayor Crossman.

Embroidery Ideas.

The devoted embroiderer is always looking out for novelties. Here are a few ideas for her work:

Rolled cases with pockets for jewelry, pins, small toilet articles, etc.

Afternoon tea sets, tray mat, tea cozy and serviettes embroidered to match.

Embroidered book covers—not slip cases, but really permanent covers for fine books—in satin and velvet.

Linen mending boxes for the guest room, the linen embroidered cases being capable of being slipped off and washed.

Glass covers for hot milk or water tumblers for the invalid, with cambric doilies sewed over them or crocheted over in heavy linen.

Cracker boxes to hand around at tea, being the ordinary boxes covered with silk inside and out and embroidered with ribbon work.

Sachet sets in moire trimmed with ribbon work and gold lace and containing every sachet from the scented coat hanger to the glove pocket.

"What comes after a million, pa?" asked the boy who was just learning to count.

"Generally some bogus nobleman," answered his millionaire father.—Buffalo Express.

TREATY BEING CONSIDERED

Mexico Opposes Indiscriminate Flying on Border

LIKELY TO ENTER PROTEST

Sees Possible Use of Aeroplanes to Convey to Rebels Information of Movements of Government Troops—No Objection to Use of Airships by United States Government on Texas Border—President Will Wait

Washington, Feb. 9.—Possibly it was with an apprehension of what is just coming to pass on the Texas border that Senor de la Barra, the Mexican ambassador, some time ago proposed to Secretary Knox the negotiation of a treaty to regulate the flight of aeroplanes between the United States and Mexico.

Secretary Knox was willing to entertain the proposition, and as a result a treaty has been drafted which has received the approval of the Mexican government, and is now before the state department for its action. The ostensible purpose of the Mexican government was to prevent smuggling, which could be carried on in the case of small and exceedingly valuable commodities, such as jewels, laces, opium and the like, by aeroplanes, in the absence of regulations.

But another very important use of the aeroplane was evidently in mind, and that was its possible employment by revolutionists in conveying information of the movements of government troops endeavoring to capture rebel forces.

Mexico would not object to the employment of aeroplanes by the United States army as proposed, but would probably not like the appearance on the border of a number of aeroplanes, such as would be drawn to the proposed exhibition at El Paso, if these machines are to operate over Mexican territory without responsibility to the military authorities. Therefore, it is probable that a protest will be made by the Mexican government against any such unregulated flights.

This was made known following the receipt by the war department from the International Aviators of an offer to supply seven aeroplanes and aviators to manage them for the use of the army on the Texas border. General Wood, chief of staff, has replied that the offer will be taken under consideration.

The International Aviators have been giving aviation exhibitions in the south recently and now are at San Antonio, Tex., so that their machines easily could be taken to the boundary. General Bliss, commanding the department of California, has reported to General Wood that five young army officers have been so well instructed in the use of biplanes at a Los Angeles training school that they can safely undertake the management of any aeroplane that may be needed for use in Texas.

President Taft, however, is opposed to having the United States spend much money for aeroplanes and losing army officers through accidents while aviation is still in such an embryo stage as far as its connection with actual warfare is concerned. He believes in waiting until it is more certain that aviators can be of assistance to the army; and as for the experiments to be conducted with aeroplanes along the Mexican border, he thinks that it will be hard for an aviator 400 feet or more up in the air to distinguish very clearly just what is the situation below.

The president thinks it would be better to let other countries do more of the preliminary work in discovering the use of aeroplanes in war and there will be plenty of time later on for the United States to garner the harvest of good results, if such there are, which other countries discover.

THOUGHT TO BE POOR

But "Old Maid's" Estate Is Found to Have Cash Value of $31,000

New Milford, Conn., Feb. 9.—Living the life of a recluse for years, and seemingly almost destitute, the estate of Miss Emma Williams, 70 years old, was appraised at $31,000, a greater portion of it being in cash. Of the money $5000 was found secreted in the house in which she lived.

"Old Maid Williams," as she was known, died while sitting in a chair, and her body was not discovered for forty-eight hours afterwards. She had no near heirs.

WATER FOR SHIPYARD

An Unlimited Supply for Only $1,000 per Year

As was noted in the Daily Ledger on Tuesday an order was introduced in the City Council Monday night authorizing the Mayor and Commissioner of Public Works to execute a contract with the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. for the use of water in the Quincy reservoir located in the town of Braintree.

The contract provides that the city shall law an eight inch main from the twelve-inch main near the pumping station, over a route to be selected, to the reservoir of the Fore River Co., on DesMoines road. The main however is to be the property of the city and to be maintained by the city. The Fore River Co. is to pay the actual cost of the main and the work. The company is to be allowed to draw what water it needs for its own use, for the use of any other industry now or hereafter located near the company's own property or near the Fore river providing that such industry must be located on property abutting or adjacent property bounding on the said river.

The company shall not sell water for domestic or drinking purposes. They shall pay for the use of the water the sum of $1,000 per annum, but the right is reserved by the city to harvest ice at the reservoir or to sell that privilege, and the city has the right to use the water in case of fire or the failure of the Metropolitan system.

The contract is to run for a period of thirty years, but after fifteen years may be terminated at an election of the city on one year's notice to the company by the Mayor, provided that the action of the Mayor in giving such notice shall have been confirmed by the City Council for two successive years. The city shall not be liable if the company is unable to obtain water from the reservoir. The report that the order was adopted was incorrect. It was referred to the Finance Committee.

LONG SOUGHT PARDON COMES

Negro Murderer Spent Forty Years In State Prison

HE NEVER LEARNED TO READ

Bewildered When He Reaches Outside World and Sees Things of Which He Had Never Heard—Has Been Confined Longer Than Any Other Man In Massachusetts State Prison—Job Is Waiting For Him

Boston, Feb. 9.—William E. Hill, a negro, who has spent forty-one years in the state prison at Charlestown, stepped out of his cell this morning at 9 o'clock a free man. A new and bewildering world awaited him.

He was pardoned by Governor Foss yesterday afternoon, and the pardon, the first to be signed by Governor Foss, reached the prison in this morning's mail.

In February, 1870, a man named Jacobs was enticed to the Hill home in Stoughton and there murdered. William E. Hill, his wife and a man named Phillips were all arrested. Mrs. Hill turned state's evidence against her husband and was freed. Phillips was sentenced to the state prison and was pardoned two years later.

William Hill was sentenced to be hanged, but his sentence was commuted by Governor Claflin, and on Aug. 3, 1870, he entered the prison at Charlestown. Except for the time he spent at Concord, when the state prison was transferred there, from 1878 to 1884, he has never been outside of the gray walls of the Charlestown prison.

He was born in Ohio sixty-five years ago and was the son of slaves. He ran away from home when young and came to Stoughton. During the Civil war Hill enlisted with the Fifty-fifth Massachusetts regiment and served to the end of the war. He became a member of the St. John De Chambre post, G. A. R.

Mrs. Geraldine Trotter, assistant editor of The Guardian, is the woman who has brought about his release with the aid of comrade soldiers at Stoughton.

For nearly eight years Mrs. Trotter has been seeking his release. The members of the G. A. R. post at Stoughton have also contributed their share, and many of the names on the petition for his pardon were of Stoughton people.

Hill has been a model prisoner and has learned several trades during his long confinement. He has been imprisoned longer than any other man in the prison, being there six years longer than Jesse Pomeroy.

Unable to read, newspapers and magazines aided him but little in learning the happenings in the world without the granite walls.

Not long ago many of the prisoners were treated to a moving picture show in one of the halls and Hill was seated in the front row. He had never heard of such things as moving pictures and was dumfounded when people began to move on the screen. A scene on Fifth avenue, New York, with some fire engines was shown and when the engines began to tear down the avenue, coming towards the front of the platform from the rear, Hill leaped from his seat with fright and warned all about him to get out of the way before they were run over.

Phonographs, telephones, automobiles, and in fact all up-to-date appliances and inventions are unknown to him he had to be led about like a child when he left the prison today.

He is going back to Stoughton, where he will work for an old comrade in arms, Benjamin Washington, who conducts a florist store there.

His wife has long since died, as have many of his former friends. He is in splendid health and when informed that he was to be freed he wept with joy.

VOTE FOR INVESTIGATION

Hyde Park Citizens Want to Annul Purchase of Water Plant

Hyde Park, Mass., Feb. 9.—At one of the most remarkable and exciting town meetings ever held in this place, the citizens of Hyde Park voted last night for a rigid investigation into the purchase of the Hyde Park Water company's plant by the town a little over a year ago, and empowered the seven members of the Citizens' association executive committee to bring suit for the recovery of an alleged excessive price.

Both motions were carried by thundering votes of ayes, after severe criticism had been directed at Charles F. Jenny, associate justice of the Massachusetts superior court, for his part in the transactions as attorney for Hyde Park.

WEDDING COST $50,000

New York Society Discussing Bills Papa Gould Had to Settle

New York, Feb. 9.—Society is discussing the cost of the Decies-Gould wedding ceremony and $50,000 is given as the amount which George J. Gould, father of the bride, had to disburse.

The trousseau of the bride and the gowns of her maids cost $27,000, it is known. The flowers and the decorations at the church and the house formed the next largest item. Chiefly because most of the blooms were out of season, they cost about $10,000. The caterer's account exceeded $3500, while the attendants cost $2500 more.

A thousand dollars was the cost of the bride's cake. It was four feet high, made in three stories, and weighed 250 pounds.

BODIES ARE EXHUMED IN POISON MYSTERY

Two States Now Interested In Twigg-Elosser Tragedy

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 9.—A chemical examination of the organs of Charles E. Twigg and Miss Grace Elosser, whose bodies were secretly exhumed at Keyser, W. Va., yesterday, has been begun in hope of shedding new light upon the wedding eve tragedy which caused the death of Twigg and Miss Elosser.

The case has been reopened. Detectives have been hired again and two states are now employed in an attempt to solve the mystery.

District Attorney Arnold of Mineral county, W. Va., has taken a hand in the quest for a solution. He has learned that Twigg had ordered his wedding suit and that it was delivered after the dead bodies of Grace Elosser and Twigg were found in the parlor of the Elosser home in Cumberland. State Attorney Robb declares that he still clings to the murder theory.

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1911

To Avoid Colds
Keep Your Feet Dry

It is better to go out without your hat and coat on a damp and raw day than to walk around in the wet and slushy streets in thin-soled or low shoes.

The first thing to do to prevent colds is to keep your feet dry.

Then wear the right kind of clothing—and that means the kind that is loose warm and comfortable.

Then get into the habit of sleeping with your windows open. Fresh air has never killed anybody—but foul air has killed millions.

Then eat the proper food—nourishing food, and plenty of it.

Then always have a bottle of Sirolin at hand, and take it regularly in cold or damp weather, and whenever you have been exposed.

If these directions are followed until they grow into a habit, you will never be bothered by colds, or bronchitis, or coughs, and the grippe epidemics will pass you by

What Sirolin Is

Sirolin is not only the world's standard remedy for colds, coughs, influenza, bronchitis, grippe, and other pulmonary affections, but it is tonic and reconstructive in its action, as well.

It stimulates the appetite, improves the digestion, aids the assimilation of food, nourishes the tissues, and is potential in retarding that waste of tissues and that poverty of blood which are among the most prominent features of progressive consumption.

Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 129, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

CHAPTER X.

ROSE greeted Valentine pleasantly, the blush in her fresh young cheeks equaling the pink of the roses in her hat. She thanked him for awaiting her return, and she and her father seated themselves on the sofa, the ex-convict standing before them.

It was Mr. Lane who began to lead the conversation to a serious point.

"Mr. Randall—my daughter tells me that is the name you gave her."

"That is my name, sir."

"Well, Mr. Randall, I am not going to ask questions. I presume no one wishes to forget the past more than you. I am going to explain a situation to you and offer you employment."

"While I thank you I could not accept any position at your hands or your daughter's," answered Valentine.

"It is better that I started without assistance and procured employment with total strangers."

"But, Mr. Randall," began the girl.

The father continued:

"I think you are wrong, Mr. Randall. I understand perfectly the spirit which prompts you to take this stand. Still, I think you are wrong. Won't you let me explain fully?"

"With pleasure, sir."

"First we know or think we know the one thing against you. We believe, while knowing this, that you are trustworthy. I am the president of the Fourth National bank of Springfield."

"Springfield, Massachusetts?" exclaimed Valentine excitedly and turning away his face to hide the signs of the shock the name gave him.

"No; Illinois," responded the banker. A relieved expression came over Valentine's face.

"I own 30 per cent of the stock, my daughter 40," resumed the banker. "It is her wish, to which I assent, that I take you into the bank as an employee."

Valentine could hardly believe that he was hearing aright. That a banker should offer a newly released convict a position in his establishment was astounding.

"But, Mr. Lane"— he began protestingly. But Mr. Lane again spoke.

"One moment, please. You will get a rather small salary to begin with, but as you learn the business—I understand you are an accountant?"

"I was for a time—yes, sir."

"That will make your advancement rapid, presuming, of course"— The banker raised his eyes significantly.

"I understand, sir."

Rose leaned forward eagerly.

"And, don't you see, in a year or two"— she began, but her father interrupted.

"And this also I wish you to consider, Mr. Randall: In this position your past cannot affect you. I mean by that, since we know all, only your future concerns us."

"You are very generous, but"—

Rose again addressed Valentine.

"Won't you in some way allow us the chance to repay the kindness you once did me? I want you to come. You accept?"

The other considered for a moment. Finally he made up his mind.

"With the deepest thanks," he replied feelingly.

"We are leaving now. I shall expect you to report when?" asked the father.

"Within a week."

"That is entirely satisfactory."

Rose arose with her father and stepped close to Valentine, extending a dainty gloved hand.

"I shall look forward to seeing you," she said in a low voice.

The ex-prisoner gazed steadily into her eyes.

"I can only thank you," he murmured.

"Goodby, sir, until next week," spoke the banker.

"I shall try my best to make you glad of this," responded Valentine, his manner evidencing the gratefulness that welled within him as well as the earnestness of his desire to build anew the life that he had so nearly wrecked.

Father and daughter stepped to the entrance, leaving Jimmy Valentine standing in the middle of the hotel parlor. Half dazed by his good fortune, he gazed after them.

"I SHALL LOOK FORWARD TO SEEING YOU."

The banker hesitated a moment.

"I believe you, sir," turning toward Valentine. "I believe we shall never regret what we have done."

Rose also had a last word for her hero. She grasped her father's arm and said enthusiastically: "That is just how I feel, too, and—er"—she was becoming embarrassed—"Springfield is a beautiful city, Mr. Randall," she managed to end.

They were gone. Valentine sprang to the entrance and peered after them from between the portieres. A fleeting vision of a sweet young girl's face, smiling and confident, was his reward as Rose Lane walked out into the corridor. He stood and stared even when father and daughter had gone from sight, his eyes fixed on the point where the girl had disappeared.

And he was still standing in the same position when Red Flanagan, who had noticed the cessation of the conversation, stole quietly back into the room. He saw and understood. His plunge into the abysmal underworld, where might makes right and where might makes wrong, had not yet dulled entirely his knowledge of some of the finer emotions that impel mankind to various courses of action. He smiled. "He's hopeless. He's goin' square for keeps," he murmured. He diplomatically coughed.

Valentine wheeled about.

"Here, Red," he cried, "from now on we go straight. I've got my chance." He caught Red by both shoulders and shook him violently in his overwhelming joy.

"By right. But what do I do?" was the gasping response of Red, almost carried off his feet by the enthusiastic nature of Valentine's greeting.

"You trail along, Red, with me. Get a job in my town for a year, and by that time I'll have one for you."

"Doing what?"

Valentine hurled at his brother safe breaking expert a reply that caused him to stand speechless in amazement, jaws distended almost to the point of dislocation and with eyes that threatened momentarily to bulge entirely out of their sockets.

"I'm going to make you watchman in a national bank," was the cool response of Jimmy Valentine.

* * * * * * *

One bright winter afternoon, three years after the day Jimmy Valentine began to "go it straight," a young boy, attired in black velvet knickerbockers, turned the knob of the door of the private office of the assistant cashier of the Fourth National bank of Springfield, Ill. Barely eleven years old, Bobby Lane considered it the rarest treat of his life to be allowed a chance to invade this usually busy office and to play at being a banker.

The large office had two entrances, one leading into the hall of the large building and another leading into the tiled inclosure in which was being built a spacious new vault. In the middle of the room was a large mahogany desk. Near the hall door and close to the wall was a small mahogany writing table. Three or four comfortable chairs were scattered about the room.

On the glass of the hall door, glazed halfway to the top, was the inscription in trim black letters, "Lee Randall, Assistant Cashier."

And so it was with Lee Randall, alias Jimmy Valentine, that Bobby Lane, the banker's little son, was fond of romping away his (Bobby's) idle hours and with whom he frequently enacted the role of an austere, uncompromising banker.

Very much the same Jimmy Valentine in appearance and manner, Mr. Randall had scored a signal success as assistant cashier, and neither Mr. Lane nor any other official or director had found in the three years occasion for the slightest adverse criticism of the new employee. In fact, he was deemed to be a most valuable acquisition to the executive staff of the bank and had evidenced unusual capacity as a detector of counterfeit notes and of forged signatures on negotiable instruments. Yes, the assistant cashier was a man with a future of promise in store for him, and the Fourth National of Springfield had but a month before offered him the position of cashier, with a thousand dollars a year increase over his present salary. Not one official of the Fourth National could give a satisfactory reason for his refusal of the offer. "Very remarkable young man, very," was the comment of the president of the Fourth National when notified of the episode.

"Hurrah! Nobody in the office!" exclaimed Bobby to his sister Kitty, who followed him into the room.

The children, prime favorites with the assistant cashier, were accustomed to do very much as they pleased with him or with his office at this late hour in the day, when business with the public had practically concluded. Almost the only remaining thing for him to do was to attend to certain routine matters connected with the closing of the bank's business for the day.

"Come on; let us play something," challenged the sprightly Kitty, who, in her short skirted white linen dress and with her delicate features, much like those of her sister Rose, appeared more like a Christmas doll than a future inheritor of a fortune and of an imposing, dictatorial social position.

At Bobby's suggestion the children decided to play at "being a banker," and after a lengthy, spirited dispute Bobby impersonated the role of Mr. Randall, while Kitty was forced to be content with the character of a "lady borrower."

Bobby perched himself on the assistant cashier's chair and assumed as stern an expression as his childish features and mischievous roving eyes would permit.

"Now, I understand you wish a loan," began Bobby.

"I don't, either," retorted Kitty, sitting herself on a chair in front of the desk.

"Oh, come on and play. When I say 'I understand you wish a loan,' you say 'Yes.'"

"But you won't give me any money."

"If your security is good enough I will. Now," imperiously, "I understand you wish a loan."

"How much can I get?"

"No, no! You say a lot at first; that's business. Now, how much?"

"Fifty thousand dollars."

"That's fine." He paused, judiciously puckering his brows. "That's considerable money."

"That's the most I could think of," decisively.

"Don't talk that way," instructed Bobby. "You would be put out for making breaks like that. Just don't say anything when they find fault. Now, that's considerable money, but of course you have security?" He paused. "Well, say 'Yes.'"

"Yes."

"Well, I thought so—what?"

"What?"

"What have you got in the way of security?" he asked.

"A farm."

"How large a farm?"

"Ten million acres."

"Well, that's good. Now, what grows on this farm?"

She hesitated, then said: "Fruit—peaches and apples."

"That's good. What else?" he pronounced.

"Pears."

"Any bananas?" Kitty shook her head. "Very sorry," the lad went on "but we have all the fruit you have in our own back yard. The only fruit farm I could loan money on would be a banana farm. No. No bananas, no loan. Good day."

"But you didn't tell me to say bananas," insisted the girl.

"Tell you! A banker don't tell you anything you ought to know."

After delivering himself of this piece of financial wisdom Bobby endeavored to continue, but Kitty insisted on being the man for awhile. While the argument was in progress the door leading from the vault inclosure opened and in came no less an individual than Jimmy Valentine. He had come from inspecting the new vault, now practically completed, and which he had pronounced as fine a piece of burglar proof construction as he had ever seen—and Jimmy Valentine in his day, as some of us know, had rightly been considered a connoisseur in this particular connection. To settle the dispute the assistant cashier took Kitty out with him to show her the vault, in the building of which she had shown a childlike interest.

No sooner had the door closed behind them when through the hall entrance came Rose Lane, who, gowned in the height of Paris fashion and of more mature development, presented even a more alluring picture of feminine loveliness than she had at the time three years before when, just out of Vassar, she had rescued Jimmy Valentine from the horrors of Sing Sing prison.

"Hello, Bobby! Where's Kitty?" she greeted the boy.

"Outside." He pointed toward the door leading to the vault.

"Where is Mr. Randall?" she continued.

Bobby grinned knowingly.

"You're always asking for Mr. Randall, aren't you?" he asked smilingly.

Into Rose Lane's face came suddenly a flare of anger at the lad, but in a moment it was gone. A smile, tender, hopeful and true, supplanted it.

And Bobby, with all the accrued wisdom of eleven years, saw the smile and smiled in return, for he was old enough to understand.

POLICEMAN DIES OF WOUND IN HIS LUNGS

Received Bullet Fired by Brother Officer at a Burglar

Boston, Feb. 9.—Policeman Richard J. Gallivan, the victim of a bullet intended for a burglar and fired by the policeman's brother officer, Patrolman Patrick A. Hanley, died yesterday afternoon.

The bullet from the police revolver hit him in the neck and was deflected so that it tore through the man's lungs. When he was taken to the hospital there were some lapses of consciousness. At one of these times Gallivan said to his sister:

"I'm willing to die if I have to. I don't want you to blame Hanley. It was an accident. Hanley was not to blame."

Hanley is broken hearted. He has not slept since the shooting, and every moment of his time off duty he has been at the hospital hoping his bullet would not prove fatal. When he heard of Gallivan's death he cried like a child.

TAFT STATES HIS POSITION

Demands Action on Reciprocity Pact With Canada

CONFERENCE WITH SENATORS

Tells Them Congress Will Be Called Back Unless Vote Is Reached During Present Session—Thinks Country Favors Agreement and That House Will Indorse It—Senate's Unlimited Debate Rule an Obstacle

Washington, Feb. 9.—If administration senators had any doubt about the attitude of President Taft toward the Canadian reciprocity agreement, it was removed when Senators Crane and Carter returned to the Capitol yesterday afternoon from a conference with the president at the White House.

The message which these senators brought to their colleagues was that there must be a vote on the agreement at the present session of congress or congress will be called back almost immediately after adjournment on March 4.

Although Crane and Carter declined to discuss their mission to the White House, the report soon leaked out that the president was insistent upon a vote. It is said that he made plain his belief that the country generally favored the adoption of a reciprocity trade agreement with Canada; that the McCall bill to put the agreement into force will pass the house with a majority and that the senate would enact the measure if given an opportunity to vote upon it.

The rules of the senate, which permit untrammelled discussion of a measure, are the principal barriers to a vote in that body. It is known that Senators Heyburn and Bailey are bitterly opposed to the agreement, and that the opposition extends also to most of the progressive Republicans who represent agricultural states.

Some of these senators have hinted that their relations with the White House have not been sufficiently pleasant of late to cause them to exert themselves in support of an administration measure.

Senators Crane and Carter entered at once upon a campaign designed to advance the president's program. Already they have conferred with other senators who are especially friendly to the administration and have sought to enlist their services in a movement to obviate the necessity of an extra session.

The impression has prevailed at the Capitol that Taft would insist upon votes on both the Canadian agreement and the bill to create a permanent tariff board, but this partially was removed yesterday. According to the general report at the Capitol, the president placed the Canadian agreement above the tariff board measure and would be satisfied if the former were enacted at this session.

In the event the permanent tariff board should fail it is believed that an appropriation would be voted in the closing days of the session to continue the existing board for another year.

If an extra session should be called by reason of the failure of the senate to grant a vote on the Canadian agreement, it is understood that the president then would demand the creation of a permanent tariff board and might go so far as to promise data on the wool and woolen schedule of the tariff act if the Democratic house desired it.

With the end of the session only three and a half weeks away, a serious situation is threatened in the house of representatives by the illness of leaders of both parties. Representatives Payne of New York and Dalzell of Pennsylvania, from the Republican side, and Champ Clark of Missouri, from the Democratic side, all are reported on the sick list.

The illness of Payne, Dalzell and Clark may mean the delay in the consideration of Canadian reciprocity in the house. A bill carrying the president's reciprocity pact into effect is pending in the house committee on ways and means. Payne and Dalzell are the ranking Republican members of that committee and Clark is the ranking minority member. A vote in the committee has been set for Friday and friends of the reciprocity measure are hopeful that the leaders may be present at that time.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The gunboat Marietta, whose sailing from Key West, Fla., was reported to the navy department, will go direct to New York for a stay of ten days before proceeding to the Portsmouth navy yard, her ultimate destination.

It is pointed out here that the release of the Marietta by the Florida quarantine officials offers conclusive evidence that the gunboat did not have yellow fever aboard, as was suspected.

WILL ENDEAVER TO COLLECT BIG FINE

Government on the Lookout For Gaynor-Greene Money

Washington, Feb. 9.—If the government has evidence that any part of the money embezzled by John F. Gaynor and Benjamin D. Greene in complicity with Captain Oberlin M. Carter in the Savannah harbor frauds is now secreted, there is no indication that the department of justice will show its hand before the two prisoners apply for release from the Atlanta penitentiary.

Gaynor and Greene have served their four-year sentences but now are being held for a $575,000 fine. Under the law, they must remain in jail until the fine is paid or take the pauper's oath and swear that neither has more than $20 above the exemptions allowed by statute. A confinement for thirty days after the expiration of the sentence, however, must precede such a move.

Agents of the department detective bureau have been working on the case and Attorney General Wickersham has had conferences with District Attorney Marion of Georgia. Wickersham intends to collect the fine if possible.

HARD RUN TO MORNING FIRE

One of Buildings of Granite Railway Company Gutted

The alarm from Box 147, at 9.12 this morning, was for a fire in a small building in the Granite Railway Co yard used as a hoisting engine house. Just how the fire started is unknown. There were several men working in the yard near the building when they noticed smoke pouring from the building. There is a hydrant located near the building and the men run a line of hose and attempted to extinguish the fires, while others ran in an alarm from box 147. The fire gave the Central station department a hard run. The steamer started with five horses and got part way when the recall sounded. The ladder truck which was on runners was drawn by four horses and they also had a long hard pull. The Ward Four apparatus had a shorter run. The building was badly gutted, although Chief Williams says that the machinery in the building was not damaged to any extent. He estimates the loss at $500. The building is surrounded by several other wooden buildings, but none of them took fire.

The social which brought to a close the month of self denial which has been observed by the Hall Place M. E. Church during the month of January, was held in the vestry Wednesday evening. The entertainment was in charge of 4th vice president of Epworth League, Miss Maud E. Hodgkinson.

The evening's pleasure opened with singing and prayer, after which the district superintendent, Dr. John Galbraith of Boston gave a short address. Miss May and Miss Ada Williams rendered a piano duet.

The Ladies Aid served refreshments of coffee, cake and doughnuts. Games were enjoyed until a late hour. Miss Maud Hodgkinson, Miss May Williams, Miss Ada Williams and Miss Hilda Francis acted as receiving committee. Despite the inclement weather a good number were present and enjoyed the evening. It was also a financial success.

HIGH SCORES AT WHIST

J. F. Fuller's Percentage Was Above Eighty-Five

Bad weather did not prevent the usual number of whist enthusiasts from indulging in the game at the Granite City Club on Wednesday evening. Eight tables participated in the tournament. J. F. Fuller was the high man with 85 per cent, and it looked at one time as though he would break the record. Up to the twentieth hand he had won 56 points and lost 2. Had the tournament ended then he would have had 96 plus per cent. In the next five hands, however, he lost 7 points, and won 3, making his final totals 59 won and 10 lost, which gave him 85 plus per cent. The second best score was made by George H. Field, which was 48 won and 17 lost, giving him 73 plus per cent. Refreshments were served as usual after the tournament.

GRANITE LEAGUE.

The Princetons took all four strings from Yale on Wednesday in the Granite League, the first game being the closest. Hanson and Hallquist were a tie for best single, but Hallquist had the best total.

HARRY A. BURGESS.

The funeral of Harry A. Burgess of Wollaston was held Wendesday afternoon from his late residence, 7 Bass street, at 2 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. Joseph A. Walther, pastor of the Wollaston Baptist church, of which Mr. Burgess was clerk, assisted by Rev. E. D. Webber of Wolfeville, N. S., a former pastor of the church. Rev. Mr. Walther read the scriptures and made a few remarks on the life of the deceased and Rev. Mr. Webber offered prayer and also spoke in eulogy of the departed. There were other clergymen present but they did not take part in the services.

During the service Edward E. Bullock sang three selections.

The services were very largely attended and there was a profusion of beautiful flowers from the church and Sunday School and from the employees at the Boston Gear Works, in addition to many tributes sent by loving friends.

Mr. Burgess who was 56 years of age and who had resided in Wollaston a number of years, enjoyed a large circle of friends and will be greatly missed by the community and his place will be hard to fill on account of his ability and experience.

Mr. Burgess was chief draughtsman at the Boston Gear Works and held an important position in the executive department. Previous to coming to Quincy he was associated with the firm of W. Breed & Co., of which firm he was a member. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston.

GREAT JOCKEYS VERY SCARCE

Shilling, Dugan, Archibald and Garner Only Stars Left.

MANY SIGN TO RIDE ABROAD.

Butwell, Powers, Knapp, Shaw and Miller Will Pilot Horses on Russian and German Tracks—Keene Without Pigskin Artist Just Now.

There will be a dearth of first class jockeys on the eastern race tracks the coming season. All the best riders with one or two exceptions have signed engagements to pilot horses abroad. The jockeys who will remain that have a slight degree of prominence are Shilling, Dugan, Archibald and Garner, a fine quartet as jockeys go nowadays, but scarcely enough to fill the demands of the turfmen.

Dugan has signed with August Belmont. Shillings will ride for S. C. Hildreth. Archibald will don R. F. Carman's racing colors, and Garner will sport the silk of the Newcastle stable. Just who will guide James R. Keene's racers has not yet been decided. If Joe Notter remains in this country he will be offered the mounts on the entrants in stake events. In the overnight races, in which the Keene horses will carry light weights, the racers will be intrusted to the hands of a little apprentice boy who now is under contract.

Even this lot of riders may be cut down if Hildreth should decide to take his string of racers to England. In that event Shilling will go with his employer. Shilling is justly regarded as the best jockey in America. He has proved his ability in the saddle and his superiority over the other lads times without number.

Ten Stars Go to Europe.

The jockeys who have been prominent for many years on the American turf that have signed to ride abroad next year are Butwell, Knapp, Powers, Gannon, Sumpter, Shaw, Miller, O'Neill, Henry and Herbert. These boys for a number of years have been known to the racegoers on the American and Canadian race tracks. Each one is a rider of high class. They can pilot winners anywhere, on any race course in the world. Their migration to the race tracks of Europe will leave a big void in the racing ranks of this country.

JOCKEY GARNER, LEADING WINNER OF LAST YEAR.

Butwell and Gannon will go to Russia. Knapp will ride for Baron Oppenheim, Powers for Richard Haniel and Herbert for James H. McCormick in Germany. Miller and Shaw are under contract to rich owners in Austria. O'Neill will have the mount on W. K. Vanderbilt's horses in France. Henry will have the leg up on M. Le Blanc's French thoroughbreds. Sumpter will free lance in Germany.

Danny Maher and "Skeets" Martin, who have long ridden in England, will continue their vocations there. Maher will ride for Lord Rosebery, and "Skeets" Martin is under contract to Harry Payne Whitney.

Convenient For the Invalid.

During a recent illness the patient was waited upon by a sister whose cares were many, including those of looking after the invalid. A device for saving the steps of the nurse at length was hit upon—that of keeping various small articles in little bags hanging from the bed of the patient. In a pretty silk bag were kept clean handkerchiefs and eyeglasses used by the invalid for a few minutes at a time when she sat up in bed to glance over a paper or magazine. In another bag were the letters and picture postals sent by kind friends to cheer her in her loneliness. Comb and brush were kept in a rubber lined bag designed for wash cloth. When the illness was over the bags were restored to their original uses.

NEW TELEPHONE RATES

Additional Service Provided For Entire Suburban District

It will be interesting news to a good many subscribers that the telephone company is going to add to its schedule rates for one-party and two-party lines permitting unlimited service throughout the suburban district.

While the new rates serve an excellent purpose in many respects, and offer a number of distinct advantages, the fact remains that they involve an increase in cost to some telephone users.

It is easy to understand why this is so People move from one section of Greater Boston to another, leaving behind them relatives and friends with whom they wish to keep in touch. This intimacy is maintained by telephone. Under the new schedule, many of these suburban calls would cost 10 or 15 cents, and such subscribers would be asked to pay more than they were paying before or else restrict the number of their calls.

The telephone company apparently has been carefully studying the effect of these various classes of new rates and has decided they need amendment in order to be fully satisfactory, and has voluntarily recommended to the highway commission the re-establishment of the suburban district as a whole, and two residence rates giving service throughout this district. One of these rates is $45 a year for a one-party line, and the other $36 a year for a two-party line. Under the old rates the charge for this service was $54 and $42. They say it is impracticable to try to give, over such a large territory, with more than two parties on a line, the quality of service people in this community demand; hence the limitation to one-party and two-party lines.

The letter of the company's counsel to the Massachusetts highway commission is as follows:

Boston, Feb. 2, 1911
Massachusetts State Highway Commission,
15 Ashburton Place, Boston, Mass.

Gentlemen: The new telephone rate-and-service schedule for the Boston and suburban district has now been in force about four months. Approximately 60 per cent of the telephones in the district are now either being operated under the new schedule, or have been ordered transferred to the new schedule by the subscribers. Other changes are being ordered daily, and the plant is rapidly being put into condition where it is hoped that orders can from now on be handled with less delay.

Further study and investigation during the last month and a half has confirmed the company in the belief expressed to your board in December, that the new schedule offers, at equitable rates, sufficient and suitable classes of service to meet the varying legitimate requirements of all subscribers, both present and prospective—with one possible exception in the suburban district.

Although the district or zone service of the new schedule is apparently better adapted to the needs of the majority of the subscribers in the suburban district, there are, nevertheless, a very substantial number of residence subscribers there who have comparatively little local use for residence service, but who, on the other hand, have one or two suburban exchanges outside their local district which for social or family reasons they have been in the habit of calling in the past with more or less frequency. A substantial number of these subscribers, unless they curtail the use of their trans-suburban calls, will obviously have the cost of their residence service materially, and from some points of view it might seem inequitably, increased.

The officers of the company feel that there is a substantial and legitimate desire for a commuted rate for such service by those who prefer it to the district service, and accordingly have been endeavoring for some time to find the fairest solution of what is clearly no simple problem.

If a rate for such service can be found which promises to be reasonably fair not only to the company and the subscribers who elect to take such service, but to the rest of the subscribers in the territory as well, it would seem as if such a service should be added to the schedule.

Of course in a rapidly growing multi-exchange territory such as the suburbs of Boston no four-party line unlimited service, no matter how remunerative to the company, can be permanently retained in the schedule without distinct unfairness to the rest of the subscribers, and without certainly and permanently preventing throughout the entire Boston and suburban district the attainment of a reasonable standard of first class service—which, after all, is the fundamental requisite to which all other considerations should eventually give way.

This objection, of course, does not apply to one and two party line service, and while other objections are likely to develop, they seem to be outweighed by the fact that apparently unless a residence service covering the entire suburban district is added to the schedule, many subscribers will be paying an amount for their residence service seemingly disproportionate when compared with the cost of their neighbors' service, whose use is largely local.

The difficulty presents itself, however, of deciding what is a fair rate for an unlimited residence full suburban service on one and two party lines. The company's old rates for this service were $54 and $42 respectively, and we believe that these rates were reasonable and fair. The company wishes to suggest the restoration of this one and two party line service and its addition to the official schedule. We would suggest, however, that the rates for this service be reduced to $45 and $36.

Whether or not these rates for this service will prove to be fair and reasonable no one can tell until they are given a trial and then tested in the light of experience. Inasmuch, however, as the entire schedule is in a way on trial we see no controlling objection to including in it two more rates on the same basis.

Accordingly, unless your honorable board sees some objection, the company would like to add to the schedule as recommended by your board a one and two party unlimited full suburban service for residence, at annual rates of $45 and $36 respectively; the two-party line to be equipped with divided ringing.

With this addition we feel that the schedule becomes, so far as can be ascertained without a trial, one well adapted to every reasonable need of the community.

Yours respectfully,
E. K. HALL.

TABLE SERVICE TIPS.

All Ornateness of Decoration Has Departed For Simpler Effects.

Fashion is fickle in table service as well as in other things. The dinner table of today is not what it was a few years ago. All the ornateness of decoration has departed, and centerpieces no longer resemble jungles, while one can eat at one's ease without being surrounded by silly little china Cupids and swans.

The whole scheme of decoration for the modern dinner table makes for simplicity. Any suggestion of ostentation is bad form. The table is not strewn with trailing smilax and loose flowers, nor is the bare mahogany seen as of old, except for luncheon or breakfast.

There is a reversal of taste in favor of good linen, plain glass, good flowers and a general practical simplicity of service in every detail. Glass bowls with a few well selected flowers are even supplanting the silver ones, but the latter are often of such real beauty and lend to the table such distinction that it will be difficult to supplant them entirely.

Odd little novelties for the table have crept in recently. One of the newest is small cruet frames for each guest, and these cruets contain nothing but pepper of different kinds. Cayenne, Nepaul, Aji (from Peru), Hungarian, paprika and Chile powder are used, so that each guest may flavor his food to his taste. The really up to date person nowadays pretends to be an expert in pepper.

"And how is your husband getting along after his operation?" asked Mrs Oldcastel.

"Oh," replied Mrs. Gottit Layteleigh "the doctor says he's repuderating nicely."—Judge.

COUNCILMAN ROSS POPULAR AT HOME

All Houghs Neck United in Doing Honor to Their New City Representative

Mayor Shea and Others at the Reception

John R. S. Ross, the first resident of Houghs Houghs Neck to be elected a member of the City Council, was tendered a reception Thursday evening by his constituents. The reception was held in Associates' hall, and was entirely informal. There were remarks by a number of the gentlemen present, all of whom had a good word to say for Councilman Ross, leaving no doubt of the high regard in which he is held by the residents of that section.

Henry W. French acted as toastmaster and first called upon Councilman Ross.

John said he wished to thank them all for what they had done toward his election. He hoped that he should be able to make good, and that they would have the same confidence in him at the next election as they did at the last. He could not expect to get all that Houghs Neck wanted but would do all he could, and he hoped to be successful; too much however must not be expected of him.

Mayor Shea had a good word to say for Councilman Ross, and thought the people showed good judgment in electing him. He is onto his job all right, for today when the water main burst he called up City Hall and wanted to know why there was not a double line of pipe to Houghs Neck. Now this is an easy matter, and for a small sum it will be possible to run a main from Rock Island. He will probably get as much in the City Council as any one, but he will not be able to get all you want. Do not knock him too hard. He is getting his experience this year. Give him credit for being honest and conscientious. It is impossible to get all you want. The city has not got money enough. I am present to show

VALENTINE SOCIABLE

A Clever Program at Wollaston Congregational Vestry

A valentine sociable was enjoyed in the vestries of the Wollaston Congregational church on Thursday evening. Hearts formed the scheme of decoration for the generous supper served by the ladies of the church. On each table was a dish with strings issuing from it, at the end of which was a heart. As each pulled his string he found on the other end verses of a humorous or valentine nature.

The feature of the evening's entertainment was furnished by the members of the Wollaston Boys' club. This consisted of an "Indian stunt" by the Boy Scout contingent of that club, under direction of Theodore Du Plessis. This is a feature of the Boy Scout work and was creditably performed by: Henry Erickson, Charles Moun, Thomas Barstow, Arthur Blake and Ross Whitehead. In charge of Rev. Edward A. Chase, a pleasing graphaphone concert, including numbers by the various operatic stars, was given.

TOUR OF QUINCY.

At the Wollaston Unitarian church on Thursday evening Charles H. Johnson of Quincy delivered his intresting stereopticon lecture upon "Historic Quincy." Mr. Johnson took his audience on a tour of the "City of Presidents," stopping at each place of interest. The views were very clear and included a large number. Following the lecture those present adjourned to the vestry, where a social hour was enjoyed, and ice cream and cake were served by a committee composed of Mrs. Edward J. Cummings, Mrs. H. A. Stevens, Mrs. Edmund Taylor and Mrs. George W. Bennett.

TO SPEAK ON LINCOLN.

Nathan K. McGill who speaks on Abraham Lincoln at the Quincy Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock is a student at Boston University Law school. Mr. McGill is a native of Florida, born of slave parents, and after graduation from the Law school will return to Florida to practice. He has made a special study of Lincoln's life and character and has discussed him with persons who had a personal acquaintance with the martyred President. It may be of interest to know Mr. McGill started in life as a bootblack, next learned the barber's trade, studying every spare moment until he was graduated from a small Florida college. Then he entered the B. U. Law school, Boston, and is now in his second year. Those who have heard this address have asked him to repeat at its close Lincoln's address at Gettysburg. One cannot better enjoy Lincoln's birthday than by attending this lecture.

TWO BOYS MISSING.

Robert Nelson, aged 14 years, son of Andrew Nelson of 22 Buckley street, and Toigo Salenius, aged 12 years, a son of John Salenius of 40 Nelson street, are reported to the police as missing. The Nelson boy is believed to be the leading spirit, and it is thought they are headed for Calumet, Mich. The Nelson boy came from Calumet last summer with his father, wheo says the boys mother took him to Calumet after she obtained a divorce. Then the mother married and he went there and brought the boy to Quincy.

Chief Burrell thinks the desire to see his mother prompted the boy to go west, although she died two weeks ago. The boy however did not know this. As far as can be learned the boys had $1.50 between them. The police of Calumet and intermediate cities have been asked to watch for them.

MR. THOMAS EXPLAINS

Taxes More Honestly Assessed in Quincy Than Boston

Editor of Quincy Daily Ledger:

I noticed in your news columns of Thursday evening an account of certain questions and replies between the Mayor of Boston and myself at a hearing before the Metropolitan Affairs Committee of which I am a member.

In justice to myself and to the city in which I was born and which I have the honor to represent in the Massachusetts Legislature, I desire to make the following reply.

In answer to a question of mine regarding the amount of taxes paid into the City Treasury of Boston by people residing outside of the city, the Mayor in the course of his remarks said in substance, "I had a talk with the President of the Quincy Board of Trade in which he said that property in the City of Quincy was not assessed up to its true value. I told Mr. Stone said the Mayor, "that the reason property in Quincy and some other towns and cities was under-valued was that the smaller the valuation the less those municipalities had to pay in state and metropolitan taxes." The Mayor said that the assessors by making such assessments were not acting honestly and greater burdens were thereby placed on the city of Inplied that the assessment of property was wholly a matter of opinion and that in my opinion the assessors of the City of Quincy were as honest if not more honest in their assessments than the assessors of the city of Boston, and the fact was evidenced by the immense amount of taxable property which was discovered unassessed by the State department during the past year.

As the Quincy papers apparently have no State House correspondent I feel they should make careful investigation of any garbled reports which might appear in a Boston paper reflecting discredit on our city before publishing the same.

William R. Thomas.

NO CRITICISM OF ASSESSORS

President Stone Interviewed by the Daily Ledger

President Eugene R. Stone of the Board of Trade arrived home this morning and when shown the statement of Mayor Fitzgerald relative to the valuation of property in Quincy, issued the following statement:

Editors Daily Ledger:

I do not believe that Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston stated that I said the Assessors in Quincy were dishonest. Mayor Fitzgerald did ask me why the tax rate was so much higher than it was in Boston. I told him that I accounted for it in part from the fact that, in my opinion, property in Boston was valued higher than in Quincy.

So far as I know the present Assessors are attending to their business in a satisfactory manner, and I have never intended to say anything that could be taken to infer that they were not. They are gentlemen, well and favorably known in Quincy, and I believe them to be faithful and honest.

Eugene R. Stone.

PATRIOTIC MEETING

Proposed by Ward Four Improvement Association

The meeting of the Ward Four Improvement association Thursday evening was largely taken up settling affairs connected with the recent banquet, which was pronounced by all to have been the most successful affair of its kind ever held in that section of the city.

While returns from all the tickets sold have not as yet come in, enough have come to assure the association that the receipts will pay all bills and leave a small balance. All of the bills connected with the banquet were presented to the meeting and it was voted they be referred to the auditing committee and paid if correct.

It was voted to extend the thanks of the association to the young ladies who so materially assisted in the success by attendance at the tables, also a vote of thanks to al lwho had contributed in any way to make the affair a success, as well as to Mrs. Dennen, who prepared the salads and tees.

A committee was appointed consisting of Dr. Ash, John Evans and Joseph Walker to confer with the School Committee to see if the hall in the Willard school could be obtained for the evening of Feb. 23, for a Lincoln and Washington patriotic meeting.

KNIGHTS OF MALTA.

Great interest was manifested by the members of John Adams commandery, K. of M., at their convocation Thursday evening in Greenleaf hall, over the nomination of officers for the ensuing term and judging by the number of nominees, for some of the offices there will be a spirited but friendly contest on election night, Feb. 23.

The commandery is making great preparations for the public installation which will take place March 9. This will be one of most elaborate installation ceremonies ever performed for this commandery, as all the members of the staff are past deputies and well skilled in the work and will present a very imposing spectacle in their full uniforms. Frank R. Melville is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

—This is the regular year for 17-year locusts to appear, but Dr. Raymond Ditmars thinks the Hudson river will check their northward march. In Massachusetts they would find hard picking after the gypsy moth.

STARTS OFF WITH GREAT ENTHUSIASM

Three Days' Hustle of Young Men's Christian Association for $5,000

Over Sixty Business Men Making a Canvass of the City.

The campaign of the Y. M. C. A. to raise a fund of $5,000 before midnight Monday started in Thursday evening amid much enthusiasm and full confidence of raising the full amount and possibly more. The sum is needed to repay loans for current expenses for the balance of the year which ends May 1, 1911. The budget for this year is $11,000, nearly one-half of which is raised from members and in rentals of dormitories.

THE QUINCY Y. M. C. A.
NEED MAKE NO
APOLOGIES WHEN
IN NEED OF FUNDS.

Ladies as well as gentlemen are interested, and each night they will serve a supper at 6.30. Mrs. A. H. Gilson is chairman of this committee, and has selected as her assistants Mrs. N. G. Nickerson, Mrs. A. I. Beal and Mrs. Gilbert M. Miller, each of whom will be in charge one night.

Mrs. Nickerson served a very satisfactory menu on the opening night, including escalloped oysters, cold tongue, cabbage salad, biscuits, ice cream and delicious cake. The attentive waiters were: Mrs. Gorham Nickerson, Mrs. Robert Acker, Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. E. I. Beal, Miss Marjorie Rideout and Miss Avah Gilson. Seven tables were originally set, but an additional one was necessary.

John L. Miller, the chairman of the School Committee, was chairman, and immediately enthused all with his enthusiasm. He was pleased to note how the association had gained in Quincy, and to see the support it received from the business men.

The association was fortunate in having Frederick W. Ganse present to set the ball in motion.

He had been in several short term campaigns all over the country, and had no doubt about success in Quincy. All over the country the appeal of the Y. M. C. A. was much the same. You want to hold up your end in Quincy. See that your association stands well in the country. It is not a charity, but a work for strengthening the manhood at a time of life when most needed. It was better to raise the funds for a year in a few days than to worry a finance committee for a year. These campaigns are necessary to keep in touch with the people of Quincy. Not a man should be allowed to escape without some subscription. He told the men how to work, and asked all to lift his share. Amid great enthusiasm

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Something must be done this year to reduce the high cost of high flying.

Lorimer says he never gives up, but it is alleged that he did to those Democrats who voted for him.

Champ Clark favors an extra session of Congress. So does the small boy favor an earlier Christmas.

The graft situation in Adams County, Ohio, is not as bad as we were led to believe. Only one-third of the citizens have been indicted.

Ex-King Manuel, it is said, is to take a course in civil government at Oxford. It seems to be somewhat belated instruction.

New York is to have a new statue of George Washington. That one in front of the Sub-Treasury is probably overworked keeping an eye on Wall street.

If the Quincy men who are members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce were active in the Quincy Board of Trade much more for the advance of the city might be accomplished.

Mayor Shea is of the opinion that he is making a good contract with the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., and at his request the Daily Ledger will print in full on Saturday the proposed contract.

The bachelor envies the married man and the benedict envies the bachelor, and the woman smiles upon both and sighs for a ballot are the views of the optimist, but ex- Representative Luce is a married man and thinks different. He told them at the banquet of the Quincy Board of Trade that bachelors should not be taxed; that taxes were for benefits received, therefore he would tax the married men. A pretty compliment that to the ladies.

BUYING FOREIGN TITLES.

A criticism of American girls who marry foreigners, by Mrs. C. W. Fairbanks, wife of the former vice president, has attracted considerable attention. Mrs. Fairbanks said, during a discussion of the Gould-Decies wedding, that she thought an American girl who married a foreigner had retrograded. "She is acceptin ideals of life which American men have outgrown."

The poor immigrant who comes over here to make a little money at ditch digging, and then takes his small fortune to live like a miniature lord in his former squalid home, has often been condemned as an economic loss.

But when a great fortune, the result of America's free industrial opportunities, of America's rich soil and mines of American enterprise, is transferred bodily across the water, simply because certain pieces of hereditary paper and certain ribbons and medals look attractive to a silly girl, there is an economic loss many thousands of times more serious.

Of course the ocean is only a jumpable ditch to Cupid. The condemnation of all foreign marriages is as barbarous as prohibition of any other commerce. Exclusive intermarriage has reduced great races to pale and flabby decay. Many international unions are based on true affection and worth. Such unions must tend against insular prejudice which conceive that all political enlightenment is lodged under any one flag.

But too many American girls are dazzled and bewildered by social exteriors. They fail to look beneath the gaudy decorations of titled aristocracy, under which may lie concealed the heart of a dog.

Thus the history of these unions shows some basis for Mrs. Fairbanks' too sweeping rebuke. After the honeymoon, there clash two sets of ideas regarding the position of woman. Most girls bred in the equal partnership of an American home, chafe under foreign masculine lordship, which has no doubt led to the bitterness of the English Suffragette campaign.

SIX DOLLARS IN TREASURY

About $100,000 Capital of Coal Company Said to Be Missing

Boston, Feb. 10.—That about $100,000 paid into the treasury has disappeared, except a bank account of $6, and that there remain no records nor any form of recognized bookkeeping to explain where it went to, is the discovery claimed by the investigators into the affairs of the bankrupt Cumberland-Mansfield Coal and Power company.

What became of the money received from the sale of $1,000,000 worth of capital stock set aside to pay the operating and developing expenses of the $5,000,000 corporation is a question President Cary and the company's attorney would like to ask of "Colonel Jim" Digowity and his son, James V., Jr., who have not been located.

LIVES IN PERIL IN PROVIDENCE BLAZE

Elevator Boy Proves Himself to Be a Real Hero

Providence, Feb. 10.—Fifty men and women fled by means of escapes, ladders and elevator in a panic that started when thick black smoke suddenly filled the rooms on the fourth and fifth floors of the Swarts building yesterday afternoon.

They were watched by a crowd of 500 gathered on the corners of Orange and Weybosset streets, in the very heart of the down town center.

Meanwhile inside the building Henry Davis, the negro elevator boy, ran his car rapidly up and down, with the result that when the fire apparatus responded to a double alarm, and 60-foot extension ladders were run up on the sides of the building, there were none left to rescue, all escaping through their own agility on the escapes and the bravery of the elevator boy in sticking to his post.

The damage is estimated at $30,000, mostly by water. Women who had been rescued by Davis grouped about the building after the rush of excitement was over and wrung his hand, flooding him with congratulations as to his bravery.

ENGAGING SERVANTS.

Points to Bear In Mind When Interviewing a Maid.

"One of the reasons why some mistresses are continually changing maids is that they do not give the girls a fair idea of what will be expected from them," said a woman recently. "I have in mind one such mistress, who is constantly changing her parlor maid. Now, the fact of the matter is that she expects her parlor maid to act as lady's maid also, but she never says so when interviewing a girl.

"The applicant is not told that looking after her mistress' wardrobe, attending upon her at her toilet, mending and doing up her lace, etc., will be included in her duties.

"A girl taking this situation who really wishes to do her parlor work efficiently finds she has not the time to do it in, and she naturally soon becomes dissatisfied and gives notice or else she does her parlor work badly because she is so hurried over it, and then her mistress—not reasonably, of course—is dissatisfied and soon finds herself on the hunt again in search of the not to be found person who will do two people's work properly for one salary.

"It is far fairer when engaging a maid to be perfectly candid as to what her work will be. The above case is, of course, an extreme one, but still it is this sort of thing—the painting of situations in colors that are too glowing—which causes frequent changes in many households. The maids are not given a fair idea of the work they will be expected to do, and naturally when they arrive and find that it is a much harder place than they were led to expect they become dissatisfied.

"It is far better, if necessary, to interview a dozen servants until you find one willing and competent to undertake the work required than to describe the situation you offer in tempting terms, engage a girl who doesn't in the least know what the place is really like, have a period of domestic friction and then have a look for another.

"For instance, if there are many stairs in your house it is wise to tell the applicant so. If she is not strong she will, if she is wise, at once refuse the situation, for stairs are very trying in such a case. This is far better than at the end of a week to hear, 'I am sorry, ma'am, but I can't stand the stairs and would like to leave when my month is up.'

"Then some people will say, 'Oh, we are only two in the family, so it is a very light place.'

"They apparently do not think it necessary to mention that they have relays of visitors who are as much trouble as a large family would be, but they are surprised when, in spite of it being a light place, the servants will not stay."

"NOT AFRAID OF THE MOB"

Americans Not Controlled by Prejudice, Says Bristow

DIRECT VOTE FOR SENATORS

Kansan Takes Issue With Lodge and Would Have Change Made In Law —Says Trusts and Combinations Were Never More Vigilant In Seeking Power In Government Affairs Than They Are at This Time

Washington, Feb. 10.—Sharply antagonizing the position of Senator Lodge on the use of corporation influence in politics, Mr. Bristow of Kansas addressed the senate in support of the resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution permitting the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

"How," he asked, "can the distinguished senator entertain such a delusion when at this very hour there are in a number of states deadlocks in pending senatorial elections, caused solely by the dogged and persistent determination of certain powerful financial interests to control the election of senators from thoses states.

He said that there never had been a time when these interests were more vigilant and grasping for politfcal power and dominion than now. Bristow asserted further that the great financial systems have acquired too much power in the government of the United States with the result that they had used their power to enrich themselves at the expense of the general public.

He added, "Unless a change is made not only in the method of electing senators, but also in the manner of selecting delegates to the national conventions, the rising tide of unrest and dissatisfaction that prevails throughout the country today will rapidly increase. Men will not become less greedy for wealth and power. The great financial interests will not be abate their efforts to control, not only business, but the politics of the country."

Mr. Bristow was not afraid of the effect of giving too much power to the people. "I do not believe it," he exclaimed. "I am not afraid of the mob. The American people are not controlled by passion or prejudice. They are conservative and cautious; do not welcome change and cling to precedent. You place in their hands great power, and they will exercicse it with deliberation and care."

In support of the election of delegates to the national conventions by vote of the people, the Kansas senator said:

"It has become customary for national conventions to be made up of a large number of federal office-holders who went to perpetuate themselves in official power or to be composed of ambitious men who hope to secure the federal offices. In addition to these two classes there are a number of commanding delegates who represent the powerful financial and commercial institutions of the country and who are there to look after the interests of such institutions.

"Trusts and combinations representing great transportation and industrial companies seek to control the state and national conventions of both the great political parties, and if they succeed it makes little difference to them how the election goes or which side wins. Their representatives contribute generously to both campaign committees, and because of such contributions expect to secure certain appointments and also to control the legislation in which they are concerned."

The speaker found in the possibility of corrupting legislatures the strongest argument in support of the resolution. Such conditions, he said, had in the last twenty years resulted in fourteen vacancies in the senate. Bristow closed with the expression of the hope that the resolution would be adopted, "so that hereafter every senator will come here with a commission direct from the constituency that he is to represent."

BARRED FROM HOTELS

"Everyone Seems Against Me," Is the Complaint of Mrs. Schenk

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 10.—Mrs. Laura F. Schenk, recently tried for attempting to poison her husband, has been barred from all the hotels in the city.

She went to the principal hostelry in the city, but was told that the house was full. At the next place she fared no better. When she tried to rent apartments in an apartment house she fared no better.

"The only thing left seems to be exile from Wheeling," she told a friend. "Everyone seems against me."

COUNCILMAN ROSS

my appreciation for Councilman Ross, for I know him to be a good fellow, and that he will make a good Councilman, also I like to come here to meet a crowd of good fellows.

President Wall of the Associates said everybody knew "Honest John" Ross, and no one but who felt pleased at his election. We are proud to have him as our representative and feel sure he will make good.

We will ask for enough, and if we get fifty percent we will be satisfied. He has the united support of all the residents.

Councilman Ericson said too much must not be expected of Councilman Ross. He had found by experience that a councilman could not get all he wanted, for there was not money enough to go around. He had been more than pleased to do all he could for Houghs Neck.

Councilman Sandberg said the residents of Houghs Neck should settle their differences at home, so that when they came to the City Council they would be unanimous. He would be more than pleased to do what he could for Houghs Neck and he wished Councilman Ross success as a Councilman.

Councilman Smith said he had made it his business since being a member of the Council to analyze the Councilmen, and he had weighed Councilman Ross in the balance and found him all right. If you expect too much from him you will come down with a bump. You must remember that there are 22 other men in the Council, and you have got to show them that your wants have merits.

Capt. Fosdick, the champion of the fathers, mothers and children, did not intend to speak on the wants of the beach, but as this was the first public opportunity he had, he wanted to thank the Mayor for his efforts in giving Houghs Neck a school building. While we may not understand the needs of Houghs Neck, we do understand our city government, and I thank you.

Thomas Phillips spoke of the lack of interest that the people took in their representatives in the Legislature. If they got in closer touch with them there were a lot of bills passed for the money interests that would never go through. This getting in touch with the people is a good thing. It is the popular system of government. He hoped that the Associates would keep in touch with all of the councilmen and see that legislation passed is for the benefit of the people.

Commodore Whittemore of the Quincy Yacht club had come down to see his good friend Ross. He is all right. He can make as many promises as any man on the beach. He congratulated the Associates on their good judgment in selecting John Ross. If he starts right he will get considerable. He must map out and plan for the things he desires. I wish him all success.

City Messenger Harry W. Tirrell, who is developing into quite an after-dinner speaker, was glad to be present and say a good word for his life long friend John Ross. John was a right good fellow, and he felt sure that the councilmen from the other wards would find him so. He had found from his long service at City Hall that all councilmen were right jolly good fellows, and that all were conscientious workers for the best interest of the city, and for their particular ward. Of course he had no hand in shaping legislation, but was at the command of any councilman, and he wished to assure Councilman Ross that his wants would be carefully attended to.

At this point it was announced that the committee in charge of the refreshments were ready. George Irwin was the caterer, and he served escalloped oysters, rolls, coffee and cake.

The lunch over, Capt. Walter Sturgess gave an original one-act comedy which was well received.

P. F. O'Brien spoke briefly on the needs of Houghs Neck, particularly the causeway.

Neal Regan, the public landing man, spoke of the needs of having a public landing at Houghs Neck, and a good wide street leading to it. As it was now, if private corporations saw fit, they would prevent landings being made on our water front.

Andrew Johnson of Presidents Hill said he did what he could to help elect Councilman Ross, and thought he would make a good member of the Council.

Thomas F. Dwyer said he was in the harness years ago, and understood what Councilman Ross was up against. We are glad that he is all loaded, and we will be with him next year, and the year after, when Mayor Shea runs for his fifth and sixth terms.

Tom Butler, the old Republican war horse was the last speaker. He told of political victories won years ago, when he was more active in politics than now. He also spoke of his visits to Houghs Neck and his friendship with Councilman Ross.

How Ladies Improve Looks!

"Many ladies, old and young, suffer a round of tortures with their nerves, and many are so frail, thin and bloodless, that their splendid features are lost sight of, while a vain attempt to conceal the angularity of the figure deceives no one but themselves and really excites the pity or ridicule of the world," said a well known, largely employed practicing physician, in a recent lecture at a young ladies' college. "I do not mind exposing a little secret of mine to all such, as it can do no harm and may result in much happiness and health. It is simply this: Any thin, bloodless, nerve-tortured man or woman can become as fit as the fittest by taking regularly for several months an easily obtained pharmaceutical product known by the profession and pharmacists, as 'three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets,' but up in sealed packages with directions for home use."

SCANDINAVIAN MASQUERADE

Attractive Scene at Alpha Hall Last Evening

The masquerade ball of the Scandinavian Socialist club was held in Alpha hall Thursday evening with an attendance of about 75 couples. The Costumes were of all descriptions, unique, burlesque and beautiful. The committee inspected the different costumes from the platform during the grand march, and when the circle was formed the following were picked out for the prizes: Ladies 1st, Miss Sophie Casperson, representing a Colonial dame, prize a silver candelabrum 2nd, Mrs. Helen O'Brien dressed a Columbia, prize a silver cup. 3rd, Miss Ellen Larson, wearing a Swedish peasant's costume, prize a jewel case; 4th, Amanda Peterson, representing an Italian girl, prize a gold jabot pin.

Men:—1st, Axel Peterson, in French court costume, prize a gold scarf pin. 2nd, Olof Johnson, wearing a Cavalier costume, prize a brush and comb set. 3rd, Olof Hanson, in Jewish garb prize a pair of cuff links.

After the prizes were awarded, the signal was given for unmasking, and the orchestra broke into the opening waltz. Dancing continued until 2 o'clock with two short intermissions. There were many costumes worthy of mention, but all of course cannot be given. Among the most noteworthy were the Queen of Hearts, Nights, Gypsy, Mexicans, Spanish bandolero, Swiss peasant, Military Maid, numerous national costumes representing the various districts of Sweden and Norway, Shepherdess, Mrs. Punch, and so on indefinitely.

The committee in charge of the party were: Jean Allgorin, chairman, Harris Wallin, Otto Erickson, Hjalman Sternberg and Sigurd Dalby. Cary's orchestra furnished the music. Quite a number of the guests were from out of town. The gathering was picturesque in the extreme and the predominance of the bright colored national costumes gave a very attractive appearance to the scene.

BURTON HOLMES FINAL.

Burton Holmes will close the most successful season in his entire career before Boston audiences this week at Tremont Temple. For Friday evening and Saturday afternoon he announces the most amusing and comprehensive travelogue he has ever delivered, the title being ::Twice Around the World." On Saturday evening, in response to requests from many who were unable to attend his former travelogue on this subject, he will repeat "The Passion Play of Oberammergau in 1910."

"Twice Around the Wolrd" is an epitome of four separate circlings of the globe, and he will offer to his audience of fellow travellers interesting colored and moving pictures taken by him during his 18 years of public life.

Feb. 22 Mr. Holmes will sail for South America, and next winter his travelogues will tell of Argentina, Brazil, Chile and other countries. This evening some of the naval officers of Argentina, stationed at Quincy, will be guests of Mr. Holmes.

INSTALLATION.

The Granite Conclave Improved Order of Heptasophs met for installation of officers in Electa hall Thursday evening. Ernest Plaser district deputy supreme orchon and his suite from Allston installed the following:

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

Michael Drohan, long a resident of West Quincy, died at the Boston City hospital, Thursday afternoon, from injuries received at Neponset earlier in the day. Drohan with other men were at work tearing down a small frame building to make room for the buildings to be put up by the Lawley boat plant. The men had attached a rope to the top of one of the walls and were pulling it to the ground, when the whole wall collapsed and Drohan was buried underneath the debris. He was removed to the hospital where he died. He was 58 years of age. Mr. Drohan came to Quincy at the time the Granite Branch railroad was built and has resided here ever since. He leaves a widow and two sons.

Plain Picture Frames Are Favorites Now.

The picture frames used by the most artistic people nowadays are in plain effects. Burnished gold and mahogany are the newest colors for frames. The former is a dull gold—so dull, in fact, that it blends beautifully with mahogany. The effect of such a combination is entirely unlike the old style of framing with wood and a strip of gilt next the glass. The blending of mahogany and the burnished gold into frames bring out the tones beautifully in sepia pictures.

An authority on picture framing is responsible for the information that the gold alone, the wood alone and the two in combination may be used to successfully frame all kinds of pictures that are generally to be found on the walls of living rooms, libraries and bedrooms.

The newest frames are narrow. From one to two inches is the correct width for medium sized pictures, while for smaller subjects, such as photographs, only a half inch frame is required. The latter is usually of dark wood polished to show the grain.

Both oval and square frames are correct. The latter are more expensive, because more difficult to make and polish.

Wooden frames are flat and plain except in a few cases when a little carving is used as a motiff placed in the center of the top of the square frame. The plain frames are, however, considered better taste. Gold frames are very dainty in design, small delicate tracings being preferred to bold patterns. The copperish looking gold combined with reddish orange tints in the polished wood makes an artistic frame when used in the right proportions—that is, widths. And a better effect is gained by using a wider width of gold than of the wood. But, of course, much of the success of framing depends upon the subject framed, the wall upon which it is to hang and the furnishings of the room, but one cannot go far wrong with the new frames.

A MATINEE TEA.

Ellen Terry Presented With Medal For Services to Dramatic Art.

AWARDED BY NEW THEATER.

The Story Told In Acceptance Speech by "Queen of the Mimic World." People of Note at the Performance. Cookery Lecture on the Casserole.

Dear Elsa—I had the great good luck yesterday afternoon to be present at the special matinee given in honor of Miss Ellen Terry, the great English actress, who has lately been in this country "discoursing," as she puts it, "about Shakespeare's women."

The New theater of New York city was the scene of the performance. As you know, this theater, which is now new merely in name, having been finished several years ago, stands for all that is highest and best in American dramatic art. It was founded by a score or so of New York's wealthiest and most distinguished citizens and modeled upon the Comedie Francaise idea. At the end of Maeterlinck's wonderful miracle play, "Sister Beatrice," in which Edith Wynne Mathison very beautifully and artistically portrayed the character of the erring sister, an exquisite gold medal was presented by the founders of the New theater to Miss Terry in recognition of her many years of service to dramatic art.

But I must begin at the very beginning of this wonderful afternoon and tell you all about what happened. Much to our regret, Margaret L. and myself got to the theater rather late. We had expected to have great fun watching the celebrities take their seats in the playhouse. To make up for lost time we began rubbering through our lorgnettes the instant we took off our hats, and the first person we spied in the center box was the dear Ellen herself. She was chatting merrily with a party of friends and unsuccessfully trying to hide from the public gaze behind an enormous bunch of pinkish white jonquils, which only proved a charming foil for her own spiritual loveliness.

You know how interested I always have been in Eleanor Robson, and you remember that we saw her together at her farewell performance, the "Dawn of a Tomorrow." Well, after looking and looking around the house I discovered Mrs. August Belmont, the erstwhile Eleanor of stage fame, sitting in her husband's box, smiling and beautiful as of yore. The possession of millions does not seem to have affected her mode of dressing in the least, for she was simply gowned in a dark green corduroy coat and skirt suit you or I might have worn, topped with a big picture hat of black velvet trimmed with a butterfly bow of black malines. Her furs were gorgeous. She's charming, and do you know her hair is quite white, but her face is very youthful looking. My dear, to tell you all the names of people occupying boxes would read like a page from the social register, and I'll spare you.

When the life of Sister Beatrice had come dramatically to an end there was a wait of a few minutes. Miss Terry and her bunch of posies meanwhile had disappeared from the box, only to be discovered, when the curtain again rolled up, seated in a throne chair in the center of the stage. On either side of her were seated the members of the New theater company and the founders of this dramatic institution. The applause was deafening, and after it had subsided Paul D. Cravath, on behalf of the founders, made a short speech, explaining the meaning of the medal. During this speech Miss Terry wriggled—she sure enough did—and squirmed in her high backed chair much as a naughty small boy does when he is being talked to by father "for his own good." At other times her emotion almost got the better of her, and again I felt she would say, if she had been the American boy of my imagination, "Oh, say, cut it out!" I hope Ellen will never know I said this. We sat in the fourth row in the orchestra, and when Mr. Cravath referred to her as the "queen of the mimic world" she protestingly hodded her head, saying, "No, no."

Her speech of acceptance was very characteristic. She rose and stood, a regal figure with black crape draperies about her, some delightful old creamy lace at her throat, around which was a single string of pink coral beads, with one hand on the throne chair, and in a hoarse voice—she had been suffering from a severe cold—told this story:

"A man once bought a parrot for which he paid much money. After taking the bird home he found it could not talk. He took the parrot back to the man, explaining the situation. 'Talk!' said the man. 'I know that it can't talk, but it is a devil to think.'"

Miss Terry said that she was in the position of poor Poll. She couldn't talk, but she was a devil to think. She ended the little speech with this quotation from Shakespeare:

"I were but little happy if I could say how much." And, taking the medal in her hands and pressing it to her heart, a beautiful smile spreading over her face, she bowed to the stage people and the audience, saying, "I am very, very happy and as pleased as Punch."

The orchestra then played "America," and we all patriotically stood during the rendition of the music.

I am saving the best for the last—the "tea" given to Miss Terry in the rehearsal room of the theater, which was transformed for the occasion into a palm garden and set with numberless small tables, at which the guests sat and devoured all kinds of afternoon "eats." Tea and coffee were dispensed by noted actresses. Rose Coghlan gave me my cup. During the tea Miss Terry held court at one end of the room, and she had a cordial grasp of the hand and a word or two for every one presented. My, but I'm glad I got a handshake!

Just before I went up to her she had been talking with Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, the original of her husband's famous Gibson girl, and the real woman is lovelier than the pictured one. A stunning black gown and black hat covered with pale gray ostrich feathers heightened her blond beauty. With Mrs. Gibson was her daughter, a girl of perhaps fifteen, whose great regret is said to be that she "will never be beautiful like mother." I must stop gossiping, but let me say that the fascinating Julie Opp is just as attractive now that she is Mrs. Faversham. Both she and her husband were at the tea. Indeed, all the artistic, dramatic and social world was there.

Here's a fall, my dear girl. I'm going to take a sudden drop from dramatic heights to culinary depths. You asked for the casserole recipes given at the cooking lecture last week. As a matter of fact, the talk was scheduled "A Talk on the Casserole," but the lecturer for some unknown reason talked most of the time about fireless cookers, a subject I don't care a pin about. The only recipe I did manage to capture was one for brussels sprouts, which she said were delicious done en casserole in a little stock and cooked for one hour. The unglazed casserole was recommended for use as more substantial and cheaper than the glazed variety. And, by the way, the lecturer explained the reason of enamel ware cracking so easily. It seems that the component parts of this ware are glass, on which is welded a coating of steel. Now, you can easily understand that when a vessel containing hot liquids is suddenly subjected to a stream of cold water from the spigot cracking is going to be the result of this contraction and expansion process.

Do you know, I think domestic science can be carried too far. I think homes conducted on strictly scientific lines, with too much importance given to food chemistry and faddish cookery, with thermometers everywhere, with odd shaped utensils to which the normal woman never becomes accustomed, do not make for as happy a life as where fewer rigid rules obtain. Happiness is something that cannot be measured or weighed, in the humble opinion of MABEL.

Here's a Smart Waist.

This very smart and new waist is one of the most practical of the spring models. It is made of blue and white striped silk, with trimmings of plain blue and small satin covered buttons.

Braid Edging.

Fine lace braid, almost transparent in its delicacy, can be used very effectively as edging for table linens of the lighter sort—doilies, tray cloths, bread dish covers, etc.

The braid is sewed into leaves and flower petals and stitched around heavy linen. For a larger piece a good effect is gained by using four small squares of the linen and forming them into a Maltese cross by braid loops between the squares.

This same braid can be used also to advantage in braid crochet as a border to heavier pieces and in appliqued designs, like coronation braid, on centerpieces.

MARQUETRY ON EXHIBITION

Table Made 300 Years Ago Restored to Beauty

There will be on exhibition Monday Feb. 13, at the rooms of L. A. Fagen, 1056 Hancock street, a beautiful marquetry parlor table, imported from Europe by Brooks Adams, Esq. A magnificent specimen of marquetry in oyster heart design, completed between 1600 and 1629. All veneer on top and front, is cut crossways of a beautiful grained wood that cannot be duplicated. The infinite patience of the original maker is readily acknowleged as the numberless pieces of inlay and the intricate design make it almost priceless and without equal in this country.

L. A. FAGEN.

The rigors of our climate and the dry furnace heat having raised up all of the beautiful marquetry and veneer, it was impossible to use it. But having restored many rare and valuable specimens of furniture for its owner, Brooks Adams Esq., the table was turned over to Mr. Fagen for restoration to its original beauty.

The wood under the veneer was so full of worm holes that required filling before replacing that many experienced cabinet makers advised Mr Fagen not to undertake the task, claiming it would be too great a tax on anyones patience to restore it This advice was unheeded, as many years experience in both Russia and this country had particularly fitted him for the work, and after a painstaking labor of over 553 hours, (not including polishing) the results of his efforts so gratified the owner, that his consent to exhibit it was readily obtained.

A cordial invitation is hereby extended to all connoisseurs and lovers of beautiful and unique furniture to call and inspect this interesting example of the cabinet makers art at 1056 Hancock street, Quincy.

This work having subjected some of his patrons to a necessary delay, Mr. Fagen takes this opportunity of thanking them for their patience and courtesy.

The Tallest Cook.

Housekeepers who are in a great quandary between their consciences and their unsatisfactory cooks may get out of the dilemma of a recommendation by copying the unique methods of Mr. Richard Carle, the actor, when he found himself in just such a delicate position.

The cook, so the story goes, was a giantess just from Sweden, who failed to fulfill her high mission as a cook in a way to please the Carle family. On departing she asked for a recommendation, and this is what Mr Carle presented to her:

"To Whom It May Concern—I have lately had in my employ Hulda Swanson, who was engaged to cook for a family of three and do such things as would be possible when not cooking. Under this head might come a little dusting and dishwashing and answering the doorbell. Taking these things into account, I wish to say that Hulda is absolutely the tallest cook I ever saw."

If you burn gas, the NEVER-BREAK METAL GAS CHIMNEY will

Lighten Home Cares.

You may turn the gas up quickly, or drop the chimney on the floor, it cannot break. Never has to be cleaned and gives a brilliant light. Mantles last longer and cannot get black. Saves gas and makes a mantle wear longer. Means a positive and large saving in chimneys, mantles and gas consumed.

Try just one and you will never go back to glass or mica chimneys. A better and softer light than a glass chimney.

You ought to be able to get the Never-Break Metal Gas Chimneys from your dealer at 25c., but if you cannot, we will send the same postpaid on receipt of price. You need not send anything extra for postage.

Y. M. C. A. FUND

Mr. Ganse left the hall to take a train for Boston.

Mr. Miller had more words of encouragement and then introduced Theophilus King.

Mr. King's special theme was "service." It is a great thing to receive service but higher, better and stronger to render service. You men have got something here in the Y. M. C. A. that can be of service. Boys of Quincy are feeling it.

President R. D. Chase followed. He said all associations have to have money. He told a story of how little Billy Jones raised money.

Secretary Gay reviewed the rules to be the guide in the campaign. Some of which are: Be cheerful on this job. Take only such names as you fully intend to solicit. Make no apologies for your errand, you are not begging, only asking for a gift for the best civic and philanthrophic movement in Quincy. Know your story. Use telephone freely. Mr. Gay said the association was doing outside work in all wards of the city.

L. H. Clee, the boys work director was introduced as a wizard with boys, and told of activities every day in the week, and of the great interest being taken by boys.

Then each of the team captains spoke and jollied each other a little. D. King said his team would be known as the hustlers. Mr. Bailey started a boom for John L. Miller for mayor, and applied for a job. Mr. Murray accepted the challenge of the Hustlers. Dr. Hardwick was sure other teams would take the dust of Team 4. Capt. Branch told a story of what the letters Y. M. C. A. might stand for—"You Might Call Again." Capt. Sedgwick said all his men responded and will do their duty. He was awarded the brooms for the night.

Alden Blanchard spoke for the boys teams which will attempt at the same time to get 200 new members.

Then all got busy with their cards, and some even began soliciting.

BANKRUPTCY RING MUST GO

Federal Attorney at Boston Takes Drastic Action

AN ATTORNEY UNDER ARREST

Said to Have Concocted Scheme With Two Others to Defraud Creditors of Bankrupt by Padding Claims For Borrowed Money and Then Effecting Settlement on Profitable Basis—Other Attorneys Likely to Be Prosecuted

Boston, Feb. 10.—The bankruptcy probe recently instituted by United States District Attorney French in consequence of numerous charges of fraud made by trustees of bankruptcy estates, resulted in the arrest of William Sharak, an attorney, who is charged with conspiracy to conceal assets in bankruptcy proceedings.

Robert Krensky, who conducts a grocery store, was also arrested as a fellow conspirator. He is said to have purchased from Sharak the estate of the bankrupt, who was a relative of his.

The arrest of Sharak is the first of a number among Boston attorneys which the government has contemplated for some time. Heretofore French has refrained from prosecuting members of the bar in bankruptcy frauds, contenting himself with jailing the bankrupts themselves.

The number of frauds, however, has increased so fast in the last few years, in consequence, it is said, of a monopoly or so-called ring of bankruptcy lawyers, that the district attorney has felt that it was his duty to take drastic action and has decided to attempt the prosecution of attorneys, as well as bankrupts, in all fraud cases in the future.

The government contends that Sharak and two others concocted a scheme to defraud creditors of a certain bankrupt by making a common law assignment and then a compromise offer of a settlement at so much on the dollar. To effect the settlement on a profitable basis for the bankrupt, the government alleges that the liabilities of the bankrupt were padded by claims for borrowed money to the extent of more than $1600 which the government maintains were fraudulent.

The assets, it is claimed, were not properly appraised and the sale of the bankrupt's estate, which is said to have occurred in Sharak's office, is denied by the government as being made in good faith. No attempt was made to get a bid at the sale, it is charged. The property was purchased by a relative of the bankrupt, who continued his business without apparent interruption.

When arraigned before Commissioner Haayes Sharak pleaded not guilty and was held in $1000 for a hearing on Tuesday.

Owing to his position as a member of the Suffolk bar, the commissioner decided not to insist upon bail and allowed him to depart on his personal recognizance.

POINT FOR SUFFRAGETTES

Their Bill Will Probably Come Before Parliament In April

London, Feb. 10.—Luck served the women's champions in parliament when a ballot was taken to secure places for private bills. They won first chance for the suffrage bill. The conciliation committee thereupon met and revised the bill so that it will enfranchise all women householders. The committee also adopted a resolution appealing to Prime Minister Asquith not to take their day.

Unless the government decides to extend the monopoly of the time of the house of commons beyond Easter, the bill will probably be taken up on April 28.

RECORD PRICE FOR CALF

Seven Weeks Old Holstein Bull Is Sold For $10,000

Brockton, Mass., Feb. 10.—The highest bred and most valuable calf in the country was sold for $10,000 by Daniel W. Field, shoe manufacturer, special student at Harvard and fancy cattle breeder, to W. H. Miner of Chazy, N. Y.

The calf is a 7 weeks old Holstein bull. It was sired by Colantha Johanna Ladd, one of the most valuable bulls in the country, which sold for $12,000, and its dam, Cornucopia Pauline, is the champion butter and milk cow of the world.

NO WARRANT FOR HANLEY

Patrolman Who Shot Gallivan Will Not Be Placed Under Arrest

Boston, Feb. 10.—Judge Burke of the municipal court has refused to grant a warrant for the arrest of Patrick A. Hanley, the patrolman who shot and fatally wounded Patrolman Richard J. Gallivan on Federal court last Tuesday morning. The facts of the case were presented to the judge by Chief Inspector Dugan, Sergeant Horton and Special Officer Buchanan. These men were all engaged in the investigation of the affair.

The judge saw that the shooting was entirely accidental and there was no ground on which to hold Hanley for manslaughter. The evidence taken by the three men will be presented when the inquest on the death is held.

DEPUTY COLLECTOR IS UNDER SUSPICION

Indicted In Connection With Alleged Liquor Tax Frauds

Cincinnati, Feb. 10.—Six indictments charging bribery against Jacob Baschang, a deputy collector and politician, were returned and subpoenas for representatives of twenty local breweries were issued in the liquor tax investigation. The subpoenas order the officers of the breweries to produce all of their books showing sales and the identity of saloons which have been their customers since June, 1906.

The indictments against Baschang follow an inquiry into alleged fraudulent practices, by which certain breweries are said to have obtained refunds of liquor taxes. It is estimated that the county has been defrauded of $250,000.

BLAME FALLS ON DEMOCRATS

If Permanent Tariff Board Bill Falls In Senate

IT IS FAVORED BY COMMITTEE

Endorsed by Strict Party Vote, All the Minority Being Recorded In Opposition—Measure Which President Desires Enacted Into Law, and Which Has Already Passed the House, Has Many Amendments

Washington, Feb. 10.—By a strictly party vote, all of the Democrats in opposition, the senate committee on finance voted to report favorably the bill passed by the house to create a permanent tariff board. Several important amendments were adopted.

By their action in permitting the Lodge tariff board bill to be reported out of the committee on finance by strict party vote, the Republican leaders of the senate have decided to place upon the Democrats the responsibility for defeating this administration measure, if it fails to reach a vote.

All the Democrats on the committee voted against the bill, hence the action of the Republicans in voting for it makes it a straight party measure. It guarantees practically that every Republican in the senate will vote for the bill if a vote can be reached. A few Democrats may be found voting for the bill, but as a party they are aligned against the president on a measure which he desired above everything else to be non-partisan.

The changes made in the bill by the finance committee are regarded by Senator Lodge as relatively unimportant. It was upon his own motion that the bill will provide for confirmation of appointees by the president. The McCumber amendment requires the tariff board to consider and investigate transportation charges as an element in the cost of domestic production.

This is intended as offering a broad measure of protection to western products which are marketed on the seaboard; California lemons, for example, which are distributed from New York, in competition with water-borne fruit from Italy.

The amendments to section 6 are noteworthy, if affecting no principle of the bill. As introduced by Lodge, the bill provided that information obtained by the tariff board should be held as confidential for its own use. The amendment strikes out the words "for its confidential use," but still provides that the board shall give out no information which might be used in business rivalry.

But by inserting the words "including all testimony" in section 7, the committee would make it possible for the president of either house of congress to demand and publish all the testimony taken, including names and places upon which reports of the board may be based.

In fact, as amended the bill makes it mandatory upon the board to submit such testimony with whatever report it may be instructed to make by the president or either house of congress. According to the amended bill, persons and concerns testifying before the board would appear to have no protection against publicity. Whether this condition would be held to apply to all statements made by manufacturers and others who may supply the board with information, including names, is not clear.

The power of the board to subpoena witnesses, administer oaths and require the production of books and papers is untouched by amendment.

One of the most important changes made by the committee requires that the five members of the board shall be confirmed by the senate. Under the house bill the executive would have had absolute control of the personnel.

The report to the senate was made by Mr. Lodge. He presented it without comment, but Senator Bailey remarked on behalf of the Democratic members of the committee that they did not agree to the report and "reserved the right to offer amendments and to resist the bill in all proper ways."

New Plans For the House

Washington, Feb. 10.—The house has taken up the bill for the reapportionment of the house under the thirteenth census. The Republican caucus favored retaining the present representation of 391 members, while the Democrats favored a membership of 433.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor. Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

CHAPTER XI.

JIMMY VALENTINE entered his private office from the room where the new vault had been erected. He saw Rose Lane standing close to his desk, where Bobby was presiding with all the dignity that went with his age. The girl's eyes met his, but only for an instant. Valentine lowered his gaze to the floor, his thoughts whirling rapidly through his brain.

True, at one time he had had serious thought concerning the beautiful young woman who had saved him from Sing Sing, from Warden Handler and the warden's favorite pastime of "solitaire."

But of late he had come to realize that he would be doing her a lasting wrong, a vital injustice, to permit himself to make any serious advances toward her. She had been attracted by him. She was now even more interested in him. He was observing enough to learn this. As for his own emotions toward her? He loved her. That no one would deny who saw him in her company. He could not conceal it. Even the infantile Bobby had guessed what he had endeavored to make his secret. Yet he had realized plainly the uncertainty of his position. At any moment the unexpected might happen, or, rather, the expected might happen, and some one would possibly uncover and reveal phases of his past that he would be unable to explain. Such had been the guiding thought of Jimmy Valentine in his social intercourse with the banker's daughter during his tenure as assistant cashier in the bank in Springfield, and now he saw more clearly than ever the wisdom of his course. Doyle—Doyle, the relentless tracker of men—had threatened to "get" him, and Doyle was always an element to be reckoned with.

Although Doyle's threat had been made years before, Valentine had never underestimated the detective's ability nor his tenacity of purpose. While he, Valentine, had taken precautions which he firmly considered would prevent Doyle from getting a hold on him again, yet, after all, it was by no means definitely assured that he would not defeat the ex-convict in his ambition to live "on the square," therefore Valentine must under no circumstance make any serious advances toward Rose Lane. The burden of misery that might descend upon him would only be given greater weight.

Valentine desired to talk alone with Rose Lane, and after a lengthy conversation, punctuated by lavish promises of hunting trips, sent the lad away to play with Kitty in the new vault, which for their purpose became a smuggler's cave.

The assistant cashier stepped forward toward Rose, who stood close to his desk, resting her sable muff on its polished top.

"To what am I indebted for this pleasure?" he asked of her.

"Yourself." She smiled graciously on him as she spoke.

Valentine drew near to her.

"How?"

"Don't you suppose I like you as well as do the children?" she answered gayly.

"Do you?" he asked anxiously.

"Yes, but why is it that you never do call on me any more?" she questioned reproachfully.

"Well—because"— he became very uncomfortable. She must never know the true reason for his avoidance of her.

"Do you think it's fair to use a woman's weapon against her? You know it's a woman's birthright to say 'because' when she"—

"I meant"—

"What?"

"Oh—ah—what were we talking about?"

"As to why you don't call on me any more."

Valentine struggled to think of a successful mode of escape from answering the question.

"Well, now—don't you see," he stammered. "Of course you do." He was becoming more involved every moment.

The girl's smile began to fade. Rather grimly she interrupted him.

"No, I don't see at all," was her announcement. She moved away from the desk.

"Well, Miss Lane, I"—

The telephone bell rang at his desk. He bent forward and put the receiver to his ear. As he hung up the receiver a clerk entered.

"Will you have the cash now?" the employee asked.

"In a few minutes."

No sooner had the clerk made his exit when a messenger boy entered, bearing a telegram. Valentine tore it open, apologizing to Rose as he did so. The girl saw that the assistant cashier was very busy. She determined to leave him for the present.

As Valentine dismissed the boy she announced that if the press of business would not continue all day she would return. Valentine assured her that in a half hour he would be at leisure and that he would sacrifice everything else in order to talk to her. She started toward the door, assuring him that she would return. As she opened the door she turned and cast a smile in the direction of the assistant cashier.

But Valentine did not notice it. He did not see it. His eyes were glued to the slip of yellow paper that he held in his hand. The girl saw that as he read the telegram an expression of tenseness, of unsubdued excitement, crept across his face. Wonderingly she softly closed the door. A few steps carried her before Valentine, who looked up in surprise, thinking she had gone.

"What is it—that telegram?" she gasped. "It's bad news for you—very bad," she went on. "I must know."

Valentine, undergoing a pronounced shock owing to the contents of the message which he held in his hand, was almost completely unstrung by the interruption of the girl he loved. Was it not fate that prompted her to appear before him at the very moment when—

"Oh, it is nothing," he said weakly. "Merely a little business tangle—that is all."

He stepped out from behind his desk, crumpling the fateful telegram in his hand, and gently led the girl to the door. "Remember," he said, "I have an engagement with you in a half hour."

"I will remember."

Unconvinced, mystified and thoroughly agitated by his nervous manner, Rose Lane went out of the office.

Valentine, smiling as best he could under the circumstances, closed the door behind her. He crossed to her chair, sank into it and flattened the wrinkled telegram before him. Again he read it from end to end:

"Look out," he read. "Doyle will be in town this afternoon at 4 to see you about an important matter."

The assistant cashier dropped his chin into his palm and stared vacantly at the opposite wall.

"Doyle," he muttered — "George Doyle. He said he'd get me if it took ten years—a lifetime. Well, perhaps he can; then, again, perhaps he cannot. At any rate, he can probably ruin my career, my hopes, my standing here, where I have friends who believe in me."

Valentine leaned back meditatively in his chair. The fatal telegram dropped unheeded to the floor. His mouth set determinedly. A new fire blazed in his eyes, the fire that had consumed him and had spurred him on when in the days and nights of the past he had ventured forth on a desperate enterprise.

He would give George Doyle a race, that he would. He would match his wit against that of the skilled sleuth. He already had laid the basis for what now must be his course of procedure, and he believed that it would withstand even the cunning and force of George Doyle. At any rate, he could try.

Valentine leaned forward and pressed a button. A clerk entered. The assistant cashier hesitated a moment, then spoke quickly.

"Tell the watchman to come here," he directed.

The clerk nodded and went out in search of Red Flanagan—yes, Red, none other than the one time accomplice of Jimmy Valentine, whom the latter, true to his word, had taken with him in his attempt to "go it straight."

Flanagan must be told of the coming of Doyle, who was his sworn enemy also. In addition, Red would have to assist the assistant cashier, now known as Mr. Randall, in the maneuver which the latter was about to execute.

Then there was Avery—old Bill Avery. From the day that Valentine had sent him away from the hotel in Albany Avery had been making heroic efforts to live "on the square."

The three years that had elapsed since No. 1289 had advanced Avery, long a "yeggman" of the most desperate type, the price of a railroad ticket, had made a revolutionary transformation in him. Today he was married, had a growing business and had performed for Valentine a service that was to render the vengeful efforts of George Doyle much more difficult and somewhat less effective than the detective would relish should he ever learn the truth.

Avery had been in communication with Valentine on various occasions in a secret manner. So carefully concealed, in fact, had been his moves that not even Red Flanagan had obtained the slightest knowledge of them.

True, Red was aware that Valentine had received various puzzling communications from one "Mr. Cronin," but how was Red to know that Mr. Cronin was Bill Avery unless the assistant cashier was pleased so to inform him, which he was not?

At first Valentine had had the belief that some friend was responsible for the sending of the warning telegram,

"I WILL REMEMBER."

but now that he more calmly considered the matter he dismissed that thought. Another idea fixed itself in his brain, which would cause him to govern his actions accordingly in the face of the danger that he wisely acknowledged to himself to be vitally alarming. At any cost he must prevent Doyle from turning Rose Lane and her father against him. They had trusted him—they alone—in the first instance, and so it would be wit against wit to defeat Doyle and, if need be, life against life.

LETTER LONG DELAYED

Written During the Civil War but Only Just Being Delivered

St. Albans, Vt., Feb. 10.—A letter which went astray on a Virginian battlefield more than forty-six years ago has just been sent to the person for whom it was intended.

Major Seymour H. Wood of this city, who served in the First Vermont cavalry in the Civil war, has mailed to Mrs. Mildred Mitchell of Norfolk, Va., a letter taken by Henry C. Pomeroy of St. Albans, a soldier in the First Vermont, from the knapsack of a Confederate soldier, apparently dead, when the Vermonters made a charge on the Confederate works at Fisher's Hill, Va., Sept. 22, 1864.

The writer was P. V. Harris. It is addressed to Miss Millie Snead, Lynchburg, Va., now Mrs. Mitchell, and to it is affixed a Confederate stamp. Mrs. Mitchell, who is a widow, is now in charge of the linen room of the Norfolk Protestant hospital.

Pomeroy lost the letter shortly after the war, but he found it in his father's old family Bible.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

The great drama of "Faust," arranged for the modern stage from Goethe's dramatic poem of that name will be given at the Castle Square next week. In recent years the names most closely associated with it have been those of Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, and the plot is also well known through Gounod's opera. As arranged for the dramatic stage, "Faust" is a succession of vivid and startling scenes, mingling the real with the supernatural. The play begins with Faust as an old man, and Mephistopheles promising him youth and pleasure in abundance in return for his soul, he succumbs to the temptation. Through the remainder of the play, Faust is seen as a gay and gallant youth, and in Marguerite he finds a beautiful sweetheart. In the end, Mephistopheles claims his compact. As staged by Mr. Craig at the Castle Square, "Faust" will be impressively spectacular. The interior of Faust's study will be shown, the garden and the church scenes will be seen but the climax comes when the curtain rises on the summit of the Brocken with its wilderness of mountains, trees, clouds and barren rocks. Thither Mephistopheles leads Faust, and there Mephistopheles shows his command over the elements of nature as well as over mankind. To give this scene its proper effect, special stage settings will be constructed and painted for it at the Castle Square. The role of Mephistopheles will be acted by Mr. Craig, and the Marguerite will be Mary Young. The title role of Faust will be in the hands of Robert Homans, the new member of the company who has been cordially welcomed, and in the other leading roles will be seen George Hassell as Valentine and Mabel Colcord as Martha.

B. F. KEITH'S.

The latest legitimate star to enter vaudeville is Maclyn Arbuckle, whose success in "The Round Up" and "The County Chairman" placed him in the foremost rank of comedians. It was not until he secured a comedy written by Robert Harding Davis, the editor of Munsey's Magazine, that he could be induced to enter the new field, but in this piece called "The Welcher," Mr. Arbuckle has a part that suits him better than anything he has proviously appeared in. It is that of "Dan Gassaway," a race track follower and sport, who has made a lot of money and is lonesome in his riches. A little girl enters his life, and it is during the preparation for her appearance and finally her arrival that Mr. Arbuckle is seen at his best as a comedian. He will head a particularly strong bill, one feature of it being B. A. Rolfe's big musical production called "The Courtiers" which is given in one of the most beautiful stage settings devised in recent years, and with splendid costumes of the Colonial period. Other features will be Bert Levy, the famous cartoonist of the New York "Morning Telegraph," who has just returned from a European tour; Tempest and Sunshine, two girls who will be seen here for the first time in songs; Felix Adler, the monologuist; Goodrich, Murray & Gillon, the rathskeller trio; the Bloomquest Players in a comedy called "Nervo," Wentworth, Vesta and Teddy, and the Three Livingstones.

SHERIFF IS FINED FOR CARRYING GUN

Arrests Man For Robbing Him and Is Arrested Himself

Boston, Feb. 10.—John Shorey, a sheriff of Carroll county, N. H., was fined $25 by Judge Burke of the municipal court for carrying a revolver. The sheriff was seeing the sights when a man, who gave the name of John McManus, came up to him on Warrenton street and stole his watch and chain. The sheriff was so surprised that he did not realize what had happened until the man was running away.

Shorey drew his revolver and fired one shot into the ground. This startled McManus so that he stumbled and an instant later the sheriff laid hands upon him. Shorey held his prisoner until Patrolman Cronin came along.

On hearing the story Cronin took the middle course and arrested both men. He charged the sheriff with carrying a loaded revolver and McManus with robbery. McManus was held for the grand jury and his bail was placed at $2000.

THE "FARMER PROTESTS"

Friends of Canadian Pact Do Not Think That They Are Sincere

Washington, Feb. 10.—Friends of Canadian reciprocity are beginning to punch holes in some of the "farmer protests," with which congress is being flooded just now, and in some quarters the assertion is made that supporters of Senator Lorimer, angered by the interest shown by the president in the Lorimer case, are trying to get even with Mr. Taft by blocking his reciprocity legislation.

A bit of senate gossip is that the recent meeting in New York of half a dozen officers of the National Grange and their memorial to congress opposing reciprocity purporting to represent a million members was engineered by Edward Hines of Chicago, a lumberman and also a leading lobbyist for Lorimer.

It is certain that many senators refuse to accept as conclusive of farming opinion throughout the country telegrams rushed on to Washington by officers of local or even national organizations without consultation with their membership.

HAD OUTSIDE ACCOMPLICES

Embezzler and Another Inmate of County Jail Easily Escape

Marietta, O., Feb. 10.—Edward A. Epler, former auditor of the Marietta, Columbus and Cleveland railroad, who is charged with embezzling $5000 of the funds of the railroad, escaped from the county jail. George Bayless, arrested on a charge of burglary, escaped with Epler.

The county jail is situated on the fourth floor of the courthouse. Apparently Epler and Bayless were assisted to escape by persons from the outside. A duplicate key to the cell doors had been made and with this the doors were unlocked. From the corridor the two dropped into an air shaft, going down two stories, whence it was easy to walk out through the courthouse. A large reward has been offered for the capture of Epler.

FOR BENEFIT OF CHURCH

Pair of Aged Fighters Box a Match of Six Rounds

New York, Feb. 10.—A storm was raised in church circles of Hoboken when details were learned of a boxing mill that took place there at a church party with James Mullaney, aged 61, and Thomas Tighe, 57, as the contestants. The men went six rounds and Mullaney had a shade the better of it.

The party was a benefit for the church and it was given at the home of Tighe. Fifty men and women saw the battle.

HULL DRAFTSMEN WIN THE MEET

The Engine Draftsmen Were Second and Electric Boat Men Third

Great Interest Taken in the Relay Race—Finals Close

The second annual Draftsmen's meet of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. and the Electric Boat Co. was held in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Thursday evening. The race for the trophy was a neck and neck between the Hull Draftsmen and Engine Draftsmen Floyd of the Hull team scored 16 points, and his team won 31 to 26. The Electric Boat trailed in the distance with 4 points.

The opening event, the 15 yard dash was run in many heats, but finally it narrowed down to four men. In the finals, Floyd won out over Lidback with Davis third.

The running high jump was also won by Floyd, Sullivan taking second place and Lidback third.

The three-legged race was the source of considerable amusement through tumbles and so forth. Williams and Hendrickson won out in the finals in a close finish.

The potato race brought Floyd to the fore again. Seelye and Eggleton of the Electric Boat scored the only points for their team in this event taking second and third places respectively.

The obstacle relay race was interesting and amusing. The obstacles were a high horse, parallel bars covered with a mat and a three and half foot high jump. In going the round of the course, each man had to shoot a basket. There were five men to a team, and the last man had to place the ball in the centre of the floor. The first heat was won by the Engine department team. The Hull department won the second heat. In the finals, the basket could not be located by one of the men of the Hull team and the Engine draftsmen won by a big margin.

There was a great scarcity of fat men for the 7th event, but two individuals owned up to obesity and ran a good race. The winner, Larson, ran in good form and with surprising speed for a 200 pounder. Wood who came in second, had the marathon stride which was not calculated to give very great speed. He lost by only a quarter of a lap however.

The inter-department championship relay race was the last event. In the first heat, the Engine department team won very handily and the second heat was won by the Hull department. The finals were close during the first twelve laps, but Floyd the fourth man on the Hull team had little difficulty in winning from his opponent.

One of the interesting features of the evening was a three round boxing match between William Volk, 135 pound National A. A. U. champion and Daniel McLaughlin. The first two rounds were not over speedy, but in the third they mixed up in good shape. Volk had little difficulty in landing one when he desired. McLaughlin got in one or two solid blows during the three rounds.

The basketball games were of the rough and tumble variety, but everyone was good natured and if they didn't know very much about basketball they knew how to keep their tempers. The first game resulted in a victory for the Electric Boat team by a score of 9 to 6. The Engine (1) men then wallopped the Engine (2) team by a score of 8 to 2. In the final the Engine (1) team won from the Electric Boat men 13 to 1. Lidback was the star for the winners and Eggleton for the losers.

The summary:

15 yd dash—Floyd (H) 1st; Lidback (En) 2nd; Davis (H) 3rd.

Running high jump—Floyd (H) 1st; Sullivan (En) 2nd; Lidback (En) 3rd.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

A MAN'S idea of a good manager is a woman who can set as good a table on $10 a week as her neighbors can on $25.

A grouch is a man who wants the thing for dinner today that his wife had planned for next week.

Don't sing the song of prosperity so lustily that the boss will think you will stand a cut in salary.

A woman's idea of a good manager is a woman who can make her husband think she is doing him a favor when she takes charge of his entire salary.

Some women look as if they have spent all their energy trying to pacify the weekly installment collector.

Some people are no good, some are ornamental, and a lot of nondescripts are merely useful.

Money smells much the same when it is burning, no matter whether burned by a millionaire or by some one in his employ.

Not every young man knows the difference between a chafing dish artist and the operator of a first class kitchen range.

The meanest man is often in evidence, but the meanest woman is often too shrewd to be caught with the goods.

Not Bankable.

"Going to make your scheme work?"
"Well, I have the backing of a millionaire."
"What is he backing you with?"
"Advice so far."

Just Common Folks.

When Adam delved and Eve span
Who was then the gentleman?
When Adam delved and Eve span
There wasn't any gentleman,
And I am sure in woodlands shady
That Eve was not a perfect lady.

Bright Thought.

"Madam."
"Yes, Mary. What is it?"
"There's a hungry man at the door."
"A hungry man?"
"Yes."
"Then for goodness sake tell him to go and get his dinner!"

Quick Action.

"I would like to get a job."
"Can you drive horses?"
"Yes."
"You're hired."
"That is, I never drove them, but it looks easy."
"You're fired."

Dad's Idea.

"Is marriage a failure, father?"
"A failure, my son?"
"Yes."
"Vell, v'en you gome to talk apout failures I t'ink the clothing puisness is mooch besser."

Defined.

"What is a lie?"
"A lie?"
"Yes."
"If it is what your rival says about you it is the language of inability."

Good.

"What's your idea of a good man?"
"One who can and will."
"Can and will what?"
"Give you an indorsement that is good at the bank. What's yours?"

He Had Met It.

"There is neither rhyme nor reason to this book."
"Huh! Just modern poetry."

Watch For the Circus.

No use going down the street
With a grouch in tow,
Glaring at the ones you meet
As they come and go.
Folks in plenty may be found
That should cause a smile
If you will but look around
At the rank and file.

Here's a fellow drifting by
In an ancient coat
Just about three sizes shy,
While around his throat
Is a necktie that's a string
Of the brightest hue.
On the stage a laugh he'd bring,
So why not from you?

There a woman hobbles past,
Going at full steam.
Colors in her cheek are fast,
And her rat's a dream.
Skirt is of the latest mode
From the tailor shop.
She can amble like a toad
With a fancy hop.

So you see them come and go
If you will but look,
And it beats a three ring show
Or a fairy book.
Why not gratify your eye
With the cheering view?
Others may in passing by
Split their sides at you.

Vol. 26 No. 36 | QUINCY, MASS., SATURDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 11, 1911 | PRICE TWO CENTS

FULL TEXT OF WATER CONTRACT

Proposition to Sell Water to Shipyard and Other Industries for $1,000

May Draw Water to Full Capacity of the Reservoir

Through the courtesy of Mayor Shea the Daily Ledger is permitted today to give its readers the full text of the proposed water contract with the Fore River Shipbuilding Company which is now pending in the City Council. The attention of taxpayers is also invited to the editorial of the Daily Ledger of Thursday last.

Agreement made this ——— day of February, 1911, by and between the City of Quincy, a municipal corporation existing under the laws of Massachusetts (hereinafter called the City) of the one part and the Fore River Shipbuilding company, a corporation existing under the laws of said Commonwealth, (hereinafter called the Company) of the other part.

Witnesseth:

That in consideration of the mutual promises herein contained it is agreed as follows:—

1. The City shall excavate for and lay an 8 inch or larger water main as may be agreed upon by said City and said Company, from the City's 12 inch water main located near the Old Quincy Adams pumping station, so-called, over a route to be agreed upon by the Commissioner of Public Works of the City and the Company, to the brook which flows into the reservoir of the Company, located near Des Moines and Howard Streets in said City, or said reservoir or the water pipes of the Company located on its property; provided, however, before any of said work is commenced a plan of said route shall be filed by the Company with said Commissioner of Public Works of the City showing the streets and property through which said water main is to be laid, and the point at which it is to connect with said reservoir, brook or water pipe of said Company, and there shall also be filed by said Company with said Commissioner duly executed releases in favor of the city from the owners of said property authorizing the City to enter upon the same, and make all necessary excavations and to do such work as may be necessary to lay and maintain said water main therein.

All expense incidental to and connected with preparing said plan and securing said releases shall be PAID BY SAID COMPANY.

The water main shall be the property of the City, which shall maintain and repair the same at its own expense, excepting in the event of its being necessary by reason of the wearing out of any part of said main to replace that portion with new pipe, the cost of the same shall be borne by the Company.

2. The City shall furnish the pipe for and do the work of excavating for and laying the said water main, refilling the trench and restoring the surface of the ground above the same and connecting the same with said 12 inch main and with the Company's reservoir or pipes as aforesaid. The Company shall pay to the City the actual cost to the City of said main and all said work. Such payment shall be made upon receipt by the Company of evidence of such cost.

3. Until the expiration or other termination of this contract, the Company shall be entitled to draw from the reservoir in the Town of Braintree, formerly owned by the Quincy Water Company, through said main, water which may be required for the Company's own purpose and for the purposes of now or hereafter located on or near the Company's own property, or on or near the Fore River; provided, however, such industries must be located on property abutting on, or adjoining property bounding on said River. And the Company may draw said water through said main, except as hereinafter provided, to the capacity thereof into said brook or the Company's own reservoir, or its water pipes.

The Company may use and dispose of said water for any of the aforesaid purposes as it may see fit, but shall not sell the same for domestic or drinking purposes. And the Company shall pay to the City for the said water the sum of $1,000 (one thousand dollars) per annum. Provided, however, nothing in this paragraph be so construed as to prohibit said industries from purchasing Metropolitan water from the City, or obtaining water from any other source, from the City or otherwise.

4. The City

RESERVES THE RIGHT

to harvest or sell ice from the said reservoir in Braintree or to sell, let or lease the privilege of cutting ice therefrom, and to use the water from said reservoir only for street watering purposes, and for City purposes at said pumping station; provided, however, that in case of fire, or suspension of the services of the Metropolitan Water System, either in whole or part, or other similar public emer-

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Gen. Lee Christmas has taken his Honduran army and decided to let him rest and feed up for a few weeks.

We hope the tailor will not construe it as a personal reflection if President Taft does not adhere to the diagram of the corset coat.

Among those who deserve Carnegie medals is the Chicago undertaker who prevented a friend from committing suicide.

Because he did not forget his campaign promises after his election, Woodrow Wilson promises to enjoy a great career.

It's right hard for the express monopoly to understand why the American people should be so heartily in favor of a parcels post.

Reduced cost of living is expected to arrive almost any day, and it is needless to state that the entire populace is awaiting to greet him with a warm welcome.

How polite every one will become and insist on standing in the trolley cars if the bills presented to the Rhode Island legislature go into effect. One, an act, provides for a three-cent fare for passengers who are unable to obtain a seat, while a more drastic measure, would allow standing commuters to ride free.

AGITATORS.

The committing of the sentence of Editor F. D. Warren of the "Appeal to Reason" by President Taft is an act that will appeal to American common sense. Our revolutionary writers and orators ought not to be taken too seriously. Often it would be much more useful to present them with a boiled cabbage than to hurl the thunderbolts of the law at them.

It was well enough to inflict a mild punishment on Warren for suggesting ex-Gov. Taylor's kidnapping. But if any one else, but a super heated Socialist had done it, it would have been regarded as more of an effort to demonstrate the brilliancy of his wit, than as a suggestion of crime.

A small portion of our population seems to be suffering from volcanic brain storm. It is a question how to deal with these people. If some of them are given absolute freedom, crimes like the assassination of President McKinley will be encouraged. But in almost every case, violent language is self destructive.

The ordinary man is not anxious to see all the foundations of society upset in some wild economic upheaval. Everyone who has a little farm, a little home, or a little bank account, questions whether that would not also be lost in the shuffle. So when he is told that the human race should take the back track over the course it has been travelling since Abraham lived on the plains of Shinar, h ebegins to wonder where he would be by the time they got back to the present state of advancement.

The best way to deal with people whose economic views threaten the safety valve, is to persuade them that by dropping the pencil stub and street oratory for the hoe and the lathe, they can multiply their family income by two.

PLANNED BIG HOLDUP

Saloon Keeper Said to Have Then Tried to Rob Original Bandit

Chicago, Feb. 11.—William Loftus, saloon keeper, the man accused by a confessed participant in the robbery last Sunday morning of Rector's restaurant as having employed three other thieves to rob the original robber, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $20,000 by Judge Newcomer, who severely rebuked the defendant.

"You are worse than any of the other men in this affair," said the court to Loftus. "You not only planned the original robbery, but also the holdup of that robber. Your defense that you merely loaned two revolvers for half an hour for $100 is enough to indict you."

MARQUETRY ON EXHIBITION

Table Made 300 Years Ago Restored to Beauty

There will be on exhibition Monday Feb. 13, at the rooms of L. A. Fagen, 1056 Hancock street, a beautiful marquetry parlor table, imported from Europe by Brooks Adams, Esq. A magnificent specimen of marquetry in oyster heart design, completed between 1600 and 1629. All veneer on top and front, is cut crossways of a beautiful grained wood that cannot be duplicated. The infinite patience of the original maker is readily acknowleged as the numberless pieces of inlay and the intricate design make it almost priceless and without equal in this country.

L. A. FAGEN.

The rigors of our climate and the dry furnace heat having raised up all of the beautiful marquetry and veneer, it was impossible to use it. But having restored many rare and valuable specimens of furniture for its owner, Brooks Adams Esq., the table was turned over to Mr. Fagen for restoration to its original beauty.

The wood under the veneer was so full of worm holes that required filling before replacing that many experienced cabinet makers advised Mr Fagen not to undertake the task, claiming it would be too great a tax on anyones patience to restore it This advice was unheeded, as many years experience in both Russia and this country had particularly fitted him for the work, and after a painstaking labor of over 553 hours, (not including polishing) the results of his efforts so gratified the owner, that his consent to exhibit it was readily obtained.

A cordial invitation is hereby extended to all connoisseurs and lovers of beautiful and unique furniture to call and inspect this interesting example of the cabinet makers art at 1056 Hancock street, Quincy.

This work having subjected some of his patrons to a necessary delay, Mr. Fagen takes this opportunity of thanking them for their patience and courtesy.

NEVER-BREAK METAL GAS CHIMNEYS
have given us entire satisfaction, and we are glad of the opportunity of recommending them, both for economy and the lighting effect."—Walsh Drug Co., Quincy, Mass.

If you burn gas, the NEVER-BREAK METAL GAS CHIMNEY will Lighten Home Cares.
You may turn the gas up quickly, or drop the chimney on the floor, it cannot break. Never has to be cleaned and gives a brilliant light. Mantles last longer and cannot get black. Saves gas and makes a mantle wear longer. Means a positive and large saving in chimneys, mantles and gas consumed.
Try just one and you will never go back to glass or mica chimneys. A better and softer light than a glass chimney.
You ought to be able to get the Never-Break Metal Gas Chimneys from your dealer at 25c., but if you cannot, we will send the same postpaid on receipt of price. You need not send anything extra for postage.

NEW PLANT AT NEW LONDON

Electric Boat Company Soon to Move from Quincy

Within the next few weeks a larger part of the employes of the Electric Boat Co., plant in the Fore River shipyard will pack their grips and start for New London where they will be located hereafter. The plant at Quincy will not be abandoned, however, for it is announced that the hull and assembly departments will still remain here.

The draftsmen and machinists, however will go to New London, where a new and powerful engine for submarines will be manufactured. This engine is owned and manufactured by a company other than the Electric Boat Co., although it is said that the stockholders and officers of both companies are the same, although they go under different names.

Eventually, it is probable that the whole plant of the Electric Boat Co., will be moved to New London, but as their lease with the Fore River Co., has yet several years to run, the plant in Quincy will be maintained for awhile.

Employes of the company do not know much about what is transpiring and the officials of the company are not giving out much. The most the employes know is that they have been ordered transferred to New London Some of the draftsmen have already gone and the others will get away early in March.

Quite a number of the high salaried men owned their own houses in Quincy, and in several instances these have been placed in the hands of agents for sale. In other cases those who rent houses or board have notified their landlord or boarding mistress that they are going sometime.

Not much is known of the new engine the company now has control of, but it is said to be a great improvement over the engine now in use. This will be manufactured in New London.

There are two submarines now building at the plant in Quincy at the present time. These are well along and will be launched at an early date.

Some of the employees of the company who may go are: Lewis B. Doane, Lewis A. Rounds, Charles B. Webber, Paul Andrine, Baraja-Frauenfelder, R. L. Lovell, George H. Eggleton, Robert Acker and H. E. Greishaber.

HIGH SCHOOL RECEPTION

Moonlight Waltzes Popular at Party Last Evening

The Q. H. S. Sophomore—Junior reception was held in the High school gymnasium last evening. The decorations, consisting of red and blue festoons and streamers, not to mention the moon, were arranged by the committee assisted by Dorothy Lowe.

About 75 couples were present to enjoy dancing from 8 to 10.30. The Wollaston orchestra furnished excellent music. During the evening fruit punch was served in the hall. The order included the usual number of two-steps and waltzes, schottishes, a waltz German, a Virginian reel and three moonlight waltzes.

A number of the teachers attended the dance and three of them, Miss Brown, Miss Bass, Miss Holt served as chaperons. The reception committee consisted of the following: Ethel Hatfield, Elsie Burrell, Ryder Gay, Richard Larkin and Fred Baird. The following acted as ushers: Ryder Gay, Roland Estey, William Thompson, Osborne Rogers, Richard Crane, Albert Parker, Henry Trask, Fred Carlson.

The reception was a great success and the committee in charge is to be congratulated for making it so. The gymnasium is a difficult room to decorate, but its gauntness was greatly relieved by the simple and tasteful festoons. The music was all that could be desired, and in general the arrangements were such that no one could be anything but pleased with everything.

NEVER-BREAK CHIMNEY EXHIBIT.

The Never-Break Metal Gas Chimney Co., of this city is advertising in this issue something entirely new in a gas chimney. Walter P. Pinel is the inventor, and it is covered by letter patent. A demonstration will be given at the Pinel variety store, 146 Water street, tonight and Monday night.

The chimneys are made of metal, but are designed to give a brilliant light, and at the same time are practically indestructable. All users of gas will welcome this new chimney as one that will not break from the heat of from a fall. It often happens that the cracking of a chimney means the destruction of the mantle too. This means a double expense, besides the great inconvenience of having to get a new mantle and chimney. To have a chimney that never breaks, means not only great economy, but will lighten the cares of every user of gas. The saving is not only in chimneys and mantles, but in gas consumed, as the construction allows more oxogen to pass through the mantle than is the case with glass and mica chimneys, thus making a considerable saving in gas. The company is already having quite a brisk trade, orders coming in from New England cities, New York and as far west as California.

It will be worth while for any of our readers to call and see this demonstration.

Mr. Pinel is also the inventor of the Excelsior Flat-Iron; a patent for which was granted to him Feb. 7th 1911. This iron is so constructed that the iron never slips from the handle. Any housekeeper who has used the ordinary sad-irons with removable handles will appreciate being able to obtain a flat iron that will never drop from the handle, the fault of many now on the market. The excelsior Iron Company fit their plates and handles on ordinary irons, thus making them almost as good as a new set of Excelsior irons. These irons will be shown at the same time with the Never Break chimneys, at the Pinel Variety Store.

SUTHERLAND AMENDMENT

Points to Defeat of Bill For Direct Election of Senators

IT BRINGS UP RACE QUESTION

Southern Men Not Inclined to Favor Measure Which Gives Negroes Equal Rights With Whites In Elections—Root Says Proposition to Change Method Is an Effort to Evade Responsibility In Government

Washington, Feb. 11.—Votes enough have been promised in the senate to insure the adoption of the Sutherland amendment to the Borah resolution for an amendment to the constitution to provide for election of United States senators by the people.

This fact means that in all likelihood the resolution will be permitted to reach a vote, and that, with the amendment adopted, the proposition will become obnoxious to Democratic senators from the southern states, who will refuse to support the amended resolution and thus defeat the legislation.

Incidentally this expected outcome is interesting as disposing of one of the most important measures before the senate, and thus removing another instrument for filibustering and delay.

As reported by Senator Borah from the committee on the judiciary the resolution struck out section 4 of article 1 of the constitution, which places upon congress the duty of making and the right to alter regulations as to the time, place and manner of electing senators and representatives, except to the places of choosing senators.

The result of omitting this section would be to permit the states to make such regulations as they pleased relative to the election of senators, and in the south there would include in many cases disfranchisement of the negro. Without the right to restrict suffrage to the whites the south would have no use for the constitutional amendment, as it would give the negro an equal opportunity with the white to vote for candidates for senator.

The defeat of the amendment will not be deeply regretted by all the southern senators, although they would vote for the resolution in the form in which it was reported. Only a majority vote is necessary to amend the resolution, although it would take two-thirds to pass it.

Opposing all suggestions looking to a change in the manner of electing United States senators, Mr. Root of New York yesterday addressed the senate on the resolution providing for election by direct vote of the people.

At the outset he took positive position against both the propositions contained in the resolution. He would not have senators elected by direct vote, nor, if they were to be so elected, would he have the control of such elections transferred from congress to the various state legislatures. For congress to abandon jurisdiction over senatorial elections would be equivalent, he said, to the government's surrendering its power to maintain itself.

Mr. Root found in the main proposition, that of changing the method of electing senators, an effort to evade responsibility in the matter of government. Declaring that the principal reason given for the change to be the corruption of state legislaturs in the interest of senatorial candidates, he said that a more fundamental change should be made than is proposed. He would go to the root of the trouble by so purifying politics as to obtain better material in the legislatures. If the people would look properly to the selection of legislative candidates he was sure there would be comparatively little complaint concerning the election of senators by legislative action as he was sure that in that event the agitation for direct election would gradually disappear

Admitting the expression of a popular wish for popular senatorial elections, Root contended that the feeling is a mere assent—not a violent desire. Naturally, he though, the electorate would accept any extension of the franchise. The evil, however, which the people wished to see cured was the defects in the plan of electing senators by the state legislatures. They were tired of deadlocks, and impatient over such delays as that now being manifested by the Montana legislature to return Senator Carter. These troubles were due to the statute and not to the constitution, he said.

BURIAL WITHOUT EULOGY

Other Commands of Chicopee Falls Priest Are Carried Out

Chicopee Falls, Mass ., Feb. 11.—Rev. Alexis A. Delphos, pastor of St. Joachim's Catholic church, was buried today with the utmost simplicity, according to his express commands, in a $30 coffin, clothed in the cheapest vestments of the parish, and without eulogy.

Father Delphos, during the last days of his illness, impressed on his assistant his commands about his obsequies. He expressly forbade the use of more than four candles about his bier. He himself selected from the vestry the simplest and cheapest garments in which to be laid out.

His funeral took place from the church in which he was curate for eighteen years—Notre Dame. There were two requiem masses.

The Aquitania is expected to develop a speed of twenty-three knots, and will be of the turbine type. Unofficially it is said that oil will be used for fuel if such use is deemed advisable.

ALLEGED GRAFTERS DENOUNCED IN COURT

Bail of Three Lawrence Men Is Raised to $5000

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 11.—A crowd that packed the municipal courtroom heard Assistant District Attorney Burke denounce the men recently arrested in the startling graft cases that have roused the indignation of the people of the city.

Those araigned were Patrick Lyons, superintendent of streets; Clerk Michael J. Flynn, Contractor Philip Holland and John P. Kane of Lawrence, and Contractor Fred L. Snow of Lowell. The men had all been bailed in $3000 each. Through their attorneys they waved examination.

In spite of the protests of their lawyers the bail of Holland, Lyons and Flynn was raised to $5000. The bail of Kane and Snow was allowed to remain at $3000. Eleven witnesses were placed under $500 bail each.

The graft cases will come before the next grand jury, which may be a special one, or the regular one that meets in May.

Concord, N. H., Feb. 11.—Increases in freight and passenger rates made by the Boston and Maine railroad on certain New Hampshire railroads under lease to the Boston and Maine were made without authority of the law, in the opinion of the supreme court of New Hampshire, announced by Chief Justice Parsons.

The court rules that the Boston and Maine had no right to increase rates on those railroads leased by it under acts of the legislature of 1883 and 1889, but that roads put in operation subsequent to 1889 are not subject to the restrictions of those acts.

Empire State Parole Board Expresses Doubt as to Its Efficacy

Albany, Feb. 11.—Unconvinced that Edward E. Grimmell, a third term convict in Clinton prison, has been cured of his criminal tendencies by surgery, the state parole board has refused to parole him.

Grimmell's skull was fractured when a boy of 14 during a quarrel with a playmate, and the contention was that the injury was a potent factor in developing his criminal career. In March, 1909, Dr. Dewitt G. Wilcox of Buffalo, with an assistant, went to the prison and performed an operation with a view to restoring Grimmell to his normal state of mind.

DIRECT APPEAL BY PRESIDENT

Asks Farmers to Aid Him In Reciprocity With Canada

HE DEFENDS THE AGREEMENT

Will Be Benefit Rather Than Detriment to Our Agricultural Interests as Well as Uniting Kindred People —All Lines of Business Will Gain by Closer Relations With Our Neighbors to the North

Columbus, O., Feb. 11.—Carrying forward his campaign for Canadian reciprocity, President Taft made a direct appeal here to the American farmer on that issue. He said that the impression which had gone abroad that reciprocity with the Dominion would injure the farmer was entirely without foundation and by statistics and argument he sought to back up his assertions.

Mr. Taft said without reservation that the agreement would be a benefit rather than a detriment to the agricultural interests of this country. He said he made this answer to the criticism directed against the measure presumably on the part of the farmers.

As for himself, the president said, he felt that the undoubted general benefit of the agreement would entirely vindicate those who are responsible for it. The greatest reason for the adoption of the agreement, he argued, is that it will unite two countries with kindred people, living together across a wide continent, in a commercial and social union to the great advantage of both.

"Such a result," added the president, "does not need to be justified by a nice balancing of a pecuniary profit to each."

Mr. Taft's address, the first of his present trip into the middle west, was delivered to 4000 hearers at the National Corn exposition in the auditorium at the state fair grounds.

The speech was not framed merely as a popular appeal to a class, but consisted in large part of figures in substantiation of general tariff claims.

For instance, so far as the corn raisers are concerned, Mr. Taft showed that the total Canadian yield is but .6 of 1 percent of the total production in the United States. "Certainly with respect to corn," he added, "the American farmer is king and will remain so, reciprocity or no reciprocity."

This statement elicited a quick response from the big audience, and the demonstration was renewed when the president said in closing:

"Let the agreement be adopted and go into operation, and in six months the farmers of the border who now have fears will rejoice in this great step toward closer business and social relations with our neighbors. The whole country—farmer, manufacturer, railroad company, middleman, warehouse man—all will be the gainer."

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1234, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

The minutes passed. What could be the matter with the clerk or with Red? Had the watchman, too, received a warning? And if so had he followed the impulse that had first come to Jimmy Valentine, to flee—the time honored resource of the crook, the time honored confession of the crook, flight? No; Red would not desert Jimmy Valentine in an emergency like this for—

A voice was heard outside in the vault room: "All right, Kitty. I'll play some more with you in a few minutes. Mr. Randall wants me." It was the voice of Red Flanagan addressed to the little girl, whom he daily gave "piggyback" rides, at the daily hazard of his situation.

The door swung open, and Red stood before the assistant cashier. But not even his old mother, if she had been alive, would have recognized him. Hair as red as ever it was, eyes as blue and smile equally as innocent as that which had misled half a dozen sternly inclined judges in the court of special sessions in years gone, yet the figure that appeared was, and at the same time it was not, that of Red Flanagan, whose photograph adorned not less than five rogues' galleries.

The uniform—that was it. The blue-gray coat and trousers, loosely fitted, and the peaked cap, bearing in gold letters "Watchman," were the actual causes of his transformation, so far as outward indications were concerned. As for the inward changes—those quite hidden from the human eye—well, there were but two persons who could describe how they had come about. Those two persons were Red Flanagan and Jimmy Valentine.

Red stood before the assistant cashier and doffed his imposing watchman's cap.

"Want me, Randall?" he asked.

"Yes." He looked away from Red, unwilling to break to him the news that Doyle was on their track.

CHAPTER XII.

"GEE," went on Red enthusiastically, not appreciating the reason for Valentine's silence, "gee, but that Kitty is a great kid! Ain't it funny how a kid like that will get hold of a tough old tramp like me?"

"Nice child," commented Valentine. He picked up the telegram and handed it to Red.

"Red, read that," he said dully, as though discouraged.

The other read in silence.

"Doyle! Good heaven!" he exclaimed.

"Doyle," said Valentine. "It took him quite a while to uncover us, didn't it?"

"But he's finally done it—got your name and everything."

"Did you notice it wasn't signed?"

"Yes. Who do you suppose tipped you?"

"Doyle," was Valentine's amazing response.

"Doyle!" cried Red, starting aback. The assistant cashier bent toward the watchman.

"Doyle sent that, Red. Don't you see he's not sure of me? But if I ran away from the bank when that telegram came—out of town for the afternoon—he'd know he had me."

"Never thought. I'd have ducked," commented Red. "And now he'll turn me up too. I'm going." He fingered his hat nervously.

"You're not. He don't want you, and if you stay where you belong he won't see you."

Red nodded his head decisively.

"I'll stay closer to the bank than an emigrant to his tag. And you, Jimmy?"

Valentine smiled as the other lapsed off in his excitement into using his old name.

"'Jimmy!' How natural that sounds, Red!" he said reminiscently.

"Excuse me. I meant 'Mr. Randall,'" protestingly.

"No; it's all right, only don't by any chance use it before Doyle, because I'm going to alibi Doyle until he'll think he's lost his eyesight."

"Alibi?" repeated Red curiously. "I've heard o' that before."

"Alibi, that's it, Red," replied Valentine. And he continued rapidly: "You haven't forgotten the one greatest refuge of the crook, have you—our old friend the alibi? Something which proves you were not where you were when something happened. I was never Jimmy Valentine, Red. I was never in Sing Sing. I've been straight all my life and can prove it. I've been waiting for Mr. Doyle nearly three years, and I've got him beat. I never did that job in Springfield, Massachusetts. I was never there in my life. And if I've got to use the crook's tools to beat it I'm justified. I'm living straight and I'm going to, and all the gods are with me, Red." He took a scrapbook from a drawer and opened it. "Look at that. For five years you will find clippings of Lee Randall when he lived in St. Paul. That man was my cousin. He went to Alaska and never came back. My name is also Lee Randall, and I defy Doyle to prove he ever saw me."

Valentine, out of breath owing to the long speech he had delivered at top speed, leaned back and gazed triumphantly at Flanagan. The latter stared amazedly at the assistant cashier, trying to guess as to whether or not he was telling the truth. Well, there was a scrapbook. That would afford ready means of proving Valentine's words. Red picked up the book and swiftly skimmed the pages. His attention was held by one of the clippings. He read aloud:

"St. Paul News, March 12, 1906.—The speaker of the evening was Mr. Lee Randall. His subject was"—

"Look at that other one," interrupted Valentine, pointing. "See how they join up with the day I came here. And Avery has sent me something that will make Mr. Doyle's eyes blink like an owl."

Red laughed grimly. The telephone bell rang.

"Avery! Did you say Avery?" asked Red.

"Yes," picking up the receiver. Then to the operator: "Yes, send Mr. Cronin right in. There's a friend of his here who wants to see him." He looked significantly across at Red.

Flanagan glanced around the room,

"MR. CRONIN" FACED VALENTINE AND RED.

then at Valentine. "Say," he began, "I'm the only one here in the room except you, and I don't want to see any 'Mr. Cronin.' Don't know him. Who is he?"

"Mr. Cronin," responded Valentine, "is the man who is going to save you and me from going back to state prison."

Valentine went on to recount to Red how Bill Avery, after he had said goodby to his "pals" in Albany, had gone to the middle west and eventually married a sedate widow of middle age, whose son was an expert photographer, one who operated a large studio in St. Louis and employed men who specialized in covering important events for the newspapers and magazines.

"Avery!" ejaculated Red. "Avery working—absolutely on the square?"

"Yes, that's the truth, the awful truth," laughed Valentine whimsically. "But you say Bill—Bill Avery is married?" asked Red, completely overcome at the suggestion.

"Yes, it's all true, and Bill has proved a true friend to me—to us," answered Valentine.

"And he's really happy?" went on Red doubtingly. "Him as always had a stable of fillies spendin' his coin. He's happy with one wife?"

The assistant cashier gave vent to a burst of gayety at the astonishment of the watchman, who probably would have understood the process of reformation in any one but Bill Avery.

But a few minutes elapsed after Valentine answered the telephone call before the door opened, and in came a man whose iron gray hair curled beneath the rim of his high silk hat. Glaringly bright yellow kid gloves adorned his hands. His frock coat, of the latest make, was a bit worn on the edges, and it was for that reason that the secondhand dealer had made a reduction in price to Mr. Cronin.

The newcomer laid a handsome gold headed Indian bamboo walking stick across a chair, took off his gloves and faced Valentine and Red.

"Mr. Randall?" he said.

"Yes, Mr. Cronin."

"Cronin be blowed," cried Red, starting forward. "It's Bill Avery. How about you, old pal?"

Avery, pleased at the enthusiastic welcome and at the sight of both of his old friends, shook hands with each. Then he drew back and looked from one to the other. "Think of us three bein' left alone together like this in a real bank," he said significantly, and his two hearers could not restrain laughter at the thought of what the circumstances would have meant to them in days now put behind them.

"Did you get the picture?" asked Avery of Valentine. "You told me to send it, but I wanted to see you. That double negative is a wonder."

Valentine looked understandingly at him. He rose from his chair, picked up the telegram from his desk and extended it to Avery.

"Yes; it's all right," he said. "And it came just in time. Today is the day I'll need it," pointing to the telegram. "Read that!"

Avery read the message. The pallor of unnerving fear came upon him. His head dropped forward and he glanced apprehensively about him. His hand trembled as he laid the paper on the desk. He sank hopelessly into a chair. "Doyle," the old man choked—"Doyle! He said he'd slough me, and now he'd do it—or else he'll make me pay blackmail. You never can tell how much a copper wants for keepin' quiet."

"Oh, don't get blue," encouraged Valentine. "He doesn't want you fellows. It's me that he is after." He examined a large photograph which Avery had sent him. It showed the tables and guests at a large banquet in a luxuriously appointed restaurant. "Yes, I think this saves me," he remarked. He held it before Red, asking, "What's this?"

"Flashlight of a banquet."

"Who is this on the right of the toastmaster?" pointing at a face in the picture.

"You."

"Pipe the date," went on the assistant cashier, "Feb. 9, 1906. Do you remember where I was on that date?" He gazed curiously at Red. Avery watched the proceeding with rare interest.

The watchman became thoughtful. At last a puzzled wrinkle marked his forehead. "Why—why—you—were—in—Sing Sing—prison—on—that—date," he replied confusedly.

NOW UP TO HOUSE

Maine Senate Goes on Record as Opposed to Sturgis Law

Augusta, Me., Feb. 11.—The senate voted to repeal the Sturgis liquor law enforcement commission act, passed four years ago, and to abolish the state liquor agency system, without a dissenting vote.

Several of the senators, without regard to party affiliations, expressed the desire that both of these laws be wiped from the statute books, the Sturgis law because of the recent removal from office of the commissioners by the governor, and the liquor agency system because efforts to remedy defects therein had failed. The house will act on these measures later.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES.

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away.

Quincy women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Bachache, hip pains, headaches, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys and warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in a Quincy woman's words:

Mrs. Deborah Prouty, 39 Quincy avenue, Quincy, Mass., says: "I am in a position to speak in the highest terms of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back ached nearly all the time and caused me considerable trouble. Any sudden movement or an attempt to stoop, sent sharp pains through my loins. My health was much run down and I had but little strength or energy. I was very much alarmed about my condition. When Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store, as I knew of many other people who had used them with success. The contents of three boxes convinced me that they were the best kidney remedy to be had. I am now in good health."

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Hub's Style Show Makes Annual Merriment—A "Votes for Women" Costume—Copley Society Will Spread Lure of the Antique in March—Public Spirited Citizens Make Grand Opera Seats Possible for Needy Music Students—Suffragists, Laborites and Socialists on Feb. 23 Will Storm Citadel of Conservatism on Beacon Hill.

The Hubbite reporters have been having their annual Jubilation over the style show at Horticultural hall. Early editions blazoned forth the beauties of the new pantaloon gown, the combination beach and bathing gown known as the Eau Claire, which is so arranged that as one promenades the beach one's gown reaches below the ankles, while by puling a string on entering the surf the gown is raised to the knees—and many other novelties of feminine fashion designed by masculine minds. Mayor Fitzgerald lent his benignant presence to the opening of the convention of ladies' tailors and dressmakers of America, and immediately the business of instilling patriotic Americans with the idea that their clothes should be American instead of foreign was begun. "Practical, adaptive, individual, symbolic, visualizing" methods of correct gowning are being taught at a school where lectures on the history and survivals of costuming, color harmonies and design are an important part of the training. Perhaps, after all, the time may come when the men who make the fashions to fit the manufacturing requirements will allow women comfortable and at the same time artistic wearing apparel. About half the spectators it was noticed were men—many of them visiting tailors from other cities. These gentry of the shears and basting thread pawed over the exhibited suits, cloaks and shirtwaists with keenest interest, and often made cabalistic notes, to use no doubt as they later will fit their patronesses in Sandusky, Skaneateles or St. Joe. The costume of the future—the suffragist gown, which attracted as much attention as the nearby suffrage booth, was grey with golden brown piping. Some would call the cut mannish; others would just say that it was a little severe. It contained some sharp angles in which the practised eye read a V and a W—votes for women.

The lure of the antique will draw divers and sundry folk interested in fine arts from every shire's end of New England to Boston during the last three weeks of March when the Copley Society's retrospective exhibition of the decorative arts will be on at Copley hall. The society, whose loan exhibitions are internationally famous, has been quiescent since the popuar Sorolla exhibition of 1909; its forthcoming exhibition will resume very interesting activities. The wealth of artistic objects in Boston houses is well known; the exhibition committee has secured many of the best things—works which from the nature of their ownership comparatively few people can see unless these are specially loaned for public exhibition. The exhibits at Copley Hall, covering the widest range of Eastern and Western art, will include the most beautiful and interesting examples which can be obtained of tapestries, embroideries and textiles, furniture, paintings and sculptures, porcelains and potteries, old books and bindings, silver and other metal work. A special section of the exhibition will be devoted to the New England colonial period. The exhibition will be opened to the public on Wednesday, March 8, 1911, and will continue for about three weeks. In past years many New England people who spend a week or two in Boston have timed their visit so that it may take place while the Copley Society's exhibition is in progress and at other galleries the art season is at its height.

It sounds good to the thousands of music students in the Hub, this plan undertaken by a number of public spirited citizens whereby students and others of limited means may enjoy the performances of the Boston opera house at half rates. Not the least important of the many advantages of studying music in Boston lies in the almost numberless opportunities to hear the world's best music, often gratuitously as at the many Conservatory concerts and recitals which fill Jordan Hall evening after evening during the season; sometimes, as in the case of performances by distinguished visiting musicians by payment of an admission fee which is often reduced for the benefit of those who are studying the art. Attendance upon as many concerts as possible has long been enjoined upon young people anxious to get all they can from musical Boston. The New England Conservatory's summary of concerts and recitals last year showed five performances by the full orchestra, one by the Conservatory choral club, nine by members of the faculty, three by the ensemble classes, nine by advanced students, thirty Saturday afternoon recitals, four by students and post-graduates, one by Students of the dramatic department and three by pupils of the normal classes. To supplement these and other opportunities which come to all the thousands of young men and women following a musical education it is now purposed to make it always possible for the deserving student to hear grand opera at half price. It is realized by the promoters of the movement that not the least of the benefits of good opera is its educational effect. Often it happens—and it must be so to a large degree in Boston—that those who would get the greatest amount of stimulation from grand opera as well presented as it is here are not able to pay even the moderate prices demanded by the less expensive seats. These the new organization will help when they are found worthy. A fund will be raised by means of which the opera tariffs will cut squarely in two for the benefit of those who will profit most directly by the arrangement.

On to Beacon Hill is the suffrage slogan. The day following the anniversary of G. Washington's nativity the combined suffragist-laborite-socialist aggregation will move on the solons and demand votes for women. Interested listeners who cannot be accommodated at the State house will have a second chance, for there will be a great overflow meeting at Ford hall, just across State house Park, at which all the addresses of the occasion will be repeated. The active cooperation of organized labor is expected this year to have influence with the legislature. An emphatic equal suffrage plank is included among the 15 labor measures introduced in the present Great and General Court by the Massachusetts State Branch of the American Federation of Labor. The pamphlet of this organization gives these reasons for its interest in women's rights:

"There are over 500,000 wage earning women in Massachusetts. Not only the labor man's sense of fair play, but his own interest, demands that this class in the worker's ranks should no longer be unprovided with that instrument of protection, the ballot, which he himself has found indispensable to the maintenance of his rights. A chain is only as strong as its weakest link; labor leaders and thinkers have long recognized the disfranchised class of workers as the weakest link in the chain of organized labor. It is their business to strengthen this link and therefore they favor, not only from reasons of sentiment, but also of self-protection, the recognition of the right of women to vote. Organized Labor has long favored the recognition of the right of women to vote. This year the state convention gave its Legislative committee explicit instructions to give full support to legislation to secure equal suffrage, regardless of sex." The demonstrations at the State house and Ford hall will, as usual, bring up to Boston large delegations of New England suffragists.

Quincy people will have a chance to hear about these and similar happenings at the meeting of the Young Women's club in the clubhouse on Goffe street, this evening when Miss A. P. Gay of Boston and Miss Agnes E. Ryan, editor of the Woman's Journal, will speak on suffrage.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MISSING BOYS REPORTED.

Word was received by the police yesterday that the two boys, Robert Nelson and Toigo Salenires, who are missing from Quincy, were seen in Chester, Mass., on Thursday. That day they called on a relative of the Nelson boy named Matti Pisamer. At that time the boys had $2.50 with them. At first Pisamer thought nothing of their visit, but after they had left, he became suspicious that all was not right, and went out to look for them but could find no trace of them. He then telephoned to the Nelson boys father in Quincy. As the boys have but a small amount of money with them they cannot get a great way. They were evidently headed for Springfield and the police of that city have been notified to look out for them.

LATER—Chief of Police Burrell reported at noon that the boys had been picked up by the police of Pittsfield. Their parents have been notified and they will go to Pittsfield to bring the boys back.

READY FOR DEDICATION

Remodelled Presbyterian is a Beautiful Edifice

After six months of patient waiting on the part of the congregation, the First Presbyterian church on Water street has been completely remodelled and renovated, and the rededication services will take place Sunday morning. Extensive repairs and many changes and additions have made the edifice beautiful beyond recognition almost to those who were worshippers within its walls in former years.

A sixteen foot addition has been made in the rear, giving space for the choir loft and organ, pastor's study and choir room.

The auditorium has been redecorated throughout and has been supplied with stained glass windows, some of them given by the church organizations and others in memoriam. New electric fixtures have been put in, the floors have been treated with oil and stain, and the aisles have been recarpeted.

The lecture room has been enlarged, and the floor lowered two feet, thus making the room much airier and pleasanter. Class rooms, library and kitchen have been added, also a lady's parlor and a new heating plant has been installed. The whole building has been changed over inside and out to give a colonial effect, and the present edifice is one of which the congregation and pastor may well be proud.

The large window in the front of the church was given in memory of two former pastors, Rev. Eben Muse and Rev. John Ramsay. At the top of the centre panel is an open Bible. Beneath it is a monument with a lily entwining it, and at its base the words "Faith, Hope, Love." The narrower panels at the sides bear the greek letter Alpha and Omega, and the lily effect is also carried out.

As one enters the auditorium from the rear, the beauty of the interior may be appreciated at its best. The new mural decorations, the stained glass windows, and the shade of stain used on pew and pulpit harmonize well, and give one a feeling of rest as he admires them all. With the choir loft in the rear of the pulpit the church looks much larger and more ecclesiastical than before.

On the rear wall at the right is a window in memory of George G. Bowman. The lily effect is carried out in the design of this as in all the windows. The central design is a cross and crown. In the side wall on the right comes first the Christian Endeavor window bearing the C. E. monogram in the centre. A memorial window with abroken column as the central design is next. "In Memoriam Sarah T. Craig" is at the base of the middle panel. The Bible school window with an open Bible in the centre comes third and the front window presented by the Women's Missionary society has The World for the central figure. "The World for Christ" is written around the globe.

On the left the rear window is in memory of William H. and Matilda Bishop. An anchor of Hope gives the suggestion of the thought of the donor. The left side wall contains five windows the central one being in memory of Robert C. Allen a man who lived to a ripe old age in the service of the church. A sheaf of ripe wheat is the central design. On the opposite side the idea of youth is brought out by the broken column on the memorial window of Sarah T. Craig.

The first window on the left wall was given by The Boys Club. The moral law, The Ten Commandments form the central figure. The Brotherhood window with the clasped hands in the centre, is next. Beyond the memorial window are the Home Department window with the Altar of Incense designed in the centre and the Ladies Aid society window bearing a design of the Golden Candlestick with its seven branches.

The principal dedicatory exercises will be held at 10.30 Sunday morning. Dr. James A. Worden D. D. of Philadelphia, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Sunday school work will preach the rededication sermon. The choir wil sing two anthems "Be joyful in the Lord" by Lorens and "Jehovah Reigns" by McPhail

The Bible school and the Y. P. S. C. E. will have special rededication services.

The evening service at 7 o'clock will also be of a special nature. Dr. James Alexander of Boston will deliver the address. The choir will sing "Jehovah Reigns" by McPhail and "Rock of Ages" by Gabriel. Mrs. Robert Grant will sing a solo, Queen of Angels and Wendell Clark will give a cornet solo with organ accompaniment as a prelude. Mrs. D. Ross will preside at the organ.

The rededication banquet will be held Thursday evening. A reception will take place at 6.30 and the banquet will be served at 7. There will be a special musical program and addresses by outside speakers.

A GREAT NEED IN QUINCY

Suitable Accommodations for Desirable Citizens

The employment office at the plant of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company reports that since January 1, 1911 the company has hired twenty-two first class machinists who left without commencing work and gave the reason for leaving as being unable to secure suitable accommodations for board and room at moderate prices within a reasonable distance of the plant. There is no doubt a lack of suitable accommodations for mechanics in the Point district, and while there are a large number of boarding houses which are open to workmen, it is well known that many of the better class of labor are continually leaving the neighborhood on account of unfavorable conditions for living.

Descendants of the Bicknell family in Quincy and Weymouth are interested in the reunion to be held at hotel Essex, Boston, on the afternoon of Feb. 22. The president, Thomas W. Bicknell of Providence, R. I., says in his call for the meeting: "We are going to have a new fashioned, old fashioned Bicknell meeting. A genuine, free-moving, social, hearty time; no hobble-skirt-time. We want to see all the Bicknell tribe, especially those born since 1880."

BRIEFS

Mrs. E. S. Edwards is seriously ill at her home on Walker street.

John S. Mitchell granite salesman of New York is recuperating at the home of his mother, Mrs. Arthur Mitchell, Atlantic, after an eight weeks' seige of sickness in a Baltimore hospital.

Send in your dates of entertainments for March for the "Coming Events" column. February is a full month with something going on every night. As Lent begins in March it will probably be a quieter month socially but it is well to announce your dates so as not to conflict with others.

The triplets born to Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wentworth of Miller Stile road, on Nov. 11 are having a birthday today being three months old. All three—Barbara,, William and Laura—are flourishing and each weighs a little under eight pounds. Mrs. Wentworth is in good health and very proud of the babies.

A very enthusiastic patriotic service was held in the Y. M. C. A. this morning when about 250 younger boys gathered to listen to the stories of Washington, Lincoln and the Civil war illustrated by stereopticon views. An illustrated song "Rock of ages" was sung by all the boys. It would have been a lesson in patriotism for many an older person to hear the boys sing the Star Spangled Banner at the close of the story.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret M. Sullivan, widow of Mr. Timothy M. Sullivan, was held this morning from St. John's church, and was very largely attended. A solemn high mass was celebrant with Rev. P. J. Scannell as celebrant with Rev. P. J. Scammell as deacon, and Rev. N. P. Brennan as sub-deacon. The Gregorian mass was sung by the regular choir with Miss Mary Burns and Miss Josephine McCarthy as soloists. The burial was at St. Mary's cemetery.

CONDUCTOR NOT GUILTY.

William H. Kittredge, a street car conductor, was arraigned before Judge Avery this morning for assault on Edward Whalen last Saturday night, but after hearing the evidence Judge Avery found him not guilty and ordered his discharge.

The evidence showed that Whalen and two companions boarded the 11.37 P. M. car from Neponset at the Atlantic railroad bridge. All three, so the evidence was, had been drinking. A disturbance was commenced immediately. One of the three left the car at Barry's corner. At Glover avenue Whalen told the conductor to stop at Billings road. The conductor gave the signal to stop, and as he did so Whalen seized the conductor and struck him in the face, also using some vile language.

At this the conductor grappled with Whalen and pushed him off the car, which had then come to a stop. Whalen claimed the conductor kicked him in the stomach, but this was denied by the conductor and other witnesses. Whalen's companion then started in to make trouble, and he also was put off. Both Whalen and his companions hats were left on the car, but were later thrown off by the conductor who also last his cap. As a result of the mixup Whalen swore out a warrant against the conductor.

MILITARY WHIST.

A military whist and dance were given in Alpha hall Friday evening under the direction of a committee consisting of Perley Barbour, Angelo Conti, William E. Cooper, Walter P. Ela and Elmer F. Ricker. The hall was beautifully decorated in national colors with many large flags and an innumerable supply of small ones. Whist was enjoyed during the first hour. The tables were designated as forts and each was prettily decorated with flags and bunting. Each fort was supplied with 30 small flags. Whenever a couple won they were allowed to take as many flags as they took tricks over six from the fort at which they were sitting to their home fort, and when they lost they were obliged to surrender from their home fort as many flags as they lost tricks over six. Prizes were given to the four people defending the fort which had the greatest number of flags at the end of play.

At 9.30 dancing began, and was continued until midnight. Wilson's orchestra furnished the music. The lights at the sides of the hall were veiled with bunting, and the effect was beautiful when the upper lights were turned off. About 50 couples were assembled for the occasion which was brilliant in every particular. The next gathering under the auspices of the committee will be a costume party.

DRAMA AND DANCE.

This was presented in a very creditable manner by the following cast: James Donovan, Richard Joyce, Charles Perkins, William Bulanger, John Shea Miss Catherine of Spain, Miss Lou Norris and Miss Margaret O'Connell. Following the entertainment there was dancing.

THE IDEAL CHURCH LIKE A DREADNOUGHT

Should Have No Passengers But Everyone a Worker, Says Rev. Dr. Worden

In Dedication Sermon at First Presbyterian Church

It required extra seats at both the services at the First Presbyterian church on Sunday to accommodate the large congregations, for it was "Rededication day" of the remodelled edifice. The church is now very attractive—both the exterior and the interior— and more commodious and convenient for many lines of activity.

The dedication service was at 10.30 A. M. and the program was:

Organ prelude
Doxology
Invocation and Lords Prayer, Pastor
Anthem, "Be joyful in the Lord"
Responsive reading, 24th Psalm.
Creed
Gloria Patri
Hymn, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord! God Almighty."
Scripture reading and prayer—Rev. S. M. Forsaith of Mattapan.
Notices and offering
Anthem—"Jehovah reigns"
Transfer of keys by—Andrew Milne Chairman Building Committee.
Acceptance of keys—Forbes Craig, Chairman of Trustees.
Dedication responses.
Dedicatory prayer—Pastor.
Hymn,—"The church's one foundation"
Sermon—Rev. James A. Worden, LL. D. Secretary Sabbath School Work.
Prayer
Hymn—"All hail the power of Jesus name"
Benediction—Pastor.

Music was a pleasing part of the services under the direction of Archie Parson with Mrs. Daniel Ross as organist. The chorus choir includes about 25 voices.

Before delivering the morning sermon Dr. Worden noted the fact that it was his third visit to the church, but he said he had a special interest in the Quincy church because it was an earnest church, a working church, especially for the young. He endorsed the pastor's Thursday evening meetings for young people, and had a tribute for Rev. James A. Matheson the pastor, who also came from Philadelphia— he is a consecrated, conscientious and reliable minister of our faith. He asked prayers for him, and paused for a minute.

Dr. Worden's text was from Mark 13:34, and his text "Christ the ideal of the church." To every man his work. Time was when the ideal was different. When the pastor, deacons and a few others did all the church work. Today there are some who think they have no part in the work. Some are just passengers; they contribute to the expense but lay back in ease. Fortunately they are but few in this church. The ideal church is like a dreadnought, with no one idle; every man a worker. There is a work in God's church for every one. Jesus Christ loves the individual, even more than does the tender mother.

What shall I do? By service, by work, be true. Love Him and serve Him specifically. Jesus tested death for every man; look to the cross. Each one has a talent superior to that given to any one else. Each has it in his power to bring others to Christ. Not, can you; but will you do it? Do it today; now, on Dedication day.

How shall we reach the masses? There are no masses! All are individuals each reached in a different way. One cannot reach everybody. A minister cannot. He showed by figures that if one person should reach another person each year that from a small start it would be possible to reach all the population of the world in eight years.

Now the dedication; you have a lovely church; it is all right. But God wants the people. Dr. Worden called individually on the pastor, the Superintendent of the Sunday School, the teachers, the boys and girls, and the fathers and mothers, to dedicate themselves anew to Christ; to line up with the workers. Come and help; we want reenforcements. The battle is severe because there are all kinds of sin to ensnare. He told of a dream where the humble mother was exalted in Heaven. Consecrate yourselves anew. I ask it in Jesus name.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

It was dedication Sunday also in the Sunday School, and the regular routine was suspended. Dr. Worden, Rev. S. M. Forsaith, the pastor and Superintendent and others spoke. The attendance was very large.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

The same speakers addressed the Christian Endeavorers at a largely attended meeting.

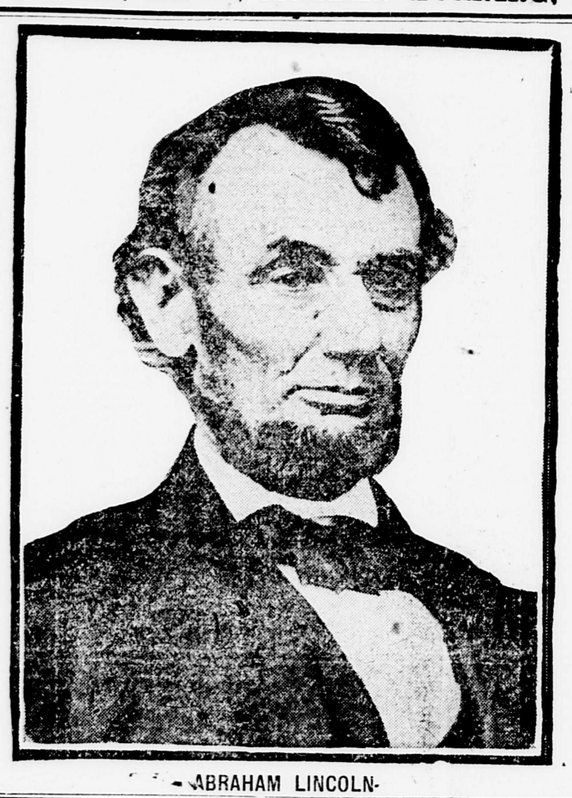

EVENING SERVICE.

At the evening service the sermon was by Dr. Alexander of Boston, and Dr. Worden assisted the pastor. Dr. Alexander's theme was: "The church and the needs of today."

M. C. O. F. SOCIAL.

There will be a joint social Tuesday evening of St. Francis and St. Ambrose courts, M. C. O. F. at A. O. H. hall, West Quincy. ABRAHAM LINCOLN

IN MEMORY OF LINCOLN

Patriotic Services Under Auspices Woman's Relief Corps

A largely attended patriotic service was held at Grand Army hall Sunday afternoon under the auspices of Paul Revere Women's Relief Corps, in memory of President Lincoln.

The exercises were in charge of Mrs. Anna J. Gould, patriotic instructor of the corps and circle.

The hall was prettily decorated with flags and bunting. In the center of the room was a large picture of Lincoln, about which was festooned a silk flag.

The exercises opened with the escorting of Mrs. Fannie M. Wheeler, department patriotic instructor, by Mrs. Annie T. Morrison and Mrs. Elizabeth Farrell, patriotic aids, and the four color bearers. Then came the Lord's Prayer recited in unison by the audience, followed by a solo, "Old Glory," by Mrs. E. E. Nason.

Mrs. Mary E. Powers, senior vice commander of the corps, read an original poem written by Mrs. Anna J. Gould. During the reading of this poem, Master Irving Fletcher placed letters on a wire suspended across the hall, which at their completion formed the words of one of President Lincoln's famous sayings—"With malice toward none, with charity to all."

Then came an address on the life of Lincoln by Commander Thomas Ring of Post 88. At the close the audience sang "Marching through Georgia." Master Fred Rausmuser of the Coddington school read Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg. This was followed by an address on patriotic work by Department Patriotic Instructor, Mrs. Fannie M. Wheeler, and remarks by Mrs. Anna J. Gould, patriotic instructor of Paul Revere corps. Then came the offertory and singing of "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The remainder of the program included a recitation by Mrs. Lucy Belle Morton, remarks by Commander W. F. Carman of the U. S. W. V.; Commander Gould, of the S. of V.; Commander F. P. Lund and Past Commander George L. Phillips of Post 88, and the singing of "Tenting tonight on the old camp ground." Henry J. Matthews, historian of the Spanish War Veterans, read an interesting paper on "Remember the Maine," in commemoration of the thirteenth anniversary of the blowing up of that battleship in Havana harbor. The exercises closed with a salute to the flag and the singing of "America."

DISTRICT THREE CONCERT

Milo Burke and Other Artists Give Fine Program

One of the finest sacred concerts for a long time was given in the hall of St. John's school Sunday evening under the auspices of the district three committee. The program included piano duets by Miss Nonie O'Connor and John Mahan; tenor solos by Joseph Morrissette; 'Cello, violin and piano trio, by Prof. Olando Taddie, Marcus Mahon and John Mahon; readings by Miss Bertha McDonough of Atlantic, a student of the Emerson school of oratory; piano solos by Mrs. Nellie Hart Reardon, who played selections from Mendelssohn and Raffe; soprano solos by Miss Emma E. Ecker of Dorchester, formerly of West Quincy; xylophone solos by Carmini De Mazzola; selections by a quartette composed of Miss Helen Galvin, Miss Angela McCarthy, D. J. S. McCurdy and Dr. Daniel B. Reardon, and cornet solos by Milo Burke leader of the Milo Burke band of Brockton. Mr. Burke came from Providence especially to play at this concert and arrived at the hall just in time to appear. His selection was from Handels Largo and was greatly enjoyed.

SUFFRAGETTES WIN.

The affirmative of the debate on the Woman's Suffrage question by the Young Women's Club, as an educational feature, was held Saturday night at the Quincy Women's club, when addresses on woman's suffrage were given by Miss Agnes E. Ryan of Boston and Mrs. Arthur P. Gay of Boston. The arguments for the affirmative were so strong that some doubts are expressed as to the ability to obtain any one to speak on the negative side next week, as those assigned for the negative have declined to serve.

Total	$2808.51

The reports of the second day's work in the $5000 campaign were given after the banquet Saturday evening. The ladies furnished an excellent menu, and the 50 hungry men gathered around the tables surely did justice to it.

"PROGRESS" IS THE QUINCY WATCHWORD AND ONE CAN ALMOST SEE THE ADVANCE

The amounts raised were not quite as large, since the Saturday rush kept everyone busy otherwise. All felt confident, however, that the desired sum would be raised before midnight Monday.

The young men's teams, A. B. and C. accomplished much more than on the first day. Team 6 had raised practically the same amount. Councilman Branch's squad, team 5, did well to secure $103. Team 2 and 4 encounted many obstacles and were unable to report as much as on the previous day. Team 1 and 2 still hovered around $100, and both expect to report much more tonight. Team 1 has sworn vengeance on Team 6, and will take the victors brooms away from them after the banquet this evening. The Citizens committee secured $350 and expect to do at least twice as good over Sunday. The campaign yell was given and then the band separated for work.

COMMITTEES SELECTED.

A largely attended meeting of the parishioners of St. Mary's parish was held Sunday afternoon in the music room of the church to arrange for the annual parish reunion to be held at St. Mary's hall. The committees to have charge were selected as follows: Arrangements, Stephen B. Little. Reception, Hon. William T. Shea. Finance, John C. Ballou, Rev. Henry T. Grady. Concert, Rev. William J. Duffy. Floor marshal, James F. Burke. Floor director, John D. Smith.

WATER FINANCES VERY INTRICATE

Quincy Uses Less Water Than in 1906 But Metropolitan Assessment Larger

Taxpayers Will Not Benefit From Proposed Shipyard Contract

It is a commendable movement on the part of Mayor Shea to seek to obtain some income from the unused water reservoir which cost the city hundreds of thousands of dollars, but why not a revenue of $25,000 annually instead of $1,000 as is proposed in the contract with the Fore River Shipbuilding Company? It does not seem necessary to sell to said company ALL the water to tax full capacity of the reservoir for $1,000, particularly as the company will never need so much water. The city should RESERVE the right to sell water to other industries which may desire to enter into a similar contract. Under the contract as drawn the Fove River company could sell this water to any ordinary industry on the Fore river, including the power plant of the Old Colony street railway or any plant large or small which may locate near by, and thereby further reduce the city revenue.

All water rates and water finances of the city are involved in the proposed contract. At present the shipyard is obtaining water from the city below cost, yet under the proposed contract the revenue of the city may be reduced

Lighten Home Cares.

You may turn the gas up quickly, or drop the chimney on the floor, it cannot break. Never has to be cleaned and gives a brilliant light. Mantles last longer and cannot get black. Saves gas and makes a mantle wear longer. Means a positive and large saving in chimneys, mantles and gas consumed.

Try just one and you will never go back to glass or mica chimneys. A better and softer light than a glass chimney.

You ought to be able to get the Never-Break Metal Gas Chimneys from your dealer at 25c., but if you cannot, we will send the same postpaid on receipt of price. You need not send anything extra for postage.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

In Wisconsin they are trying to turn the light on the Match Trust. Why don't they scratch one?

The critics lead us to believe, relative to "Chocolate Soldier;" that the audiences are "eating it up."

"Affinity" Earle is now writing poetry. That man seems to be going from bad to worse.

Politically speaking, Mr. Bryan may be somewhat interested to know that an Illinois man given up for dead came to life in a morgue the other day.

Close inspection has revealed a Republican member of the Texas legislature. He was still alive according to latest accounts.

Now, was it not too bad for Uncle Sam's sailors to spoil a perfectly delightful little revolution in South America by capturing one little gunboat?

We read that an editor was offered $100,000 to write a subsidy editorial, but we suspect that Nat Goodwin used it when he gave Edna Goodrich $1,000,000, in the same sort of money.

JUST A LITTLE MOTHER.

Margaret E. Sangster.

She's just a little mother in a cabin far away;
Since I kissed her in the gloaming 'tis forever and a day.
In my dreams I hear her calling, calling o'er the weary sea,
"Come ye back to Ballyshannon, Katy dear, come back to me."

She's standing in the doorway, filling up the space,
With the kerchief o'er her bosom and the frills around her face;
She is smiling as Our Lady smiles above the Holy Child,
And my heart runs forth to meet her o'er the waste of waters wild.

Do you know our Ballyshannon, where the very winds are sweet
With the saltness of the sea foam and the tang of smoldering peat?
Do you know our mists that fold us in a blanket soft and gray,
Do you know our Ballyshannon in the red rose dawn of day?

Then you see the little mother, just herself, so small and old,
With a look I'm sure would warm you were you shivering with the cold.
O, so mirthful, O, so patient she whose work is never done.
O, so ready with her laughter at the rise and set of sun.

In the great house where I'm serving folks are ever kind to me,
But they do not guess my yearning for the cabin over sea.
Wage I earn and wage I send her, yet I cannot longer hide;
I must seek my little mother, I must nestle at her side.

She's just a little mother in a cabin far away
Since I kissed her in the gloaming 'tis forever and a day.
In my dreams she's calling, calling, "Mother darling, yes I'll come;
I'll go back to Ballyshannon, to my mother and my home."

—Why wonder foreigners are dismayed in their study of the English language? Hundreds of words have the same pronunciation but no significance nor relation. For instance; Know and no;; can, a receptacle, can, to preserve, can, to be able; punch, a thrust or blow, punch, to peforate with an instrument, punch, a tool; pound, to beat, pound an inclosure, pound, a weight, pound, to confine; and so we might continue indefinitely. It is hard to master and understand our language, as is shown by the large number of highly educated foreigners who have a noticeable difficulty in expressing themselves in English. We should sympathize with the foreigner. To jeer him shows ignorance on the part of the jeerer.—Mansfield News.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Palm Beach,
Feb. 8, 1911.

Dear Ledger:

We arrived here on the sixth and found the temperature 85 in the shade. It is 83 today. I had to change to summer clothing at once. A single cotton sheet is all I want over me at night, although the nights are much cooler than the days.

The day before we left Daytona, I took a boat ride up the Tomoko river where the alligators are seen in their native haunts basking in the sun along the shore for miles. We counted twenty, some were big fellows.

We are amid the cocoa nut palms here, a very beautiful palm. The Palmetto palm is grand but not so wavy and graceful as the cocoanut palms. I counted twenty cocoanuts on one tree. We are also among the pineapple orchards. The flowers are in full bloom, the varied colored leaves are beautiful as all the tropical plants are. The oleanders are as tall as our apple trees at home and filled with flowers. Speaking of apple trees I have not seen an apple tree south of Virginia and apples in the markets are scarce. Grape fruit is grown largely here. They are riper, more juicy, sweeter and less bitter than those in the markets north. I never eat grape fruit north, but here I like them.

The great hotel at Palm Beach is the Royal Poinsianna which accommodates 2000 guests. It is an immense structure owned by Flagler the Standard Oil magnate. He owns several big hotels along the Florida coast, also railroads. In fact it is said he runs the state of Florida.

Palm Beach is not as large a beach or as pretty as the Daytona beach which is 30 miles long and straight. Nantasket Beach is very small in comparison.

Bamboo canes grow here. Everything is expensive. The century plant is budding out now. Turkey buzzards are abundant and pelicans plentiful on Pelican island. The law protects the birds. We shall probably remain here a while and enjoy the tropical climate.

OLD NEWSY IS ILL

His Wife, Aged 95, Takes His Place In Disposing of Papers

Joliet, Ills., Feb. 13.—Orasmus Page, Joliet's oldest "newsboy," who for years has been a familiar figure at the railroad station, where he sells newspapers, is ill, and, owing to his age, little hope is entertained for his recovery.

Page this month will complete his 102d year of life. His wife, who is 95 years old, is delivering papers and selling them to passengers boarding trains.

OPPOSITION WILL WIPE OUT TARIFF

President Declares That Reciprocity Bill Must Pass

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 13.—In an address before a joint session of the Illinois legislature President Taft warned the leaders of his party that if they defeated the concessions contained in the Canadian reciprocity agreement now pending in congress and persisted in retaining in these times of high prices and gradually exhausting food supply a tariff not based solely upon the difference in cost of production at home and abroad, with a reasonable profit to the American producer, opposition would be aroused that would know no moderation and would wipe from the statute books the last trace of a protective tariff.

This announcement came on the heels of news from Washington that the reciprocity agreement had met with a favorable report in the house committee on ways and means only by the help of Democratic votes.

President Taft feels keenly the opposition to reciprocity by members of the Republican party, but he is sanguine they will "see the light" before it is too late.

TWO MILLION VISITORS

London Looks For Great Influx During Coronation Ceremonies

London, Feb. 13.—Since the beginning of the winter the chief functionaries of the British court have been busily absorbed in preparation for the coronation of King George V, which will surpass in pageantry and in historical interest all former ceremonials of the character.

Business men and transportation companies count upon an influx of something approaching 2,000,000 visitors to London during the coronation season. A considerable proportion of these will be foreigners, Americans and Colonials probably predominating.

GOD BLESS YOU HIS LAST WORDS

Archbishop Ryan Dies at His Home In Philadelphia

A CALM AND PEACEFUL END

Rallied Sufficiently to Comprehend Significance of Scene a Few Moments Before Death—Oldest Archbishop In United States and Noted as Orator, Wit and Peacemaker In Matters Pertaining to Labor

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—Serene and prepared to meet his God, whom he had served so well, Most Rev. Patrick J. Ryan, D. D., LL. D., archbishop of Philadelphia and metropolitan of Pennsylvania, and one of the great archbishops on the American continent, passed peacefully into eternity at the archepiscopal residence adjoining the cathedral.

For weeks the prelate, who would have been 80 years old had he lived until the 20th of this month, fought off death, but a weak heart, enfeebled by the arduous duties of his office, could not stand the strain.

At dawn Saturday the fatal change came and he slowly lost ground. At noon it was thought he was about to breathe his last, but he rallied, only to again lapse into a sinking spell. The four attending physicians, who had been resorting to artificial means to keep their patient alive, whispered that the end was not far off. About this time the archbishop roused himself and murmured the dying words of St. Paul: "I wish to be dissolved and be with Christ."

An hour later messengers hurried out to summon priests who were hearing confessions in the cathedral. Fr. Kavanaugh, the archbishop's secretary, began the prayers for the dying, and the priests, kneeling about the deathbed, intoned the responses.

The archbishop's mind for a moment cleared sufficiently at about 4 o'clock to comprehend the significance of the scene, and with the words "God bless you" on his lips he sank back. His breathing became fainter, and Dr. Devereaux of Washington, one of his nephews, who had been in constant attendance, leaned over the prelate and then held up his hand. "It is all over," was all he said.

Archbishop Ryan was born in 1831, in Tipperary county, Ireland, and received his early education at his home village near Thurles and at Dublin until he was 16 years old, when he entered Carlow college.

In 1852 he came to this country and became connected with the archdiocese of St. Louis. When he reached the age of 21 he was appointed professor of English literature at the Carondolet seminary, Missouri, and was ordained deacon with the privilege of speaking in the St. Louis cathedral.

In September, 1853, he was ordained priest and made assistant pastor of the cathedral, which position he filled until 1856, when he was chosen rector. In 1860 he was transferred to the Annunciation church, where he remained for twelve years. During the Civil war he acted as chaplain of a military hospital and prison of the Confederate forces.

He was consecrated coadjutor bishop of St. Louis in 1872 and while visiting Rome in 1884 was given the honorary title of "Archbishop of Salamina" by Pope Leo XIII.

On June 8, 1884, Archbishop Ryan was removed from St. Louis to Philadelphia to fill the position made vacant by the death of Archbishop Wood.

The prelate was known throughout the country and at the time of his death was the oldest archbishop in this country. He was well known as an orator, wit, a lover of children and a man much sought for in matters of trouble between labor unions and organizations.

During the Philadelphia car strikes and the strike of the Pennsylvania miners, Archbishop Ryan took an active part. He was prominently mentioned as the man to be appointed cardinal in 1905 by Pope Pius X, but another was finally chosen.

THE ARNOLD MYSTERY

No Light Shed by Return of Girl's Mother and Brother

New York, Feb. 13.—The end of the mysterious story of Dorothy Arnold has by no means been reached. The romantic turn given it by George S. Griscom, Jr., by his expressed confidence that she is alive, and by his quoted intention of marrying her, if possible, was given a contrary twist by the arrival home from Europe of the missing girl's mother and brother.

In reply to two direct questions Mrs. Arnold denied even circumstantial knowledge whether her daughter was dead or alive and emphatically declared that she had not consented to a marriage between the girl and Griscom. Her son said the family had given up the search, having exhausted every means they knew of.

HILL UNLIKE OTHERS

Ambassador to Germany Sidesteps Knickerbockers at Court

Berlin, Feb. 13.—The new rules for court dress promulgated by the kaiser's court marshal gave rise to an idea that Ambassador Hill might regard it as advisable to overcome his well known antipathy to unforms.

It was announced that civilians who had hitherto appeared in ordinary evening dress would henceforth be required to don tight-fitting white satin knickerbockers, white silk stockings and silver buckled patent leather shoes.

Inquiry at the American embassy elicited the statement that the rules, in so far as foreign diplomats were concerned, were purely optonal, and Hill and his secretaries would continue to appear in ordinary evening dress. The representatives of all other republics accredited at Berlin will wear uniforms.

REFUSE TO ARBITRATE

Railway Officials' Attitude Called to Attention of Mayor

Northampton, Mass., Feb. 13.—Officials of the Connecticut Valley Street Railway company, for a second time, refused to submit to arbitration differences with their employes over the discharge of five men.

A committee of the union employes sent to confer with the officials so reported at a union meeting, and as a result of the report, petitions were immediately put in circulation asking Mayor Coolidge to call a special meeting of the city council tomorrow night to take action on the matter.

The council will be asked to urge arbitration upon the railway officials to prevent the threatened strike. The union also issued a long public statement defining the position of the members and stating that they are willing to submit to arbitration.

Ashland, N. H., Feb. 13.—J. W. Shields of Philadelphia, who shot and killed Christie Kenney in a room at Hotel Mouselake, Warren, N. H., was brought before Justice of the Peace Williams at Warren on a charge of murder.

The ancient hall was crowded with eager spectators anxious to catch a glimpse of Shields, who comes from a wealthy and prominent family. A score of witnesses were heard.

Shields was bound over to the May sitting of the superior court at Plymouth without bail.

MEXICAN TROOPS BEATEN

Mexicali Recaptured by Rebels After a Severe Battle

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 13.—Official government advices received here are to the effect that the Mexican federal troops have suffered severe defeat at Mulata, where a battle raged for thirty-six hours.

Mexicali, Mex., Feb. 13.—General Simon Berthold and his band of insurgents recaptured Mexicali. The Mexican officials hurriedly crossed the American side. Berthold later crossed the American line and held a conference with Captain Babcock of the United States troops, stationed just across the border in Calexi county.

According to this message the rebel forces lost but two men, while the federal losses are described as numerous. Many of the dead soldiers were left lying on the field. The federals outnumbered the rebels.

GET $10,000 IN GEMS

Cracksmen Rifle Safe In a Boston Jewelery Store

Boston, Feb. 13.—Nearly $10,000 worth of jewelry was taken from the safe in the store of Philip Rahlin, 323 Tremont street, early Sunday morning, by robbers, who left behind them nothing in the shape of a clue, except a set of carpenter's tools.

A common jimmy was used to cut a hole in the rear of the safe. Then the cement was drilled through and a carpenter's bit used in a bitstock to cut through the wood in the rear of the safe. All the goods were taken out, except a tray containing thirty-six watches, which was left with some other plated jewelry.

GRAGG WAS TOO SHREWD

Not an Easy Victim for the Spanish Swindlers

When the old song of Spanish swindlers picked out C. W. Gragg the Quincy Point druggist for a victim, they did not know Charles. Instead of the expected cablegram, the swindlers will get a little publicity. Recently Mr. Gragg received a letter postmarked Madrid and addressed to C. W. Gragg,Esq., druggist, Quincy, Mass., Estados Unidos."

The letter read as follows:—

Madrid, the 10-1-1911.

Dear Sir:—Although I know you only from good references of your honesty, my sad situation compels me to reveal you an important affair in which you can procure a modest fortune, saving at the same time that of my darling daughter. Before being imprisoned here I was established as a Banker in Russia, as you will see by the enclosed article about me of many English newspapers which have published my arrest in London.

I beseech you to help me to obtain a sum of $480,000 I have in America and to come here to raise the seizure of my baggage, paying the registrar of the court the expenses of my trial and recover my portmanteau containing a secret pocket where I have hidden the document, indispensable to recover the said sum. As a reward I will give up to you the third part, viz: $160,000. I cannot receive your answer in the prison but you must send a cablegram to a person of my confidence who will deliver it to me. Awaiting your cable to instruct you in all my secret, I am sir,

Yours truly,
DEMIDOFF.

First of all answer by cable, not by letter, as follows:

Blas Latore, Junaelo tres Segundo Izquierda, Madrid. "Perfect"—Gragg.

The newspaper clipping was as follows:

ARREST OF A ST. PETERSBURG BANKER.

Charged with Fraud in Russia and Manslaughter in Spain. Interview of the Two Ambassadors.

Some months ago, as our readers may remember, we referred in these columns of the great scandal, caused in St. Petersburg and in Russia generally, by a noted banker who absconded, leaving a deficit of over five millions of rubles.

The Russian police sought for him for a long time in vain for it seems he had not left the least trace of his flight and the continued search over Europe and America proved unvailing.

Yesterday, however, a Spanish inspector accompanied by two officers from Scotland Yard and acting under instructions of the Spanish Abassador, who had previously interviewed the home secretary, arrested him on his way from the hotel where he was staying, to the steamship office. It seems that it was his evident intention to take passage for New York. From information received by the Ambassador, he had been in hiding in Spain, where he lived with a woman and with his daughter. A few days before arriving in London he had quarreled with another Russian, who was mortally wounded by a revolver shot during the scuffle, and who only lived long enought to denounce his assailant.

In an interview with the Russian Ambassador, it seems that the name he had been using in Spain, and which he gave on being arrested, was not his real one, Manasseina being simply an alibi, but after comparing the prisoner with photographs in his possession, the Russian Ambassador recognized him as Alexander Demidoff, the criminal banker who eloped with five millions of rubles; he is a native of St. Petersburg, a widower 48 years ago, with an only daughter that he left in Spain on escaping from that country.

On being arrested, two of Manasseina's or Alexander Demidoff's portmanteaus were seized but although strictly searched nothing but personal effects were found in them, in spite of which the Russian Ambassador declares, the prisoner ought to have several million rubles somewhere.

The Russian and Spanish Ambassadors conferred yesterday evening as to whether the prisoner should be conveyed to Spain or to Russia, and after an interview with the home secretary, and in accordance with the extradition treaty of England, Russia and Spain, it was agreed that the prisoner should be conveyed to Spain to stand trial for manslaughter, and that only after his trial can the Russian Government ask Spain through diplomatic channels, for his extradition.

Mr. Gragg wrote to the Russian minister at Washington and received a prompt reply and will take the advice given:

Imperial Russian Embassy
Washington.

Mr. C. W. Gragg.

Sir: In reply to your letter of January last, to the Russian Ambassador, I beg to return the enclosure, and to say that the whole story of the Russian banker in jail in Madrid is a part of a well known swindle which has several times come up in the papers as "theSpanish swindle." I would advise you not to give it any attention whatever.

Yours very truly,
N. Abokoff.
Secretary of the Embassy.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Lincoln Day and Y. M. C. A. Day Observed

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The subject taken by Rev. Carl G. Horst for his Sunday morning sermon at the Wollaston Unitarian church was "Happiness," his text being found in the eighth chapter of Nehemiah, the tenth verse. Happiness was differentiated from mere enjoyment of the passing moment, the superficial and shallow pleasure that comes from physical well being. Under five heads were considered the means of happiness. First—Work; the love of which is the Salvation of humanity and the doing of which brings joy. Second—the willingness to perceive and assimilate the good in every condition of life. Third—the self-control which holds in subjection the physical, mental and moral man. Fourth—Service for those with whom we live and work. Fifth—a firm and loyal faith in God which shall enable the man to see clearly and wisely, to hold loosely the transient good, and to ever hold abidingly to those things which endure.

At the vesper service Rev. Mr. Horst preached a very earnest and telling sermon from the text "Eye hath not seen." An extremely large congregation was present and the fine music by the Westland Ladies' Quartette was greatly appreciated. These vesper services on the second Sunday in each month are quite an attraction to people of all denominations, not only from Wollaston but from other parts of our city. William Weston presided at the organ.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

A Sunday School conference under the auspices of the Eastern Sunday School society was held in the Garfield street church all day Sunday. Special exercises and addresses were given at the 9.30 session of the Sunday School. Rev. G. W. Palmgren, pastor of the church, was invited to give the address at the regular morning service. "Hints to the Sunday School workers" was the theme chosen. At 2.30 another service was held. This took the form of a conference and discussion. Between the afternoon and evening services a lunch was served by the ladies of the church.

The evening service at 7.30 was also addressed by the pastor. His subject "was gain or loss." The church was well filled at all the services. The choir started in again after a two weeks' rest, and sang splendidly.

The regular church prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor spoke at the Sunday morning service using as his subject "Follow Christ." In the evening the theme of his sermon was "Serving God."

His address was well received by the congregation.

The Sunday Sunday was well attended, also men's league class.

The young people had a good meeting in the evening. The prayer circle is stimulating the young people of the church to undertake greater things for Christ.

The evening service was well attended. Pastor's theme:—"The vision of the seer at Patrios." Henry Paterson sang a solo with good effect.

A meeting of teachers and officers of the Sunday School will be held on Wednesday evening at the home of John Russell, Elliott street.

Prayer meeting in church at 7.30 on Thursday.

A cottage prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mr. James Ross, Taber street, Friday evening at 7.30.

CALVARY BAPTIST.

At the Sunday forenoon service, the pastor took for his text, Acts 11,26—"The disciples were first called Christians at Antioch." The subject was "What is a Christian?" In developing the thought Rev. Mr. Davis brought out the difference in the significance of the term between then and now.

The Y. P. S. C. E. meeting was led by Alex. Mundie. Since last Sunday was Christian Endeavor day the regular monthly consecration meeting was held last evening.

The pastor spoke at the evening service using as his subject: "Who is supreme?"

The attendance was large and the meeting a very good one. The chorus sang "What did he do," in a very able manner.

The Bible Study class will meet at the home of Mrs. Foss, 114 Granite street, Tuesday evening at 7.30.

A business meeting of the Davis class will be held Wednesday evening at 7.30.

The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at the usual hour.

On Friday evening at 7.30 a Christian Endeavor social will be held at the home of Miss Lottie Hobart, Verchild street. The invitations have been issued in peanut shells.

SWEDISH METHODIST.

At the forenoon service on Sunday the pastor spoke from the text Luke 13:10-17—"The healing of the bound woman." The woman had the infirmity eighteen years when Jesus called her and she was healed. Thenceforth she was with him because he had freed her. And after the healing she accepted God and praised him for the wondrous works of His Son.

The Sunday School services were by William Gelotte.

The Young People's meeting was led by David Wollander. The scriptural text was from the third chapter of Acts where Peter and John go up to the Temple and heal the lame man.

The text of the evening sermon was taken from Acts 28:2. The subject of his address was "The spiritual fire." A church full of interested people, mostly young people were present at the service. Miss Olga Olson sang a solo.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Pratt formerly of Carver who are spending the winter at Wollaston Park are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son.

Miss Ellie Moulton of Bath, Maine, and Miss Esther Darling of Natick Mass., were the guests of Mrs. R. J. Davis 206 Franklin street over Sunday.

The Quincy Woman's Club meets tomorrow afternoon at half past two at the club house. The business session will be followed at three o'clock by a lecture on music by Madame Mary Hallock and a social tea.

VALENTINE GERMAN

Very Pretty Children's Party in Aid of Day Nursery

The Valentine German at Music hall Saturday afternoon drew a large attendance of young people as well as a number of ladies who thoroughly enjoyed watching the graceful movements of the young people as they went through the figures of the German.

The affair was given under the direction of Mrs. Charles M. Bryant, and was for the benefit of the Day Nursery. Among the patronesses were: Mrs. Harry E. Rice, Mrs. Henry M. Faxon, Mrs. Clarence Burgin, Mrs. Paul R. Blackmur, Mrs. Luther M. Glover, Mrs. Henry I. Hall, Mrs. Joseph A. Dasha, Mrs. Jesse I. Litchfield, Mrs. Clinton Jones, Mrs. Charles S. Safford, Mrs. William E. Rowe, Mrs. E. E. Jameson, Mrs. James H. Churchill, Mrs. Mark L. Read, Jr., Mrs. Charles H. Johnson, Mrs. Herbert Y. Follett, Mrs. McLennon, Mrs. Russell A. Sears, Mrs. Henry R. Holden, Miss Margaret Thomas, Mrs. George Stone, Mrs. Nathaniel S. Hunting, Mrs. James Churchill, and Mrs. Nathan Nickerson.

The matrons were Mrs. John H. Johnson, Mrs. George E. Pfaffmann and Mrs. W. E. Burke who received in a cosy corner at the left of the stage.

The ushers were: Paul Blackmur, Gordon Jameson, Jack Pfaffmann, Herbert Johnson, Winthrop Safford, Eric Patch, Bruce Saville, Kendal Doble, Winslow Sears, Samuel Sears, Maurice Blackmur, Kenneth Smith, Gordon Rowe, Stanley Churchill, Earle Richardson, Willard Atkins, Starrett White, Carlton Smith, Philip Rice, Robert Stone, James Hill, Rider Gay, Harold Prout, Thomas Barstow, Allen Stearn, Lem White, Loyal Safford, Herbert Johnson and Norton Nickerson. Their particular mark was a red valentine in the shape of a sphere worn on the lapel of the coat.

The favors were pretty valentines, and it was by matching these that partners were selected. Wilson's orchestra furnished music and the German was from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Miss Corleu had charge of the German which assured its success. She wore a handsome gown of blue with black velvet trimmings with a handsome bunch of sweet peas fastened to the waist. Much credit for the success of the afternoon was due to Mrs. Charles M. Bryant who had entire charge.

German Gleanings.

Nearly one-third of the economic activity of Germany rests today on feminine shoulders.

Among the 593 railway workshops in Germany there are seventy which employ more than 300 persons.

The various German states maintain seventy schools in horseshoeing, with courses of from one to six months.

Germany has about 28,000 co-operative associations, with more than 4,000,000 members, who, with their families, represent nearly one-third of the total population of the German empire.

State Lines.

In the last five years $6,000,000 has been spent in labor, etc., on public roads in North Carolina.

Farmers of South Carolina spent last year $68,500,000 for products brought from other states that could have been raised in South Carolina.

There are in Texas 140,101 miles of roads of an average width of fifty feet, equal in area nearly to the land area of Delaware and in aggregate nearly six times the circumference of the earth.

At the Play.

My mamma took me to the play.
I like the theater so,
'Cause that's where all the grownup folks
And some rich children go.

I thought the music very nice.
The stage I could not see
Because a lady with queer curls
Sat right in front of me.

My papa says when she's asleep
She puts her hair away.
If she'd just only took a nap
I might have seen the play.

RED LIGHTS ON FIRE BOXES INSTALLED IN ROCHESTER

To Make Them Clearly Recognizable at Night.

In order to make the fire alarm boxes clearly recognizable at night in Rochester, N. Y., they have been equipped with an incandescent lamp enclosed in an outer red globe. No change was made in the fire alarm posts, a special fitting at the top being equipped with a shade holder and a forty watt, clear bulb tungsten lamp over which is a red globe with the words "Fire Alarm" etched in it.

LIGHT ON FIRE ALARM BOX.

The lighting circuit to the post is run underground either from the underground system or from a pole line, the leads in the latter case passing down the pole in conduit to the fire alarm post. Where the lighting circuits are on the opposite side of the street the circuit is placed underground in an iron pipe, a single conductor being used for one lead and the pipe itself for the other lead. In this way the extra cost of a double conductor is saved and the small transformers—for all the lamps receive energy from an overhead or underground sixteen volt, forty watt transformer connected to the constant current arc lighting circuits—are effectually grounded.

The small transformers are in most cases set in the manholes adjacent to the fire alarm posts. The invention is the outcome of an incident that occurred some time ago, when a fire made considerable progress because a citizen could not find a box at night.

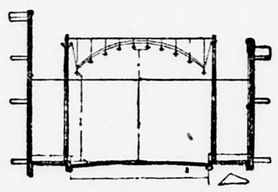

ARCHED STRINGS OF LAMPS FOR PRINCIPAL STREETS.

System of Illumination Considered More Effective Than Present Method.

After considering a number of new plans of standard construction of a permanent form of illumination there has been prepared and tried satisfactorily by several places a plan of installation of arched strings of lamps on the principal streets. The sketch shows the plan well.

The object sought is to increase efficiency of the lighting, preserve the harmonious effect, the gala appearance and reduce the lamp maintenance cost; also the consumption of current. An important item of the old scheme of lighting, even if it be necessary to continue it for years, is that it consumes an extraordinary amount of current for the effect it gives.

One of the troubles of the present system is that the swaying and whipping of the loosely swung festoon strings cause a large expense for lamp renewals. Investigation discloses that a curb light post will cost about $80 or $90 per post to install and light up. The largest item in the cost of installing a curb post is due to chiseling through concrete curbs and concrete street paving to lay conduits for underground wires. Curb post lights would be interfered with to a certain extent by rows of telegraph poles.

Each one of the arches is equipped with ten thirty-two candle power series tungsten incandescent lamps, giving a total of 320 candle power per arch as against 200 candle power in one of the present streamers. Each one of these lamps will be equipped with a special ornamental reflector to give even illumination over a large area and reflect all of the light which otherwise would be lost.

These reflectors are especially designed to redirect the rays of light at the most desirable angle for street illumination and increase the efficiency of the lamp nearly 50 per cent. This means that each arch will give a street illumination of approximately double that of the present festoon of lights.

A Village Night.

The city of Newton, Mass., which is made up of one large village and six or eight smaller ones, has inaugurated the pleasant custom of having an annual "village night," at which time all residents interested in the welfare of the city gather in some public hall and review the past and lay plans for the future.

Charging exorbitant prices makes patrons for the catalogue houses. Every merchant is entitled to fair profit, but when he marks up goods so as to make from 1 to 300 per cent profit he need not be surprised to note many in his neighborhood sending to some out of town establishment for what he wants so much profit on.

WATER FINANCES

from $2,000 to $25,000, while the cost of water to the city will not be reduced perceptibly.

Here are a few figures of the Water department of the city for the year 1910.

RECEIPTS.

From water rates,	$115,766.57

PAYMENTS.

Metropolitan assessment,	50,950.00
Maturing water debt,	43,500.00
Interest on debt,	26,347.50
Maintenance,	11,070.71
	$131,868.21

DEFICIT.

Payments less receipts,	$16,101.64

The amount actually raised by taxation was $19,148.45 in 1910, and $22,785.58 in 1909. Less than $10,000.00 of the Metropolitan assessment of $50,950.00 is for maintenance and operation of the Metropolitan system that is the consumption, the balance going to sinking fund and interest which is a fixed charge.

THE SUPPLY.

The amount of water charged up against Quincy in 1910 by the Metropolitan Water Board was 141,116,845 cubic feet.

At 23 cents per 100 cubic feet (the meter rate charged for residences) the income would have been $324,568.74. Evidently this rate is too high.

A division of $115,766.57 by 141,116,845 shows that the city actually received less than nine (9) cents per 100 cubic feet.

It is not a fact that the city uses $100,000.00 worth of water for city purposes, but it is undoubtedly a fact that a large percentage leaks from the mains, possibly 20 or 25 per cent. Probably there are many leaks similar to that last week at Houghs Neck which have not yet come to the surface.

In order to supply Fort Adams at Peddock Island with 100 cubic feet of water, it is probably necessary for the city to buy 120 cubic feet, so that Quincy may lose by that contract.

Deducting 20 per cent from the supply for leakage from mains leaves 112,893,516. Allowing the city about ten per cent of this for all public purposes—fires, street sprinkling, fountains, schools, sewer department, etc. leaves about 100,000,000 cubic feet to sell.

So that the actual cost to the city for water is $115,766.57 divided by 100,000,000, or 11 to 12 cents per 100 cubic feet. Any water sold below this rate would be sold below cost. If all was sold at the rate of 23 cents per 100 cubic feet, as is charged to residences, the income would be $230,000. Had all been sold for 12 cents per 100 cubic feet it should net $120,000.00, which is larger than ever received in one year. Why is it when householders are paying 23 cents per hundred the total receipts are but $115,766.57 annually. Those who pay $16 for a fully plumbed house pay even more than those who have meters.

Although the city has expended thousands of dollars during the last few years, and has reduced materially the consumption of water, the Metropolitan assessments have been largely in excess of 1906 when the city used 54,910,163 more gallons of water.

Here is a summary showing the number of gallons supplied the city, number of meters, and Metropolitan assessments for five years:

	No Meters	Gallons Supplied	Amount Assessment
1910,	2634	1,058,376,937	$50,950.00
1909,	2032	1,065,435,000	51,230.04
1908,	1982	1,096,314,000	49,285.01
1907,	1505	984,368,000	50,027.14
1906,	847	1,113,286,500	35,832.50

The shipyard is not the only water taker of Quincy to obtain water below cost, and this is why the Water department is not self supporting. If an industrial rate is demanded it should not be below cost, but fully 12 cents per 100 cubic feet, or 15 cents per 1000 gallons.

It is reported that under the existing contract with the city, the Fore River Shipbuilding Company is paying eight cents per thousand gallons. The price per thousand gallons, and per hundred cubic feet should not be confused. There are seven and one half gallons to a cubic foot, so that eight cents per thousand gallons is equivalent to six cents per hundred cubic feet. As noted above the water costs the city nearly 12 cents per hundred cubic feet, and the meter rate for house is 23 cents per hundred cubic feet. This charge of 23 cents is equivalent to 30 2-3 cents per 1000 gallons.

When the shipyard obtains the bountiful reservoir supply it will not need so much water from the Metropolitan supply, it might cut down the latter $2000, so that Quincy's revenue would really be reduced. Should the shipyard take from the city other large customers the city revenue would be further reduced. The city and the taxpayers certainly will not benefit financially from the proposed contract. If it is the desire of the city to make the shipyard a present each year of $25,000 that is another question to be discussed in another way.

NEWARK PUTS BAN ON POPLARS FOR STREETS.

Roots of These Trees Obstruct City's Sewers.

At a recent meeting of the board of street and water commissioners of the city of Newark, N. J., a motion was passed requesting the shade tree commission to discontinue their own planting of poplar trees on the city streets and to prohibit the planting of them by private individuals.

STOPPAGE BY POPLAR ROOTS.

This action was taken on account of the large and increasing number of obstructions to the city sewers and particularly to the house connections by the roots of these trees penetrating the joints of the pipes.

Out of fifty-six obstructions of all kinds in house connections reported in 1909 fifteen were caused by poplar roots. Up to the 1st of December, 1910, twenty-three out of a total of sixty-four obstructions since Jan. 1 had been from the same cause, and in November, 1910, the roots were responsible for five out of twelve obstructions.

The illustration shows two lengths of a six inch house connection split lengthwise to show complete stoppage by popular roots.

NEARLY every grocer now-a-days has a telephone. It's worth a great deal to him as well as to his customers. The value is mutual.

With a telephone he protects his trade and satisfies his customers. If he is out of what you order he calls up the wholesaler instantly and the goods are soon delivered. Ordering by mail in such a case would be too slow a process.

BRIEFS

No City Council tonight.

City Square was alive with sleigh parties on Saturday evening, either going or returning or from other towns.

Those who are to take part in the annual minstrel show of the Iroquois club held a dress rehearsal Sunday.

Flags were displayed on many private and public buildings, Sunday, in honor of Lincoln's birthday.

The joint committee on Finance and Public Buildings meet Thursday evening; also the Committee on Licenses.

It looked for a time Sunday morning as if another good snow storm was coming, for it snowed quite hard. Then the sun came out and the day was an ideal one.

The young men at the Quincy telephone exchange who call themselves the Rosedale club are looking forward to their second annual dancing party tonight.

Rev. E. N. Hardy, Ph.D. has preached for two Sundays in prominent churches at Chicago, and today for the second time addressed the students of the Chicago University.

Friends of William A. Field of Wollaston Park were pleased to greet him in town on Sunday and today. He is the eastern Pennsylvania representative of the Atlas Portland Cement Co., with headquarters at Philadelphia and is away six weeks at a time.

Among the weddings in Boston last week of interest to Quincy people was that of Miss Katherine Baxter and Mr. Maurice O. Whipple who were married on Wednesday. The bride made her home with her aunt Mrs. Edward T. Russell of Marlborough street and East Gloucester and was very popular socially.

Ten tables were in play at the whist party at Grand Army hall Friday evening given by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Spanish War Veterans. Prizes were awarded to Miss Harriet Spooner, John Lapham, Bartlett Spooner, W. F. Carman, Mrs. M. McQuarrie, T. T. Davidson and Mrs. B. Porterfield. The consolation prize went to Mrs. Lillian Nott.

THE ORIENT IN LONDON.

From June 4 to July 11 in the year 1908 there was held in London a great Missionary Exhibition. The eastern part of the world in miniature was brought into view in the large Royal Agricultural hall. Here were represented almost every district of the sunrise land from China on the north to the most southern islands of the Indian ocean. Here in a short time the visitor saw what it would take him months or even years to observe as a traveller. All this was found in the main hall.

Besides this there were smaller hall used as follows: hall of religions, tableaux hall, cinematograph hall, rest room, art gallery, children's hall, and study circle room. Around the large central scene under the galleries were arranged scenes in India, New Guinea, China, Madagascar, South Seas and Africa.

Their time table showed a continued performance from 12 o'clock noon until 10 o'clock at night. There were personally conducted tours in various districts with important demonstrations of missionary work, native methods of treating disease, an opium den, and the presentation of tableaux "Perils by Boxers in China" and a "Chinese Wedding." One of the most interesting things on their program was the "Pageant of Light and Darkness" which occupied two hours for its representation. This was given twice a day.

To people of Boston and vicinity this is particularly interesting for the "Orient in London" is to be reproduced as "The World in Boston." This will be America's first great missionary exposition. It will be held in the Mechanics building of Boston from April 24 to May 20 of this year. Every bit of space in this capacious hall from top to basement will be used to present scenes and curios of missionary interest from all parts of the world.

It is planned to make this exposition equal to if not better and larger then that London one of three years ago. It is interesting to know that it is in charge of Rev. A. M. Gardner, who so successfully managed the English movement. He is ably assisted by an efficient corps of workers to which will be added some 10,000 stewards, a number of whom come from the churches of our immediate vicinity. They will guard the exhibits and give necessary information.

It is a well known fact that missions have probably done more to civilize the world and to make commerce to all parts of the earth possible than any other agency. This will be an exposition on the mammoth scale of the mechanics fair or the food fair and will be entirely devoted to missions. In fact it will be larger and more varied than either of these. Something is planned for every nook and corner of the huge building.

Such an oportunity has never before come to the people of Greater Boston. It will be a chance of a life time. It will be interesting to watch developments from now on until the great exposition opens in April.

WOMAN KILLS SELF AND SON

Carries Out Promise to Husband on His Death Bed

TRAGEDY IN A MAINE HOME

Quickly Follows Death of Farmer Who Was Beset by Troubles Which He Thought Wife and Child Would Be Unable to Bear—Bodies Will Be Buried In One Casket, In Accordance With Request

Oxford, Me., Feb. 13.—In fulfillment of a compact made during her husband's illness, which was found yesterday signed by both, Mrs. Lynnwood S. Keene, wife of a formerly prosperous farmer here, shot her 14-year-old son Gerald as he lay in his bed Sunday morning, and then went to her own room, which she locked, and ended her own life.

It had been agreed between Mr. and Mrs. Keene, according to the compact found in her room, that in the event of Keene's expected death his wife was to "do away" with herself and their child. Keene did Saturday. Mrs. Keene fulfilled her part of the grim contract Sunday.

The boy, Gerald, was still living when persons in the house, mourning over the body of the dead father, went to his room. He had been shot through the temple, the revolver having been held so close to the head of the child—whether while asleep or waking after some farewell word from his mother is unknown—that the hair was singed. The child was unconscious when found, and lived but half an hour after, Dr. H. R. Farris, who had responded to the hurry call, being unable to maintain life. Gerald never regained consciousness.

After finding the lad wounded and dying friends of the family who made the discovery durried to the room of his mother in the other side of their home. Knocks failed of an answer. Then the door was broken in, and the room within revealed the body of Mrs. Keene stretched in the bed, with a bullet hole through her head. She had placed the revolver to the roof of her mouth and fired. As with the son, there was only one wound. The weapon used, a revolver, was found on the bed by her side, where it had been released by her lifeless fingers.

The death compact was dated about a month ago and the document recited briefly the family's troubles, the result of Keene's illness. In it, his death was predicted, and it was agreed that when this blow came the little family should all go, it being stated that Mr. and Mrs. Keene thought it would be wrong to have their son remain in the world to suffer the troubles they had. So Mrs. Keene bound herself, in the agreement with her dying husband, to "do away" with herself and their son Gerald, as soon as possible after the husband's and father's death.

Then came directions to relatives and friends. Husband and wife wished to be buried in a double casket, and that their son's coffin should be placed in the same box for final interment. So it has been arranged, and the triple burial will take place here next Wednesday, marking the end of a tried family which could not survive misfortune.

When the folk in the village and the nearby countryside learned of the tragedy it was told how happy was the couple, with their strong, likable child, up to a year ago. Then came an illness upon the husband and father which forced him to forsake his work on his farm, which he had purchased only a few months before. Unable to leave his bed, he was unable to add to the family resources.

Soon the end of their money was reached, and Mr. and Mrs. Keene accepted help from relatives, in an effort to keep their home. But when they saw this was futile, funds were raised on the house. This was a great factor in their despair, say friends. Several months ago Keene said he was certain the end was near, and, in fact, he has been expected to die daily for weeks.

TWINS DIE OF EXPOSURE

Three Other Children Have Frostbitten Hands Amputated

Houlton, Me., Feb. 13.—As a result of a fire which destroyed the dwelling of Alfred Lyons at East Littleton two of Lyons' children died as a result of exposure. His three other children all are in a serious condition, it having found necessary to amputate their frostbitten hands.

The house caught fire while Lyons was at work in the woods and Mrs. Lyons had gone to a neighbor's house for some supplies. When neighbors arrived, after considerable delay, they found the younger twins, who died Saturday afternoon, lying in the snow near the burning dwelling, terribly frozen.

WOULDN'T STOP TALKING

Judge Resorts to Plugging Prisoner's Mouth With a Towel

Kansas City, Feb. 11.—Joseph Murphy refused to refrain from talking in Municipal Judge Thompson's court in Kansas City, Kan., so the court had Murphy gagged with a towel.

Mrs. Olive Boyd caused Murphy's arrest on a charge of attacking her. She was testifying when the prisoner said:

"She isn't telling the truth, judge."

"Silence," ordered the court.

But Murphy would not keep quiet. Finally the judge had a towel wrapped around Murphy's head and across his mouth. When the case was dismissed the towel was removed.

"I told you—" started Murphy.

"Good night," said the judge, "court's adjourned."

FLYNN KEEPS SECRET HIS ASSIGNMENTS

Clash Between Gotham Detective and Police Commissioner

New York, Feb. 13.—There's a tempest in the police department, all because of a clash between Police Commissioner Cropsey and Deputy Commissioner Flynn, head of the detective bueau.

Chief Flynn left the federal secret service to head the local detective bureau and has been active in breaking up Black Hand gangs.

The trouble started when Flynn refused point blank to give Cropsey a list of the men he had on secret assignments and the nature of their work. Flynn told Cropsey that this would result in nothing short of bodily harm to some of his men, not to mention the possible frustration of his plans to corral the blackmailers, kidnappers and other criminals.

Cropsey maintained that as head of the department he was entitled to the information. His deputy replied that his appointment to the head of the detective bureau was a personal matter with Mayor Gaynor and that he accepted the appointment with the understanding that he was to have carte blanche and was not to be interfered with in his detective work.

REFUSED HOPE DIAMOND

Miss Gould Was Offered Ill Fated Gem as a Wedding Present

New York, Feb. 13.—Miss Helen Vivian Gould, now Lady Decies, spurned the ill fated blue gem known as the Hope diamond, when it was suggested by her father as his wedding present to her, nearly two months ago, according to friends of the family.

The stone appeared in New York Dec. 12 at a Fifth avenue jeweler's. It had been brought into the country without the slightest announcement, and, it is hinted, with the intention of effecting a sale to Mr. Gould, who had been heard talking of it as a wedding present for his daughter.

But the suggestions of misery, disaster and blood that follows the diamond proved too much for the prospective bride, and she refused to wear the jewel.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1,59, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

For several years Valentine works excellently and rises to be assistant cashier. He and Rose love each other, but Valentine knows Doyle is on his track and dares not tell her of his affection for her. A mysterious Mr. Cronin turns out to be old Bill Avery, now reformed and a man of business.

Valentine receives a telegram from Doyle. He tells Red how he has planned to outwit the detective by means of a cleverly concocted alibi.

Valentine and Avery laughed in their superior knowledge.

"No, no," protested Valentine, "this photograph proves I was at a banquet in St. Paul. I'll beat Doyle and I'll make him like it."

"You can't," was Avery's pessimistic comment.

"You said we couldn't go square, any of us, and we all have," was Valentine's rejoinder. "And if we can beat the thing inside of us that calls we can beat one man that hunts."

A clerk knocked at the door and entered to ascertain if he should now bring in a trayful of cash which Valentine was to count. He was ordered to do so at once, and Avery's face became a study as the young man soon re-entered with a tray on which new banknotes of large denominations were piled among glistening rows of gold coin.

"Great snakes, what a chance!" exclaimed the one time thief, looking from Valentine to the watchman. "This is no place for me. Oh, just for one grab and the quick getaway!" He mopped his wrinkled brow. "I'm sweating like a polar bear on the Fourth of July."

"Haven't got it out of your blood yet, eh?" asked Valentine.

"Not the craving for real money. I learned to let the wheat in the grain elevator alone after a month or two, but coarse money like that—wow!" The old man stared fascinatedly at the enticing tray.

"Well, we watched each other for awhile," commented Red, pointing to his chief.

"And ain't neither of you ever snatched even one bundle?" asked Avery incredulously.

"No."

"Well, you better get me out of here. I'm going to have lockjaw in both hands in a minute." He reached for his hat and stick.

"No, you're not," put in Valentine. "Come on, Red," he said, walking to the vault room door. "I'm going to prove to Bill that he's honest. He's going to watch that money till we come back."

Avery cried out in protest, but Red followed his superior, and the time worn thief, who had confessed to his friends the weakness that he well knew yet lurked within him, was left alone in the banking office before a tray containing $63,000 in cash. Within reach was the door leading into the open hallway through which it was but a few seconds' dash to the busy street, where a man would immediately be lost to view in the passing throng.

"It's a dirty trick," muttered the old man, starting after the others. A shaft of yellow light reflected from one of the golden coins caught his eye, drove into his very brain, into the thin red blood that coursed through his hardening veins. He stopped. He turned full around and slowly, with hands eagerly outstretched, tiptoed back to the table bearing the precious burden. His brows narrowed down over his pale gray eyes, his fingers, long talons in their curved fixedness, began to nervously twitch. Then Avery jerked himself away of a sudden. He straightened himself up and started toward the vault room door to summon Valentine. But even as he did so his glance roved back to the alluring tray. He was drawn to it as the nerveless rabbit that succumbs to the insidious charm of the oscillating head of the hungry python.

He stepped to the tray. He seized two packages of hundred dollar bills, thrust them into his pockets, then clutched two more. The fever had him. His eyes shone with the fire of gone days and gone nights. His poisoned blood sang through his veins. Then he stopped once more. He raised his head.

"And have the coppers after me again," he murmured thoughtfully. He laid down a package. "And 'double cross' a pal that put me straight. Not me, not me!" He replaced the remainder of the money. "And coin that comes crooked never was any good."

Avery stood before the tray of money. Now he looked at the tempting fortune with the sure knowledge that he had conquered—that he had faced his greatest test and had not been found wanting.

The thought of how narrowly he had escaped committing the meanest crime of his career came over him, and he realized that he had been on the verge of plunging himself into the death dealing life from which Valentine had rescued him. Ungovernable rage possessed him at his insane lapse into the self that he had cast from him. He swung his fist at the neatly stacked piles of gold pieces.

"Curse you, curse you!" he cried in frenzy. The tray and its contents crashed to the floor and the money scattered in all directions.

Valentine and Red, hearing the noise, came rushing in from the vault room. They saw the floor littered with banknotes and coins. And crouching forlornly in a chair was the figure of old Bill Avery. His hands were pressed over his eyes, and he sobbed in the agony that gripped the soul which had been restored to him.

CHAPTER XIII.

"I TOOK—some of—that money." Avery finally managed to say as he saw his two friends before him.

"And you put it back," smiled Valentine. "The minute you touched it you found you couldn't"—

"That's it," put in Avery eagerly as he arose and proceeded to aid Red in restoring the scattered money to its place. "I couldn't take it then. Now I can go out of here and know that I'll never steal again."

"You mustn't go until Doyle comes in, for he might see you on the street," warned Valentine. "When he comes you can go out through the vault room and make your getaway while I stall him here."

In talking with Avery, Jimmy Valentine unconsciously fell into the use of the vernacular of his early vocation.

With a parting handshake Avery went out into the vault room, where Red was to exhibit to him the big new safe. The assistant cashier, now that the tray of money had been replaced on the table, picked up the photograph, hung it in the place of another affixed to the wall at the right of his desk and inspected it with pronounced satisfaction.

The hall door opened, and Rose Lane came into the office. The girl was in a peculiar mood that day—there was no denying it. Valentine had always found his benefactor, young though she was, particularly difficult to fathom, and today she was more baffling than ever. She talked at length regarding her plans for the children's Christmas celebration, and, standing before his desk, while he stood behind it, she said, "And I want to know what you want for Christmas."

"Is there anything I could want?" he answered in low tones. "Think of what you and two short years have done for me."

"And there's never anything more you want? Don't you ever dream—dreams of, say, two years more?" She turned her eyes to the floor.

"Oh, yes, to go on as I've been going these last two, since your father gave me a position of trust, and make everything good and pile up the money for you."

She drew away from him.

"Haven't you ever thought there might be something I want more than money?"

Valentine hesitated. His voice became intensely serious.

"I don't let myself think of you only as your employee," he finally answered.

Rose turned sideways to him, so that he could not see her face as she delivered her next question, although she would have given much to have been able to watch the expression of the assistant cashier—her assistant cashier—as she asked it.

"But," she ventured, "you must have thought that I would marry some day."

Silence, with Valentine fumbling in embarrassment a pencil which lay upon his desk.

"Yes—I"— he began, but Rose continued his sentence for him.

"And it hurts you to think of it, doesn't it? Say it."

"Y-e-s."

"Go on."

He could endure the situation no longer. The girl had penetrated his very soul with her questions, had uncovered in Jimmy Valentine the secrets of his new life—the secrets which he had resolved to keep buried forever. But now he must speak. He must tell her the truth about his situation as regarded her—part of the truth, at least.

"And the thought of you brings darkness, desolation," he said, keeping a firm grip on the emotions that threatened to unnerve him. "What is the use? You're all there is to live for—to just see you now and then. You're all there is to life. Men have loved and slaves have loved and animals that have been saved have loved, but never were the three loves fused in one. And you're good, and your life is clean, while mine—but you know all that." He inclined his face from her.

"I have forgotten," she said simply.

"You cannot. And any day the shadow of other days may fall. But I want you to know this and believe it as your God—my love for you is a holy thing, sacred and deathless." Valentine was looking earnestly into her eyes now. His hand was resting on the desk. She seized it in hers and drew him toward her.

"Take me in your arms, Lee," she cried fervently. "I love you. I'll love you till"— Her face was upraised to his as she clung to him. He held her in his arms and kissed her again and again. "How I have longed for you—years—years"— Her words were smothered in his kisses.

"There is no end to the happiness you bring," murmured Valentine at the first moment he thought he could spare his lips for conversational purposes.

"Oh," exclaimed Rose, drawing away at arm's length temporarily, "I want to tell you something, Lee, something I've known for years and years—we are going to marry."

He caught her into his arms once more.

"I love you. It will never end," he whispered fondly.

The telephone bell rang at his desk. As he released her and placed the receiver at his ear she encircled his neck in her arms and kissed him. "Hello!" he called. As the response came she felt a tremor run through him. Haggardness came into his eyes. He seemed almost to forget her presence.

"Yes, yes," he answered; "I'll see the gentleman in a few minutes."

He hung up the receiver. "God," he groaned. "Doyle!"

A PLUCKY OLD MAN

Not Afraid to Begin Life Anew at the Age of 107

Kansas City, Feb. 11.—With his fortune gone, but with his health and his courage undaunted, Foster J. Foster, 107 years old, will begin life anew. Foster, the grandson of Red Jacket, chief of the Seneca Indians in New York revolutionary period, is here to take steps to make his last fight for a mining claim out of which he says he was swindled. If he does not recover the claim, located in Montana, he asserts he will go into business and start all over again.

Foster says he was born in 1804 on what is now Seneca street, in Buffalo, which at the time was an Indian village. For years Foster was a government scout and secret service agent.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

PRAYERS FOR HIRE TO CURE

Declared by New York Magistrate to Be Illegal

CHRISTIAN SCIENTIST IS HELD

Member of Publication Committee Says That Case Will Be Fought to the End—How the Court Views Question of Religious Liberty and Its Relation to Public Health and Treatment of Disease

New York, Feb. 13.—William V. Cole, a Christian Science healer, who was arrested on the complaint that he practiced medicine without a license, was held for trial in special sessions by Magistrate Freschi. Cole was arrested after he had treated a woman. Upon payment of a sum of money it is alleged, Cole prayed over her and told her she would soon get well. Magistrate Breschi, in holding Cole, said:

"I am of the opinion that the treatment of disease by inaudible prayer is a violation of the laws of this state. The Christian Scientist has the right to believe that he can heal by prayer, but I am of the opinion that if he carries and puts that belief into practice for hire then he exceeds his rights as an individual under the law and comes directly within the prohibition contained in the constitution of the state of New York."

Eugene R. Cox of the Christian Science publications committee, speaking for Christian Science practitioners in the city, said that in view of the constitutional guarantee of religious liberty, Christian Scientists were not perturbed over the developments in the Cole case. He added that Christian Scientists would fight the matter to the highest courts and were confident of winning.

Part of the magistrate's decision touches directly on the question of religious liberty as emphasized by Cox. "It is of course true," says the magistrate, "that the state constitution grants to every person freedom of conscience in matters of religion; but, on the other hand, it specifically provides that 'the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of this state.'

"The public health and treatment of disease are matters of great public concern to all states and the subject of proper regulations in the exercise of the police powers."

FAMILY OF SEVEN DEAD

Escaping Gas Carries Off Man, Wife and Five Children

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—Seven members of one family, the father, mother and five children, were killed by illuminating gas in their home in the Ghetto district of this city. The dead are: Hyman Berkowitz, Rose, his wife, and Minnie, Michael, Israel, Rebecca and Pauline, whose ages ranged from 5 to 18 years.

When their bodies were discovered in the gas-filled room by neighbors the father lay fully dressed on one bed with the two small boys, while the mother and the three girls were in another bed in the same room on the third floor. The gas was escaping from a tube which connected a gas stove on the first floor, where the kitchen and living room were located. The eldest girl, Minnie, was to have been married in a few days.

QUEUE ISSUE IN CHINA

Newspapers Compare Wearers With Dogs and Other Animals

Pekin, Feb. 13.—A curious agitation significant of the times is going on throughout China with regard to the queue. The pigtail is being ridiculed by all progressives as an emblem indicative of backwardness, distinguishing the Chinese from all other civilized peoples.

Cartoons appear regularly in the newspapers showing the advantage of the queue to the assistant of the headsman in the act of decapitating a criminal or depicting the various other animals that wear the tail, the dog and the pig being in the foreground. Editorials denounce the custom and new groups of men and associations are daily falling into the line of reform.

Senatorial Deadlock Unbroken

Albany, Feb. 13.—The fourth week of the legislative deadlock over the election of a United States senator to succeed Chauncey M. Depew ended with the twenty-second joint ballot showing practically no change in the voting list.

Postoffice Is Looted

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 13.—Stamps to the value of between $100 and $200 and a small amount of money were stolen by burglars from the Reed Ferry postoffice in the town of Merrimack, adjoining this city.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Cracker Pudding. Roll with rolling pin, soda or common crackers, pour one pint boiling milk over them, cover close; when they have soaked one hour, beat them with a spoon; beat two eggs to a foam; stir them in, add one-quarter of a pound of suet, chopped fine; add one-half pound seeded raisins, and a little salt. Steam for two and one-half hours and serve with sauce.—Mrs. John Y. Gillespie.

Lemon Sauce for Pudding. One large cup sugar, one-half cup butter, one egg, one large lemon all of the juice and half of the grated peel, three tablespoons of boiling water. Cream the butter and sugar, beat in the egg, whipped light; add lemon, beat hard 10 minutes; add a spoonful at a time of the boiling water when ready for the pudding.

Peanut Cookies. Shell and rub off the inner skin of sufficient roasted peanuts to measure one pint when chopped fine. Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter and one cupful of sugar; add three eggs, two tablespoonfuls of milk, one quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, the chopped nuts and sufficient flour to make a soft dough. Roll out, cut in circles and bake in a moderate oven.

Orange and Date Salad. One pound dates, four good sized oranges, French dressing, one head lettuce. Separate the dates, cover with boiling water and cook for two or three minutes. Drain and dry in the oven. Cool, stone and cut in pieces lengthwise. Peel the oranges and cut out the sections of pulp, leaving the membrane. Wash and crisp the lettuce, arrange on a platter, pile the oranges in the centre and surround with the dates. Add the French dressing and serve.

Grandmother's Baked Beans. One quart of dry beans, two tablespoons New Orleans molasses, one pound of bacon, one teaspoon of soda, salt and pepper. Wash the beans in hot water, drain, put in a kettle with the bacon and cover with boiling water; boil half an hour, add the soda, stir well, cook five minutes, and skim into a bean pot. Season with salt and pepper, add the molasses, score the rind of the bacon, cover it with the beans, add boiling water till it stands on the top, and place in a moderate oven. Bake steadily six hours, adding hot water as they dry; after that time, the cover may be left off and the beans baked as dry as liked. The secret of success lies in using hot water throughout; cold water hardens and toughens beans. The bacon is much nicer than pork, giving a delicate smoky flavor. This recipe will make three quarts when done.

HATRED AND INSULTS

Being Won by Us In Central America, According to Judge Collins

Chicago, Feb. 13.—Judge Lorin C. Collins, for more than five years an associate justice of the Canal Zone supreme court, criticized the state department of the United States, saying it was pursuing a policy in Central American republics which was winning for itself the hatred of all Spanish-speaking nations, was being made the victim of a malign influence, and was gaining the reputation of a country which "raises its arm to strike, but hasn't the courage to give the blow."

Judge Collins, after relating a series of incidents within his own observation which, he said, were specific instances that this government's representatives were being insulted and affronted in the tropics, without apology or reparation, said the American hopes of increased trade from that territory would not materialize.

HOLDS POLICE AT BAY

Negro Refuses to Surender Until Ammunition Is Exhausted

Philadelphia, Feb. 13.—Barricaded behind a pile of cotton bales on a pier at the foot of Chestnut street, an alleged highwayman held a squad of policemen at bay here until his ammunition was exhausted. The beseiged man, a powerfully built negro, was charged with attacking Robert Warren, a watchman, and beating him severely.

Police who came to his rescue were fired upon by the watchman's assailant. Finally, by raising their helmets on sticks, they drew the man's fire and caused him to waste his ammunition. The police then rushed the improvised fort and took the man into custody. He gave his name as Robert Johnson. He was held without bail to answer a charge of highway robbery.

Pantchenko's counsel asked the judge to order a physical and mental examination of his client. His honor replied that the alleged poisoner might be examined as to his physical condition, but that his mental state would not be made the subject of an official inquiry.

Nickerson will represent the Quincy Yacht club Tuesday evening at the meeting of the Inter Bay Cat Boat association which will be held at Young's hotel, Boston. It is to arrange for these races that the meeting is to be held. The Association will also consider the offer of the Boston Yacht club for a series of six races for cat boats to be sailed this summer, as well as the offer made by Commodore Barnard of the Hingham club of a Chelsea clock to be raced for by cat boats under the auspices of the Hingham Yacht club.

Y. M. C. A. WINS CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeat the Makaria Team for Second Time

The second round of games in the city basketball championship series was played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday evening before the largest crowd of the year. As was the case in the first games a few weeks ago, both the first and second team contests were hard fought and exciting, but the results were a little different. The first team of the Y. M. C. A. won by a larger margin than before, 34 to 17, and the Makaria, 2nd, turned the tables on their opponents and won, 22 to 15.

The first half of the big game ended in a tie, 9 to 9. The playing was close and the blocking so good that very few shots were made. Glover showed up the best for Makaria, and on the Y. M. C. A. team all had a share in the scoring.

The second half proved the Y. M. C. A. the harder of the two teams, for the scoring was frequent and not very difficult. Jenkins and Trask each secured four baskets, and Dackers two. Morris was proficient in shooting fouls, securing 5 out of 6 tries.

According to the agreement the team winning two out of three games in the series should be declared champions of the city against all comers. The Y. M. C. A. first team thus holds the title.

The summary:

Y. M. C. A.	MAKARIA
Morris, lf	rb Marden
	rb Harmon
Trask rf	lb Mundie
Jenkins c	c Tupper

Dackers, lb	rf, McKenzie

SECOND TEAMS.

The game between the second teams was possibly more interesting than the big game. Manning, who was in at forward for the victors, gave still greater life and zest to the contest. The Makaria led at the end of the first half 14 to 7. Findley, playing at right forward, was the star of the half and of the game, securing 5 baskets. Manning and Holmes had it out in dead earnest, but "Bill" slipped two baskets on "Chic" before the game was finished. Tirrell and Miller gave a lively exhibition also and swapped even each securing two baskets.

If the second team championship is to be decided, another game will have to be played, since each team has taken one contest..

The summary:

WOLLASTON BAPTIST.

E. W. Hearne, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for Massachusetts and Rhode Island, spoke at the Sunday morning service and gave an excellent address on the work of the institution which he represents.

At the evening service Prof. Percy G. Stiles of Simmons college gave an address on "Abraham Lincoln." In introducing the subject, Prof. Stiles said that in these days of hero-worship we oftentimes find ourselves sadly disappointed when we know the real nature of the man through his biographies, but in the case of President Lincoln the more we know the greater he looms in our horizon. Owing to the immensity of the task set before him, he could not take up the whole life of President Lincoln but dealt altogether with the relationships in the latter part of his life. The relationship with the cabinet, his generals, the press and last and greatest of all his relationship with the people were explained in a very able manner.

Prof. Stiles is not a great orator, but he loves the character of the man of whom he was speaking and he knew a great deal about him through study and research that very few people in the audience knew little or nothing of. He spoke of the wonderful letter the President wrote to Mrs. Bixby whose five sons were slain during the war, and recited the contents of the letter. President Lincoln is spoken of as the martyred president, and he was a martyr. It was not the painless death after a great triumph that caused his martyrdom however, but the agony of the four years of civil strife. In closing he spoke of the tributes paid him by such men as James Russell Lowell, Walt Whitman and Stedman. All these men were inspired by Lincoln in writing their best poems and Lowell's greatest prose work was also inspired by the great President.

Prof. Stiles mentioned the great number of times in which President Lincoln is referred to as good and great; good in his greatness, and great in his goodness. One of the finest tributes paid to him was an apology which appeared in the London Punch shortly after the news of Lincoln's death reached England. The man who had been cartooning him and exercising his powers of sarcasm upon him through the through the pages of Punch, paid him a wonderful tribute in this apology, for all the haste with which it was written. Prof. Stiles recited the apology in closing his address.

UNIVERSALIST CHURCH.

Rev. Mrs. Elizabeth Goldwaith of Wareham preached an interesting sermon on Lincoln at the Universalist church Sunday morning. Mrs. Goldwaith also gave a talk on Lincoln to the Sunday school.

ATLANTIC MEMORIAL.

W. C. Smith, educational director of the Y. M. C. A. for Massachusetts gave an address at the Sunday morning service upon the work of the association. The vested choir sang two selections.

The pastor spoke at the evening service with special reference to the great national hero whose birthday was celebrated on the Sabbath day.

ATLANTIC METHODIST.

Rev. John Bowler of Springfield, a conference evangelist, gave a stirring sermon at the Sunday morning service using as his theme: "Building a house."

At noon a Lincoln Legion service was held.

Rev. J. A. Bowler spoke again at the evening service taking for his subject "A noble choice." All the meetings were largely attended.

WOLLASTON CONGREGATIONAL.

H. W. Gibson, boys secretary of the Y. M. C. A. for Massachusetts and Rhode Island, spoke to the men at the parsonage during the noon hour. His subject was "The big brother idea."

The Y. P. S. C. E. met at 6.15 under the leadership of Horace Bates. The meeting was a good one but a scarcity of time was felt. The meeting next Sunday evening will begin at 6 o'clock.

A gospel service was held at 7 o'clock. "The holy city" was sung by Miss Poore with stereopticon illustrations. The pastor preached a fine sermon on "The Invitation of Jesus." Stereopticon illustrations were used in connection with the sermon.

WOLLASTON M. E.

H. W. Gibson, the physical director of the Y. M. C. A. gave an excellent address Sunday morning at the Wollaston M. E. church. He evidently has the boys in his heart. If the homes were what they should be, there would not be the great need of the Y. M. C. A., but now it has a great mission.

"The obligations of neighboriiness" was the subject of the Epworth League meeting, with Miss Estes as leader.

HER BUSINESS IS CLEANING TOWNS

Kalamazoo Woman Is First Public Housekeeper.

ACCOMPLISHES BIG RESULTS.

The Rev. Caroline Bartlett Crane Made Kalamazoo, Mich., a Spotless Town and Started Improvements In Many Other Places on Contract.

The Rev. Caroline Bartlett Crane of Kalamazoo, Mich., has the distinction of being the first public housekeeper in the world, says Hampton's Magazine. It is her theory, put effectively into practice, that a large part of city government is merely housekeeping on a big scale, very badly done, because men do not know how to keep house.

"We have waited a long time," says Mrs. Crane, "hoping that the men would learn, but now we are tired of waiting. Women are tired of being told to open their mouths and shut their eyes and everything will be done for them. If the home is women's sphere surely the filthy streets through which they must walk in order to reach their homes are a part of that sphere also."

She told the recent conservation congress in St. Paul of the simple, plain, but time tested housekeeping methods that under her direction have been applied in a number of cities and of the excellent results which had followed. So practical were all these sanitary suggestions that immediately after her speech the state board of health of Minnesota voted an appropriation to engage five weeks of her time. The board asked her to visit the twelve largest towns of the state, view them with the eye of a housekeeper and report. Now those cities are getting the house cleaning of their lives.

Some time ago the ideal of public service grew so strong in her heart that Mrs. Crane resigned her pastorate and devoted her entire time to civic work. She organized the Women's Civic Improvement league and started out to clean up Kalamazoo, which sadly needed cleaning at that time. Mrs. Crane offered to take charge of the street cleaning department. After much persuasion the city council gave her charge of six blocks on Main street for three months. Mrs. Crane instituted the plan of "white wings" hand workers and soon had her section of the town entirely clean. Moreover, she was saving money on the job. For a certain allotted space of street Kalamazoo had been expending $8.39. Mrs. Crane cleaned the same space for $5 and handed the extra $3.39 back to the department. Before her three months had elapsed the city had adopted her plan.

This was only the beginning. Mrs. Crane and her Civic Improvement league next went after Kalamazoo's food supply. They visited the slaughter houses, the dairies, the markets, and the reports they turned in to the clubs, the churches and the newspapers were so startling that the town almost lost its appetite. The result of the league's exposures was a law providing for municipal inspection of meat, milk and all market products. All the public institutions in the vicinity of Kalamazoo were next brought under the inspection of the league. The almshouse was found to be in a shocking condition of neglect. The women cleaned it up. Other institutions were examined and found lacking. The women supplied their wants, or, rather, they made the proper authorities supply them.

Having made Kalamazoo into the "spotless town" of the northwest, Mrs. Crane continued, by means of writing and lecturing, to preach the gospel of civic cleanliness and order. Soon distant cities began to send for this public housekeeper to tell them their own shortcomings.

The most valuable part of Mrs. Crane's work is that it has proved in almost every case permanent. Her visit and inspection are followed by organization of effort to bring about the changes suggested by her. After her visit to Kentucky the legislature passed state health laws that were a generation in advance of those Mrs. Crane criticised. A few months after her inspection of Nashville they had cleaned the public market and laid new sidewalks throughout the town. Calumet, Ill., was changed in a year from a mining camp into a modern town with parks, good streets and an organized system of public relief.

Unsightly Hitching Post.

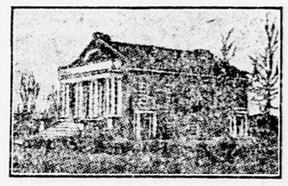

Abilene, Kan., has a mayor who is trying to do a few stunts for his city that will take it out of the rut of old fogy towns and make it a pleasant place to live in. One thing he has done is elliminating the unsightly old hitching posts from the main streets. Of course the farmers need places where horses can be tied, but these can be provided in alleyways and side streets. The old hitching post has always been a nuisance, the cause of filth and mudholes and battered pavements.

There is no question but that dealing at home makes a good town, but those who preach this the loudest are very often the persons who do not practice what they preach.

HOW GOSHEN, MASS., GOT ITS NEW TOWN HOUSE.

Interest on a Hundred Dollars Invested Many Years Ago.

There has been erected a new town house at Goshen, Mass., which cost $15,000. The idea of building it and a part of the funds for its erection came from the bequest of John James, who a great many years ago, gave $100 with the condition that it be kept on interest for 100 years and the proceeds then devoted to the needs of the town and the church. In his day the town and the church were one, but of course conditions are different now. However, the townspeople straightened this out amicably, and one of the things decided upon was that $3,000 of the fund should constitute a nucleus for building a new town house.

Through public spirited individuals the fund was advanced to $15,000, and the fine building shown here is the result. It is an excellent testimonial of the loyality of a former citizen. The ground dimensions of the building are sixty by forty feet. The first floor is given over to a large hall, with a good sized stage. The upper floor has a social room twenty-four feet. The first floor is given over to a kitchen. The building committee is composed of E. C. Packard, W. A. Smith, W. E. Benjamin, G. L. Barrus and F. C. Stone.

After all that has been said about the advantage of a retailers' house organ or catalogue it is surprising that more merchants do not adopt this method of advertising. Of the numerous retail establishments doing advertising of this kind the great majority are enthusiastic about it, many of them saying that it has been the means of doubling their business.

A Society For Tree Planting.

The organization of the American Association For the Planting and Preservation of City Trees has been announced. Its purpose is stated to be the establishment of "a movement for the planting and care of trees and shrubbery in city streets and in the yards and about the homes of the citizens by arousing locality interest and pride and inducing local action." The headquarters are in Brooklyn, and apparently the association's present operations are to be confined to Greater New York. The list of officers suggests, however, a later branching out, for the vice presidents include Professor Graves, chief forester of the United States forest service; Dr. Merrill, assistant director of the New York Botanical garden, and Miss Rogers, director of the Nature club.

Family Troubles.

Last week our baby had a spazzum,
And I've had scarlet rash,
And we've got hives, too—pa he has 'em—
And our dog's name is Dash,
And he has forty million fleas
That keep him busy scratchin'. Ma says we haven't any cash
Nor credit nor ldees,
'Cause they're things that ain't catchin'.

Oh, science still is tireless!—

He'll treat your case by wireless.

The Quincy Y. M. C. A. has no mortgage over its head and is in a better condition than ever to do its mission among young men in the city.

The three day's hustle to raise $5,000 to meet current expenses to April 1, 1911, and the balance on a mortgage note of $2,000 was successful beyond expectation, for there is a surplus of a few hundred dollars.

Many of the team workers when they assembled on Monday evening to report their third day's work, were under the impression that the campaign would have to be extended one day, but grand work had been done by the fifty to sixty men who have been interested, and the aggregate was large. The Fore River Shipbuilding Co had contributed $500, Theophilus King a larger amount, two others $200 each, and others $100. But it was the large number of smaller sums that made success possible.

After enjoying an excellent dinner of corned beef, macaroni, beets, rolls, ice cream, cake and coffee, at 6.30, reports were in order. First however the men extended a rising vote of thanks to the ladies who have arranged and served the suppers on the four nights.

There was great rivalry among the teams in reporting and considerable good natured bantering. From the first team 6 with Joseph A. Sedgwick as captain has held the lead, and kept possession of the brooms. It looked for awhile Monday night as if they might lose to Team 1 with D. King as chairman, but one of the gifts to Mr. King was conditional if needed, and it was not needed, so honors went to Mr. Sedgwick's team. Capt. Sedgwick presented the large broom to the ladies, and pulled out of his pocket a small whisk broom which he presented to D. King amid great applause.

The grand total of the pledges was $5,156.50 as per summary, which gives the work of each team each day.

At the suggestion of D. King all stood up and spelled W-O-R-K and then reversed it, K-R-O-W.

Theophilus King then spoke of the success of the campaign, where all had given freely of their time and means. Although only pledges had been received for some of the money, a friend had loaned the sum of $1,600 necessary to take up the mortgage at this time, so he proposed that the mortgage of $18,000, should be burned. It was a great thing to get out from under a mortgage.

President R. D. Chase was asked to lead in prayer, and he was followed by Mr. King in prayer. Then a match was applied to the mortgage, and while it was burning all sang "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" led by A. D. Albee.

Chairman John L. Miller then thanked all for work done and called upon the following for remarks: President R. D. Chase, Rev. R. J. Davis, J. A. Sedgwick, W. F. Cummings, George E. Thomas, N. G. Nickerson, A. D. Albee, A. N. Murray, C. W. Bailey, General Secretary Gay and others.

Votes of thanks were given to Chairman Miller and Secretary Gay, Theophilus King, and the General Secretary was instructed to send a telegram to Herbert B. Bailey, who years ago made the first contribution of $300 toward a building fund, announcing the realization of his vision.

Today the Quincy Association has a $40,000 plant free from debt. Arthur Sprague the architect and George E. Thomas the builder, were also remembered. The campaign closed with the singing of "Bless be the tie that binds."

The total number of new memberships secured was 93.

The men are not the only ones who have been doing the hustling during the campaign. On Thursday, Friday Saturday and Monday evenings, anywhere from 50 to 80 men, all of them very hungry, gathered in the association hall for a banquet. The ladies have surely maintained their reputation for finding their way to the hearts of men.

The names of those who served on Thursday evening have already been published. The ladies in charge of the banquet Friday evening were: Mrs. G. B. Bates, Mrs. William Cummings, Mrs. L. F. LaRose, Mrs. George H. Eggleton, Mrs. Ella Brooks, Mrs. Jonathan Swingle and Mrs. E. I. Beal.

On Saturday, Mrs. Eugene R. Stone, chairman, was assisted by the following ladies: Mrs. L. F. LaRose, Miss Gladys Ganzel, Miss Marion Tirrell, Miss Elizabeth Scouler, Mrs. John F. Roach, Mrs. George S. Huntington, Mrs. Robert B. Acker, Miss Avah Gilson and Mrs. W. E. Lee.

On Monday evening supper was served by the following: Mrs. Carroll Bates, chairman; Mrs. A. H. Gilson, Mrs. O. H. Goodspeed, Mrs. Edwin Smith, Miss Avah Gilson, Mrs. Horace Bates, Mrs. Albert Sayward, Miss Dorothy Sayward, Mrs. Robert B. Acker, Mrs. L. F. LaRose, Mrs. B. D. Mann, Mrs. John Hamilton, Mrs. E. H. Evertz, Mrs. E. I. Beal, Mrs. T. C. DuPlessis. The general chairman o f the supper committee for all evenings was Mrs. Gilson.

The rededication banquet of the First Presbyterian church on Water street will be held Thursday evening in the church vestry. A reception will be held from 6.30 to 7 and then the banquet will be served. The new kitchen and serving rooms will facilitate the work of feeding the 400 people who will attend the banquet.

During the evening music will be furnished by local talent. Mrs. Grant will sing solos, Misses Minnie Miller and Margaret Michael will give a duet, and a male quartet will render two or three selections.

The principal after-dinner speakers will be Dr. James Alexander, D.D., of Boston; Rev. N. J. Sproul of Newport, the former pastor of the church, Dr. James Todd D. D. of South Boston, a former pastor; and Dr. Herbert Manchester D. D. of East Boston. A number of the local pastors will be present to give the greetings of their congregations.

Lasante Bros. of the Quincy Market in the Adams building report a big mid-winter trade, probably because the people find they are what they claim to be "the originators of cutting down the cost of living." Housekeeper make a point now of watching for their ad in the Ledger to see what they offer for special Friday and Saturday inducements.

NEW LIGHT ON "MINIMUM"

Cutters Would Vary It According to Granite

The committees representing the Granite Manufacturers and Granite Cutters will hold another meeting tonight, and it is the general wish that the much discussed question as to the minimum may be settled. The time is growing short and both manufacturers and cutters are looking forward to March 1, with some doubts.

The main point now unsettled is the question of minimum wage. According to several manufacturers seen Monday there is a new phase to this question this year, that makes settlement more difficult. Up to the present time, once the minimum wage to be paid in Quincy was settled it meant the minimum wage no matter which granite the cutter worked upon. This year, however, there is an entirely new proposition. The cutters now ask that when a man is employed cutting a Westerly, Barre, or any other granite, he shall be paid the minimum wage paid in the section where the granite comes from. The minimum varies in different places, some being higher than Quincy, and some lower. With this proposition there is a proviso that in no case shall the minimum wage be less than that paid in Quincy. This the manufacturers claim, makes the wage scale very complicated. They claim if Quincy is obliged to pay a higher rate on any particular granite than paid for Quincy granite they should have the benefit when the minimum rate on any granite is less than it is in Quincy.

Another objection the manufacturers make to this proposal is the amount of bookkeeping it would require. A man might work four hours on one granite at a certain wage and then be given another granite at another wage, so that it would require an expert to keep the accounts straight, and even then it is claimed there must be constant dispute. It is this particular phase of the wage question that now seems to be the bone of contention.

LINCOLN LECTURE.

The Atlantic M.E. church was crowded to the doors Monday evening with an eager audience assembled to hear the illustrated lecture on "Abraham Lincoln" by Rev. John Bowler of Springfield. Dr. Bowler has studied into the life and character of America's greatest hero and much that was heretofore unknown to the audience about the martyred president was revealed in an exceptionally forceful manner. During much of the lecture there was not a dry eye in the house. The speaker made his hearers feel the pathos in the life of this man "whose smile was sadder than his tears" But the great victory of righteousness made Lincoln's life far from being a tragedy.

The words of the orator reinforced by illustrations gave the audience a deeper sense of reverence and admiration for this great man whose very simplicity made him what he was.. His eye was always single to the truth, his heart throbbed in sympathy with the "still sad music of humanity" and his passing into the great hereafter on Good Friday gave a fitting conclusion to the life of the greatest character in American history.

TO EXHIBIT OUR GRANITE

Manufacturers to Secure Space at Boston Exposition

A meeting of the Granite Manufacturers Association was held Monday evening. There was some discussion on the different phases of the present labor situation, and the Manufacturers' committee that is adjusting the differences with the Cutters committee made a report of what had been accomplished thus far.

The question of applying for space in the Boston Industrial exhibit to be held in Boston next October was also brought up. As this exhibit is to include all of the New England industries it seemed advisable that the Quincy granite industry should have an exhibit, and the general sentiment of the meeting was to that effect. President Murray will call a meeting of the executive committee at an early date to take steps to secure space.

LESS THAN 100 PUPILS

In Daily Attendance at New Houghs Neck School

The average daily attendance at the public schools during January was unusually small, only 4971, and the percentage was under 92. At the Wollaston and Coddington it fell below 90. The Lincoln had decidedly the best percentage of attendance. The John Hancock the fewest cases of tardiness, the Atherton Hough the smallest number of dismissals. The schools reported truants.

For the first time the Atherton Hough school appears in the summary with an enrollment of 114, but the average attendance has been less than 100. The report of Supt. Barbour follows:

DANCE OF ROSEDALE CLUB

Please Give Me Double One Double O or Two Double Eight

"There is a mistake in the number; I'll connect you with information." "The line is busy; shall I call you" and similar telephonic expressions were not uncommon at Alpha hall Monday evening, for there were gathered many of the young ladies who operate the multiple switch boards at the Quincy telephone exchange, as well as the exchanges in neighboring cities and towns.

The occasion of this gathering was the annual dancing party of the Rosedale club, an association composed of employees at the Quincy telephone exchange, and a very pretty affair it was. The sweet voiced and attractive young ladies who answer your phone call, look particularly attractive in their pretty evening gowns, and the young men, many of whom are also connected with the company in some capacity, were as usual very gallant, so that as a whole it was an unusually pretty party.

Crossed flags at stated intervals about the hall gave it a patriotic appearance, and Wilson's orchestra which furnished the music was at its best.

The dance program of sixteen numbers opened with a waltz German, and included all the popular dances such as the two step, schottische, duchess, caprice, pan American and telephone dance, the latter being a special number.

David K. Dackers was the floor director and Miss Anna C. Hart was the assistant. The aids were: Marcella L. Little, Louise S. McLaughlin, Alma M. LeClair, Florence G. Buckley, Anna F. L. Farrell, Genevieve M. McGee, James A. Doyle, Michael M. McDonald, Daniel Falvey, George F. Crotty, Eliot C. Johnson, John E. Greene, J. Irving Hyland, Waldo C. Sass, Edward P. Histen.

IN A QUANDARY.

Ex-Chief of Police Hayden is in a quandary what to do with a venire received this morning from Dedham, for the drawing of jurors for the session of the Superior court which comes in next Tuesday, Feb. 21. The venire says that the jurors must be drawn at least seven days and not more than 21 days before the setting of the court, and the parties so drawn must be summoned at least four days before the sitting of the court. As the venire was not received until 9 o'clock this morning it is impossible to draw jurors seven days before the 21st, unless drawn tonight, and there is not sufficient time to call the City Council together for tonight.

It was expected that the venire would be received so that jurors might be drawn at the last meeting of the Council, but it did not arrive, owing probably to its being lost in the mail until this morning.

BIRTHDAY REMEMBERED.

Mrs. Eunice Webster White passed her 83d birthday very pleasantly at the home of her daughter at 51 Edison street on Monday. The gift of the Washington Street Congregational church to its oldest member was a beautiful azalea. The Priscillas sent a bunch of daffodils. Rev. and Mrs. Marshall and other friends and neighbors called or sent gifts. Mrs. White is the only one living of the large family that went away from the farm house in Maine and is the mother of Miss White, the librarian at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

EAST MILTON BAPTIST.

Rev. Irad B. Hardy, pastor of the East Milton Baptist church, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday. He will leave town very shortly to take up his duties as pastor of the Chapel street church, Gloucester. Mr. Hardy expressed his sorrow at leaving the good friends he had found in East Milton, and expressed his hope that the church would move on to greater things. At the Sunday school session Mr. Hardy spoke briefly and also at the evening service he gave a short address. A number of the congregations spoke briefly telling of the good work the retiring pastor had done. The deacons in charge of the farewell services were: David J. Brown, Charles A. Geddes and Freeman Marchant.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

New England wouldn't give one codfish for all Canada.

The gavel has usually been fatal to the Presidential boom, but Champ Clark evidently isn't superstitious.

If science keeps on it may be able to isolate the presidential bee some day.

The Colonel seems to be on flirting terms with the Progressive League anyhow.

President Taft should now negotiate an automobile license reciprocity treaty with Maryland.

"A Kentucky paper asserts that people live longer in that state than anywhere else." Maybe it only seems longer.

The author of "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight" has been discovered in Texas. Well the punishment fits the crime.

The chances are excellent that Quincy will no longer be hitched up with Boston Wards in a Congressional district. With a House of 433 members the ratio per representative in Massachusetts will be 210,401. The 1910 census of Boston showed a population of 670,583 which would give Boston just three districts and three Congressmen without including any outside cities or towns. It may be necessary to put one of the Boston wards into an outside district.

AFTER THE RICE THROWERS.

The rectors of the church of the Sacred Heart, and the church of the Nativity of Brooklyn, N. Y., have taken the lead in a movement to check the practice of rice throwing at weddings. They say it destroys the impressiveness of this fateful service, and occasionally gets into people's eyes.

"If rice throwing breaks out" says one of these men, "we shall immediately ring for the patrol wagon or the ambulance."

Two youthful honeymooners of our acquaintance handled this proposition rather well. After the train moved away, with their parlor car chairs under a snow drift, they had the porter sweep up carefully every bit of it. A few months after, Mr. and Mrs. Newly-wed invited to dinner a company of people who had displayed the most athletic prowess at the wedding. After all present had gloated over the mellow appeal of a gorgeous pudding, the bridegroom remarked off-hand, "It ought to be good, it was made out of the rice you gave us the day we were married?"

You don't have to sit around at weddings with a graveyard written all over your face in order to be a gentleman or a lady. There is a part going on, a setting sail into the dark and possibly the storm, that brings the occasion perilously close to tears. Anything that kindles merriment and obscures the too far horizon has its uses, no matter how frivolous.

But people show pretty clearly at weddings what breeding they have had. If you take chances on spoiling the unique and radiant fragrance of the honeymoon by a physical injury, you have not outgrown the stage of cub-hood, no matter how classic your manners, or how heavily loaded with dollars signs your clothes may be.

The newly married couple, under the embrassment of a novel experience are entitled to a monopoly of each other's society. When the pursuit reaches even to the distant inn, and mementoes are thrown over the bridal transome, it becomes time for some youngsters of older growth to be well spanked and put to bed by kind mammas.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, Feb. 10, 1911.

With a scant three weeks of the Congressional session remaining, not one of the important measures before Congress when the session began has been disposed of. Reciprocity with Canada marked a new line of cleavage among the Republicans and Democrats in Washington. Early in the present week. Senators were hopeful that they might solve the problem by letting the reciprocity agreement severely alone, but later it was brought sharply to their attention that unless there shall be a vote on this reciprocity agreement they will be called back to Washington promptly after the 4th of March and compelled to remain until there is an expression in the Senate either for or against it. And now the President is away from Washington making speeches mainly devoted to this reciprocity with Canada question and there is a strong impression that the country, except in isolated spots, is in favor of the agreement recently made between us and our northern neighbors.

The fact that the English papers and the leader of the opposition in the English Parliament are opposed to the reciprocity agreement between Canada and the United States will doubtless have some influence in favor of its approval by Congress in this country. It will be many years, perhaps centuries, before the United States and British America become one country, but the dividing line must some time fade just as the Mason and Dixon line has faded. There are a hundred reasons for the commercial, social and political solidarity of North America. There is not one valid reason in opposition. There is no possibility of the absorption of Canada by the United States or the absorption of the United States by Canada. Absorption is not to be thought of, but commerce between the two countries ought to be as free and unrestricted as between Ohio and Indiana.

There is no opposing vote in the Senate to Senator Cullom's project authorizing a Lincoln Memorial worthy of the great President and in keeping with high ideals of architectural grandeur. The form of the memorial has not been decided upon. It is left to the judgment and taste of a commission who it is hoped will make a wide and appropriate selection. There have been suggestions of a boulevard connecting Washington and Gettysburg, also a project for a triumphal arch like the Arch of Triumph in Paris or its prototype in Rome. There is also a project to have the memorial occupy the center of the great plaza stretching from the Capitol to the Union Station. The appropriation for this monument is two millions, but it is possible that this sum will be added to before the memorial is completed.

The appropriation by the lower house of Congress for diplomatic residences in a number of European and also in some Asiatic capitals is a new but needed departure in our foreign diplomatic policy. The amount for the building of or purchase of consular ambassadorial or ministrial residences is not to exceed $150,000, but this amount will go much farther in the building of suitable residences for our representatives in foreign countries than it would in any American city. Now having appropriately prepared for the lodging of our diplomatic representatives, perhaps Congress can be persuaded to consider in an unfrenzied way a proper uniform for our ministers, consuls and ambassadors, something different from the evening dress worn by butlers and waiters all over the world. Careful analysts know that there is just as much vanity and affectation and ostentation in Quakerlike plainness as there is in gorgeous attire, and since an overwhelming majority of the world at home and abroad get their first impressions from clothes, it is not improper that we give them through our foreign representatives a correct impression of the wealth and strength of the United States. Our affected plainness is not less ostentatious than it is deceiving.

Fifty years ago the writer of a book called "Beyond the Mississippi" expressed the popular feeling in behalf of the express companies when he told how the Wells Fargo Express Co., carried over two million letters within a single year at the cost of 12 1-2 cents a letter, which he said clearly "illustrates the superiority of private enterprise, and," he argued, "abolish the postoffice department, leave this like other carrying trade, to private competition, and the mail service of the United States will be performed 50 per cent cheaper and 100 per cent better than it is today." This is very much like the anti-parcels post argument we are having now.

HAD ENOUGH HONEST VOTES

Bailey Insists That Lorimer Was Legally Elected

CHALLENGES HIS OPPONENTS

Asks Root, Cummins and Borah to Stand Up and Express Opinions as to Legal Soundness of His Proposition—Says Election Was Not Invalidated Even If Eleven Votes Were to Be Subtracted

Washington, Feb. 14.—By resorting to the bold device of asking his antagonists in the senate to stand up and testify, Senator Bailey of Texas caused a dramatic situation in his discussion of the case of Senator Lorimer of Illinois.

Mr. Bailey is a member of the committee on privileges and elections and coincided with the report declaring that nothing invalidating Lorimer's title to his seat had been shown by the committee's investigation. His arguments in support of Lorimer had been anticipated with much interest, and when presented received the thoughtful attention of many senators.

The Texas senator's remarks were devoted largely to the substantiation of his contention that a sufficient number of votes must be shown to have been bought to effect the result unless it was proven that the senator whose election is challenged personally participated in the offense. Senators Root, Cummins and Borah, all opponents of Lorimer, were each in turn requested to stand up and express their opinions as to the legal soundness of this proposition.

Mr. Bailey contended that even the seven votes of White, Browne, Beckemeyer, Link, Wilson, Holstlaw and Broderick were not counted, Lorimer still was legally and properly chosen. Deducting these seven votes from Lorimer's 108 would leave him 101, and, deducting these seven votes from the total vote of 202, would leave 195, of which the 101 votes received by Lorimer would constitute a clear majority, and he was therefore duly and legally elected, insisted Bailey.

He ridiculed the contention of his opponents that these votes could be substracted from Lorimer's column and still be retained in the total vote, declaring that the contrary view was so elementary as to render it almost absurd to present authorities in support of it.

"We have the authority of the textbooks and of the courts for saying that an illegal vote must be rejected for all purposes and that it cannot be considered for any purpose," the senator continued. "That is not only the law and the logic, but it is the rule best calculated to promote political morality. It treats a dishonest vote as if the corrupt legislator who cast it were civilly dead, at least in that transaction ,and it leaves the result to be determined by the votes of honest men."

Mr. Bailey would not admit, as Root, Borah and others charged, that in demanding the total exclusion of dishonest votes he really was giving effect to such votes. On the contrary, he undertook to turn the charge upon his antagonists, saying that allegations of taint had been made against eleven members of the Illinois legislature, and added:

"Subtracting these eleven votes from a total of 202 we have an unchallenged membership of 191 members who, by virtue of their position and of their integrity, were qualified to elect a senator. Of this 191 members, 96 would be a majority and after deducting every vote against which the suggestion of dishonesty has been made, Lorimer would still have 97 as against 94 votes for his opponents.

"Under these circumstances no man could deny that he was entitled to his seat in this senate as a matter of law, and still less can they deny it as a matter of morals, because he had a clear majority of the honest men in the legislature. Now, let us apply the rule proposed by the senators from Idaho, Iowa and New York, and what result do we reach? By keeping these eleven men in this equation, they prevent 97 honest men from effecting an election over 94 honest men, and this makes it plain that they are the gentlemen who are giving effect to the votes of rascals, because by preserving those eleven votes they thus prevent an honest majority from working out its will."

AGREEMENT EXPECTED

Union Anxious for Development of Granite Industry

The February number of the Granite Cutters Journal says editorially:

"Unless we are mistaken in our calculations, a good and wholesome agreement will be signed in Quincy before the end of this month, and which will guarantee continuance of employment, good feeling between employer and employe, better workmanship, therefore higher prices and consequently general advancement all around. There was not entire harmony among the genus boss in New England a little over a year ago. Employers in those states were not sympathetic with the Barre manufacturers' huge blunder, and while the suspension in the granite belt of Vermont was on, employers and their agents in other parts were busy trying to cut in on the Barre trade by assuring dealers near and far that there being no suspension in their localities orders placed would receive prompt and careful attention.

Well, everyone is busy in the granite belt of Vermont at the present time, and if there be a shut-down owing to agreements not being settled in other portions of New England at March 1, it is not too much to expect that the Vermont manufacturer and his agent will not only be looking for a return of any trade he may have lost owing to his slip-up fifteen months ago, but may pull in his belt another notch and try to get the business of some other locality diverted to the hustling valley on the Winooski.

To be forewarned is a great advantage, consequently it will be seen that our prophecy is not drawn from imagination, but is a practical deduction, so visible to one connected with the granite industry that it takes but the mere mention of it to carry conviction. On our part we seek fair working conditions, fair wages, few if any bumpers, and a getting together as far as our interests will commingle for the greater development of the cut granite industry. Progress is visible and within the reach of employer and employe, and will prevail."

UNCLE SAM AS PEACEMAKER

Succeeds In Securing an Armistice In Honduras

PROVED A DIFFICULT MATTER

Revolutionists, Headed by Bonilla, Inclined to Press Advantage Gained In Several Victories, but Finally Agree to Conference—Prepared to Resume Fighting If Terms Are Not Satisfactory to Them

Puerto Cortez, Honduras, Feb. 14.—With Manuel Bonilla in control of the entire north coast of Honduras, the revolutionists are prepared to carry the fight into the interior and to advance upon Tegucigalpa, the capital, in the event the peace negotiations initiated by the United States fail.

As the situation stands it appears that the fight at Ceiba two weeks ago, when the revolutionists won a sweeping victory, was the decisive battle of the war.

It was no easy matter to get the two sides to agree to an armistice. When Commander Davis of the Tacoma was advised by the state department that the United States was willing to tender its good officecs to the opposing parties in the interest of peace and to prevent further bloodshed, if possible, the Wheeling, which arrived from Guantanamo last Saturday, was dispatched to Ceiba to present the proposal to Bonilla.

The latter, encouraged by victories, at first appeared anxious to press his advantage, but, when he was convinced that the same result might be obtained by conference as on the field of battle, and with economy of human life and property, he yielded.

Davilla agreed to the armistice and announced that he would send Maximo Rosales to Puerto Cortez to represent him at the conference. As Tegucigalpa is six days' journey from this port, it presumably will be a week or more before the conference begins.

It is expected that Bonilla will participate in the conference, although his minister general, Maximo Rivera, is here now. No one here expects to hold out long against Bonilla's claim to the presidency.

Letters received here from the interior towns any Davila's adherents are winning recruits to their cause by informing ignorant natives that the present revolution was really an American invasion, being part of a plot to turn over the country and its rich undeveloped resources to foreigners.

General Christmas has possibly a dozen Americans with him, but most of his officers are Hondurans. Christmas seems to be anxious to continue the fight and his men are enthusiastic. Christmas landed 300 men from sloops and schooners yesterday and they marched triumphantly up the only street in town, shouting "Viva Bonilla" with vim.

The soldiers under Christmas appear to be orderly. They are clothed much better than the government troops, the majority of them wearing a sort of uniform made of blue denim.

Bulgarian Caught In Native Land on Trial at Salem For Murder

Salem, Mass., Feb. 14.—Vahan Nalbandian, charged with murdering a friend, Minas K. Monjian, was placed on trial for his life before Judge Sanderson in the superior court here. Nalbandian admits that he shot his countryman but declares that it was accidental.

Before Nalbandian was arrested, he led the officers a chase from Lynn, where the murder is alleged to have been committed, to Bulgaria, where he was arrested on July 18, 1909.

Judge Sanderson announced that the jurors would not be locked up over night, but would be allowed to return to their homes. He put them on their honor not to discuss the case outside the courtroom.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The head of the house wouldn't mind the gas bills if only the young man didn't think he could sing.

Great minds run in the same channel, but some use gasoline in the running, while others use mules.

A girl doesn't so much mind that another girl gets the man, but when it comes to having the other copy her best hat—why, that's another matter.

Afterthought.

Go it, boys, with all your might.
Push your fun along.
With the snowballs have a fight.
That will make you strong.
Do not be at all afraid
Some one will be rough.
That will prove that you are made
Of the good old stuff.

Some folks cannot comprehend
Boys with vision wide.
Think it is for them to spend
All their time inside
Studying or, better still,
Busy sawing wood
When there's coasting on the hill
And the skating's good.

Oh, it makes me young again
When I see them play!
Wish that I was only ten
And with them today.
See that little youngster take
Aim—there's some one stung!
Isn't it a sight to make Any one feel young?

What's that hit me on the ear?
Say, you careless child,
Can't you see that I am here?
Quit your throwing wild.
What! He aimed my ear to trim?
Oh, the little goat!
Let me get my hands on him
And I'll trim his coat!

Worth Something.

"Yes; I am feeling pretty punk."
"Have you seen a doctor about it?"
"Yes; he said overwork was what ailed me."
"How much did you have to pay him for that diagnosis?"

The Necessary Thing.

"Anybody knows how to get into debt."
"Sure; the start is easy."
"What more do you want?"
"The true art comes in knowing how to get in deeper.

Speculation.

"Do you think many of the senators bought their seats?"
"Did you ever talk to any of them?"
"A few."
"How else do you suppose they could get them?"

The Real Thrill.

"I suppose he finds gathering eggs in his suburban home very exhilarating."
"Not so much so as lying about the lay to his open mouthed friends in town."

Went the Wrong Way.

"I hear he is getting rich."
"Yes; he has a fortune in a machine for digging trenches."
"How did he happen to invent it?"
"Trying to make a flying machine."

Sounds Alarming.

"I am very fond of children."
"Are you?"
"Quite so."
"Well, they are delicious little morsels, aren't they?"

The Modern Way.

"He loves her very devotedly."
"When will they be married?"
"As soon as she gets her divorce."

Don't Match.

In theory we are sprouting wings
And climbing with a rush.
In practice we are doing things
That cause our friends to blush.

New Hotel For Boston

Boston, Feb. 14.—Boston is to have another palatial hotel, to be erected at a cost of $2,500,000, on the corner of Arlington and Newbury streets, Back Bay, according to plans of its promoters, which became known last night.

Smile.

When fifteen paces is your lead
And the sheriff gaining fast;
When rent day bobs up and each feed
You fear will be your last;
When debtors rise as one and file
The dreaded little "list;"
When walking every little while
You meet a shaking fist;
When pockets that once jingled loud
Are empty and thus still;
When once you've sported with the crowd
And blew it to its fill;
When once it was a constant joy
To live and eat in style—
'Twas easy then to laugh, my boy,
But smile now, blank you, smile!
—Puck.

—This country has now come definitely to the parting of the ways, so far as its future relations with the big English-speaking country on the north are concerned. Looking back over the record of the past, we can all now see the mistakes that have been made, from the days of the Revolution to these days—the opportunities that have been let slip. The people of United States and their congress should think twice—should think long and very seriously—before they cap those blunders of the past with a crowning and probably irreparable blunder.—Hartford Courant.

Doan's Kidney Pills will do his.
Here is Quincy testimony to prove it.

Nicholas Albanese, 16 Gilmore St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I was annoyed by attacks of backache for some time. Often while at work, sharp, shooting pains darted through my loins, causing me great misery. I also had dizzy spells and my sight seemed to be affected. I tried many remedies, but did not receive relief and as a last resort, I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at the Cox Drug Store and in a short time after using them, I was helped. I have no hesitation in giving Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure."

SUNDAY SERVICES

HALL PLACE M. E.

S. K. Nason, general secretary of the Malden Y. M. C. A., presented the work in the interests of the Quincy Y. M. C. A. at the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday morning in a very able and creditable manner. He spoke of the organization, as first founded in London about 55 years ago, its aim and object and its results at that time and the enlargement of its work by the adding of different departments, until today it stands fully competent to care for the boy by building him up physically, socially mentally and spiritually, and helping to make him a success in the world. He touched on all branches of the work and its results and its influence as felt in all parts of our city, and urged the men and boys not already acquainted with the work to join the association.

Sunday School and Junior League were held as usual. John Pearce lead the Epworth League service at 6.15.

Rev. Carl H. Raupach took for his evening subject, "Lincolnism—its power in the past and its place in the present. His text was Prov. 10:7—"The memory of the just is blessed." He compared the life of the nation to the life of an individual, and when the first great sorrow of the nation came in the parting of the families, the dividing of homes and the warring of brothers against brother, Lincoln with the strong right arm of manhood, came in the hour of the nation's trouble and brought out of chaos, order, liberty and good government. The underlying principles in the life of Lincoln were justice, mercy, sympathy and love and it was these principles that brought victory to the nation out of seeming chaos and failure.

Tuesday evening the Epworth League will meet at the home of the president, Joseph M. Francis at 107 Centre street, for the regular monthly meeting and social.

Official board meeting Tuesday in the vestry.

Prayer meeting Friday evening at 7.30.

CHRIST CHURCH.

In the absence of the rector, Rev. James L. Tryon L.L.D., assistant secretary of the American Peace society, addressed the congregation both morning and evening. Dr. Tryon devoted all his time to the duties of his position and is touring the United States and Canada preaching "the glad tidings of peace on earth good will toward men."

At the morning service he spoke on "The Hundred Years' Peace" and in the evening on "The Triumph of the Hague Idea." International peace is the one thing that will save the world. In order to get this the example of the great Messenger of Peace must be followed. Dr. Tryon is a deep thinker, a man of vision, and he is considered one of the most eminent authorities on the subject. He firmly believes that the true missionary idea working hard in hand with international arbitration will accomplish the desired results. The church was well filled at both services.

The monthly debate of the Men's club will be held Wednesday evening. Subject, "Resolved That the United States should Fortify the Panama Canal."

The Galahad club will hold its monthly social in the Parish house Thursday evening.

A Valentine supper will be given by the Women's Guild Friday evening at 6.30.

ATLANTIC M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. John A. Bowler of Springfield spoke at the morning and evening services and in the Sunday school of the Atlantic M. E. church on Sunday. In the morning he spoke on "The house built upon the sands" and in the evening on "Moses' Choice." Both talks were illustrated by the crayon.

The Sunday school observed Lincoln Legion day at the Sunday school hour. The exercises opened by the singing of America after which the Rev. John L. Garland led in prayer. Miss Mable Cheney gave a brief sketch of Lincoln's life; Master Sidney Hoyt, Lincoln's speech at Gettysburg battlefield; Miss Emily Keeler, an extract from Lincoln's temperance address before the Washingtonian society at Springfield, Illinois, February 22, 1842. Tributes to Lincoln were given by Richard Young and Edward Stewart.

Rev. Mr. Garland explained the purpose of the Legion. Mr. A. R. Poquett told of the only time Lincoln ever tasted liquor as being on the challenge of a young drunkard who said he would sign the pledge if Mr. Lincoln would lift a barrel of whiskey and take a drink from the bung hole. Mr. Lincoln did this, set the barrel on the ground and spat out the liquor.

Mr. Bowler gave a crisp temperance address illustrated with the crayon. George Kilpatrick unveiled a picture of Lincoln and the boy Breckenridge. A feature of the occasion was the reading of a letter from President Taft. About twenty-five signed the Lincoln Legion Temperance pledge.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

The Wollaston Unitarian Club will hold its regular meeting this evening. Dinner will be served at 6.30. Speaker: Rev. R. Perry Bush, D. D. Topic: "Panama and the canal."

At the Y. P. R. U. meeting Sunday evening, Feb. 19, Miss Almira E. Simmons will speak upon "Our trees."

The annual festival of the children of Barnard Memorial will be held on Washington's birthday in Mechanic's hall. A fine program has been prepared.

Sunday morning, Feb. 19, Rev. Carl G. Horst will exchange pulpits with the Rev. F. K. Crooker of Roslindale.

The annual collection for the American Unitarian Association will be taken Sunday, March 5.

The first of a series of mid-week Lenton services to be conducted by prominent out-of-town ministers will be held Wednesday, March 8, at 7.45 P. M.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The regular Sunday School session was held at 9.30. Besides the ordinary class work there was a special charge to the boys by the pastor from the subject: "A real good boy."

The Sunday morning preaching service was in charge of the pastor. His theme was "Christ in us."

The Y. P. S. C. E. met at 5.30 with Mr. Oksanen presiding. A splendid solo was sung by E. Sword, a poem was read by Miss Hilja Nelsan, and the scripture reading and prayer were by Miss Elsa Lindgren. A short address was given by the pastor relating to the words: "Dare to stand up for Jesus." A number of members testified during the meeting.

At the evening service the church choir and string band led the singing. The pastor preached on the theme: "Comforting tidings from above." All the meetings of the day were inspired and a good audience was present at each.

The pastor, Rev. John E. Lillback, has been conducting a series of evangelistic services among the Finnish people of Fitchburg during the last two weeks. The attendance at all the meetings was large and the services were all big in every sense of the word. Many people were brought to Christ through their influence.

NO EQUAL IN THE WORLD

Superdreadnought for Argentina Building at Quincy

Quincy is proud of her shipyard, the best in the world when written up as follows by the Sunday Globe, and illustrated.

Sometime in the early summer of this year the first battleship ever built by a U. S. shipyard for a foreign power will be launched from the Fore River shipyards in Quincy. The ship will be the Rividavia and she will be what has come to be known amoung shipbuilding men as a superdreadnought.

The Rividavia will be launched with the golden sunburst on a field of blue and white, the colors of the republic of Argentina, flying from the stern and when the boat goes down the ways it is expected the launching ceremony will be an international event of great importance.

Just now, however, workmen are busy at the Fore River yards shaping the towering mass of fighting steel together, and the work is so far advanced that one can gain a very good idea of what this 27,000-ton monster will look like,

As every American is quite likely to compare the fighting vessels of other navies with ships of his own which have become familiar to him either throught seeing them himself or looking at them in the newspapers or magazine pages, it can be truthfully said that the Rividavia will look like nothing that is now afloat in the U.S. navy. It is said to resemble the British ship Lion, now building, but that comparison means hardly anything to the average landsman.

The Rividavia, though being built for a foreign power, if a sister republic of South America can be termed foreign, was designed by a former U. S. naval officer of world-wide renown. He is Francis T. Bowles, president of the Fore River shipbuilding company, a former head of the bureau of construction and repair of the U. S. navy, an officer of eminent capability.

In the Rividavia Admiral Bowles has designed a ship that was the "last word" in marine fighting machines at the time her keel was laid down. There have been no improvements made in her style since, although some navies haves begun to equip their ships with bigger guns. When completed the Rividavia will have, on account of her great length, "a lean and hungry look," a characteristic which Caesar said was associated with dangerous people.

The ship will be equipped with triple screws, being one of the first vessels with Curtis marine turbines to have more than two propellers. It is estimated the Rividavia will be able to go 10,000 knots at 11-knot speed, 7200 knots at 15-knot speed, and 3600 knots at 22.5 knot speed.

An interesting feature in connection with the Rividavia is that she will be equipped with an anchor at the stern, the same as those in use at the forward end. This provision is made because the ship, when in service, may have to anchor, in the rivers of Argentina, where it will be necessary to secure her fore and aft, because a vessel of her extreme length cannot be allowed to swing at will in rivers of limited size.

"Then why do you wait until 2 o'clock, when the restaurants are deserted and you are the only patron?" inquired the bystander.

"Because," replied the cynic, "I am the certain interesting type."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

STORY OF A VALENTINE.

Two elderly women sat piecing quilts by the failing light of a February afternoon. They were Ann Martin and her widowed sister Amy Marle.

"When do you think we'll get this done, Ann?"

"Well, we ought to by the end of the week."

"To-morrow's Valentine's."

"Yes."

"I always think of Bob Adams this time of the year."

Ann said nothing. She was the thinner and quieter of the two. Her eyes were brown and reticent.

"You remember the valentine he gave me just before he went away?"

"Yes."

"I've got it upstairs in the bureau drawer yet. It has doves on it, and strings of roses, and a whole wreath of forget-me-nots; and in the middle two hands joined together. He didn't get it here in Green Meadows, I know. It's too fine. It's more'n twenty year old."

"How many quilts we got now?" asked Ann. Her tone was remote.

"Seventeen, I guess. Oh, I don't know; maybe it's only sixteen. Well, I was talking about Bob Adams. I wonder why he went away, and never said a word."

"I don't know."

"He knew I knew his handwriting, and that it came from him. He was up here on Valentine's day, but he never said a word. I waited for one, I was so sure. Next thing we knew he was out West, and the next thing he was dead."

"Yes," said Ann.

"You weren't home that last time he came here, were you, Ann?"

"No."

"You're so sharp you might have seen something I didn't. I did my best, I'm sure. I always liked Bob better'n anybody else except my John. And John was dead two years and I didn't see any reason why I couldn't keep company again. I had on my gray dress with the cherry trimmings. Everybody said I looked splendid in it."

Ann rose and crossed over to the stove. She pushed off one of the lids and poured in a shovelful of coal. She was almost silent in her movements.

"I guess you've forgot that gray dress, Ann. I had it made up just before I come back here to live. It was my first one out of mourning."

"Yes, I remember it."

"I wonder what made him go off the way he did."

Ann came back to her chair. "I don't know. I wouldn't bother about it."

"But you never had beaux like me, Ann, and it makes it different. I don't believe you had even one. I can't remember."

"Maybe I had and maybe I hadn't. It's too late to think about it now."

"But I like to get at the root of things. It worried me then, and it worries me now not to know what made Bob Adams act the way he did."

She leaned back, idle and reminiscent. With her pretty, aimless ways, her dimple and her blonde hair she had been almost a belle in her girlhood. Ann, plain, strong, silent, had stepped aside in the shadow to let her take both their shares of the sun.

A knock sounded without. "I'm coming right in," said a voice. A gust of wind rushed in the just opened door. An old woman stood there, her skirts fluttering about her. Back of her flamed the sunset.

"Come in and sit down, Mis' Adams," cried both sisters in a breath.

Mrs. Adams held out a package to Ann.

"Here's some tea for what I borrowed last week. I've just been down to the store and bought some."

She sat down, very tall and very erect, her blue and green plaid shawl slipping back off her gray head. The color in her cheeks was like that of a girl.

"We've been talking about your Bob," said Mrs. Marle.

"Bob was a good boy," said old Mrs. Adams. "He went away from me one week, and was brought back to be buried the next. I tell you, I took it hard."

Amy Marle's head drooped sidewise a little. She leaned forward simperingly. "He sent me a valentine before he went."

"I never heard of it," said Mrs. Adams. She looked keenly from Ann to her sister, and back to Ann.

"Men don't generally tell such things," said the simpering Amy.

"He was my only boy," said the old woman. "I had five girls, and some of them got married, and some of them died, and Sarah's living with me yet; but none of them was as much comfort to me as my Bob. He was so feeling."

Ann touched her on the arm.

"Look at the quilt we're making, Mis' Adams. We think it's the prettiest yet."

The wrinkled fingers smoothed out the pieces spread on Ann's knee.

"I remember this piece of blue calico real well. You had a dress off it, Ann."

"Yes, and I only wore it half a dozen times, and then hung it away. Amy come across it awhile ago and she had an old calico most as good as new, and so we put together and started this quilt."

"Mine's that yellow with the white sprig in it," said Mrs. Marle. "I never looked right in yellow; I'm too light."

"It'll be a pretty quilt," said Mrs. Adams. "I always did like an Irish chain."

She rose to go. Ann went with her to the door. The old woman beckoned her out. Ann followed down the narrow garden path between the rows of knee-high box.

The two stopped in the wind at the gate. "It was you he wanted all the time, Ann."

"Who, Mis' Adams?"

"Bob, my Bob. He came here to see you. It wasn't Amy."

"Why, yes, it was, Mis' Adams he gave her a valentine."

"I don't know anything about a valentine," said Mrs. Adams, sturdily, "but I know it was you. He told me so."

She went a few steps out into the pike and came back again.

"He didn't want Amy. He thought she was a goose. He thought you were ten times better looking and nicer. It used to make him mad to see you let her push you to the wall. She's doing it yet."

A soft flush crept up Ann's elderly cheek. All her life after she remembered how distinct a scent the box can hold on a mild February afternoon, a scent as of something sweet but late.

Mrs. Adams was speaking still. "I used to feel hard toward you because it was on your account he went West. But I've felt right about it for a long time, Ann. He's been in glory these twenty years." She looked at her with the comprehending look of age. "You're a good woman, Ann Martin."

Ann watched her go. What memories came to her there in the wind at the gate! How keen the box smelled!

The sun was filling her little chamber up stairs as she entered it a moment later and drew the old valentine from the bureau drawer. And suddenly she saw there on the yellowish envelop a name she had never seen before:—

"Miss Ann Martin."

She knew at once the secret of those silent years. Amy had once been so sure, and she had been so blind, and the names so similar—

Oh, her young lover! Oh, how sharp the box was smelling down in the garden!

She rubbed her finger back and forth over the fadded writing until it was only an uncertain line. He was hers—hers—but Amy must never know.

She put on her bonnet and cloak and went slowly back again to the garden and gathered an armful of the haunting box. The road ran past toward the mountains and the orange sunset. She started down it with a steady step.

Hints of spring were in the sky, the bough, the shriveled grass. There was almost an April look to the lilac-colored haze that stretched along the orchard slopes. It was gusty but quiet. The windows of the few houses were flaming toward the west. Spring was in this elderly woman's heart. Love had gone away from her, body and spirit, and come back only a ghost. She was humbly thankful for the poor ghost. She had never had even that before.

A turn in the pike brought the church-yard in sight. It, too, seemed to have its vision of spring. The long and regular rows of graves lay as if expecting the trumpet of the awful Angel of the Dawn. A half-grown wild-plum tree that had somehow straggled in from the highway stood close to the weather-beaten palings. It quivered like a prescient thing in the tender light.

Ann Martin leaned over the low fence and dropped the box piece by piece on a grave just below. The little plum tree shook and shook.

"Oh, Bob, Bob," she cried, "I found it out too late!"

She faced her sister afterward with an exultant look.

"Where have you been so long, Ann?"

"Just down the road a bit."

"What did Mis' Adams want with you out at the gate?"

"She was talking about Bob."

"I think I'm the one she ought to talk to about Bob."

Ann went and stood by the window. The road stretched onward to the orange west. She blessed it for the strange journey she had taken along it a while ago. She knew she had got back part of her youth. She would never be so elderly again. He was hers—hers!—Springfield Republican.

CANADIAN PACT BEFORE HOUSE

Opponents Unable to Sidetrack Reciprocity Agreement

196 FOR AND 121 AGAINST

Test Vote on Immediate Consideration of McCall Bill Indicates That Measure Will Pass House and Reach Senate This Week—Republicans Form Greater Part of Minority, but Many Are Expected to Change About

Washington, Feb. 14.—The house of representatives is now considering the reciprocity agreement, all attempts to sidetrack the McCall resolution having failed. The test vote on the proposal to delay, 196 to 121, indicates that the measure will go through without a hitch, and that it will reach the senate during the present week.

Almost the entire opposition to immediate discussion, significantly enough, came from the Republican sde of the house. The administration meanwhile will continue its campaign with renewed vigor. This week several members of the cabnet will deliver addresses in favor of the agreement.

While the vote to displace the regular order for the day on the house calendar and take up reciprocity cannot be accepted as an exact indication on the final vote on the bill, it is regarded as being approximately so. The vote against taking up the measure was almost wholly from the Republican side.

The Democrats voted almost solidly for immediate consideration. Some of the Republicans who voted against displacing the regular order are not expected to place themselves on record against reciprocity at a final vote. Mr. McCall will handle the time for debate in favor of the bill and Mr. Dalzell will serve in like capacity for the opposition.

A total of 103 Republicans and 18 Democrats voted against the McCall motion to consider his bill.

Representative Gardner alone of the Massachusetts delegation stood against McCall on the question of taking up the Canadian reciprocity bill. All the other members were present and voted aye. The rollcall disclosed nine out of twelve Republicans in Minnesota and the two Dakotas voting against McCall, but one, Miller of Minnesota, will vote for the bill, his vote having been dictated by his desire to take up district business. Tawney of Minnesota, chairman of appropriations, voted with McCall, notwithstanding his fear for the barley interests, and Nye and Stevens voted with him. Poindexter, the Washington insurgent, soon to be senator, voted with the majority.

The bill is first being considered as in committee of the whole house on the state of the union. All bills affecting the revenue are thus considered. Speaker Cannon called Representative Mann of Illinois to the chair to preside over the committee during the consideration of the measure. In the earlier proceedings, Cannon, by recognizing McCall and declaring his motion to take up the reciprocity bill a privileged matter, had shown a disposition to help the cause along to a vote, despite the sentiments against reciprocity which he expressed in a letter to the Illinois legislature on Saturday.

Representative Hill of Connecticut, one of the Republican members of the committee on ways and means, was recognized for one hour in support of the reciprocity agreement. He explained the measure in great detail.

Mr. Hill was interrupted from time to time for questions. Asked if he was in favor of free trade with Canada, Hill said he favored unrestricted trade with every country where the costs of production did not differ from that in the United States. Hill declared that talk of injury to various interests in the United States as a result of reciprocity was based on apprehension and not on fact.

Chattanooga, Feb. 14.—A wld man, with hair more than a foot long and finger nails grown to a length of two inches, has been arrested and placed in the Marshall county jail.

Eastern Refrigerating Company Pays Judgment In Berry Suit

Hartford, Feb. 14.—A satisfaction of judgment has been filed in the United States circuit court in the case of P. Berry & Sons of Hartford against the Eastern States Refrigerating company of Springfield, which is the famous case in which government experts' testimony and the court's decision established some rules by which to determine when an egg is bad.

The Berry concern had stored eggs with the Springfield company, and when taken from storage they were bad. The case was tried before Judge Platt and a jury, and the verdict was for the plantiff to recover $7500. A stay for sixty days was issued to give the defendant time to appeal, but the refrigerating concern has paid the judgment.

MRS. HILL RELEASED

Served Three Days In Prison For Smuggling at New York

New York, Feb. 14.—The prison sentence of three days in the Tombs, imposed last Friday upon Mrs. Roberta M. C. Hill, divorced wife of Captain Hill of the British army, who pleaded guilty to a charge of smuggling, expired Monday and Mrs. Hill was released.

Mrs. Hill, the first woman upon whom a prison sentence has been imposed here on a smuggling accusation, pleaded guilty to a charge of bringing a $6000 sable coat and jewelry valued at $2700 into the country from France without payment of duty.

The sentence was imposed after a recent warning from the federal bench that imprisonment would hereafter be a part of the penalty in smuggling cases.

OUTLINES DUTIES OF MEN AND WOMEN

Plain Talk by Woman Member of Colorado Legislature

Denver, Feb. 14.—Woman suffrage in Colorado does not mean that a man may sit around and do nothing, according to a speech made in the state legislature by Mrs. Agnes Riddle, representative from Arapahoe and Elbert counties, in support of an eight hour law for working women.

Her speech was so effective that the bill passed on second reading with only one dissenting vote.

"This law should be passed," declared Mrs. Riddle, "not only to help the women who are employed, but to help the men and also to make the men go to work. In the cities the women work such long hours and for such small pay that the employers hire them instead of men. This results in the woman doing the work while the man sits at home and wears out the seat of his pants. The men should go to work and the women stay at home and raise families.

The nation needs mothers, homemakers, and housewives. In the city where so many girls are employed, many of them get married and keep right on working. They are thrown into contact with too many men and some of them find a man that they like better than their husband. Then comes a divorce. Let the women stay at home and do their housework and raise a whole flock of children."

Former Harvard Man Attacks Laborer Without the Least Warning

Boston, Feb. 14.—William D. Crowley, a former Harvard man and Cambridge athlete, when arraigned in the municipal court on the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill John J. Crowley, who had been drinking, while walking along Washington street, without the least warning of any kind, according to the police, suddenly picked up a pick and struck Sullivan, who was working in a trench, on the head, causing a compound fracture of the skull.

Forty Killed and Wounded In Fight With Rebels at Mulata

Marfa, Tex., Feb. 14.—Delayed advices received here clear up suspense over results of the fighting between insurrectos and federals around Mulata. The last word received told of federal reverses in an assault on rebel lines at Mulata.

News received here confirms the information and adds that the federals retreated to Ojinaga, their base of supplies. The insurrectos were unable to check Luque's retreat. Their supply of ammunition was exhausted.

The federal loss was forty killed and wounded. The insurrecto loss was one killed and wounded throughout the two days' battle.

DECLARE BOSTON IS BADLY GOVERNED

Scathing Criticism by Men Supposed to Be Posted

Boston, Feb. 14.—Sweeping charges that the medical inspection of the public schools was a farce, that the physicians were appointed by political pull and couldn't tell one disease from another, and that the move to increase their number is merely a scheme for repaying political debts, were made by Dr. David D. Scannell before the Twentieth Century club.

Dr. Scannell, who had served on the school board, was not the only one to make severe criticism of the way Boston is governed. Courtnay Guild, as an ex-city collector, told of his knowledge of pernicious evils under the spoils system. He told of drunkennessa and dishonesty, which he claimed was rife in his department.

Chairman Sullivan of the finance commission declared that inadequate school accommodations, backward street conditions and other evils were due to the fact that the city's money was being actually squandered by keeping political heelers in office.

Several other speakers advocated sweeping changes in the manner of making appointments in municipal and town governments.

Vigorous Nationalist cheers greeted the promise which was taken to indicate the possibility of Irish legislation being enacted earlier than has been anticipated.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 129, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor. Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

For several years Valentine works excellently and rises to be assistant cashier. He and Rose love each other, but Valentine knows Doyle is on his track and dares not tell her of his affection for her. A mysterious Mr. Cronin turns out to be old Bill Avery, now reformed and a man of business.

Valentine receives a telegram from Doyle. He tells Red how he has planned to outwit the detective by means of a cleverly concocted alibi.

Rose Lane tells Valentine she loves him and that they are going to marry. Valentine reveals to her his love for her. Doyle appears on the scene to arrest Valentine on a charge of robbing a Massachusetts bank many years before.

Valentine turned toward the girl, who surveyed him anxiously.

"What is it?" she asked. She saw that he was deeply worried.

"I don't know," he stammered, "but it is most important—most important."

"Well, I'll run downtown; the car is waiting," she said happily. "Then I'll come back and get you and dad and take you home."

His face had taken on the pallor that marked the visages of men who came from Warden Handler's game of solitaire.

"Yes, but should this man have business which would take me out of town"—

"But you mustn't go out of town—now hear me." She, of course, had not the slightest suspicion of the true importance of that telephone call.

"I won't if there's a way out."

"Well, just don't—just don't," pleaded Rose. "I am going to leave the children here to take care of you."

"Rose," he cried, going to her, "Rose, it was chance that brought us together; it was chance that brought you to a prison one day. Chance is uncertain, capricious, and that same chance may separate us suddenly."

"Nothing can separate us," confidently.

"Let that be our prayer to all the gods. But this I want you to remember—from my soul I love you. Now go."

She kissed her hand and waved it toward him as she went out of the door.

"Goodby, Rose."

He stood a moment; then, taking down the telephone receiver, he said into the mouthpiece:

"Hello. All right. Send the gentleman in." After a pause: "What? He's gone into Mr. Lane's office?" The telephone receiver fell to the desk with a crash. Doyle gone into the office of Mr. Lane, Rose's father! Here was a new complication, a new danger, one which Jimmy Valentine had not included in his calculations. Well, come what may, he must face the situation.

"Miss Taylor—Miss Mabel," he called, taking up the receiver and asking for the "central" of the bank's private exchange, "give me Mr. Lane's office. Hello, Mr. Lane. Oh, now regarding that Germond note, he says that he—Oh, you are coming into my office now with a Mr. Doyle? All right. I'll be here. Very well. Goodby."

The receiver clattered into its wonted position on the hook, and Jimmy Valentine stood at his desk awaiting the arrival of Rose Lane's father and Detective George Doyle.

CHAPTER XIV.

AFTER a few moments Valentine again glanced at the photograph of the dinner group. Next he opened a drawer at his left and took out a square green book with the legend "Scrap Book" in fancy green letters on its cover.

He placed the volume in a drawer at the right of his desk and on top of it laid several other books taken from another drawer. He slammed the drawer shut, straightened himself and walked across the office to the table on which was laid the tray of gold, silver and greenbacks.

"I'm going to beat you, Mr. Doyle!" he said fiercely, half aloud. "I'm going to beat you, and I'm going to make you like it."

He seated himself before the tray and began counting the money as the door opened to admit Mr. Lane, followed by Detective Doyle.

Valentine looked up.

"Mr. Randall," began Rose's father, "this is Mr. Doyle, a detective, who has been asking me some questions about you that I feel you can better answer."

"Indeed?" looking at Doyle. "What is the name?" Valentine asked innocently.

His attitude made Doyle snort with anger.

"Doyle," the detective grunted impatiently, staring at the man he had known as No. 1289.

Valentine rose and shook hands with Doyle. "Glad to know you, Mr. Doyle."

He seated himself before the tray. "Well, what can I do for you?" he asked.

The detective's mouth gaped open. He glared at the smoothly speaking, indifferently acting ex-convict before him, then at the tray containing thousands of dollars in bills and coin. Valentine went on counting the money as unconcernedly as though playing a game of jackstraws with Bobby or Kitty.

"What can you do?" exploded Doyle. "You can do nine years for"—

"You will excuse me," interrupted Mr. Lane, stepping toward the door. "I have no interest in the conversation, I am sure. And, Mr. Doyle," he said pointedly to the bewildered detective, "I want you to thoroughly understand that I have every confidence in Mr. Randall, as also have all the other directors." The door closed behind him and Valentine was alone with George Doyle.

"Well, I'll be blowed!" ejaculated Doyle, turning again to the assistant cashier. "You're in pretty swell here, aren't you?" pointing to the tray. "I really didn't expect to find you here in the daytime."

"Why?" perplexedly.

"Oh, I thought you'd duck when you got my wire."

"Wire? Oh, did you send that telegram?"

"Yes, Jimmy."

"Jimmy? What's the idea? I don't follow you"—

"Oh, you don't know, eh?" angrily. "Got the old boy—Lane—stalling for you, and you're going pretty strong, eh?"

"Exactly what do you mean?" asked Valentine indignantly, rising as he spoke.

"Come on, Jimmy, not with me. Sorry to tear you away from so soft a place, but the state of Massachusetts wants you."

"From the occasional words of intelligible English you speak from time to time," retorted Valentine easily, "I gather that you imagine I am a person named Jimmy." His words were accompanied by the most aggravating of smiles.

The now thoroughly irate detective bent toward the assistant cashier and peered intently at him.

"Imagine—imagine! Well, isn't it funny that I should imagine your name to be Jimmy?"

"It is, indeed," suavely. "As a matter of curiosity, might I ask Jimmy's other name?"

"I'll give you just one guess," pointedly.

"That's exceedingly kind of you, but this same experience having happened before I will likely guess it." He settled back comfortably in his chair.

"Well, what do you think of that?" Doyle found it difficult to control his temper.

"Well, what is the other name?"

Valentine responded with the utmost coolness:

"You mistake me for a Mr. Valentine."

"Jimmy Valentine, the very name, and you are Jimmy Valentine, and I want you," snarled the detective. "Now, is it come along or requisition?"

"Oh, I'm to be arrested for this Jimmy Valentine, am I? The last time I was mistaken for him I was only embarrassed by having a tough on the street in Chicago claim my acquaintance. You are really amusing, Mr. Doyle." The assistant cashier chuckled softly.

"So that's your game, eh?"

"No game that I can see."

"I suppose you are going to deny that Bill Avery called on you today?"

Doyle watched the other intently to note the effect of this shot. But Valentine was entirely equal to the occasion.

"I do not know your friend Bill, Mr. Doyle," positively.

"No," exasperatedly. "Then a man with iron gray hair, wearing a top hat and carrying a cane, did not get off a train here today and come straight here?"

"It is not possible for me to know how the men get here who call on me. Such a man as you describe, however, did call on me. But that man's name was—er—er"— He crossed to his desk, paused, glanced perplexedly at Doyle and then reached to the telephone.

"I forgot for the moment, but they likely will know outside. Hello! Do you recall the name of the last man who called on me today? No, not Mr. Doyle; he's here now. Cronin, that's it. Thank you." He hung up the receiver. "Cronin," he added. "He came in here a short time ago to negotiate a loan."

"GLAD TO KNOW YOU, MR. DOYLE."

DEATH OF GENERAL WEBB

Soldier, Instructor and Writer Came From Old Fighting Stock

New York, Feb. 14.—General Alexander S. Webb died at his home in Riverdale. He had been ill most of the winter, but his condition did not become critical until a few days ago. His entire family was at his bedside.

General Webb won distinction as a soldier, an instructor, and a writer. The son of a soldier and journalist, General James Webb, he was born in Boston, Feb. 15, 1835. He was the grandson of General Samuel B. Webb, who was Putnam's and then Washington's aid, raised and commanded the Third Connecticut Regiment in 1777, and finally succeeded Van Steuben in the command of the light infantry of the army.

General Webb served in the United States Army for fifteen years, and his services during the Civil War were of a conspicuous and valuable character. He is survived by his wife, four daughters, and a son.

KILLED BY COAL GAS

Conclusion of Chemists Who Probed Twigg-Elosser Mystery

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 14.—That Charles E. Twigg and Grace Elosser, the young couple found dead in the parlor of the Elosser home on Dec. 31 last, the eve of their wedding day, came to their end from carbon monoxide (coal gas) poisoning was the conclusion of the chemists who tested the blood of the two victims. State Attorney Robb announced the result of the chemists' analysis.

Heretofore the authorities have maintained that the pair met their death by cyanide of potassium, the coroner's jury returning a verdict to that effect.

Mr. Robb said that the tests were made by the two chemists independently and that their reports agreed.

Its friends do not anticipate an easy time passing the measure through the senate, especially as it has been intimated that President Taft would veto it if it was presented to him for his signature.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

Cookery Points

Chicken En Casserole.

Cut into joints one large fowl or two small ones, removing as many of the bones as possible and the skin, if very tough. Put two tablespoonfuls olive oil, pork drippings or butter in a frying pan and as soon as smoking hot lay a few pieces of the chicken in at a time, turning often until the flesh loses its pinky tinge and turns white. Do not allow the pieces to brown. As fast as the white stage is reached take from the pan and drain on soft paper while cooking another batch. When all are cooked—and you may have to add more butter or oil before you have finished, but do so when there is no chicken in the pan—place where the chicken will keep hot while you prepare the sauce. Put three tablespoonfuls of butter in the pan where the chicken was cooked and as soon as melted add two tablespoonfuls of flour. As soon as blended and frothy turn in three cupfuls veal or chicken stock, which can be made from the bones, cleaned feet and trimmings of the fowl, well seasoned with vegetables and soup herbs. Cook until smooth and thickened, strain into the casserole, add the pieces of chicken, cover closely with oiled paper, adjust the casserole cover and bake in a moderate oven an hour or more, dependent upon the age and tenderness of the chicken. Game and veal are cooked in the same way as the chicken. Rabbit is specially nice prepared in this way.

Hungarian Goulash.

This is a specially appetizing dish when cooked and served en casserole, and here are the directions for its preparation as given by one of the manufacturers of the American ware: Slice a peeled onion and cook until brown in three tablespoonfuls pork drippings or butter. Take out the onion and turn in a pound and a half of lean, uncooked veal cut in inch cubes. Stir and cook the meat until slightly browned, then reject the fat, if there is any, and arrange the meat in casserole. Add a pint of broth or boiling water and a teaspoonful of paprika, cover the dish and place in the oven. In the meantime add more fat to the frying pan and when hot brown in it about a dozen balls cut from peeled potatoes and a dozen small onions. When the onions are well browned add them to the casserole and after the meat has been cooking an hour add a teaspoonful of salt and the potatoes and if desired two tablespoonfuls flour mixed to a thin paste with cold water. Cook about two hours and serve from the casserole.

Molasses Taffy, Light and Porous.

Cook together one cupful of granulated or coffee sugar, two cupfuls New Orleans molasses, one tablespoonful of vinegar and a piece of butter the size of a small hickory nut. Do not let it boil hard and do not stir, else it will grain. As soon as brittle when dropped into cold water turn into buttered pans and set away until cool enough to handle. The pulling requires two people, one to hold the hands in position of a hook for the puller to throw the stretched candy upon, while the other holds the lengths together. The more delicately it is handled the lighter in color and texture will the candy be. When it is of a light cream color stretch into a long, wide, thin strip and lay on a marble or molding board. With the left hand lift the end of the candy from the board and with the back of a knife, held in the right hand, break into pieces any size desired. Cutting the lengths presses the ends together, making the candy less porous.

Children Cry For Them.

Date gems are a favorite with the children for breakfast or luncheon. They should be served hot. To make them, make a batter with a cupful of milk, the yolks of two eggs beaten thoroughly, a cupful and a half of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. When the batter is smooth add a quarter of a pound of dates cut fine and the whites of the two eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Bake in buttered gem tins in a quick oven. It will take about thirty minutes.

Company Desserts.

A delicious dessert is made by stiffening grape juice with gelatin and folding the whites of eggs whipped to a stiff froth through it while it is thickening. Serve with whipped cream. All easily made "company" dessert is prepared by splitting an angel cake lengthwise and spreading it with a thick covering of whipped cream and then putting the layers together and decorating the top with candied fruit arranged in some pretty design.

Smoked Halibut.

Shred into medium sized pieces two cupfuls of halibut and put it on the stove in a spider. Cover with cold water. Let it come to a scald, but not to a boil. Then turn off the water and, covering again with cold water, scald again and then pour off the water. Take equal quantities of milk and water, enough to cover, thicken with flour wet in cold water, add two well beaten eggs and butter the size of an egg and serve at once.

IT MEANS DIVORCE FOR EDNA GOODRICH

Referee Decides In Favor of Wife of Actor Goodwin

New York, Feb. 14.—The referee in the divorce suit of Edna Goodrich, who is Mrs. Nat Goodwin, has decided in favor of Miss Goodrich.

Counsel Roth said: "After the filing of the referee's report I shall move for an absolute divorce."

Mr. Roth said that Miss Goodrich made no request for alimony. "Mr Goodwin, before his marriage, executed for Miss Goodrich a deed of gift of one-half interest in $1,600,000 worth of property—bonds and California real estate," added Roth. "On Mr. Goodwin's death all of this fortune goes to Miss Goodrich. So, you see, she is well provided for. She is now obtaining an income of approximately $50,000 a year from her half of the $1,600,000."

WANTS TO HELP HOBOES

Brown has concluded his investigation of sociological conditions that took him from his home, and he has derived the knowledge he sought.

The result of his countrywide investigation will be put in book form in the hope that municipalities will awaken to the "crying needs of shelter homes for the friendless and penniless." Brown says he will devote his life to the work of bettering the conditions of the hobo.

The "Open Door" to Opportunity

STUDENTS of industrial development tell us that in the eagerness to build up newer territories, the opportunities of older sections are frequently lost sight of. Whatever is at a distance seems to be imbued with greater attractiveness and value than that which is near at hand.

Thus as imagination pictured the unexplored deserts and mountains, the vast, uncultivated stretches of rich prairie, the unharnessed waterfalls, the unconquered kingdoms of virgin forest and undeveloped industries of the mighty, unknown West, there wakened again the old adventurous spirit of the Pilgrims. And out from many a town and farm poured for many a day the flower of New England's youth, while out from many a bank and counting room flowed a golden stream that seemed to have no end.

A half century rolled by, and the prospector and the settler had conquered Nature's vast western domain — the capital of older sections performed miracles of development. The South and West were rapidly becoming rich and well-settled communities — and the investor in his search for undeveloped possibilities came to realize that he had looked far afield and neglected the opportunities at his very doorstep, and with this realization a new day dawned for New England.

And now the tide has definitely turned, and is flowing back — back to New England and her undeveloped opportunities, back to the wealth of field and stream, of mountain and seashore, uncanvassed and uncounted, waiting lo these many years for their turn to set the giant wheels of commerce in motion, that they too might fulfil their destiny.

New England's greatest glories are not of the past, but in the future — a future yet but dimly realized, wherein every field and stream and forest and hill shall contribute its quota toward a mightier empire of organized agriculture, industry, and commerce, employing to the full the unlimited resources of New England capital, and the brains, skill, and energy of all her diversified population.

And Were Able to Divide the Honors of Evening

The Pirates and Red Sox met in a Makaria bowling league Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. alleys with the result that the points were divided, each team taking two. The Red Sox secured enough lead in the first string to win out on totals, although the Pirates won the second and third string. M. Nicoll was high man on single string with a pinfall of 196, and on totals with 502.

These two teams are at the head of the league and the rivalry was of the keenest kind in the match last night.

—"My wife has got more 'sand' than I have," remarked the man who lives on one of the farmers' telephone lines the other day. "You know there is a fine shade tree near my house. That tree is the pride of my wife's heart. I believe she thinks more of it than she does of me. I ordered a telephone put in recently and the linemen came to string the wires. The boss of the gang told my wife it would be necessary to cut off a limb of that tree in order to get the wires to the house. She asked him if the telephone couldn't be put in without doing that and he replied that it would be impossible. 'Very well,' she said, 'I won't have a twig of that tree touched.' We got the telephone, though, and that tree was not mutilated.—Brockton Enterprise.

A Story and a Half Bungalow.

Design 860, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

FLOOR PLAN.

This plan of a bungalow contains everything that the average family would desire in a complete and model home. All the rooms located on one floor. The piazza in front is of ample size and can be readily screened in. From this the entrance is into a small reception room, opening up with the living room, which is made unusually inviting by its large open fireplace. In case one desires the partition between the reception room and living room could be omitted, thus making this one large room. There are two bedrooms, and there is ample space in the second story so that two large rooms could be finished on this floor, if desired, and a stairway leading to the same between the dining room and bedroom. The size of this bungalow is twenty-eight feet wide and thirty-eight feet deep Birch floors and birch finish throughout. The height of the first story is nine feet in the clear The basement is twenty-five by twenty-eight feet and seven feet deep. These plans can be blue printed reverse without any extra expense. Cost to build, exclusive of plumbing and heating, $1,880.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish one complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 860 for $16.

The Highest Bidder

A Washington Birthday Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

The old house looked grim and cold in the chill light of the February day. The gray clouds lowered over its mossy roof, and the naked elms creaked dismally in the bitter wind. The small porch was on a line with the ancient fence and the land stretched away in the rear—gnarled old fruit trees, acres of wornout pasturage and a line of dark cedars against the horizon.

Austin Ely and his bride descended from the station stage that had brought them to the steps of their future home. Their trunks were dumped in the small porch, the box of supplies that Austin had prepared ere they left the city stood at the door, and the stage rolled away with the driver peering curiously back at them over his fur clothed shoulder.

Austin looked up and down the lonely road with its scattering of equally dismal houses and shivered. He bent down and gathered his wife into his strong young arms. "Dorothy, dear, what sort of a place is this to bring you to?" he demanded wrathfully. "A poor beggar like me ought never to marry. Well, you know, dear, it isn't fair to you to start out in this old rookery!"

Dorothy placed her gloved hand over his lips. "I won't hear a word against your Uncle Bob's legacy. Just think of owning and occupying the oldest house in the state! Why, tradition says George Washington slept here once when it was the best known tavern on the post road. Do get out that huge brass key and let us go in. It is bitterly cold out here!"

Austin brought out the key and thrust it in the lock. "If you had only let me come on ahead and open up the old place, Dorothy—have it partly furnished and a warm fire for you"—

"Tut, tut!" admonished Dorothy, crowding into the narrow hall in his wake. "You know very well I'm perfectly crazy over old houses, and I would never forgive you if you denied me the pleasure of rummaging out the old stuff in this place. Oh, isn't that the dearest old room, and see, Austin, the enormous fireplace!" She waltzed gayly across the uneven floor, her teeth chattering with the cold.

Her husband forced up the small paned windows and threw back the heavy wooden shutters, letting in the cold light of day. It was a long low room, the walls hung with an ancient striped paper. The furniture was very old, and its possession would have made a collector wild with joy. A pair of long settles, a large mahogany buffet, a great round table to match with the accompanying chairs, were placed on the wide polished boards now covered thickly with dust. The large fireplace contained brass andirons, and on the chimneypiece were brass candlesticks—a long row of them—a dozen in all.

"Let's have a fire at once," suggested Dorothy eagerly. "We can make this room our headquarters till we are settled."

"It will be fine and dandy when spring comes," said Austin dubiously, "but I don't know what you're going to do in the meantime, Dorothy. Here it is the 22d of February, and April is a long way off. Won't you be lonely?"

Dorothy smiled away his wistful glance. "Lonely where you are?" she said. "And, besides, think of all the chickens we're going to raise and of all the money you're going to make next summer with your eggs and your broilers!"

"If we only had $300," he sighed, "everything would come out all right."

"Come to the garret with me and see if we can't find another small table for the south window. I can sit there and sew while you're writing at the big secretary I think you're going to drag in here from the hall."

Together they mounted the steep stairs to the low attic, redolent of cedar shingles, where innumerable wasps crawled stickily to and fro.

"There are chests and chests and chests! Let me peep inside this old hair covered one, Austin; I'm sure it belonged to some eighteenth century belle. No, I'm not a bit cold. How could I be with these great warm chimneys jutting out into the garret? Ah!"

Dorothy's ecstatic cry was echoed by Austin's prolonged whistle of amazement at the beautiful garments divulged by the lifting of the lid of the hair trunk.

"Two white wigs—one for you and one for me!" she cried delightedly, tossing one to him and placing the other, a towering erection of puffs and curls, over her own sleek hair.

Austin crammed on his wig just in time to see his wife's rosy face beaming at him from under the whiteness of the other. Simultaneously they bent in stately greeting.

"Good morrow, Mistress Washington," said Austin mischievously.

"Ah, Mr. Washington!" Dorothy dipped a splendid courtesy and suddenly turned to the chest. "Oh, let us put on these perfectly gorgeous garments, Austin. We might as well enjoy ourselves until the man brings the coal."

Dorothy slipped into a blue brocade, admired the towering mass of white curls above her forehead and waited while Austin arrayed himself in the same manner. "We are frightfully foolish, I know," she said, rather wearily, "but I simply must do something interesting or I shall be horribly homesick tonight."

"Then let us go down and eat our supper in these things," suggested Austin hastily. "Don't be homesick, Dorothy; please don't, or I shall be tempted to weep on your shoulder and throw up the chicken business altogether."

Dorothy paused before him, looking very lovely in her ancient garb, her sweet eyes serious and thoughtful "Austin Ely, tell me truthfully, did you want to go into the chicken business or are you merely doing it to provide a home for me?"

Austin walked over and kissed her face. "I'll confess to a weakness for the city," he admitted sheepishly. "I wasn't cut out for a farmer, Dorothy, although I do love to be with you all day long here in the country. There is something about the life and bustle of the city that calls me. I wish we might keep this for a country home and live as we always have done, in town during the winter."

"Some day we will," encouraged Dorothy, with her sweet smile. "Let us go downstairs."

All at once the great knocker on the front door was lifted three times and a resounding racket echoed through the sparsely furnished house.

"Who can that be?" gasped Dorothy as she drew near her husband.

"Some neighbor," he assured her as he led the way down to the lower floor. While Dorothy lighted the bayberry candles and set the table for supper Austin went to the door and flung it open.

There at the curb throbbed and pulsated a monster touring car. In it were three shadowy forms, while a fourth stood on the doorstep.

"Ho—the inn!" called the man on the doorstep lustily. "Let us in, good people, and show us what you can do by way of entertainment."

"This is not an inn," said Austin brusquely. "You will find a very good one at the end of this street."

"Nay, 'tis not so," corrected the other. "Many's the time I have sate here in the bar of the Blue Boar and sipped my glass o' toddy. Come in, boys; landlord says all are welcome and that he will broil chickens for us. Make haste, my man."

Austin planted his feet firmly in the doorway. "It's a cold night and you are welcome to come in and have a bite to eat, but there won't be anything to drink unless I can find some applejack."

The four entered with noisy hilarity, and it was plain to be seen that they were all in a state of semi-intoxication. They were well dressed men, and their faces were not unpleasing, though more than one of them showed signs of dissipation.

With the impression that the sooner he served these unwelcome guests the earlier he would be rid of their doubtful companionship, Austin beckoned Dorothy into the kitchen and together they concocted a tray full of refreshments that were mostly got from the provision box. A large piece of cheese, a large loaf of Vienna bread, butter, cold boiled ham and a pitcher of applejack completed a repast that brought forth a cheer from the group gathered before the dining room fire.

Suddenly they looked at Austin in his festal garments of drab velvet and cherry satin, with gray silk hose and buckled shoes, and at Dorothy peeping around the door gorgeous in blue brocade. With one accord they arose and touched their glasses.

"It's George Washington and Mistress Martha," gasped the spokesman. "Your healths and long—long—er, you know!"

With bulging eyes the four drank the toast, while Austin and Dorothy laughed until they cried. At last they returned to the dining room, where a curious sight met their gaze.

Standing in the middle of the round mahogany table, the spokesman of the party was calling for bids for its purchase. "As pretty a—bit—of colonial furniture—as ever your eyes lighted on—gentlemen. Who will start the bidding on this table, the property of the immortal George—you, Freddy? What am I offered for this table?"

"One dollar," said Freddy feebly.

"Pooh! Who will give me more to cover this insult? Cecil, you bloated bondholder, beat it up!"

Cecil solemnly entered his bid of a hundred dollars, and as if they had been waiting for this amount, the four proceeded to raise the value of the mahogany table by hundreds until it was knocked down to the languid Freddy for $1,000. From a plethoric roll he peeled off the amount and tossed it to the table, and then, forgetting the incident, he led a solemn procession from the house and into the waiting automobile.

Dorothy and her husband stared at each other across the mahogany table. "Oh, Austin—what does it mean? Were they drunk?" she asked.

"As lords," said Austin feelingly. "Tomorrow morning they will awake without the slightest recollection of what they have done tonight. I've got my work cut out for me to try to trace up that Freddy chap and give him back his money or the table. If I can't find him, why—I reckon we needn't start that chicken business till April, eh, Dorothy?"

"Don't call me Dorothy," said that young woman airily as she spread wide her brocaded skirts. "For the rest of this curious night I am Mistress Martha Washington, and you are George himself—but, oh, Austin, I do hope you won't find that highest bidder."

"I'm not likely to," said Austin, trying to look unhappy, and it is on record that they didn't start the chicken business until April was well on her way.

Town Improvement In Panama.

A dispatch from Panama seems to mean that we are to have at least two cases of comprehensive town planning on this side of the Atlantic. It reads: "The president of Panama, as an incident to a contract just made with the United States regarding payment for municipal improvements in Colon and Panama, has issued a decree making it unlawful to erect any building or structure in either city before the municipal authorities have completely laid out and mapped the section and paved the streets."

Are our cities to learn lessons from little Panama?

Quincy Favored in Report of Metropolitan Commission

The metropolitan park commission sent to the house on Tuesday two reports on special investigations made by it at the direction of the last legislature.

With respect to the completion of the construction of the metropolitan boulevard in Quincy between the present northerly terminus of the Furnace Brook parkway and the present southerly terminus of the Quincy shore reservation, the commission reports that the cost of completing the work will be approximately $315,000.

Relative to the necessity for the work the board says, "The board is of the opinion that, while they would welcome the authority and appropriation necessary to complete the parkway for the entire distance, there is but slight present necessity for constructing the portion between Adams street and Hancock street, but very great necessity for immediate acquisition of land and completion of construction from Hancock street to Quincy shore reservation. The cost of land and construction for the portion from Hancock street to Quincy shore reservation, together with an allowance for contingencies is $240,000."

THIRTY TO THREE AGAINST MAYOR

On His Petition to Legislature to Abolish Party Designations

Hearing at State House Today Largely Attended

Quincy was largely represented at the State House this morning before the Committee on Election Laws, when a hearing was given on the petition of Mayor Shea for the elimination of party designations at Municipal caucuses and elections, and providing a new way of nominating candidates.

Mayor Shea appeared personally in favor of his bill, and conducted his case. When a vote was taken to get the sentiments of those present on the bill, but two others stood in favor, while about 30 rose in opposition. The hearing lasted from 10.45 to 12 M.

WHAT WE NEED TODAY IN QUINCY IS FIRST OF ALL THAT "GET-TOGETHER-SPIRIT."

Among those present were Mayor Shea, Representative Langelier, Representative Thomas, ex-Senator E. H. Sprague, Councilmen E. J. Sandberg, William J. Leslie, C. A. Ericson and John R. Richards, ex-Councilmen Walter F. Nichols, Walter E. Piper, Ralph W. Hobbs and William M. Chase, T. L. Williams, G. B. Bates, A. L. Whitman, Arthur W. Rohn, John Evans, Jacob Peterson, A. L. Remick, Frank F. Prescott, D. C. Little and others.

Mayor Shea in opening said he had presented the petition in the interests of Quincy. He believed it best that city affairs should not be administered on party lines. That men should not be elected simply because they were Republicans or Democrats. Some able men had been defeated because they were Democrats. Quincy should have a business administration. Party workers should not be rewarded. Mayor Shea asked that the act be submitted to the voters, saying he was willing to abide by their decision.

It was a simple question which the Quincy voters were competent to pass upon. He was convinced that the people did not want party designations. It would relieve their embarrassment when they wanted to bolt.

In reply to the chairman, Mayor Shea the bill was drawn by the City Solicitor.

Mayor Shea said he did not know whether he had any supporters present or not. He called John Evans.

Mr. Evans spoke in favor. He said he was a staunch Republican in National affairs, but in city affairs favored the best man. He told of his recent campaign for the Council, where he was almost elected in a Democratic ward.

No one else appeared in favor of the bill.

JOIN THE QUINCY BOARD OF TRADE YOUR MEMBERSHIP COUNTS FOR BIGGER QUINCY REMONSTRANTS.

Represetnative Langelier the president of the Republican City Committee opened for the remonstrants. He told the committee they had before them two living examples in Mayor Shea and Mr. Evans why act was not necessary. Mr. Shea had been elected four successive years in a city nominally Republican by 900, and Mr. Evans a Republican had almost won in a strong Democratic ward. He claimed the voters should know the politics of candidates. He said there was no clamor for this bill. He hoped the committee would report leave to withdraw.

Ex-Mayor Bryant in opposition, failed to see why Mayor Shea should ask for this act. It was special legislation and not desirable. He reviewed his own campaigns for the mayoralty and showed that voters were not bound by party designations or politics.

Representative Thomas opposed the act.

Ex-President Hobbs of the City Council said he would not oppose a general bill applicable to all cities, but disapproved for Quincy alone. During the three years he was president of the City Council, the Republican Council had got along very harmoniously with a Democratic Mayor. He recalled only one bill Mayor Shea had vetoed. He said when first elected some had doubts as to his stand on legislation, but he told an interviewer that he would do nothing to tie the Mayor's hands. He did not believe now that the Mayor was very anxious to secure the passage of the bill, but more to get political capital for next fall.

GREATER BOSTON MOVEMENT FAVORED

Quincy Merchants' Association Pass Resolutions

Many Important Matters Discussed at Monthly Meeting

The Quincy Merchants' Association met in Thompson's restaurant Tuesday evening for the discussion of matters of great importance to the merchants as well as to the city as a whole. Mayor Shea was present at the invitation of the association.

The first important topic of discussion was the sealer of weights and measures. From the plain talk that was handed out at the meeting, the Mayor was made to realize that the work of this official has been very unsatisfactory up to the present time.

After some further discussion it was voted to appoint to confer with the Mayor and City Solicitor relative to revising the ordinance. The committee are: C. C. Hearn, R. E. Foy, Joseph P. Prout, W. G. Crowell and Gerald A. Sullivan.

The matter of the Real Boston movement was discussed at length. Members were urged to attend the public meeting of the Civic league in Colonial hall on the evening of Feb. 28, to listen to some of the most able speakers in the State who are to be present and talk on this Movement. The following resolutions were then passed:

WHEREAS, the importance and immense resources of the great community located around the inner harbor of Massachusetts Bay is greatly underestimated by the world because the census and statistical figures of "Real Boston" are not collected and published as a whole and

WHEREAS, forty cities and towns comprising the Metropolitan district having many interests in common and many problems affecting all of them which can only be solved by harmonious and co-operative action, and,

WHEREAS, there is now little co-operation among them and they are continually working at cross purposes resulting in confusion and economic laws

THEREFORE, be it resolved that we The Merchants' Association of Quincy heartily endorse the "Real Boston" movement to bring about some form of co-operation among the forty cities and towns in the Metropolitan District which will secure the desired census recognition and will enable the municipalities to co-operate in matters of common importance and at the same time will not deprive any of them of their political interference or interfere with their control over local matters.

A committee was appointed to confer with the Board of Trade with reference to considering a merger of the two bodies. It was voted to hold a Merchants' Week this year similar to that held last year and a committee was appointed to consider the matter and report at a later meeting.

The matter of peddlers was also discussed, that is non residents who come to Quincy and peddle from house to house. The meeting voted to send a communication to the Mayor stating their position on the question.

It was also voted to have a large sign board erected at Atlantic reading, "Work, Live and Trade in Quincy."

It was voted to take part in the greater Boston meeting to be held Feb. 28.

The committee on street lighting made a partial report and were given further time.

C. C. Hearn and Henry L. Kincaide were added to the board of directors.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

GOV. NOT TO HELP.

A measure introduced by Norfolk County representatives will be killed by the Senate. The army engineers have not given the stamp of approval to the plan of having the government pay half the expenses of putting a new bridge over the Weymouth Back river. Inasmuch as the stream is navigable it is subject to the regulations made by the government and the engineers affirm that they see no reason why the government should pay half or any part of the cost of construction.

SPECIAL MEETING.

Mayor Shea has called a special meeting of the City Council for this evening. The one matter stated in the call is to draw jurors. The venire for drawing of jurors was not received until Tuesday morning and the jurors should have been drawn that evening. It was too late however to call a special meeting of the council and there was some question as to what should be done. The question was put up to the City Solicitor who advised that a meeting be called for this evening which was the earliest possible time that a meeting could be called.

UNUSUAL CASE.

A lawsuit of nearly three years standing will be decided today in Dedham. On June 27, 1908, John F. Kelliher of Hyde Park was standing on the platform of the Quincy station when an express train came thundering by hitting a loaded baggage truck. A piece of express matter struck Kelliher and inflicted an injury. The baggage agent claims that the local was expected, and thus the truck was placed in position. The local was held at Braintree to let the express go by and the accident was unavoidable. Kelliher claims that the accident was due to carelessness on the part of the agent.

BIG GRANITE SHIPMENTS

About Seven Thousand Tons During Month of January

Returns from the two railroad shipping terminals for the month of January show that the amount of rough and finished granite forwarded from Quincy that month by rail totaled 14,094,860 pounds, which was slightly less than the amount forwarded during the month of December Of the total amount, 7,793,090 pounds were forwarded from West Quincy and 6,304,770 pounds from Quincy Adams.

QUINCY CUTTERS

wage. This however was settled at Tuesday nights conference when the cutters committee made a proposition that the minimum wage in Quincy for the next five years should be $3.25 per day. This proposition was immediately accepted by the manufacturers committee.

The minimum wage question has been the one stumbling block from the first. In the original draft of changes desired the cutters asked for a minimum wage of $3.36 per day. This was an increase of 36 cents from the wage now paid.

Then the manufacturers made an offer of $3.20 per day for the first three years and $3.25 per day for the next two years. This the cutters would not accept.

The second offer by the cutters was for $3.25 for the first three years and $3.28 for the next two years. This also was turned down by the manufacturers. The third offer was for a wage of $3.25 for the first four years and $3.28 for one year. This also was turned down.

Tuesday evening the cutters made their fourth proposition which was a flat wage of $3.25 for five years which was accepted.

As soon as this was over the two committees took up the consideration of the clause which asks that cutters at work on any particular granite shall be paid the same minumum as is paid in the granite centre from which the granite comes. This clause was under discussion when an adjournment for the evening was made.

There is to be another joint meeting next Monday evening and it is probable that this question will be settled at that meeting.

In the matter of the half holiday on Saturdays throughout the year over which there has also been more or less discussion and over which it was thought there might be some difficulty in settling has also been settled. This clause in the agreement now reads as follows:

"Eight hours shall constitute a days work excepting on Saturdays when work shall cease at 12 o'clock noon with the further exception that during the months of March, April and May during the years 1911 and 1912 eight hours shall constitute a days work on Saturdays."

The three months mentioned in the above clause are those during the busy season with the manufacturers as they are rushing to get off Memorial Day orders. As for Saturdays during the remainder of the year the manufacturers might as well close at 12 o'clock on Saturdays for when the yards remained opened for the afternoon there were many cutters who did not work as they desired to attend some of the various amusements that usually take place on Saturday afternoons during the year.

There has been some question as to whether the cutters committee had full power to settle on an agreement or whether after the conference their doings would have to be ratified by the unions. The Daily Ledger is informed on good authority however that this year the cutters committee is empowered with full powers to settle. This being the case it now looks as though next Monday evening would see all of the items cleaned up and the agreement for the next five years ready to be signed.

Regulars In House Routed by Reciprocity Agreement

PASSED BY 129 MAJORITY

Bitter Debate Followed by Cloture Rule Which Shuts Off All Amendments—But Five Democratic Votes Recorded Against McCall Measure, While Eighty-Seven Republicans Express Their Disapproval

Washington, Feb. 15.—President Taft's reciprocity agreement with Canada was ratified in the house of representatives last night through the support of an almost solid Democratic vote.

The McCall bill, carrying the agreement into effect, was passed, 221 to 92. A majority of the Republicans present voted against the measure, the division being 78 ayes and 87 noes. The Democratic vote was 143 ayes and 5 noes.

A majority of the Republican insurgents present voted for the bill, which now goes to the senate. What its fate will be in that body is problematical at this time.

President Taft believes that if a filibuster can be avoided and a vote taken, the bill will pass.

He is insistent that the senate shall act one way or the other and has indicated that he would call an extra session of congress if it does not do so.

The passage of the bill in the house came at the end of a long debate which at times was as bitter as has been heard on the floor of that chamber in years. The fight was confined almost wholly to the Republicans. Democratic members joined in from time to time and taunted the majority members for their lack of unity.

A final vote was reached only through the application of a cloture rule which shut off all amendments and even dispensed with the reading of the bill. This procedure was decided upon only after Mr. McCall, in charge of the bill, had failed to get unanimous consent to do away with calendar Wednesday today. If that had been secured he said he would have been glad to let the debate continue for another legislative day.

The Republicans oposed to the bill fought the rule to the very last, denouncing it in caustic language. They directed their fire especially against the Democrats.

Under the cloture rule, which was adopted by a vote of 198 to 107, the only loophole left to the opponents of the measure was a motion to recommit the bill to the committee of the whole house with instructions to report certain amendments. When the time came to do this half a dozen members were clamoring for recognition.

Mr. Dalzell was recognized by Speaker Cannon. He proposed that meat and meat products, flour, prepared cereals, lumber and several other articles be put on the free list. The Democrats were not shaken by this and the motion was lost, 114 to 191.

It has been apparent for several days that the reciprocity measure would have on overwhelming majority in the house. This seemel to make its opponents all the more bitter. The feeling displayed in the house was so intense at times that it surprised the members on both sides of the house.

Some of the old guard Republican leaders veiled but very thinly their prediction that the Republican party would be defeated by reason of what they characterized a departure from the principle of protection and the espousal of free trade.

Doctors to Ascertain Reason For Rosendale's Drink Immunity

Philadelphia, Feb. 15.—Jules Rosendale of this city, a translator, and father of Margaret Dale, the actress, died yesterday, aged 76 years.

Mr. Rosendale in his will directed that his body be cremated and that his brain and stomach be given to the University of Pennsylvania to discover the reason for his immunity from the usual effects of intoxicating drink.

It is stated by physicians that Rosendale could consume almost unlimited quantities of alcoholic liquor without any effect whatever upon his brain or nervous system.

Chicago, Feb. 15.—Withdrawal of cold storage eggs from the open market followed the announcement of a further decline of 2 cents a dozen in the price of the fresh product.

The receipts yesterday were 10,062 cases, the largest of the year to date.

UNDER ARREST AS BLACK HAND WRITER

Stamford Youth to Be Examined as to His Sanity

Stamford, Conn., Feb. 15.—Hugh Ennis, 21 years of age, son of John Ennis, the noted pedestrian, is under arrest in this city, charged with having attempted blackmail. It is alleged that he had sent letters to a number of persons demanding money.

Among those to whom letters were sent was President Mellen of the New Haven road. The letter demanded that the sum of $5000 be placed at a designated spot at the Elm street bridge in this city under penalty of having the freight house and other buildings of the railroad company here blown up.

Suspicion was directed to Ennis and similarity between his handwriting and that of the letter led to his arrest. Following the arrest he is said to have confessed to sending the letters. He will be examined as to his sanity.

NAVARRO REACHES JAUREZ

Federal Forces Met No Rebels During Their Twelve-Day Trip

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 15.—Amid the wildest cheering, General Navarro, at the head of 1000 federal troops from Chihuahua, entered Juarez last evening.

The entire trip, consuming twelve days, was made by train without the firing of a shot or sighting the revolutionists. Navarro was compelled to repair twenty-five bridges and culverts which had been blown up by the insurrectos.

The arrival marks the end of the Juarez campaign. Orozco and the other rebel chiefs are scattered east and south of here.

SNEEZE AND COUGH MEET

New Jersey Woman Narrowly Escapes Death by Strangling

Morristown, N. J., Feb. 15.—A combination of a sneeze and a cough nearly cost Miss Lena Sigfried her life. While peppering soup some of the seasoning entered her nostrils and caused her to sneeze and at the same time she coughed. The combination of the two caused the woman to strangle.

Dr. Willis, who was called, found that an operation was necessary to save the woman's life. She was taken to All Soul's hospital, New York specialists were hurried here and the operation was performed.

WATER NOT WASTED

Needed to Flush Town Brook and the Sewers

Editor of the Daily Ledger:

I notice in Daily Ledger of February 11, that you ask the citizens to pass judgment upon a contract, connecting the water of Braintree Reservoir with the Fore River Works of this City, a thirty year lease being given to above named works under certain restrictions. The authority to take land by eminent domain, for the purpose of creating water supply, for a city or town, comes from the sovereign authority.

It would seem to me the same authority would have to be obtained, before leasing for a term of years to any one person or corporation with a proviso, allowing them to sell water to other parties not named in the contract.

If the Mayor or Commissioner of Public Works of any city has the right to make such a contract for thirty years, that right should be taken from him, for the reason that if he has the right for thirty years, why not for sixty or ninety years? Is there any limit under the law?

In 1871, there were five fatal cases of small-pox in our town, which was the year Dr. Gordon was appointed town physician. Later there were many cases of diphtheria. The Board of Health at that time believed the source of the trouble to be the sluggishness of the town brooks, and a petition was presented to the Legislature for authority to put the town brooks into the hands of the Board of Health, and that law was passed.

The next year it was amended, by giving the Board of Health authority to take lands by eminent domain, to widen and straighten the brooks.

The work of the Board of Health has resulted in flushing the brooks and making the deposit in the old canal which stays it for the reason that it meets the tides coming in. I believe we want the entire water shed, and also all of the water contained in the Reservoir for the purpose of flushing the brooks, from the ice houses of Mr. Patch to the canal.

The water shed along the brooks is not sufficient without the supply from the Reservoir. Quincy Adams has a large area of land which may in the future have large manufacturing interests, and require the water as citizens of Quincy.

The stone industry might be willing to raise the sum of $1000 per year for the use of the water from the Reservoir. Cannot the city use a large part of the water to flush its sewers, instead of purchasing from the Metropolitan Works? For nearly a year the water in the Reservoir has been so low that there is only a slight current in the brooks, which shows we need all the water there, and I am told that there are many cesspools emptying directly into the brooks.

QUINCY YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB.

The meeting of the Young Women's club Saturday evening, was one of the most interesting and best attended of the season. There were two speakers on Woman Suffrage, Mrs. Gay of West Newton and Miss Kate Ryan, editor of the Woman's Journal.

Mrs. Gay spoke of different classes of woman and how the ballot would benefit them. She said that women are taking an advanced position, but although they are serving the state in educational, sociological, and humanitarian lines, they cannot vote. Miss Ryan explained some of the legislation in which women are interested. She told how the women of Massachusetts worked for over fifty years for a law giving a woman equal rights with her husband in the guardianship of their children—a law which the women of Colorado, who can vote, obtained in less than a year. In closing Miss Ryan propounded several questions, the answers to which vary in different states:—Does a wife own her own clothes? Is a wife entitled to wages which she earns outside her home? Has a woman equal rights with her husband in the guardianship of her children?

A debate on the question of Woman Suffrage, participated in by several members of the club, will be the feature of the next meeting on Saturday evening, Feb. 25.

QUINCY WOMEN'S CLUB.

Bad weather and illness prevented the usual large attendance at the meeting of the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday afternoon. The president Mrs. Herbert J. Gurney was in the chair and opened the business session at half past two. Reports were given by the secretaries and treasurer followed by reports of chairmen of committees as follows:

Art and Literature, Mrs. E. B. Marsh—a gentlemen's night to be held at the clubhouse Monday evening Feb. 20, complimentary to members who were also privileged to invite one guest, (gentlemen preferred.) For entertainment there would be an interpretative reading of Hamlet by Prof. Charles Bickford and songs by Miss Breyer of Boston accompanied by Mrs. Mary Chandler West of Wollaston.

Arts and Grafts by Mrs. George G. Saville—another lecture in the series would be held at the clubhouse on Tuesday afternoon when Miss Lucy Wright would tell of the work of the blind. She would bring four blind men with her who would give a musical program at quarter of four after which Miss Wright would give her talk. There will be an exhibit of work by the blind. This would be an especially interesting afternoon and those not holding season tickets for the course may subscribe for this lecture at the door.

Civic, Mrs. William G. Shaw, exhibited a picture of the children and playground back of the Y. M. C. A. building. The picture had been presented by Mr. D. King, framed by Mr. Shaw and was to hang in the Civic committee room of the clubhouse.

As both Mrs. Sheppard and Mrs. Smith, delegates to the Federation meeting were out of town no report of the meeting was given.

Mrs. Park who attended the convention in New York held by the Child Birthright committee gave an interesting account of the exhibit and work.

An amendment to the by-laws was proposed by Miss Prescott and will be acted on at the next meeting. The amendment is to enlarge the club which now is limited to 350. As there are over a hundred names on the waiting list and under existing bylaws no probability of many of them getting in for two or three years it may be wise to enlarge. The idea seems feasible as it has been decided to hold all the large meetings ouside the clubhouse. The clubhouse can be used as a centre for committee work, for open meetings and the smaller meetings of the year. It is a question whether a woman's club in a city as large as Quincy should be limited to to such a small number as 350 when there are women who are anxious to be identified with the good work which the club is doing.

The entertainer for the afternoon was Madame Mary Hallock of Philadelphia and she was introduced by Mrs. Robert E. Park, chairman of the Program committee. "What is Good Music ad What is Bad Music" proved amusical treat as told by Madame Hallock, her musical interpretations were a delight. She lascinated her listeners who were enthusiastic in their applause. Her closing piano selections were played with such artistic skill and feeling that it seemed as though club members could not get enough and she responded twice to encores. It was one of the most thoroughly artistic and delightful programs of the club season.

During the social hour the hostesses for the afternoon Mrs. R. Hobbs and Mrs. Russell C. Low served tea and crackers the pourers being Mrs. G.B. Bates, Mrs. Herbert S. Barker and Mrs. Charles M. Bryant.

ART COMMITTEE CONFERENCE

A conference of the art committee of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs of south-eastern Massachusetts, was held Saturday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Flora T. Little at Bridgewater. Invitations were extended to 27 clubs to send the chairman of the art committee to the conference to meet with the federation committee. The programme was: Paper, "Cultivation of Taste" by Mrs. William Gallagher of Braintree; "Industrial Art," Mrs. Hattie C. Jeffers; 'Arts and Crafts," Miss Jessie Wilkinson; "Domestic Art," by Mrs. L. M. Churbuck of Brockton; "Art in Schools," by Mrs. F. P. Little; reports on the art work in the clubs. Discussions followed each paper and a general discussion at the end. Mrs. Annie L. Cox, chairman of the committee, presided.

CONSERVATION CONFERENCE.

By courtesy of the New England Women's club a conference upon conservation will be held in the club rooms, New Chauncey Hall building, Copley square, Boston, Feb. 16, at 2 o'clock. Forestry committees, club presidents and all members interested in the subject are cordially invited to attend and take part in the discussion. The suggested topics for questions are 1—Waste and its prevention—Waste of mineral fuels; waste of soil and fertilizers; waste and pollution of waters; waste of wood.

2—Local problems—The woodland in your town; its productivity and its possible improvement. Reservoir sites and municipal forests. Forest fires, their prevention and control. Shade trees; planting and care; pruning; insect pests and disease; shade tree laws; forest and tree wardens; tree study for children; Arbor day, a better observance; children's gardens; bird study; practical bird work; agriculture and orcharding; water supply, water power, water transportation in your locality; water famine; club study; field observation and study.

DAUGHTERS OF REVOLUTION.

Mrs. Adeline Frances Fitz, president general, and Mrs. Cara Rogers Bleakley, chairman of the Annapolis memorial, are in Washington, to be presented to President Taft by Congressman Weeks for the purpose of extending an invitation to him to be present at the dedication of the sailors' memorial tablet at Annapolis and to deliver an address on that occasion.

The annual meeting of the general society will be held in Baltimore, May 9 and 10, and will include with the usual business sessions a reception tendered officers and delegates by the Maryland State Society of the Daughters of the Revolution, which is to be the hostess society. There will be the usual social features, reception, a local historical pilgrimage and banquet. Probably the reception will be held on the afternoon preceding the convention dates.

On Thursday, May 11, the party will go to Annapolis for the purpose of dedicating the tablet in memory of sailors of the Revolution to be placed in the Memorial hall of the Bancroft building, in which the body of John Paul Jones now rests in a casket covered by the American flag. President Taft has already signified his intention to be present at the dedication, and the navalofficers of the academy will join with the society in making the dedication a brilliant event. One day, probably May 12, will be devoted to a trip to Washington and Mt. Vernon.

Delegates to attend from Adams Chapter will be selected at their annual meeting in March.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CLUB.

At the monthly meeting of the Wollaston Unitarian club Tuesday evening Rev. R. Perry Bush, D. D., of Chelsea delivered an address upon "Panama and the canal."

In opening Dr. Bush spoke of the early history of the isthmus and told interesting stories of the buccaneers chief among whom was Henry Morgan. The previous attempts to build a canal were related, Dr. Bush stating that disease and theft were the chief causes for failure.

In 1849 the first railroad was built across the isthmus by New York capitalists at a cost of 8 millions of dollars. Before it was fully completed 2 million dolars had been taken in and in the first 43 years of its operation had yielded a profit of 38 millions. Rather a good investment said the speaker.

In 1903 the way was felt for American possession and although the French wanted 90 it was sold for 40 million dollars. For 10 million a strip 10 miles in width was purchased across the isthmus.

Of the board of 5 engineers from abroad and 8 from our country the vote stood 8 to 5 in favor of a sea level over a lock canal, the foreigners and 3 of our own men being in favor of the former.

When the Isthmus commission was appointed they were 5 to 1 in favor of a lock canal. A sea level canal absolutely cannot be built, said Dr. Bush, for several reasons.

First on account of the immense difference in the rise and fall of the tide in the Atlantic and Pacific. Next on account of the soft marsh and the impossibility of controlling the river there. Lastly on account of the vast amount of solid rock it would be necessary to cut away.

The direct route is taken in preference to the Nicaragua route on account of the treacherousness of Lake Nicaragua and the tendency of the latter region for earthquakes.

Dr. Bush gave a humorous description of the fauna and flora of the country his tales of the various reptiles being most amusing.

The rainfall in the region totalled 40 inches in October and 52 inches in November against a 30 inch rainfall for the entire year. It rains down there said the speaker, and the only difference between the wet and dry seasons is that during the wet season it rains all the time while in the dry season it rains part of the time. In one year there is a total rain fall of 12 feet.

Several stories were told showing up the size and characteristics of the inhabitants and the speaker told of the excellent sanitary conditions that had been put in force.

The grand work of the improvement of the sanitary conditions, said Dr. Bush, is as great a marvel as the engineering work of the canal.

The speaker concluded his address by taking those present along the canal starting at the harbor of Colon on the Atlantic, past the Gatun dam and locks through the Calebra cut through the locks at Pedro Michel and out to the Balboa breakwater on the Pacific side.

Dr. Bush dwelt some time upon the immensity of the locks being built. These double locks, of which there are three, are 1,000 feet long, 110 feet wide and 80 feet high.

These have gates which are 45 feet wide, 82 feet in height and 7 feet thick of solid steel weighing 400 tons. The canal will take 2 years more to complete and when finished will take from 9 to 12 hours to traverse.

Aside from its being a paying institution it will cut 7,700 miles off the coast line and the United States will have the wondrous glory of wedding the Atlantic and Pacific.

The coastline will not then need two fleets as our navy could cross from one coast to the other in ample time to intercept any hostile visit.

Again the entire western coast of South America will be thrown open to trade and the products coming down our Mississippi river will find their natural market on that side.

Shall we fortify the canal There is no doubt about it. While I pray for peace and work for peace I do not expect to see it while I live.

We have put 175 millions into the canal and should guard against its wanton destruction by the jealous South American republics who with a small amount of the powerful explosives of the present day could destroy the work it has taken so long to do.

I have no personal fear of a war with Japan but what of the millions in China that are being drilled by German generals. I am no alarmist or pessimist but we must look the future squarely in the face. We must be prepared to fight if we should preserve peace and we must fortify the canal.

It is a glory that Americans achieve this work. It is there a highway for all our friends, our friends the peoples of all the world. It is there as a strategic thing, to boom the trade of the United States and will go down in the annals of time as the greatest achievement the world has ever known.

In the days to come when we have learned that "war is hell" and live without it then we may dismantle our forts and let it be the highway of peace and good will it ought to be.

Applause loud and long greeted the conclusion of the speaker so much in fact that he turned to President Brigham and remarked "Well Charlie, I guess they enjoyed it."

WHIST AND DANCING

Unusually Pretty Party at St. John's Hall

The new hall in the St. John's school building presented a pretty scene Tuesday evening at the whist and dance held by the district one committee in aid of the bazaar of St. John's church. There was a very large attendance of ladies and gentlemen and many handsome creations of the dressmakers' art were worn by the ladies. Dancing was in order in the main hall during which those who preferred whist were enjoying this diversion in one of the smaller rooms.

The hall was attractively decorated with palms and Japanese lanterns.

The guests of the evening were: Rev. John J. Coan, Rev. Neil Paul Brennan and Rev. P. J. Scannell, director of district one.

The dancing was in charge of E. D. Barrett, assisted by J. E. Lynch, W. T. Donovan, J. W. Walsh, D. J. Deasey, G. B. Powers, J. W. Lynch, Matthew Ott, Maurice Kerins, J. P. Reardon, James Grant, J, A. Keating, Henry McDonnell, Raymond Brown, E. J. Parker and Joseph Larkin. The dance orders were very pretty affairs, being dainty valentines on the back of which appeared the order of dances.

The room where the whist was held was in charge of Mrs. William T. Donovan and the following young ladies served punch and marked the whist scores: Miss Ethel Cook, Miss Emily Dinnegan, Miss Agnes Reardon, Miss Lillian McDonnell and Miss Stella Brown.

Prizes for the best scores at whist were awarded to Mrs. Joseph Evans, Richard Walsh, George Bliss and Timothy J. O'Connell.

The committee in charge of the evening were J. E. Lynch, J. A. Keating, James Grant, Mrs. W. T. Donovan, Mrs. J. E. Dunn and Miss Mary B. Keating.

SURPRISE PARTY.

Miss Sven Wester was surprised by about sixty of her young friends at her home, 503 South street, Tuesday night, and presented with a watch and a big valentine with all the names of the children attending the party. Miss Florence Tobin and Miss Amy Holmes of Broadway arranged the surprise. The evening was enjoyed playing games, and refreshments of ice cream, cake, candy, fruit and lemonade were served, after which all departed to their homes about 10 o'clock, a very happy crowd.

BRIEFS

Rev Edward A. Chase of Wollaston will be the speaker this evening at the banquet of the Men's club of the South Congregational church at South Braintree.

Commodore L. E. Crosscup of the Wollaston Yacht club hopes to arrange for a series of yacht races in Quincy bay during Aviation week, the last of August.

While not the coldest morning of the winter, this morning was among the coldest. At 5 o'clock the mercury was but 6 above zero, and at 8 o'clock it had only warmed up to 8 above zero. The lack of wind, however, did not made it seem as cold.

ENTERTAINED AT DINNER.

Members of the mixed vested choir St. Chrysostom's church with their wives were entertained at dinner in the parish rooms Tuesday evening by the Woman's Guild. Mrs. Charles J. Hennigar was chairman of the committee which perfected the arrangements. The decorations and dainty place cards were appropriate and in keeping with St. Valentine's day. The menu consisted of young roast pork, mashed potatoes, corn a la gratin, sweet pickles, salad, coffee and nut jelly with whipped cream, rolls and coffee.

The rector, Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, read a letter from the vestry showing their appreciation of the good work done by the choir and thanking them for their services. The Guild was given a vote of thanks by the choir for their kindness in entertaining them. Several impromtu songs were rendered and the evening's enjoyment ended by all joining in singing hymns.

IN RELIGIOUS FRENZY

Self-Imposed Punishment of Followers of Russian Priest

Tsaritsyn, Russia, Feb. 15.—The whole Greek Catholic parish here is suffering self-imposed deprivations in protest against the transfer to another parish of Priest Heliodorus, the reactionary leader.

Recently the holy synod announced the transference of the priest from Tsaritsyn to the diocese of Tula. The parishioners, with Heliodorus, took a solemn vow not to sleep, eat or drink until the order of the holy synod has been rescinded.

Thousands of persons are cooped up in the church, where a service with lighted candles continues uninterruptedly day and night. Many are on the point of starvation and the suffering of all is acute. Helidorus is bitterly anti-Semitic and patriotic to a degree that has been described as insanity.

NEW JOB FOR HAMMOND

He Will Represent United States at Coronation of King of England

Washington, Feb. 15.—The president has received from John H. Hammond his acceptance of the appointment as special ambassador to attend the coronation of George V.

Mr. Hammond has a long residence behind him in England and the British possessions in South Africa. For several years he lived in London, where he was interested in mining companies. Returning to the United States he was closely associated with the Guggenheims in their mining operations in the west. Hammond's home residence is at Gloucester, Mass.

SIXTY EXPLOSIONS CAUSE BAD SCARE

Gas Tanks Burst and Cause Considerable Damage

East Deerfield, Mass., Feb. 15.—Terrific explosions, which followed one another at intervals of two or three minutes and continuing for over an hour, resulted in the destruction of a gas generating plant located in the yards of the Boston and Maine railroad, the burning of four box cars and the wrecking of a caboose and incidentally gave the citizens of East Deerfield a bad scare.

Small metal gas tanks were blown through the air, some of them landing 600 feet or more from their starting point, exploding as they went. In all there were more than sixty explosions and at one time there were four of the tanks in the air at once.

The explosions originated in a small building used for charging tanks for locomotive headlights. The loss may reach $25,000.

COLD COSTS HIM $10,000

Singer Caruso Compelled to Miss Four Operatic Performances

New York, Feb. 15.—Enrico Caruso, the tenor of the Metropolitan opera house forces, is suffering from a cold which is a week old and as a result he has already foregone three performance at $2500 an appearance and must give up his announced appearance Thursday night.

Last Tuesday Caruso's cold developed. It was said a speck of Broadway dust lodged in his pharynx, causing an inflammation of the vocal cords. At the opera house it was said that the trouble was merely a slight cold, but that Caruso did not care to take any chances.

MONEY AND BEAUTY

Neither Is Looked For by an Eskimo In Selecting a Wife

Cleveland, Feb. 15.—Cleveland girls who have neither money nor beauty were advised to learn to sew and go to the Arctic regions and live among the Eskimos by Captain Bartlett in his address in this city.

Captain Bartlett explained that money was unknown in that part of the world and beauty was not expected in a woman. The Eskimo, however, demands that his wife be a good seamstress. A diploma from a cooking school would not be necessary, as the Eskimo generally eats walrus meat raw.

TIMBER IS IN BUT FEW HANDS

Formidable Progress of Concentration Is Dangerous

REPORT ON LUMBER INDUSTRY

Tenth of Private Lands Held by Three Combinations Which Are Preserving Forest Holdings Until Timber Is Exhausted Elsewhere—Southern Pacific Alone Owns 4,318,000 Acres—Result of Smith's Investigations

Washington, Feb. 15.—Concentration of the control of the standing timber in a very few hands, vast speculative holdings "far in advance of any use thereof," an enormous increase in the value of "this diminishing natural resource, with great profits to its owners" and incidentally "an equally sinister land monopoly" and a "closely connected railroad domination"—these are the findings reported to the president by Herbert K. Smith, commissioner of corporations, in the first instalment of his long awaited report on the lumber industry in the United States.

Commissioner Smith reports that a tenth of all the private lands are held by three combinations, which, he says, are preserving their timber until it is exhausted elsewhere, when they can get any price they ask, however extortionate. The greatest holder is the Southern Pacific, which owns 4,318,000 acres, or 6 percent of all private forests. All forest values, the report says, are tremendously increasing, some prices having already gone up fiftyfold.

The report, dated Feb. 13, was made public yesterday when the president sent it to congress. The report, which consists of a pamphlet of thirty-eight pages, is effectively summarized in the commissioner's letter of submittal. His conclusion, a forecast of the future, partakes of the sensational.

"There are many great combinations in other industries," says the commissioner, "whose formation is complete. In the lumber industry, on the other hand, the bureau finds now in the making a combination caused, fundamentally, by a long standing public policy. The concentration already existing is sufficiently impressive. Still more impressive are the possibilities for the future.

"In the last forty years concentration has so proceeded that 195 holders, many inter-related, have now practically one-half of the privately owned timber in the investigation area (which contains 80 percent of the whole).

"This formidable process of concentration, in timber and land, certainly involves grave future possibilities of impregnable monopolistic conditions, whose far-reaching consequences to society it is now difficult to anticipate fully or to overestimate."

The commissioner reserves for later report the subject of combinations in the manufacture or sale of lumber "as distinguished from ownership" of standing timber. In the letter summarizing the report the foremost facts shown are:

(1) The concentration of a dominating control of our standing timber in a comparatively few enormous holdings, steadily tending toward a central control of the lumber industry.

(2) Vast speculative purchase and holding of timber land far in advance of any use thereof.

(3) An enormous increase in the value of this diminishing natural resource, with great profits to its owners. This value, by the very nature of standing timber, the holder neither created nor substantially enhances.

LOVESICKNESS ALL RIGHT

But Day Will Not Stand For Tobacco at Syracuse University

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 15.—Chancellor Day lectured the male students of Syracuse university yesterday afternoon on the use of tobacco. He said the rule against students smoking on the campus would be strictly enforced. Among other things Day said:

"The use of tobacco by young men is physically harmful, and this is the verdict of the medical profession. I will stand for the little love sicknesses of the students, but smoking I will not stand for."

RESTORED TO OFFICE

Taunton's City Treasurer Given Chance to Defend Himself

Taunton, Mass., Feb. 15.—That City Treasurer Temple, who was removed from office by the city council last Tuesday, following the report of a special auditor that there was a seeming shortage of $5500 in his books, may have an opportunity to defend himself, the city council last night rescinded its order of removal. Temple is expected to resume his duties today.

Following the session of the council, Chairman Foster said that charges against Temple will be soon prepared along the line of the findings of James T. Swan, the special auditor who reported that there was an apparent discrepancy of $5500. On these charges a public hearing will be held, at which Temple will be given an opportunity to defend himself.

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 15.—Cupid paved the way to solve the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Miss Dorothy H. C. Arnold, who vanished so completely while on a shopping tour in New York.

George S. Griscom, Jr., the Pittsburg clubman, who has remained in seclusion in the Hotel Chalfonte since Saturday evening, yesterday afternoon received a letter from Miss Arnold.

The letter received by Griscom was enclosed in an envelope bearing the crest of one of the leading hotels in a principal city of the United States, which is more than 200 miles distant from Atlantic City.

WEDDING FOLLOWS A COURT DECISION

Miss Dever Becomes the Bride of Dr. Bullitt

Hingham, Mass., Feb. 15.—Dr. John C. Bullitt, the wealthy physician of Norwood, Pa., whom his relatives have been trying to have adjudged of unsound mind, was married last evening at the Hingham Episcopal church to Miss Edna Dever, the 19-year-old daughter of a former police lieutenant of Philadelphia.

The ceremony, celebrated on the day that the telegraph brought news from Philadelphia that the disgruntled members of the family had lost their legal fight to prevent the marriage, was performed by Rev. James F. Bullitt, one of the doctor's brothers, who staunchly supported him in his fight against the other members of the family.

The groom is seventeen years his bride's senior. All the preparations for the wedding have been ready for days, awaiting news as to the outcome of the sanity proceedings in Philadelphia.

A MILLION ALREADY LOST

Appalachian Forest Reserve Bill Comes Up In Senate For Vote Today

Washington, Feb. 15.—Victory for the Weeks Appalachian forest reserve bill is expected in the senate today when that body will vote upon it, in accordance with an agreement made last year.

The delay between sessions will cost the project $1,000,000, as the bill provided for an appropriation of $1,000,000 to be available for use in 1910 and $2,000,000 annually for five years thereafter. It would be only fair to amend the bill so as to save the lost million, but the friends of the measure have decided to let well enough alone and attempt no changes.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train and is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1234, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

For several years Valentine works excellently and rises to be assistant cashier. He and Rose love each other, but Valentine knows Doyle is on his track and dares not tell her of his affection for her. A mysterious Mr. Cronin turns out to be old Bill Avery, now reformed and a man of business.

Valentine receives a telegram from Doyle. He tells Red how he has planned to outwit the detective by means of a cleverly concocted alibi.

Rose Lane tells Valentine she loves him and that they are going to marry. Valentine reveals to her his love for her. Doyle appears on the scene to arrest Valentine on a charge of robbing a Massachusetts bank many years before.

"Cronin!" gasped Doyle. "So he's taken a new moniker, too, has he? And he came to negotiate a loan from Banker Jimmy Valentine! Well, if that isn't rich! I do wish Warden Handler could be here today to hear you pull off this little stunt. I always told him you were too good for the safe breaking game. You ought to be an actor or a United States senator. You're wasting your time in this business."

"I appreciate your compliments, but I really quite fail to understand you." Valentine spoke sharply. "Your attitude is trying my patience, Mr. Doyle. I am a very busy man, with large responsibilities, and as this conversation is entirely frivolous—frivolous, I say—I must regret to fully inform you that I must continue on my day's work." He nodded toward the tray of currency. "Believe me, I am perfectly willing to do what any citizen should do to help apprehend a criminal, but I must ask you"—

"Oh, h—l, Valentine, do you think I've lost my eyesight? You're Jimmy Valentine, and that was Bill Avery who called on you. I guessed he knew where you were and had him watched, and the first trip he made I followed him. Now, cut it out and declare yourself. Do you come, or do I get requisition papers and take you?" His manner became as threatening as his words.

"You will do neither, and you will desist from insinuating that I am a criminal or I will cause the watchman to eject you from the bank. Further, I do not know that you are a detective. Your actions are those of a blackmailer—or"—

A clerk entered.

"Did you ring, sir?"

"Yes. Kindly remove that currency," cried Valentine, eying Doyle. "So many suspicious characters about in these hard times that one must always be careful of strange visitors, particularly in a banking office."

The clerk cast an apprehensive glance at Doyle, whose face had turned red with rage, and, seizing the tray, hurried toward the vault room with it.

"Take it out, take it out," commanded Valentine, waving his hand. "I shall take no chances. Now, Mr. Doyle, either show credentials to prove what you are or I shall telephone the police."

Doyle, amazed at the effrontery and daring assurance of Jimmy Valentine, fell back against the wall, his legs threatening to give way beneath his heavy body.

"In the name of Dan the Dip," he exclaimed helplessly, "if the crooks were all as slick as you, Jimmy, the jails would all be empty. You don't dare do it."

Jimmy Valentine picked up the telephone and, getting the central of the bank's exchange, ordered in no uncertain tones:

"Get me police headquarters at once."

Doyle was further astounded by the readiness with which the baffling young man before him had accepted his challenge to call the police. Was it possible, after all, that he had been mistaken? No. It was Jimmy Valentine who stood before him, the same Jimmy that was wanted by the Massachusetts authorities for that old and almost forgotten "job" in the savings bank of Springfield, Mass.—$14,000 in currency taken on a Washington's birthday night and not a mark of an instrument or of an explosive on the safe when next morning the doors were found yawning open, the night watchman gagged and bound helplessly to the metal legs of a stationary washstand in the vice president's office.

"Here, cut that out!" he cried, lunging forward at Valentine, awaiting a response to his call. "Don't bring any of these locals in on a big job like this." He thrust back his coat and, opening his vest, revealed a shining shield fastened on one of his suspender straps. Valentine bent over and inspected it very deliberately and very closely. He turned to the telephone and instructed central to countermand his call—all a mistake. The two men seated themselves. Doyle, drawing a chair close to the assistant cashier's desk.

"Very well, sir. Now if you can see fit to refrain from your embarrassing questions and innuendoes I am sure we may arrive at something."

"Of course you know you will have to prove that you are not Jimmy Valentine."

"Pardon me, Mr. Doyle, if I set you right on a point of law," smiled Valentine. "You will have to prove that I am your friend, Jimmy Valentine."

"But you won't make me," laughing confidently.

"No. To expedite matters I will convince you that I am not."

"Please do, Jimmy."

"Very well. Tell me how I may prove it."

"Very simply. I said goodby to you in a hotel one afternoon in Albany three years ago. You were fresh from —Sing Sing prison."

"Am I to understand that I was in prison, a prisoner?"

"'Doing a bit,' yes."

"But I couldn't have been. I couldn't have been in two places at the same time."

"No, not easily, and as Sing Sing doesn't allow its boarders to go visiting I guess you were there. Now, think hard and try to remember," advised the detective.

"Mr. Doyle, there can be no chance of any deception in so open and shut a matter. If I was in prison I must be your man. If I was not"—

"You were in Sing Sing; committed on the 9th of February, 1906."

"February 9, 1906, I was in St. Paul, Minnesota, sir," returned Valentine positively.

"Well, the proof is finally up to you."

"But my word," injuredly.

"Oh, you are going to talk me out of it."

"But I can't get proof in an instant. Go up there and investigate."

"No; it's too far, and don't forget you were going to prove it."

Valentine now appeared to be disconcerted. Doyle watched him curiously. He did not underestimate the cleverness of the young man who had outwitted the veteran trackers of men for years and whose escapades extended over half a continent. But he was anxious for the next step in what he considered a colossal attempt at deception.

CHAPTER XV.

VALENTINE broke the silence. "But to prove so important a matter so suddenly—on a second's notice—why, no man on earth can— Wait. If I happen to have that scrap book here; I brought it down one day, and if"—he opened a drawer—"here it is. Of course there may be nothing here on the exact date you mention." The last doubtfully.

"What's this?"

"A scrap book. I suppose all people are the same about this little vanity," whimsically. "You doubtless cut out the first clippings about yourself you ever saw in print. There—no, that's 1907." Doyle came to him. Valentine shuffled the pages back. "Well, that's pretty close—that's in March, 1906. I made a speech that night. What was that date again?"

"Well, by"— began Doyle, completely nonplused.

"That was a pretty good speech," commented Valentine, pointing to another clipping—"second one I ever made. The first, what was that date—February what?"

"Ninth." Doyle rose impatiently.

"This is too good," put in Valentine. "Here, look here." He indicated the picture on the wall. "Who is that as big as life there? It's been staring us both in the face ever since you've been here."

Doyle went to the photograph. "That was on Feb. 9, 1906—why, yes, the photographer even dated it."

"Is this you?" Doyle pointed to one of the figures in the group.

"Well, look at it. If this Valentine was in prison that must be me. You said yourself that Sing Sing doesn't allow boarders to go visiting."

Doyle stepped back in front of Valentine's desk.

"You can alibi yourself into hell, Valentine, but you can't get away from that scar on your left wrist."

Doyle had reserved this telling shot for a critical moment.

"I never had a scar on my left wrist," the other returned jubilantly.

"Let's see," the detective snapped unbelievingly.

"But that proves nothing." Valentine drew back as he spoke. He appeared unwilling to permit Doyle to make an examination of his wrist.

VALENTINE SHUFFLED THE PAGES BACK.

"Let me see, I tell you. It's got to be shown sooner or later. Delay won't get you anything." Doyle was forcing the fighting now. He was certain that he had Valentine cornered.

The assistant cashier thrust his hands behind his back.

"Don't you realize," he said triumphantly, "that that is a very old fashioned method of identification? Don't you know that since the introduction of a horsehair in sewing wounds there is never a scar?" He smiled irritatingly at Doyle.

As a reply the detective bent swiftly across the desk, seized Valentine's arm and drew his left hand toward him.

"Could an old scar be opened and sewed with horsehair and disappear?" he asked dazedly as he saw the wrist was unmarked by any indication of a scar.

"I don't know; I presume so," indifferently.

Doyle was silent. This last denouement disconcerted him more than had anything else. An idea came to him. He lunged forward, clutching Valentine's right hand in his own, and jerked it across the desk. "Was it the left wrist that was scarred?" he cried.

He pushed back the cuff, but the surface of the right wrist was as smooth and as unbroken as the other.

"Anything else I can do for you?" asked the assistant cashier calmly as Doyle let go his hand.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

BAILEY STICKS TO LORIMER

Springs a Sensation In Resuming Argument In Senate

MAKES CHARGE OF FORGERY

Doubts Genuineness of Slip Evidencing Holstjan's Deposit In State Bank of Chicago, In Which Governor of Illinois Is Interested—Believes That Lorimer Will Be Returned to Senate Even If He Is Unseated

Washington, Feb. 15.—Senator Bailey resumed his argument in the senate in support of the report of the committee on privileges and elections, exonerating Senator Lorimer of Illinois from the charge of bribery in connection to his election to the senate.

He quickly entered upon sensational grounds by practically charging forgery against the Illinois State bank of Chicago, in which he said Governor Deneen is interested. The Texas senator returned to the consideration of his charge that the bank deposit slip evidencing State Senator Holstlaw's deposit in the State bank of Chicago had been a forgery. He referred to the fact that on Monday Senator Cummins had sought to introduce the original slip, which it was claimed had been made out by Chief Clerk Newton of the bank.

Mr. Cummins, Bailey said, had permitted him to take the paper, and added that his examination of it had only had the effect of confirming his theory that the slip had been a forgery. He was sure that the handwriting shown in Newton's signature was not the same as that on the slip.

What he admitted was a delicate branch of his investigation was then entered upon by Bailey. Expressing surprise that the slip only and not the books of the bank had been introduced in the testimony, the senator said that the slip was the only paper on the bank's files that could have been forged. He seemed to find a possible explanation in Deneen's connection with the bank. "His friends control the institution, or at least he is a stockholder in it," he said.

When Cummins asked as to why, if there had been suspicion of forgery, the investigating committee had not investigated the matter, Bailey explained that at the time of the inquiry the suspicion had not existed.

Taking up the legal phases of the case, Bailey proceeded to reply to the speeches of Senator Root, Cummins and Borah.

"I wish," said Senator Heyburn, interrupting the speaker, "that when the senator from Texas speaks of the senator from Idaho he would be more specific. I agree with the senator from Texas."

Mr. Bailey apologized, saying that "it would not do to mix those twins." Everybody laughed and the chair administered no rebuke. Thenceforth Borah was spoken of by name.

Mr. Bailey declared that it was not friendship for Lorimer that was actuating him and added that if it were he would want to see him unseated, for he was sure in that event he would be immediately returned to the senate if the Illinois legislature was not as corrupt as it had been charged with being.

TO FIGHT GRAFT GAME

Woman Who Starts Indiana Paper Is the "Whole Show"

Indianapolis, Feb. 15.—Miss Virginia Brooks, vice crusader, of West Hammond, who sprang into the limelight by her fight against corrupt politicians at the recent elections, has assumed the editorship of The Searchlight, a newspaper which will be issued twice a week.

The Searchlight is designed to attack graft, and Miss Brooks declares she will spare no guilty man. She is not only editor, but advertising manager, circulation manager and publisher as well.

CLAPP TACKLES COPPER

Senator Suspects That an Unlawful Merger Exists

Washington, Feb. 15.—Investigation of the so-called copper trust is contemplated in a resolution introduced by Senator Clapp.

The resolution directs the attorney general to make inquiry concerning the relations between the United States Metal company and the Amalgamated and the Anaconda companies with a view to determining whether the relation does not constitute an unlawful merger in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Flour In Prussia.

The first steam flour mill in Prussia was built in 1822. Up to that time grain had been ground on the share, but the new system made flour a commodity of trade, and by 1848 the bakers were buying flour alone.

Seventh Sons In Belgium.

In the early days of the reign of the late King Leopold of Belgium a seventh son was born to a Brussels woman, and when the king heard of it and was told that the boy was the seventh successive one and that no girl had come to the family he asked to be the baby's godfather. Ever since then every seventh son born in Brussels has had the same honor, and the mothers have received gifts in keeping with their station in life.

Christmas In Geography.

It is rather curious that Christmas is geographically associated with two of the dreariest and most inhospitable spots on the surface of the globe. There is a Christmas sound near Cape Horn, at the antarctic end of America, and there is a Christmas harbor in Kerguelen, the island of desolation, midway between the Cape of Good Hope and Australia. There is a Christmas island in each of three oceans—the Indian, the Atlantic and the Pacific.

ONE OF UNCLE SAM'S CRACK FIGHTING MACHINES.

The Louisiana was launched Aug. 27, 1905, at Newport News, and until the advent of the Michigan type of battleship she and her sister ship, the Connecticut, were regarded by naval experts as the most formidable fighting machines in the world. At that time there was no ship in the British navy to be compared to the Louisiana in speed, armament or coaling capacity. Her twelve inch gun firing record is unique—sixteen hits out of sixteen shots at 2,000 yards, two shots per minute. Until our new Dreadnoughts were finished the Louisiana was one of our crack warships. Her armament consists of four twelve-inch breechloading guns in pairs in turrets, eight eight-inch guns in pairs at corners of superstructure and the usual main deck equipment. She is also furnished with four twenty-one-inch submerged torpedo tubes.

SETTLEMENT WITH QUARRYMEN

New Bill Calls for 30 Cents Per Hour. Runs for 5 Years

The committee considering the demand of the quarrymen met Tuesday evening and before they adjourned an agreement for the next five years had been reached. Under the new agreement which dates from March 1, 1911 and runs for a period of five years the minimum wage will be 30 cents per hour. This is an increase of seven and one half per cent. over the present bill. The remainder of the 1908 bill was accepted as the new bill.

Ex-Senator Sprague spoke in opposition. He noted the fact that only a dozen now attend the Democratic caucuses, while hundreds of Democrats go into the Republican caucuses and sometimes prevent the Republicans nominated the best candidates. There was no sentiment for this bill.

Ex-Councilman Chase opposed the bill. He had not heard any good arguments in favor. It is not always advisable to refer such measures to the voters. This same petition had failed last year. The voters are not interested.

T. L. Williams, John R. Richards, ex-Senator Sandberg and others spoke in opposition. Mr. Sandberg said there were today too many men with no party.

Councilman Leslie saw no good reason for the act. Quincy is getting along nicely. A man's reputation counted for more than his party designation.

After the vote was taken, Mayor Shea said the remonstrants were mostly past officials of the city who had been honored by the Republican party. Some could not have been elected without the party designation. He objected to the delivery of voters by parties.

All through the hearing the greatest latitude was allowed in questioning the witnesses, and some interesting things came out, but could not be reported in detail in the time and space allotted.

BASKET SOCIAL

A Basket social will be given by the Bethany C. E. society this evening in Bethany chapel. A basket lunch will be served in the latter part of the evening. The girls are requested to take lunches for two and the boys are asked to have their pockets padded. Games will be played under the direction of D. King and a rousing good time is anticipated. Invitations have been extended to all the neighboring Endeavor societies and a number of them will send delegations to the frolic.

TWO BRIDGE HEARINGS

Quincy and South Shore Towns Largely Represented

Two largely attended hearinfs were held before the Committee on Roads and Bridges at the State House this morning. The hearings were on two matters in which Quincy and towns along the South Shore are interested and many from this district were present.

The two bills upon which hearings were held was that for the repairing and widening of the Fore River bridge and on the petition of the towns of Hull and Cohasset relative to the apportioning the expense and repair of the Fore River bridge. The petition seeks for a bill that will apportion the cost on the counties of Plymouth and Norfolk, the City of Quincy and the public service corporations using the bridge.

City Solicitor McAnarney appeared in favor of the bill to widen the draw and repair the bridge. He told of the present need of repairs and the necessity of widening the draw. He opposed the Hull and Cohasset petition.

Harvey H. Pratt appeared in favor of the Hull and Cohasset bill and opposed the assessment of any costs for the widening of the draw upon the South Shore towns.

Quincy High will meet Milton High in Cunningham gymnasium, East Milton, this afternoon. Many of the loyal rooters are expecting to accompany the team. A victory for Quincy should be the result of the contest.

Miss Ruth Bass of Quincy Point was a member of the winning basketball team of Dr. Sargent's gymnasium which defeated Radcliffe varsity yesterday by a score of 24 to 4.

Miss Bass played centre guard and thus did not have an opportunity to shoot baskets, but her blocking and passing was prominently good.

STAR WRESTLERS WEALTHY MEN

They Look Forward to Old Age More Than Fighters Do.

"HACK" IS A MILLIONAIRE.

"Russian Lion" Admits That His Pile Is Up In Seven Figures—Gotch Has Snug Fortune—Large Number of Other Mat Artists Comfortably Fixed.

When a fighter manages by some economy and strict observance of the rules of good finance to accumulate a bank roll he is spoken of by his friends as a smart young fellow and as a man setting a worthy example.

The fighter of today with money is rather a rare exception because few of them, no matter how far they have gone in the game of fisticuffs, quit with anything more than a fair lot of coin and the majority of none. Those that accumulate enough to call themselves independent, even to themselves, are exceptionally few. How are we to account, too, for the fact that the chief factors over in the sister sport of wrestling are men of money?

Has it ever occurred to you that almost every wrestler in this country and abroad is a man of considerable wealth? Perhaps you didn't know it, but a moment's perusal of the figures will convince you that there is something about the wrestling game that compels financial craft and a large bank account. In fact, there are five rich wrestlers to one rich fighter.

Pugilists Given Larger Purses.

How are we to account for this strange difference? Is it because there is a different set of men? Even without mention of the purse of $101,000 at Reno for the Johnson-Jeffries battle, all of the purses for the fighters, big and little, run generally higher than do those offered the wrestlers. But the mat artists get theirs oftener, and that may account for the difference. There is scarcely one really rich glove fighter. "Philadelphia Jack" O'Brien, Jack Johnson, Jim Jeffries and Bat Nelson are about the richest.

FRANK GOTCH, WORLD'S CHAMPION WRESTLER.

Hackenschmidt Richest of All.

Now, take the wrestlers. George Hackenschmidt is easily the richest of all of them. He admits to being a millionaire, and, admitting that much, probably has in excess of that amount. He has one trust fund in London alone of $100,000, besides three estates scattered through Europe and a bushel of the best paying and safest of European, Japanese and American securities locked away in safety vaults. Hack has been accumulating for years and for the last eight has been an extremely high salaried artist.

Frank Gotch, champion of the world, is credited with a quarter of a million salted down in fine securities and farm lands in Iowa. Dr. B. F. Roller, the Seattle physician, made a fortune by buying land in the northwest and never is idle a day in his life when there is a chance to work.

Charley Olson of Indianapolis owns theaters and good paying property of other kinds and is credited with being worth $100,000. Freddie Beell has almost as much, invested like Gotch's, only in Wisconsin land. Bill Demetral, the Greek, is another rich man and has his invested in Oklahoma.

Gus Schoenlein, known as "Americus," is the son of a rich Baltimore contractor and a member of the firm which bid recently on the building of the new city hall in Chicago. Farmer Burns is more than comfortable. So are Jess Westergaard, Henry Ordeman, Tom Jenkins and John J. Rooney.

Zbysco, the Pole, is reputed to be extremely rich, and so are several others among the foreign stars.

And so it runs all the way through. Another strange thing about this financial end of wrestling and boxing is that we don't hear of any of the promoters accumulating much.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN N. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE people who cry down picture shows as corrupters of youth should remember that a boy can spend a nickel for admission and for cigarettes, too—not the same nickel.

Mistakes are sometimes fatal; but, then, so are measles.

There may be something like an altruist somewhere in existence, and the most likely place to find him is in the poorhouse.

Some men keep their expenses up, and others marry wives who keep boarders.

Many a woman who doesn't know the market value of eggs can tell the price of her neighbor's new furs the moment she lays her eyes upon them.

Swear not at all, for many have thereby invited suits for perjury.

It takes lots of charity to enable a man who likes a good square meal to approve of a dietician.

Skating on thin ice is mere pastime compared with visiting in a country town when a beauty contest is at its hilarious height.

If war were abolished the next generation of girls would have to fall in love with the firemen's uniforms.

Why is it that the people who can kill a funny story can't be utilized to put an old joke out of business?

Opportunity.

It is not much that I can do
Or much that I can say
To help an errant brother who
Is on the downward way,
But I may an example set
And evil habits shun
That he the benefit may get
And see how it is done.

Suppose to smoke he is inclined—
Too much for health, indeed—
The moment such a state I find
I can abjure the weed.
And when he is inclined to puff,
The dinner being through,
He'll notice that I pass the stuff—
Provided that I do.

If he is getting in the trick
Of using language strong
I can a purer diction pick
To show where he is wrong.
While as to how that he should talk
I need not be the judge,
I can at coarse expressions balk
And simply say, "Oh, fudge!"

Far better than to make him fret
By giving him advice
Is to a good example set
And by that means cut ice,
And if I cannot make him lay
His habits on the shelf
The discipline I get that way
Will benefit myself.

Suspicious.

"I never could get arithmetic through my head."

"It is dead easy. If I had four apples and gave you half of them how many would you have?"

"I would have two, but I bet they would be rotten."

Some Back Talk.

"You should hear what the critics have to say of his play."

"I did."

"Fierce, wasn't it?"

"It was nothing to what he said of the critics."

Caustic.

"I don't mind telling you that I am exceedingly fond of music."

"Indeed!"

"I certainly am."

"Then why do you sing?"

Over Two Million Dollars Paid Out in Wages by Shipyard in Year 1910

Over a Million and One Half Paid for Massachusetts Material

There has been taken from the records of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, a statement of the number of employees with their residences and it is found that there resides within the limits of Quincy 2345, the Weymouths 345, the Braintrees 285, and in other towns and cities in Massachusetts 418 out of a total of 3,022.

These numbers only include the employees of the Shipbuilding Company. If there were to be added the employees of the Electric Boat Company, the United States government inspectors and employees, the inspectors for other governments and inspectors on Miscellaneous contracts, increasing these figures by several hundred, it will be seen that fully 75 percent of those connected with the shipyard reside in Quincy.

The amount paid out in wages for year 1910 was $2,132,000, the amount paid out for materials to firms and agents within Massachusetts only was $1,603,500. The disbursement of this large amount of money for wages and materials within the city and state, means much to the community. The shipyard is only running at two-thirds of its capacity on account of the lack of contracts.

THE PERCENTAGE OF QUINCY MEN AT SHIPYARD IS ABOVE ALL EXPECTATIONS

The board of directors make the following report under date of Feb. 14, 1911, signed by Francis T. Bowles president:

To the Stockholders:

"The directors submit herewith comparative balance sheets of the company as of December 31, 1909, and December 31, 1910.

"Considerable additions to plant and machinery were made during the year. These improvements included a fireproof concrete office building, new turbine generating set and boiler for power plant, hydraulic presses for the shipyard, a yard office building, extension to shipbuilding structure, a small tract of real estate where present office building is located and a considerable addition to the equipment of the machine shop.

"All items of repair and maintenance to plant have been charged to current expense and $120,000 has been charged off for depreciation and the surplus has increased by $142,000.

"There are no notes payable and the present accounts payable are current bills not yet due and in process of accounting.

SOCIAL AND MUSICALE

Quincy Choral Society Wind Up the Season

The last meeting of the Quincy Choral society for this season was in the form of a social and musicale at Colonial hall on Wednesday evening.

Only one matter of business was brought before the members, that being a second reading and subsequent adoption of an amendment to the by-laws which will enlarge the executive board by two, making the number of directors five instead of three. The society voted to elect these two directors at the first meeting next season.

The business meeting was then adjourned and the members joined in singing several of the "Creation" choruses with their efficient accompanist, Miss Edith G. Olney at the piano and President Pollard giving timely hints to the different parts.

Following this came a delightful musical program by members of the society. There were quartets for mixed voices by Miss E. A. Perkins, Mrs. Nina B. Woodsum, J. W. Hendry and Albert L. Hayden; trios for ladies' voices by Mrs. E. C. Page, Miss Carrie Follett Spear and Mrs. Woodsum; an aria and soprano songs by Mrs. Edith Cary Page, violin solo by R. C. MacNairn, who also played an obligato to one of Mrs. Page's songs; and a group of songs for contralto by Miss Isbell G. Murphy, Miss Olney and Miss Margaret Carruthers, assisted at the piano. There is an abundance of splendid musical ability among the Choral members and every number received hearty applause.

Those ever popular refreshments, ice cream and cake, added the last gracious touch of hospitality to the evening, and an hour of dancing to inspiring music furnished by R. C. MacNairn, violinist and Mrs. E. C. Page at the piano, closed a program every part of which had been thoroughly enjoyed.

BASKET SOCIAL OF THE C. E.

Over a Dollar Paid for Some and Worth It

The basket social of the Bethany C. E. society was held Wednesday evening in Bethany chapel. Signs were posted outside the tower door and the lower door, the one stating that only girls and baskets would be admitted there and the other that well padded males only would be admitted. About fifty young people appeared for the fun, and according to the consensus of opinion everyone was satisfied. Games were played early in the evening, and a little after 9 o'clock the serious business of the evening was started. Auctioneer D. King mounted the rostrum with a huge mallet in hand, and proceeded to auction off the baskets of lunch contributed by the young ladies. The bidding was sharp and the auctioneer knew his business. There were more fellows than there were baskets and by keeping that fact continually before their minds, and by pointing out the charms of the young lady who went with each basket, things were kept moving pretty lively for three quarters of an hour. Some sold for over $1.

The committee had made cocoa, and this was supplied when the young people were ready to eat the contents of the baskets. After the last scrap had disappeared and the last cup was drained, all gathered about the piano for a sing. The gathering broke up at 10.30, after a very enjoyable evening.

The committee in charge was: Henry Prescott, Mabel Lovejoy and Edward Hayden. Mrs. Charles Gragg and Mrs. John Wilson assisted the committee. Miss Edith Lovejoy and Miss Kitson poured.

REFERENDUM ON SHIPYARD CONTRACT

Former Councilman Abele Advocates It and Intelligently Handles the Whole Question

Price Proposed Too Low, and Term of Contract Too Long

Editors of Quincy Daily Ledger:

Your vigorous protest against authorizing the Mayor to make the proposed contract with the Fore River

HIP! HIP! HURRAH! NO NEW ENGLAND CITY IS MAKING MORE RAPID PROGRESS

Shipbuilding Company must commend itself to all who are in any way familiar with the subject. To give the entire use of the water from the old reservoir for a period of thirty years at a merely nominal yearly payment of $1,000, not only for its own purposes, but also to supply other industries which are or may be located adjacent to or near its premises and fronting on the Weymouth Fore river, is indeed a most extraordinary proposition, and cannot be too strongly condemned.

THE OBJECTIONS ARE MANY.

The price is entirely inadequate. The provision allowing the company to sell water to other industries is unjustifiable on any ground of public policy, and goes beyond the bounds of that encouragment which we ought to give to all local industries so far as is in our power. The term of thirty years is strongly objectionable as unnecessarily restricting the city's use of the reservoir and its right to dispose of it to advantage should such an opportunity offer itself in the meantime.

Nor is this relieved by the provision for cancellation of contract which any sane man must realize as being practically impossible of execution and too long delayed to be of any advantage to the city. On the face of it, it is a one-sided contract, with all the benefits accruing to the Fore River Shipbuilding Company and all the burdens to the city.

WHY RATES ARE HIGH.

To understand thoroughly the meaning of this proposition it is necessary to bear in mind the fact that before the city became part of the Metropolitan system the old reservoir was our only source of water supply. We acquired ownership of it when we bought the rights of the old Quincy Water Company, and of the debt we then incurred in its purchase there still remains unpaid over $500,00, and we are still making annual payments of principal and interest.

This is one reason why water rates in Quincy are so high. Were it not for this debt we would now be paying about $51,000 to the Metropolitan Water Board as our assessment and about $11,000 more for maintenance, making a total of about $62,000.

The law provides, however, that in addition to these amounts, the maturing debt and interest shall be paid from the water receipts. This makes the total annual payment chargeable to water receipts, approximately $132,000, and in order for the receipts to equal the payments we should charge something over twelve cents per thousand gallons and this amount may fairly be called the cost of the water to the city. If we did not have to pay this maturing debt and interest from the water receipts the cost would be considerably less.

IN OTHER CITIES.

Some of the cities to the north of Boston were more fortunate than Quincy. When they became part of the Metropolitan system they sold their interest in the Spot Pond reservoir to the State, and the money so received practically wiped out their water debt and they are thus enabled to furnish water to the consumer for a sum slightly in excess of what is paid to the Metropolitan Water Board.

Quincy, however, did not sell its old reservoir, but is still obliged to continue to pay yearly instalments on the old debt with interest, although the reservoir has since then produced no income for the city.

HOW RATES VARY.

The water rates in Quincy vary all the way from eight cents per thousand gallons, the rate paid by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, to fifteen cents per thousand gallons, the rate paid by some of the granite men and thirty cents per thousand gallons the rate paid by the general consumer. Between the eight cent rate and the fifteen cent rate are several intermediate rates all less than twelve cents per thousand gallons, and therefore less than cost. The granite manufacturers and especially the general consumer, on the other hand, are paying much in excess of what is rightly their share.

Any proposition, therefore, that would prevent this injustice and yet give the local industries the cheaper water which they need ought to be welcomed. The old reservoir, which only a few years ago supplied the needs of the entire city, but which is now idle and non-productive, would seem to furnish the necessary means to accomplish this result.

INDUSTRIAL WATER

While a member of the City Council in 1908 and again in February, 1909, I introduced the following resolution:

> "Resolved: That the Commissioner of Public Works report to the City Council at its next regular meeting as to the feasibility of supplying water from the Quincy reservoir for manufacturing purposes, stating to what extent this would be practicable and the estimated cost of doing so."

This resolution was adopted by two successive Councils but the present Commissioner for some reason did not see fit to report, although I was given to understand at the time that he did make an investigation. The contract now under consideration would seem to indicate that such use was found to be feasible at least as regards the Fore River Shipbuilding Company, and "such other industries as are or may be located adjacent to and near its premises."

SHOULD WE FORTIFY?

Panama Canal Debate of the Men's Club

The regular monthly debate of the Men's club of Christ church was held in the parish house Wednesday evening. The question was: Resolved—That the United States should fortify the Panama canal.

N. M. Spencer, speaking on the affirmative, pointed out the immense amount of commerce that would pass through the canal and the duty of protection the United States owed to it. The growing distrust of the United States held by the small Central and South American countries would make it imperative that the canal should be fortified, and that the fortification should be done by the United States.

H. Marr, the principal on the negative, argued that the different treaties with other countries should be sufficient. The Hague idea would prevent the bombardment of any unfortified place. The Pacific coast and the Canadian border are comparatively unprotected. Why then fortify the canal.

GREAT NECESSITY SAYS PARK COMMISSION FOR EXTENSION OF THE SHORE RESERVATION

William Walker and William Westland also spoke for the affirmative, and Merton Turner and H. M. Wright for the negative. Then the men were divided into two groups and each had to give his opinion on the subject. The debate was thus prolonged until a late hour, but everyone was interested and time did not drag. At the conclusion of the "harangue," refreshments were served and then all went home to think it over.

SIX JURORS DRAWN

Representative Langelier One of the Halt Dozen

A special meeting of the City Council was held Wednesday evening to draw jurors. Councilmen Boyd, Duffy, Forde, Gardner, Histen, Nowland and Richards were absent.

A communication was received from the Mayor appointing Henry O. Fairbanks as City Clerk pro tem until 8 A. M. Feb. 16.

A venire was received for the drawing of six travers jurors for the supreme judicial court.

The Mayor, City Clerk and Councilman Craig drew the following jurors: Daniel Donahue, Albert L. Whitman, William H. Sullivan, Edward V. Trask, Louis F. R. Langelier and John H. Gillis.

Adjourned at 7.42.

—Thus far no city which has adopted the commission plan has shown any desire to give it up.—St. Paul Dispatch.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

In many of the large cities throughout the country boys and young men are going to be given instruction in cooking. Evidently the promoters of the movement are suffragists, or else they fear the time is coming when man's place will be in the home.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook was greeted with cat calls at his first appearance on the vaudeville stage this week. It is not stated what breed of cats the audience imitated but polecats would be a safe guess. At any rate the doctor understood.

The expense of building that portion of the Quincy Shore parkway between Quincy High school and the National Sailors Home is greater than anticipated; so Quincy people should be satisfied if this section is the only work done in 1911. As shown on recent maps of Quincy the route from Hancock street to the east is practically a continuation of Grant street to Blacks creek; it follows along the southerly shore entering the Mt. Wollaston estate of the Adamses to a point opposite Gull island; it is proposed to bridge the creek at this point which is about 150 feet wide, and then follow along the Quincy bay shore connecting with the reservation already constructed which is becoming more and more popular each year, The new section would be about one and one-half miles which added to the two and one half miles already built would make four miles continuous. Then there would be less than half a mile to connect with the Furnace brook parkway where over four miles have been built reaching into the Blue Hills reservation.

SCHOOLBOY DAYS RECALLED.

Col. Edward Anderson of this city was the guest of honor at the dinner of the Roxbury Historical Society on Wednesday evening. The Globe says the speaking opened with the introduction of Col. Anderson, who was born in Roxbury, but who has been away from Boston for 40 years. In his address Col. Anderson went back to days 70 years ago, when he was a schoolboy at the old Washington school, which stood on the site of the courthouse. He told how he went west in the early 50s and of his meetings with Abraham Lincoln and John Brown.

EGG HOLDING TWO GALLONS IS RECEIVED BY MUSEUM

Many Omelets Once In Product Only Four Hundred Years Old.

One egg holding two gallons when it was young, 400 years ago, has been placed on exhibition in the American Museum of Natural History in New York city. It is popularly known in Madagascar, whence it came, as the product of a flying elephant, and at the sight of it a self respecting ostrich would run and hide its head for shame. It would engulf half a dozen products of the plumed bird of the desert and furnish whites and yolks for fifteen or sixteen dozen hen creations. Its length is eight inches over all, and it is two feet and two inches in circumference.

It cost the museum $100, for some "trust" has been swallowing the supply and thus increasing the cost of living. This egg has been in the British museum for nineteen years and is as fresh as it was when it was received. Before the aepyornis, which was wont to produce such eggs, went out of the business the natives of Madagascar are said to have made extensive use of them. Now the fossil shells are found near streams and are used for rain barrels or wine jars. They were not especially desirable except in large families, for the cold storage facilities of Madagascar are few.

The aepyornis is believed to have been seven feet tall, judging from her fossil remains, although some authorities stand out for twelve feet. The creature was industrious, but she did not lay an egg every day, and the large sized cackle which went with her efforts at odd times deranged the landscape of the island in many places.

The bird which left this oval landmark is believed to have been related to the great auk, the dodo and various other creatures now extinct. The remains indicate that its wings were short. The appearance of this gigantic shell is almost a vindication of the character of the late Mr. Sindbad, an oriental traveler, who spoke of landing on some distant island and finding there an egg laid by a roc. He built a fire under the lee of it and cooked portions of it as he required it.

The Apple.

The apple is not considered to be a complete food in itself, but on the food list it has a value far above the nutriment it possesses. Apples aid the stomach in the digestion of other foods, and therefore the best results are obtained from eating them after rather than before meals.

MISS ARNOLD PAWNED GEMS

Held by Loan Company In Boston Subject to Action by Police

Boston, Feb. 16.—Developments came to light in the case of Dorothy Arnold, the missing New York heiress, when facts were gleaned to show that when she was in this city last September, she was forced to pawn her neck chain, watch, rings and bracelets.

The pledged jewelry is still at the office of a Boylston street loan company and will remain there subject to action by the local police.

It was during the week of her secret meetings with George E. Griscom in this city that circumstances caused the missing young woman to convert her jewelry into money.

The articles were found by police inspectors, following the information sent here from New York that Dorothy was among the missing.

MISS BARTON'S CLAIM FOUND TO BE SOUND

First Woman Employed by Department of Interior

Washington, Feb. 16.—Miss Clara Barton, the philanthropist and administrator of the Red Cross, is declared to have been the first woman ever employed by the department of the interior.

The question recently arose and a search of old records disclosed that in 1854 Miss Barton, on the recommendation of a representative from Massachusetts, was appointed to a clerical position from "New Enland Village," Mass. The department was established in 1849.

In 1876 the question originally arose and the claim for the distinction then put forward by Miss Barton was declared to be sound. She now lives at Glen Echo, Md. About 1100 women are now employed by the department.

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1911

Don't Let That Cough Become Chronic!

Sirolin Prevents Consumption by Curing Coughs and Colds.

It is dangerous to trifle with a bad cold, or bronchitis, or the grippe. These ailments, disagreeable in themselves, lead to graver diseases, if allowed to run unchecked.

Nine-tenths of the fatal cases of consumption are traced to an origin in some minor ailment of the respiratory organs.

The best and surest way to relieve a cold, a cough, a case of grippe, or any other pulmonary affection, is to use Sirolin freely—at the same time taking things easy.

Tell Your Druggist that you want Sirolin; that nothing "just as good" will do.

Sirolin is entirely different from any other preparation for colds and other pulmonary affections.

It acts in a different way. By its action the cold is eliminated by increasing the resisting power of the lungs and air-passages. It is essentially a builder-up, a tonic, a restorative.

It effectually prevents colds by the same process. Keep a bottle of Sirolin in the house and take it as a preventive during the winter, and especially during cold and rainy spells.

You will find that you have missed your regular winter cold; that you feel well all the time.

Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug

Sirolin is not only the world's standard remedy for colds, coughs, influenza, bronchitis, grippe, and other pulmonary affections, but it is tonic and reconstructive in its action, as well.

It stimulates the appetite, improves the digestion, aids the assimilation of food, nourishes the tissues, and is potential in retarding that waste of tissues and that poverty of blood which are among the most prominent features of consumption.

Acts as a Tonic

It never fails of excellent tonic effect upon the lining and adjacent tissues of the air passages, and also upon the entire worn-out system.

Always Keep A Bottle of Sirolin In the House.

Sirolin is the leading remedy for coughs and colds for both adults and children.
It is commended by physicians and in every medical centre.
It is wonderfully useful in treating consumption.
It is acure for wasting diseases.
It is universally popular.
Its value is unique.

How to Cure a Cold

The inner surface of your lungs is a delicate mucous membrane, thinner than the finest tissue paper. Behind these fragile walls the blood circulates and meets the air as it is inhaled.

A deep-seated cold, well down in the lungs, affects this delicate lung surface. Such a cold almost invariably leaves the lungs in a weakened condition, and this, combined with a lowered general vitality, turns them into a favorable settling ground for the tubercle bacillus—in plain English, the Consumption germ.

This, in a few words, is the history of the beginning of Consumption in nine-tenths of the half-million or more cases in the United States.

That's why you should never let an ordinary cold run unchecked.

Individuals who "take cold easily," upon exposure, can defend themselves against the attacks by the use of Sirolin, together with the proper observance of the rules of hygiene.

Your Physician Knows Sirolin

Sirolin is very agreeable to the palate. It is a preparation possessing all the virtues of guaiacol and creosote, without the disagreeable taste of these most valuable drugs. Sirolin is compounded with a palatable, non-irritating derivative of guaiacol, the active principle of creosote. Sirolin is not only palatable, but it also improves the appetite, assists digestion and aids nutrition.

Sirolin is a physician's remedy—not a patent nostrum. It comes to America with the highest European reputation.

If your druggist has not got Sirolin, send $1.00 for a full-size bottle.

Send for our interesting Sirolin Booklet.

GUILTY OF MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE

Fall Gets Life Imprisonment For Killing Two Men

Boston, Feb. 16.—Walter G. Fall, aged 24, was brought into court late yesterday afternoon and was sentenced to spend the rest of his life in state prison for the murder of Police Sergeant Fred Schlehuber and Frank A. Rees. Fall pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree, District Attorney Pelletier accepting this plea.

Fall had been drawn into trouble with the 15-year-old daughter of Rees, and had been indicted for a serious crime. Schlehuber made the arrest and worked the case up against Fall. Apparently the matter had been settled, Rees agreeing that it were better for his daughter to marry Fall.

Schlehuber and Rees were in Pelletier's office to conclude the arrangement to which the district attorney had consented. They were awaiting the arrival of Fall and the minister who was to marry him to the Rees girl.

Fall appeared unexpectedly, declared he had been hounded and persecuted and shot and instantly killed the policeman and the father of the girl.

Owing to the extreme cold it was impossible to heat the school this morning and the girls were sent home at 8.15.

CRANCH ASSOCIATION.

A very auspicious meeting of the parents and teachers of Cranch school was held in the school building Wednesday evening to organize an association. The attendance of 175 was by far the largest ever assembled in Quincy for a purpose of this sort.

Mr. Townsend, master of the school, spoke briefly, telling why they were gathered together and then introduced Albert L. Barbour, superintendent of schools. He told about the parents and teacher's associations previously formed and pointed out the advantages of having one in the Cranch school. Mr. Townsend spoke again, and a committee was chosen to draw up a constitution and a list of officers to be presented at the next meeting.

The committee includes: Albert Schenkelberger, Andrew Stewart and Miss Carrie Crane.

After the business session a social hour was enjoyed. Hot chocolate was served with Miss Elsie Martin and Miss Annie Healey pouring, and eighth grade girls serving. Miss Elsie Turner furnished music during the evening.

The meeting was thoroughly enjoyable and enthusiastic throughout and the only drawback was that it was difficult to accommodate the people. There is no assembly hall in the Cranch school, and in consequence it was necessary to seat the people in the lower corridor. With such a splendid attendance and such a fine show of interest and enthusiasm at this first meeting, the outlook for a fine association is very promising.

CRANCH—WILLARD

The Willard school assembly hall was the scene of a fierce conflict, last Thursday, when the Cranch five met in battle with O'Connor's warriors. A large number of the pupils and some of the teachers were present to witness the contest. The Cranch boys were greeted with hearty applause, and the game was soon on. The way O'Connor's band played in the first half showed clearly, that, if the Cranch won, they would have to work for it. Almquist was the star of the occasion, and the way he covered his man must have been a surprise to his opponents. Almquist made three baskets in the first half, Hawes shot a beauty from the field, and O'Connor scored one from the foul line. Larkin, McEmmis and England each scored a basket for Cranch making the score, Willard 9, Cranch 6, at the close of the first half. The Willard rooters were jubilant.

Mr. Townsend, master of the Cranch school, took his boys into the dressing room during the five minutes' rest to give them a few points, and when they came forth for the second half determination was in their manner. Larkin shot a basket from the field and one from the foul line, tieing the score, but DiBona made it one better for Willard on a foul for Cranch. McEmmis shot a basket on a foul, making the tallies even again. A basket by Hawes was balanced by one from England, and only 45 seconds remained to be played. Bates put the sphere into the net for Cranch and the time was up. Score: Cranch 14 Willard 12.

Both team played a clean game, and they hope to meet again soon.

The "red and blue" triumphed by a score of 18 to 13 in a fast and furious contest. Quincy got four of her baskets in the first half, and Milton caged but one. The second period was a battle royal with Manning and H. Chapman doing the best work for Quincy, and Carder and Walsh starring for Milton. The spectacular feature of the game was the shooting of a basket from the middle of the floor by Walsh of Milton. Manning played the best for Quincy and secured 5 baskets.

LET OTHERS SHARE.

If such extensive use is feasible there can be no possible obstacle to giving the granite men of South and West Quincy similar advantage of cheap water from the reservoir. Their plants are nearer the reservoir and they are not now enjoying the privilege of obtaining water below cost. In fact some of the granite men have found the Metropolitan water so expensive that they have been obliged to dig wells to obtain their water.

Moreover, the idea of giving all this water to the Fore River Shipbuilding Company shows very poor business judgment. The Water department at present is not self-sustaining, and yet it is proposed to throw away this source of income, and the opportunity which it affords of benefiting other industries in the Point district and also in South and West Quincy.

It is evident that any income received from the use of the old reservoir must necessarily reduce the amount to be paid from water receipts and consequently reduce the cost of water to the general consumer.

BAD FINANCIERING.

To give the entire use of this reservoir as a source of water supply to the Fore River Shipbuilding Company for the paltry sum of $1,000 per year is ridiculous. During the year 1907 this Company used 89,773,802 gallons of metered water for which it paid at the rate of eight cents per thousand gallons, $7,181.91. This same quantity of water at fifteen cents per thousand gallons would have cost a granite manufacturer about $14,000 and at thirty cents per thousand gallons would have cost the general consumer about $27,000.

This, I may add, did not include the large quantities of water which the company used from the fire hydrants for the purpose of testing its boilers, etc., and which was not metered and for which the city received no payment. The company has since constructed a reservoir at the foot of South street, but I am informed that it has not been a success, and that as a matter of fact the company has paid the city more for water since then than it did during the year 1907.

SALE OF WATER.

The company could well afford to pay $4,000 or $5,000 a year for water from reservoir for its own use, and yet nobody could justly complain; but the idea of not only giving it the water it may need for its own use, but also to allow it to sell water to other industries is unjustifiable.

What would otherwise appear to be a very generous effort to encourage local industry is thus made to seem unconscionable. If there is any profit to be made from the sale of the water from the reservoir, the city should receive it and apply it in reduction of the expenses of the water department.

If industries other than the Fore River Shipbuilding Company are to receive cheaper water, there is no reason why the Old Colony Street Railway Company, the Quincy Electric Light & Power Company, and the granite men of South Quincy and West Quincy should not also enjoy a like advantage. A much wiser way would be for the city itself to decide what industries are to be encouraged in this way rather than to leave it to the judgment of any one private concern.

CITY OPPORTUNITIES.

The provision continuing this contract for a period of thirty years makes the injustice of it even more apparent There is a possibility that in the meantime the city might have an opportunity of selling the reservoir either to the State or to towns not within the Metropolitan district.

The price received would materially reduce the annual payments to be charged to water receipts and so greatly reduce the cost of water. The contract as at present drawn would preclude the city from availing itself of such an opportunity. Nor does the provision for the cancellation of the contract relieve the situation. In the first place it does not become operative until after the expiration of 15 years and then only after revocation by the Mayor and a ratification of the revocation by two successive Councils. The amount of time necessarily involved in such a cancellation of the contract would almost inevitably prevent the city from making an advantageous sale of the reservoir.

VERY OBJECTIONABLE.

In closing, I wish to emphasize again the fact that the proposed contract is objectionable because of the inadequate price to be received by the city for the water, and because of the extraordinary provision allowing the company to peddle out the water to other industries instead of allowing the city to be the judge of what industries should be encouraged and to receive any profit to be derived from this source. The long term of thirty years is an unnecessarily long time for the city to be denied the opportunity of availing itself of other and more advantageous uses of the reservoir, such as would benefit not only other industries but also the general consumer of water who should be given some consideration.

REFERENDUM DESIRABLE.

On a matter of such vital importance it would seem that the City Council ought not to take any final action without first giving a public hearing and allowing those interested an opportunity to be heard. In view of the long period for which the proposed contract would bind the city and the extraordinary provision allowing the company to furnish other industries with water, it would seem a proper matter for a referendum. There is no need of undue haste in executing the contract, and I believe all persons interested ought to have a full opportunity at the election in December to vote upon the question.

George W. Abele.

NEW PROHIBITION BILL

Submitted to the Maine Legislature For Its Consideration

Augusta, Me., Feb. 16.—A bill prohibiting the manufacture, sale and keeping of intoxicating liquors, except for medicinal and mechanical purposes, and providing that the penalty for each violation of the statute shall be six months' imprisonment in jail at hard labor, was presented in the house.

This measure follows closely the passage by the senate of the resolve resubmitting to the voters of Maine the constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquors, which is expected to receive the necessary two-thirds vote in the house.

The new law, if adopted, is intended to take the place of the constitutional prohibition, provided the latter is repealed by the people. No provision is made for fines.

MUCH HONOR, NO DANGER.

French Wolf Slayers' Risk In Name Only.

Wolves have long been extinct in France, yet there are a hundred "lieutenants de la louveterie" whose nominal duty it is to keep these animals under. Among the holders of this office are aristocrats such as the Prince d'Arenberg and the Marquis de Clermont-Tonnerre and millionaires like the Comte Greffulhe and M. Paul Lebaudy.

They draw no salary, but the state provides them with a showy uniform, the buttons of which are adorned with wolves' heads. The distinction is keenly sought after, as the "lieutenants de la louveterie" have shooting rights in all the state domains and thus enjoy some of the best sport in France.

LIFE TERM FOR ALBERTS

Wife Slayer Pleads Guilty to Murder in Second Degree

Taunton, Mass., Feb. 16.—William J. Alberts of New Bedford, who shot and killed his wife, was sentenced to spend the remainder of his life in the state prison, following his plea of guilty to murder in the second degree.

Alberts was a stone mason and, according to testimony produced in court, had had frequent disagreements with his wife. On Dec. 8 last he went home and found his wife and another woman engaged in housecleaning.

He protested against the upsetting of the house, and during the argument that followed, drew a revolver and shot his wife. Then he turned the revolver on himself, inflicting a serious wound in his head, and nearly succeeded in taking his own life.

Taft Completes 'Frisco's Victory by Signing Canal Fair Bill

Washington, Feb. 16.—President Taft signed the bill designating San Francisco as the city in which will be held in 1915 the exposition signalizing the completion of the Panama canal.

With a pen made of gold mined in California, and in the presence of the two United States senators and a number of the representatives from that state, the president attached his signature to the engrossed bill.

Mr. Taft presented the pen to one of the members of the party, and it will be placed on exhibition at the exposition.

VICTORY AFTER LONG STRUGGLE

Ireland to Have Parliament and an Irish Executive

ACTS SUBJECT TO REVISION

Redmond Announces That Government Plan For Home Rule Will Be Accepted by Ireland—Quick Action of British Ministry In Placing Its Policy Before the Country So Early Causes a Sensation

London, Feb. 16.—The government plans for Irish home rule were announced in the house of commons by Premier Asquith last evening. They include the creation of an Irish parliament with an Irish executive dealing with affairs relating only to Ireland. All the acts of the Irish parliament will be subject to revision by the English parliament, however.

In making the announcement Premier Asquith said: "We can only arrive at a satisfactory solution of the problem of congestion of business in this house by creating an Irish parliament with an Irish executive. They shall deal with purely Irish affairs, while the supremacy of this parliament must be maintained."

That the government plan for Irish home rule will be accepted by Ireland was announced by John E. Redmond, leader of the Nationalists. He said:

"The Nationalists accept the premier's declaration of policy which we believe honestly to be a final settlement of the question. Our cause is marching rapidly to victory. The present situation between the two nations is disastrous. It is not too much to hope that the reign of the present king will be made glorious by the opening by the sovereign of a parliament of a friendly and reconciled Irish nation."

In the debate which followed, Walter D. Long, a Unionist member, declared that if home rule were forced upon the minority in Ireland such severe measures would follow "as would produce something akin to civil war."

William O'Brien, leader of the Independent Nationalists, said that his party would offer hearty co-operation in the premier's project, and suggested that the Irish parties endeavor to reach a compromise.

The action of the ministry in placing its Irish policy before the country so early in the session has caused a sensation throughout Great Britain and Ireland. A home rule bill was expected, but not at this stage of the life of the parliament just elected.

From the tone of the prime minister's opening statement it is plain that it is his purpose and that of his colleagues of the cabinet to keep perfect faith with the Irish leaders on the great issue of Irish autonomy.

$12,000,000 HELD UP

No Bay State Appropriations While Present Deadlock Exists

Boston, Feb. 16.—Governor Foss is holding up $12,000,000 in appropriations while the legislature is deadlocked over the proposal made by the executive chamber that the legislature allow the appointment of experts by the governor to probe the departments and institutions of the state.

The senate took the stand again yesterday afternoon that the governor must make the appointment of his experts with the assistance of the chairman of the senate ways and means committee and the house chairman of the same committee.

But Govenor Foss and Speaker Walker of the house made a move of their own for the securing of the power asked for by the governor. Speaker Walker made public another appeal in which he charged that the order backed by the Republican leaders was a proposition to hamper the governor.

Had Much to Do With the Home Rule Victory

ACCUMULATED A MILLION

Man Who Could Neither Read Nor Write Signs Will by Mark

New York, Feb. 16.—Although John Lahey, a farmer of Lakeville, L. I., could neither read nor write, his will, as filed yesterday, disposes of an estate estimated to be worth $1,000,000. The will bears a cross for John Lahey, his mark.

Lahey was born in Ireland. As a young man he settled on Long Island and became a truck farmer on a very large scale. He married twice and had twenty-two children.

W. K. Vanderbilt owns property adjoining his farm, but although Vanderbilt is said to have offered many times to buy, Lahey would never sell.

TAFT IS AROUSED BY CLARK'S SPEECH

Regards Talk About Annexation of Canada Unfortunate

Washington, Feb. 16.—President Taft has expressed to some of his congressional callers astonishment that Representative Clark should have injected into the reciprocity discussion in the house any thought about the annexation of Canada.

The White House regards the remarks of Clark as unfortunate, and the president has made it known that he would like to have it understood that his administration had no thought whatever of of annexation when the reciprocity agreement was arranged.

The president, it is said, is hopeful that the people of this country, Canada and Great Britain will look upon the speech of Clark merely as the expression of an individual who, in the sentiment thus expressed, does not represent any party in this country.

BUSY NIGHT FOR THIEVES

They Get Nearly $2000 Worth of Loot In Four Boston Homes

Boston, Feb. 16.—A gang of housebreakers descended on the Jamaica Plain district early last evening, committing four breaks and carrying away nearly $2000 worth of furs, jewelry and bric-a-brac.

In three of the breaks the entrance was gained by means of false keys, but at the home of Granville Johnson a window on the front piazza was forced by means of a jimmy.

There were evidences in the house that the thieves were preparing to take other property, valued at several thousand dollars, but this was saved by a maid's arrival.

BIG LOAN FOR HONDURAS

Millions of Dollars to Be Supplied by Concerns In New York

Washington, Feb. 16.—Carying out the program for the financial rehabilitation of Honduras, in which the American government is interested, Luis Lazo, the Honduran minister to the United States, signed contracts with several New York bankers for a loan, the total amount of which ultimately may reach $10,000,000.

The loan will be made by J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the National City bank and the First National bank, all of New York, while the Guaranty Trust company, also of New York, will act as the fiscal agent of the Honduran government.

FATHERLESS IN THE SENATE

No Actual Sponser For the Reciprocity Agreement

NOT LIKELY TO BE BURIED

Lodge Promises His Support In Committee on Finance In Behalf of Administration, Although He Does Not Approve Bill as It Stands—Republican Insurgents Intend to Assault Measure by Means of Amendments

Washington, Feb. 16.—Reciprocity with Canada, which has become the principal question before the senate, is believed to depend upon whether the opposition will resort to filibuster to defeat it. It is the best judgment of senate leaders on both sides of the chamber that if the McCall bill, to carry out the provisions of the Canadian agreement, is permitted to reach a vote at this session the senate will pass it by as decisive a vote as was recorded for it in the house.

The senate committee on foreign relations yesterday reported the Canadian agreement back to the senate and it was sent to the finance committee. The effect of referring it back to the senate is practical recognition of the fact that it contains nothing likely to involve the United States in obligations to Canada in conflict with the peaceful trade relations which exist with other countries.

Senator Lodge authorizes the statement that he will work in the finance committee to secure a report on the bill and do all in his power to pass the measure to a vote. This action, in which Senator Crane will share, does not argue that either senator approves the bill as it stands, but both will vote for it as an administration measure.

A canvass of the committee indicates that the bill will be reported out. It probably will come into the senate fatherless as far as actual sponsorship is concerned, but it is likely that Senator Burrows, in the absence of Senators Aldrich and Hale, will go through the motions of reporting the bill and thereafter let it take its chances as far as any active work in its behalf is concerned.

Senator Lodge will insist upon an amendment to equalize conditions between Canadian and American fishermen. Canada now pays $160,000 a year to her fishermen as bounties and also grants a subsidy of 30 percent on the construction of cold storage warehouses. These facts appear not to have been considered at all by the American commissioners.

The Republican insurgents, headed by Cummins of Iowa, have determined to assault the bill by means of amendments providing for free iron ore, free meat, flour and other food products and raw materials, these to come in free, not only from Canada but from all the world. It is calculated that the Democrats will not dare vote against free foodstuffs, in the present state of public sentiment, hence it is the opinion of many influential senators that the bill is certain to be so amended that it will be worthless as a reciprocity agreement.

Some of the standpatters favor delay through hearings, but this scheme is frowned upon as being an evasion that will do the anti-reciprocity cause more harm than good.

Extra session talk is blazing again among some senators, who firmly believe that with the power of delay and amendments made possible by the senate rules, the McCall bill finally will be so hindered or distorted that only an extra session will enable the administration to straighten things out. So far, Senators Lodge, Penrose, Cullom and Flint are known to favor reporting the bill out of the finance committee.

London, Feb. 16.—The appeal entered by Edward F. Myllus, London agent of The Liberator and author of a libelous story about King George, was withdrawn yesterday afternoon.

The writer has consented to serve the year to which he has been sentenced without further legal struggle, but it is believed he will be pardoned. Myllus alleged in his article that King George had figured in a morganatic marriage while Prince of Wales.

"Alias Jimmy Valentine"

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1,29, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor. Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

For several years Valentine works excellently and rises to be assistant cashier. He and Rose love each other, but Valentine knows Doyle is on his track and dares not tell her of his affection for her. A mysterious Mr. Cronin turns out to be old Bill Avery, now reformed and a man of business.

Valentine receives a telegram from Doyle. He tells Red how he has planned to outwit the detective by means of a cleverly concocted alibi.

Rose Lane tells Valentine she loves him and that they are going to marry. Valentine reveals to her his love for her. Doyle appears on the scene to arrest Valentine on a charge of robbing a Massachusetts bank many years before.

"By ——, that's funny!" murmured Doyle. He looked across the room to the picture on the wall. He drew a magnifying glass from his coat pocket and stepped before the handsomely framed photograph once more. He passed the lens up and down and across, over the face of the photograph, then wheeled about and faced Jimmy Valentine.

"Mr. Randall," he said apologetically, "you must excuse my mistake—my most unfortunate mistake—and I trust that you will overlook my ungentlemanly manners. I now realize that I have been making insinuations against an entirely innocent man. You of course realize the difficulties of my profession—how in dealing with the brightest criminal brains in the world we cannot avoid making errors at times, but"—his face glowed pride—"I will say in justice to myself that this is the first mistake of the kind I have ever made."

"Quite true—quite true, I am sure, my dear sir," commented Jimmy Valentine condescendingly. "I can see that you are exceptionally able in your line. Some day if we ever have a loss here through thievery I shall be most glad to recommend you to the directors, and I am sorry that you feel so embarrassed at your error regarding me."

"Oh, cut that! Don't worry about me," said Doyle vengefully. "Wait till I put the bracelets on the real Jimmy Valentine, then save your sympathy for him. He'll pay for this day's work. It's all through him that I made a sucker out of myself today, Mr. Randall, and when I get him he's going to 'come through,' which means confess." Doyle paused for breath and concluded, "I'm on the biggest job of my whole career, and when I finish it I'll have the real Jimmy Valentine sewed up in a little stone jug 6 by 8, without light or fresh air, and what he'll get to eat would make a pit bull terrier turn vegetarian."

Valentine in spite of the danger that attended his situation could not resist the temptation to continue the conversation with Doyle. It was dangerous—no doubt as to that. At any moment the young man might let drop a word or a hint that would betray himself into his enemy's hands by confirming the detective's suspicions.

But the daring Valentine relished the spice of excitement in the situation. He played with the detective as a cat with a squeaking mouse.

"To be sure, you do not promise this man Jimmy Valentine a very merry time of it when you finally land him," Valentine said. "I am glad I am not he."

Doyle laughed grimly.

"The resemblance is the most startling I have ever encountered," he answered. "You are perhaps a trifle taller—a half inch, maybe—but, aside from that and the wrist scar, you and Valentine are exact."

Valentine smiled fatuously—quite intentionally so.

"I should hate to have so clever a man as you hunting me, Mr. Doyle," he went on, "and from what you say I assume you have been after him some time."

"Nearly three years," the detective grunted angrily.

"Well, that's quite awhile. You must want him badly."

Doyle bent toward the other and pounded his fist into his opened palm.

"He is the one man who can open a safe by the sense of touch," he explained.

Blank amazement came into the face of the assistant cashier.

"Why, that's not possible, is it?" he asked incredulously.

"Doesn't sound so—we never thought so—but Jimmy Valentine has done it repeatedly. The first year he worked we thought the jobs were done from the inside—employees or officers of the bank. Then we got him by a confession of his pal, and a fool governor pardoned him." Doyle growled disgustedly.

"Well, if he was pardoned"—

The detective brushed the suggestion aside.

"I want him for another job, one that I can convict him on now and couldn't before the first conviction."

"You will doubtless get him, Mr. Doyle," confidently.

"Doubtless. It's a life work to land him. He's the most dangerous man loose."

"It doesn't seem possible that a man could have so delicate a sense of touch," said Valentine innocently, continuing to "play" Doyle as an angler plays a brook trout.

"YOU MUST WANT HIM BADLY."

"He has," with an angry snort. "It's been the ambition of my life to see him work—to catch him red handed."

"Well, for the sake of the community at large I hope you do. By the way, Mr. Doyle, as you have never seen this—er—Mr. Valentine work, how do you know that he uses nothing but his hands in opening safes?"

"Oh, we have a general idea about his system. He keeps his hands tender, soft, sensitive, and through a faculty seeming almost miraculous he is able to detect the movement of the tumblers that lock the safe as he turns the dials of the combination. This much we learned from one Red Flanagan, alias Tim Cronin, alias the 'White Rat,' the pal that Valentine took up with after he killed another pal named Cotton. Flanagan's right name is Jim. He did a bit at Joliet, and I think I'll be able to get him to testify against Valentine when I get him sewed up in Boston. What? Oh, yes; Red was always known as the 'White Rat' until he took to dyeing his hair vermilion."

Doyle looked at his watch. He nodded a farewell to Valentine and wheeled toward the door. He stopped momentarily and asked permission to "take another flash at that picture on the wall." Valentine gave his assent and watched the detective curiously. Doyle stepped in front of the photograph, took out his magnifying glass, a powerful reading glass, and again made a minute examination of the scene in the banquet hall, with "Mr. Lee Randall" sitting at the right of the toastmaster.

He turned, shot a searching look at Valentine and then drew close to the latter's desk.

"By the way," he said, "on my way out I'll stop and explain to the"—

"Mr. Lane, the president," reminded Valentine.

"Yes. I want to apologize for making accusations against you. Good day, Mr. Randall."

"Good day, Mr. Doyle."

Doyle stepped out into the hallway. As he drew the door toward him to close it he leaned forward and peered through the crack. He saw Valentine standing at his desk, and he also saw the young man's breast heave as though he was sighing in relief as at the ending of a trying ordeal.

Just as he was about to close the door and depart the door leading from the vault room into the assistant cashier's office burst violently open. Doyle heard the crash, and he also heard what followed it—a frenzied voice, an agonized voice, crying "Jimmy, Jimmy!"

"Jimmy!" Then that's his name, after all; it's Valentine!" gasped the detective, pushing the door open to better learn what was transpiring.

The voice was the voice of Red Flanagan, who, followed by little Bobby

"I WANT TO APOLOGIZE," SAID DOYLE.

Lane, had rushed frantically into the room.

"Jimmy," screamed Red, his eyes bulging outward in horror, "Bobby's locked Kitty in the new vault! We can't get her out!"

Valentine turned on Red like a panther.

"Where is the combination? Quick, man, quick!"

"The builders haven't sent it yet. Nobody knows it," choked Red.

GOULD CROWDED OUT

Indications of Waning Influence In Various Railroad Companies

New York, Feb. 16.—Pressed by the Rockefeller and Kuhn-Loeb interests, George J. Gould is shortly to relinquish the presidency of the Missouri Pacific Railway company, a position in which his father, the late Jay Gould, placed him eighteen years ago.

Mr. Gould announced his forthcoming retirement, which will take place just as soon as his successor is chosen. The fact that Gould will become chairman of the board does not alter the opinion generally held in financial circles that yesterday's developments mark the passing of the Gould influence, not only in Missouri Pacific, but in the various other railroads with which the name of Gould has for so many years been identified.

TORTURED BY ROBBERS

Cobbler Gives Up His Little Hoard After Being Badly Burned

New York, Feb. 16.—Torture by fire was resorted to by robbers who broke into the rooms of Joseph Wishnock, a cobbler, in Williamsburg, in their determination to make him reveal the hiding place of his small hoard of savings.

It was not until the two relentless robbers had burned off Wishnock's beard and hair and had blistered his face and neck with match flames that he revealed that his small store of $12 was hidden in the mattress on which his torturers had him pinned down.

At the hospital where the cobbler had his burns dressed, he identified two young men whom the police arrested as the pair who had tortured and robbed him. They were held for the grand jury.

POLICE SEIZE HATPINS

Women of Budapest Cannot Wear Them With Points Unprotected

Vienna, Feb. 16.—The prosecution of violators of the hatpin regulation has stopped in Budapest, but it is not a woman's victory.

The city administration found the prosecutions so numerous and costly that the police were instructed whenever they saw a hatpin with an unprotected point to summarily seize it.

The officers responded eagerly and more than 1200 trophies have been bagged already for the police museum.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WILL OWN VAST FOREST AREA

Government to Expend $11,000,000 For That Purpose

SENATE PASSES WEEKS BILL

Creates National Forest Reserves In White Mountains and Southern Appalachians and Embraces Many Other Features of Great Importance—But Five Senators Oppose Measure Which Has Been Delayed For Years

Washington, Feb. 16.—After many years of delay the Weeks bill, looking to the creation of national forest reserves in the White Mountains and the southern Appalachians, passed the senate late yesterday. The vote stood 57 to 9.

The negative votes were cast by Senators Bristow, Burton, Clark of Wyoming, Cullom, Gronna and McCumber, Republicans, and Senators Davis, Paynter and Shively, Democrats.

Just what the Weeks bill means may be thus summed up:

The government is to buy $11,000,000 of forest area. Nation and states are to co-operate for protection against forest fires and the salvation of timber lands. Drought and freshet along navigable streams which rise in mountains will be checked. It creates national forest reserves in the White Mountains and southern Appalachians.

The bill passed the house of representatives last session and as it was accepted by the senate without change, it lacks only the signature of the president to elevate in into a statute.

The entire day was given to the subject by the senate. Senators Brandegee and Gallinger stood as the especial sponsors for the measure. Barndegee made a brief speech in support, but Gallinger sacrificed an intended speech in the interest of an early vote.

Senators Simons and Newlands spoke in support of the bill, and Senators Burton and Heyburn in opposition. The supporters of the measure resisted all efforts at amendment, on the theory that any change would imperil the bill in the house. They were successful.

While it is understood on all sides that the purpose of the bill is the acquisition of lands in the White Mountains and the Appalachians in the southern states for the creation of forest reserves, it contains no specific mention of such purpose. The authority for this proceeding is found in the general powers conferred by the bill.

The carrying into effect of the provisions of the bill is placed in the hands of a commission to be composed of the secretary of war, the secretary of the interior and the secretary of agriculture and two senators and two members of the house of representatives.

The purchase of land is placed in the hands of the secretary of agriculture and is confined to such areas as may affect the headwaters of navigable streams.

No purchase is to be authorized until passed upon by the geological survey. The land once acquired, it is to be cut up into forest reserves as may seem best for administrative purposes.

Authority for co-operation with different states is given and $2,000,0000 a year is appropriated until 1915.

TRIPLE FUNERAL SERVICE

Burial of Keene Family, Who Figured In a Maine Tragedy

Oxford, Me., Feb. 16.—The residents of this town ceased work for a time while funeral services were being held in the Baptist church at Poland for Linwood S. Keene and his wife of Oxford and their 14-year-old son, Gerald, victims of the tragedy of last Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. D. W. Kimball officiated at the services, which were conducted by members of the Knights of Pythias. In compliance with a written request left by Mrs. Keene, her body was clothed in her wedding dress.

Keene died last Saturday and in fulfilment of a written agreement, Mrs. Keene on Sunday shot and killed her son and then took her own life.

She is the first woman, so far as local railroad men know, to occupy such a position in the United States. Her territory extends from Watertown, Ills., to Bettendorf, Ia.

Illinois Central Promotion

Chicago, Feb. 16.—Samuel G. Hatch, general passenger agent of the Illinois Central railway, has been promoted to the position of passenger traffic manager to succeed Albert H. Hanson, who retired after continuous service since 1869.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Banana Nut Salad. Boil one-half up each of sugar and water 5 minutes. Add juice of one-half lemon and boil two or three minutes. Select small ripe bananas, peel and roll each banana in cold sirup and then in chopped nuts. Dispose on heart leaves of lettuce; put dressing on each and sprinkle dressing with bits of candied cherries.

Dressing. Put beaten yolks of four eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, dash of paprika, one tablespoonful of lemon juice into a saucepan. Set over hot water, stir until it thickens, and when cool beat into one-third cup of heavy cream beaten solid. This salad is easily made during the winter months when fresh fruit is scarce and expensive, and the whites of the eggs can be used next day for a meringue for a cranberry and banana pudding.

Chicken Croquettes. Chop fine enough cooked chicken to make two cups, put one cup of milk into a double boiler; when it is hot add one rounding tablespoon of flour, two tablespoons of butter rubbed together. Cook three minutes, add salt and pepper and the chopped chicken. Cook two minutes, add two well beaten eggs and after mixing well set away to cool. Form into rolls, dip in crumbs, egg, and crumbs, and fry in deep fat.

Smoked Halibut. Shred into medium sized pieces two cupfuls of halibut and put it on the stove in a spider. Cover with cold water. Let it come to a scald but not to a boil. Then turn off the water and, covering again with cold water, scald again and then pour off the water. Take equal quantities of milk and water, enough to cover, thicken with flour wet in cold water, add two well-beaten eggs and butter the size of an egg and serve at once.

Corn Pats. Two tablespoons of flour to a pint of corn-pulp, two well beaten eggs, with salt and pepper to taste. Mix well with a very little milk to a batter, drop in hot fat, and fry or pour into buttered patty-pans, and bake.

Sweet Potatoes en Casserole. Wash and pare sweet potatoes and cut in three or four slices lengthwise. Mix one-half cup boiling water, two level tablespoons sugar and four level tablespoons butter. Put a layer of potato in the bottom of the casserole and sprinkle with salt and pepper; add a little of the liquid, then more potato and so on, until all are used. Cover closely and cook in a moderate oven for one hour, or until the potato is tender. Add more water if necessary.

Shakes at Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City, Feb. 16.—Four earthquake shocks were felt here at intervals of about fifteen minutes. No damage was done.

THE QUINCY TRAWLERS.

Two of the steam trawlers, the Foam and the Ripple, came into Boston, Wednesday, says the Globe, each with a large catch of haddock. The Ripple, Capt. Michael Green, was fortunate enough to strike a school of codfish, and swept in her net 11,500 pounds. This is the largest catch of cod any of the steam trawlers has made since they gave up fishing on cod grounds and went to the haddock grounds where the bottom is smooth and the nets do not tear. The explanation given is that the Ripple's net happened to sweep in a school of cod that was passing over the smooth bottom to reach their usual haunts.

The steam trawlers Ripple and Foam led in catches of the day, the former with 70,000 pounds of haddock, 11,500 pounds of cod, 800 pounds of pollock, 14,000 pounds of scrod and 300 pounds of sole, and the latter with 60,000 pounds of haddock, 3,000 pounds of cod, 200 pounds of pollock, 14,000 pounds of scrod and 200 pounds of sole.

A SERIOUS OMISSION.

The young men of Quincy Point are in a quandary and when you hear the reason you will agree that there is a reason. A society known as the Priscilla Sorority, composed of a circle of charming young ladies of the Point, has made it a custom in years past, to have an annual banquet and gents' night during the first week in February, and there was every reason to suppose that this year would prove to be no exception. But alas, no banquet was forthcoming, and the young men are uncertain just how to take it, whether to believe that the young ladies are agreed that such an occasion would be superfluous and unnecessary, or that here is a deeper, darker reason for foregoing the accustomed "feed and fun." At any rate the young men do not believe that the Priscillas are living up to the name and opportunities, and are really very anxious to know the truth of the matter.

SHARON CURSE APPEARS AGAIN

Lieut. Fermor-Hesketh Dropped From English Army.

LATEST OF FATE'S VICTIMS.

Wealth of Nevada Mine Owner and Senator Cause of Death or Disaster to Nearly All Connected With Its Acquisition, Spending or Spoliation and Now Descends to Grandson.

The name of Lieutenant Frederick Fermor-Hesketh of the Ninth lancers, who dropped out of sight last fall, has been stricken from the rolls of the British army because of absence without leave.

The lieutenant is the second son of Sir Thomas George Fermor and Lady Fermor-Hesketh and a grandson of the late William Sharon, United States senator from Nevada. Lady Fermor-Hesketh's maiden name was Florence Emily Sharon. She was married in 1880.

A worldwide search for the lieutenant, instituted soon after his disappearance, failed to reveal any clew as to his whereabouts. He is twenty-eight years old and was educated in the Royal Military college at Sandhurst and at Trinity college, Cambridge.

He left his mother's residence at Easton Neston, Towcester, the afternoon of Oct. 29, saying he would return soon for dinner. The last seen of him was on the following morning when he landed from a steamer at Kingstown, Ireland. It has been suggested he sailed for the United States. The family can offer no explanation.

Curse Follows Sharon Gold.

The disappearance of Lieutenant Hesketh and his expulsion from the army make another chapter in the misfortunes and tragedies that have followed those who have come under the curse of the Sharon gold.

William Sharon was one of the Gold hills pioneers. He stepped out of cowhide boots into patent leathers, from a mountain shack to a city mansion. From the Crown Point and Belcher mines in Nevada he became a senator. The wealth he left behind made a pyramid of millions and likewise a pyramid of trouble.

William C. Ralston, who often had shared the output of his battered coffeepot with Sharon in his roughshod days, started the list. When the financial pinch caught Sharon's bank and frightened San Francisco didn't know whether its money was good, bad or indifferent Ralston accused Sharon and then took his own life.

Getting back to Sharon, the forty-niner, some time after the death of Mrs. Sharon Senator Sharon was sued by a woman known as Sarah Althea Hill. She entered into the contest for Sharon's money with energy and zeal. Her counsel was David S. Terry.

Chain Embraces Terry.

Terry was a leader of the southern California Democrats. He was elected chief justice of the California supreme court and had served just long enough to become familiar with the judicial routine when he and Senator David C. Broderick, entertaining conflicting opinions, adopted the hair trigger method of settlement at the prescribed fifteen paces. Broderick waited for the second. Terry split it and fired. Broderick fell dead.

Terry pleaded the cause of his robust client before Justice Stephen J. Field. Sharon died, but Sarah Althea Hill's suit lived on. Terry one day surprised his friends by marrying his client.

Justice Field ordered the cancellation of the marriage contract on the ground of forgery. Justice Field stepped off a train. Terry and his wife coincidently stepped from a train at the same time. Terry stepped behind Field and slapped his face with the back of his hand. A marshal shot Terry dead.

Charles Livingston, who was a protege of Sharon's, became manager of the Palace hotel in San Francisco. Livingston had boarded at one time with a certain Sarah Mitchell when the fight to get at the Sharon millions was at its height. Miss Mitchell came to the front with a package of mysterious letters. She demanded $50,000 for them, but she didn't get it. There was talk of a conspiracy. Livingston's name was mentioned unpleasantly in that connection. One morning he was found dead in his room in the Palace hotel with a pistol shot in his heart.

Fate Still Pursuing.

Sharon's two daughters grew to womanhood surrounded by luxury. One daughter fell in love with Senator Newlands of Nevada and became his wife. The other, Florence Emily Sharon, was married to Sir Thomas George Fermor-Hesketh.

Lady Hesketh had two sons, both soldiers. The lieutenant of lancers who disappeared was the younger. Her life has been in danger three times since her marriage. She was thrown from her mount while riding with the Grafton hounds at Sulgrave and barely escaped being crushed under the animal's hoofs. In 1906 she was bitten by a dog, and it required a dozen stitches to unite the wound. She also underwent a surgical operation for the removal of a fragment of spine.

The Palace hotel and hundreds of other pieces of Sharon property were burned in the fire which followed the earthquake on the Pacific coast.

Observers Alarmed Over Prevalence of Diamond Rows.

MAGNATES ARE AT ODDS

Signs and Rumors Point to Friction Among Several Club Owners In National League—May Disrupt Old Organization.

There is a well authenticated rumor that major league baseball is on the verge of a big upheaval. Before the last eruption of Vesuvius the crater became active and underground rumblings gave warnings which the inhabitants of the mountain slopes, in their fancied security, refused to hear. Previous to the earthquake which buried Messina came minor tremblings, which were disregarded by those accustomed to them. In both cases, however, there were pessimistic scientists and wise old timers who looked for trouble.

There are today veteran followers of the national game who claim to have sensed various signs unfavorable to continued quiet in the baseball world. These men meet unostentatiously and discuss the following facts and fancies:

It is an open secret that there is friction in the National league. In spite of the feeling against syndicate ball, the finger of suspicion points to some underground connection between certain clubs whose real ownership is unknown. Some presidents of clubs are widely at variance as to how the league should be run, and there are at least two opposing factions.

Big Row Is Started.

Things went so far that report credited Herrmann with the determination to drive Murphy and Fogel from the league. Stories that were very close to personalities were permitted to appear in the newspapers. From Cincinnati came the statement that the Chicago quarters for visiting players were a disgrace to the club, while from the Windy City came the retort that the accommodations were what the vandalism of the Cincinnati team had made them.

At the annual meeting of the National league in 1909 there was a deadlock when it came to electing a league president. Cincinnati, Pittsburg, St. Louis and Boston were on one side, while Chicago, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and New York opposed them. Thomas J. Lynch was elected as a compromise candidate. At the recent annual meeting Herrmann wished to re-elect Lynch for a term of years and leave the league schedule in his hands. Murphy, with Ebbets and Fogel standing firmly behind him, was able to prevent both proposals from being adopted.

Ebbets was dropped from the schedule committee, on which he had served for years. Lynch appointed Murphy to the rules committee, and Herrmann and Robison resigned from that body.

A story emanated from somewhere that some magnates favored the adoption of a new official league ball, and Dame Rumor has again come forward and whispered that Murphy is backing a new Chicago manufacturer of baseballs.

There is a report which emanates from well informed sources that Fletcher of third league fame has been approached by experienced baseball men and asked about his original plans, also what contracts and promises he was able to secure and just what he could actually do if he was called upon to go ahead.

The national agreement has comparatively little longer to run. Options have been secured on various properties suitable for ball parks by unknown persons. Several players have got long term contracts. Rumor says that Ban Johnson would not be averse to a twelve club circuit in the American league. The receipts from baseball last year were not what they were in 1909.

Will all clouds disappear from the baseball sky, leaving it calm and clear? Many persons believe that the whole thing is but a tempest in a teapot, anyhow. They maintain that it is merely a case of crying "Wolf, wolf!" to stir up excitement. The veterans who disagree with them merely point out that at the end of that story the wolf arrived.

KEENE TO RACE ABROAD.

Famous Horseman Will Continue to Breed Horses In Kentucky.

The James R. Keene stable is not likely to figure largely in turf events in America during the coming season, according to advices received recently. The best of the string will be raced in England hereafter. The Keene breeding establishment in Kentucky will be continued, however.

A further report in this connection is that James Rowe, who has trained the Keene horses for years, has amicably severed his relations with the veteran horseman, who is now in Europe, and will train H. B. Duryea's horses in England and France during the approaching racing campaign in those countries.

Winnings of Keene horses on American tracks during the past ten years foot up nearly $2,000,000.

The Attendance at Banquet Crowded All the Rooms

The rededication banquet of the First Presbyterian church Thursday evening brought out one of the largest assemblages ever gathered within the walls of the church. The enlarged lecture room was filled and the two smaller rooms in back were occupied, in fact every available nook and crannie was utilized.

It was nearly 7.30 before the guests came down from the auditorium, and took seats around the well laden tables. After singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," Dr. James Todd asked the blessing. Then the charming young ladies of the church who acted as waitresses, assisted in the serving of the five thousand more or less, and when all were finished a microscope would have been needed to find the remaining portions; such was the culinary skill of the Ladies Aid society which furnished the food.

The menu was as follows:

Chicken salad

DERAILMENTS AT BRAINTREE

Causes a Mixup and Delay of Evening Trains

The time table on the railroad was badly mixed up Thursday night owing to a series of derailments just north of the Braintree station, with the result that hundreds of commuters and theatre goers were badly inconvenienced.

The trouble started shortly before 6 o'clock when the two rear cars of the train leaving Boston at 5.17 left the iron at the point where the South Shore track leaves the main line. This train runs express from Norfolk Downs to Braintree, and it is customary to detach these cars at South Braintree. By the time the train left Norfolk Downs the two cars were empty as the few passengers left had gone forward, so that there would be no delay.

As the train passed over the switch the forward truck next to the last car left the iron. The bumping of the car caused it to break away from the main train and freed from the train went skipping across the track in such a manner as to completely block both inward and outward rails. There are many trains at this hour of the night, and soon there was a long line of waiting trains extending north of the Quincy station.

The wrecker was summoned, but it was after 7 o'clock before it arrived, and in the meantime the Quincy station was packed with people. Some wishing to take the train for Boston, while others residing south of Quincy were equally as anxious to get home. At 8 o'clock trains had begun to move again, but the schedule was out of geer.

Fortunately there was no one in the derailed cars at the time, and no one was therefore injured.

Later in the evening while an outward freight train was passing the same point, four cars left the iron completely blocking both the outward and inward tracks. This was in the vicinity of 10 o'clock and those from the south of Braintree, who had succeeded in getting to Boston had equally as hard a time getting home.

It was several hours before matters were straightened out. Some idea of the tangle may be had when it is said that the train due to leave Quincy for Boston at 11.20 did not leave Quincy until 12.35. No particular damage was done to the cars but as trains south of Quincy were also held up and many people who had planned theatre parties or had planned to take the late trains for New York were unusually inconvenienced.

OF PLEASURE TO BOTH

Visitors to Sailors' Haven and the Sailors Delighted

St. Chrysostom's parish journeyed nearly en masse to Sailors Haven, Charlestown, on Thursday evening where an entertainment for the benefit of the sailors was given under the auspices of the Men's club.

About 140 from Wollaston and Norfolk Downs were greeted by Captain King in his hearty manner and room was made for the entire crowd upon the platform. The main body was somewhat delayed on account of a railroad accident and when they arrived found the meeting in full swing, the hearty voices of 500 sailors being led by Captain King who was enthusiastically beating a bass drum.

Wollaston's first contribution was a Hebrew comedy sketch by William Rice and Frank Ewing that included several dialect songs. The sketch was received with hearty applause and the vocal solo of Miss Edna Fowler that followed also found favor.

Next on the program came a selection from Scott pleasingly delivered by Harry Beckwith. Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, pastor of St. Chrysostom's church spoke a few words of felicitation to the sailors. The contralto solo of Miss Celta Johnson was most pleasing while in the song of Frank E. Lee's all present joined in the chorus.

A novel feature was the drill of the "Caddy boys" by some of the younger members of the choir. These were dressed in Highland garb and carried golf clubs, the solo part being sung by Edward Gallup, Jr.

The boys consisted of Roger Allen, George Vibert, Sumner Vibert, Horatio Holland, Ellis McTear, Ellsmere Smith, Edward Gallup, Jr., and Edwin Geyer.

Promptly at 9.30 coffee and buns were served after which festivities were resumed. On the stage is the complete upper rigging of a ship and at a word from Captain King some of the spryer sailors sprang to the yards and unfurled the sails while another line hauled in the sheet keeping time to a lively chorus in regular man o' war style. These manoeuvers so novel to the visitors were greeted with loud applause and the program continued with readings by Miss Catherine Bennett.

In response to repeated requests Captain King gave his good old standby the song "Old King Cole," the sailors singing the chorus with a will. The program concluded with taking songs by Master Charlie Black and his sister Allison.

A tour of the building by the visitors followed in which it was seen that in one place at least brotherly love and good-fellowship had taken the place of mistaken charity and that the sailor although allowed to enjoy himself in his own way left the Haven a better man.

In charge of the program were a committee of the Men's club consisting of A. E. Holland, Theodore Parker, Archie Briggs, T. L. A. Musgrave, William Purdon and Charles Vibert.

The boys continued the musical program on the 11.10 train homeward bound.

ST. MARY'S REUNION.

For the past two weeks, the committee of arrangements for the annual parish reunion of St. Mary's church have been busily engaged in arranging the details for the affair. Stephen B. Little has been appointed chairman of the general committee, and he has succeeded in imparting a marked degree of enthusiasm and interest in his committee. A pleasing program has been arranged, which will fill the entire evening, and a pleasant time is promised. The feature of the evening will be the drama "Carroty Nell," by the St. Mary's guild. This play was presented a few weeks ago by these ladies and was a pronounced success, therefore this part will be appreciated. The latter part of the evening will be devoted to dancing.

The following ladies have been selected to assist in the arrangement of the details of the party, in their respective sections:

Common street—Misses Susie A. Pickering, Louise A. Mahoney, Eva Bertrand, Mary Saville, Margaret Burke, Elizabeth Riley, Josephine Grignon, Mollie Connolly, Elizabeth Rolleau, Mary A. Egan, Lulu A. Pickering and Agnes Smollett.

THE DREDGING BILL.

A hearing was held before the Harbor and Land Commissioners Wednesday on the matter of dredging a basin near the Quincy Yacht Club house. The amount which the Harbor and Land Commissioners was asked to apportion for this purpose is $3000. To help along the good work the Yacht Club at its annual meeting voted to appropriate the sum of $300 toward the project. Ex-Commodore Crane had charge of the hearing Wednesday, and while there were quite a number present, the only speakers for the petition were Commodore Whittemore and Representative Thomas and Langelier. These gentlemen put up a strong argument why the commision should apportion that amount. There was no oppostion to the scheme.

GRAND BALL EN MASQUE

Prizes Awarded to Two Ladies and Two Gentlemen

The first annual masquerade party of Abigail Adams lodge, I. C. of A., was held Thursday evening at Alpha hall and was largely attended. Garmory's orchestra furnished the music and the hours were from 8 to 2 o'clock. From 8 to 9 o'clock the orchestra gave a promenade concert, during which time those who were to participate were arriving and busy arranging their disguises before they entered upon the floor to mystify the spectators and keep them guessing as to their identity.

The dance opened at 9 o'clock with a march and circle, in which upwards of fifty couples participated. The costumes for the most part were home made, yet none the less attractive, some of them being remarkably good. The fourth number on the program was a quadrille unmask. The dance over the cornet sounded and the command came to discard the masks that covered the faces of the dancers. This was followed by many exclamations of surprise on the part of those participating, especially surprise being expressed when a gentleman found that the charming damsel he had been paying marked attention to was his wife.

This dance over, the order was resumed with a brief intermission at midnight, during which refreshments were served.

While the party were enmasque the judges were busy deciding to whom should be awarded the prizes. These were four in number and were awarded to the neatest attired and the most comical attired lady and gentleman. The judges were Councilman George A. Bolster, Robert E. Foy, Alex. Russell and Alex. Hall. Those to receive the prizes were, Mrs. Elizabeth Boutilier, Walter S. Nicol, Miss Anna Anderson and James Matheson.

Those in charge of the masquerade were as follows:

Floor Directress—Ida Cheechi.

Assistant Floor Directress—Annie Norrie.

Chief of Aids—Belle Stronach, assisted by Alice Nicol, Maggie Gorman, Lizzie McKee, Helen Kennedy, Ruth Kelly, Lucy Brault and Julia O'Brien.

Committee of Arrangements—Elizabeth Boutilier, Mary Pritchard, Mary Garmory, Jane Lillie, Alice Nicol, Mrs. Denton, Ida Cheechi, Mrs. Boutilier, Mrs. Mischler, Mrs. Cotter, Belle Stronach, Annie Norrie.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Surrounding towns are in the midst of lively political contests preparatory to the annual March meetings.

If the tax craze continues Massachusetts will be taxed out of existence and its people and business will seek more congenial states. The latest proposition is that theatres and other places of amusement, and "all theatrical, legal or judicial officers or talent," to pay into the state treasury their receipts in excess of 10 per cent, received over and above their expenses, and incomes of $50 a day, week or performance.

The editor of the Natick Bulletin is of the same opinion as some of our councilmen who recently caused a good many poles to be eliminated on Hancock street much improving the looks of the city. He says: "It would almost seem as if a commission is needed in Natick to do away with unsightly poles. It is no uncommon sight to see telephone, electric light and trolley poles in a bunch, where one would answer the purpose. Why not adopt some special system of pole locations? The companies and town could undoubtedly agree upon what must be the best interest of all.

The net earnings of the Citizens Gas Company available for dividends conue to increase rapidly. In January they amounted to $2,027 as compared with $1,327 in January 1910, and deficits in previous years.

For the seven months ending Jan. 31, the net earnings were $16,032, compared with $3,098 for the same period of 1909-10.

In percentage of gas output for the seven months, the Quincy company showed the largest increase, over 28 per cent. The Newton & Watertown company was second with 17 per cent; the East Boston company third with 13 per cent., and the increase of the Boston Consolidated was less than 4 per cent. The Quincy company also had the largest per cent of increase in output in January.

The figures for the month of February will be awaited with considerable interest as a reduction in rate went into effect in Quincy on Feb. 1.

THE 300TH ANNIVERSARY.

The tercentennial of the King James version of the English Bible was observed Feb. 7 all over the British empire, and has been noted in many American churches.

The genius manifested by this famous translation is indicated by the difficulty with which it is being supplanted by the Revised version. It is an open question whether the majority of the Protestant churches have or have not adopted the latter, the New Testament form of which was issued just 30 years ago. The King James version came into general use 40 years after it was printed. Although the present is a time when new ideas are accepted with comparative rapidity, the Revised version is accepted with much more difficulty than the version it succeeded.

The hold of the King James or Authorized version is due to its style of matches vigor. In the endeavor to secure a more literal accuracy, the revisers of 1881 blurred and toned down many virile old phrases, and often broke up the musical rhythm which gives the older version a poetic charm.

The Bible owes its peculiarly virile language, which has immeasurably influenced English speech largely to the genius of John Wyclif and William Tyndale. Wyclif's purpose was to produce a translation such that the "pore man might read the truth." Hency he adopted homely everyday terms of English speech, discarding the more elegant and literal but less vigorous forms of Anglicized Latin.

Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun, in some respects the most brilliant journalist ever produced in this country, once spoke of familiarity with the Bible as one of the most desirable qualifications for a newspaper writer. Mr. Dana's genius was not of a churchy type. But his keen intellect recognized the immense stores of practical insight into human life, and the wonderful vigor of English style, which makes the Bible a peerless book, even apart from all spiritual significance.

BOY SCOUT PROVED MERIT.

Helped Policeman Stop Runaway and Prevented Water Damage.

The practical value of the boy scout movement has been made clear to a Providence (R. I.) policeman by two acts of helpfulness in which a boy of fifteen, a member of the local organization, recently figured.

The patrolman had just managed to stop a runaway team when, glancing around, he saw a boy hanging to the other bridle. "I'll hold the horse, sir, until the owner comes up," said the boy, and he did.

The same boy a few days later happened to hear water running inside a house and, finding it impossible to arouse any one, took a long, cold walk to the city hall and notified the water department. Inquiry showed that a pipe had frozen and burst and that serious loss would have resulted had the deluge continued.

MONTENEGRINS BIG FEEDERS.

Legislator Presents Ox to Fellows and Adjournment Follows.

It is reported from Cettinje that the members of the skupshtina were still feasting on the third day of the orthodox Christmas on the remains of the well fed ox presented by Mirdelo Jljitch, a patriotic peasant, to the Montenegrin house of representatives. The arrival of the animal in Cettinje caused a sensation in the capital.

Mirdelo led it himself in front of the skupshtina, and the legislators hurried out to view it and discuss the place and manner of roasting, with all other details so that it could be partaken of in accordance with the donor's intent comfortably and fraternally by all the members. With the disappearance of the last shred of beef the house will resume its labors, and a vote of thanks will be passed to Mirdelo.

Imports Show Big Increase.

A complete report from the New York custom house for 1910 will show an increase of $236,000,000 in the value of imports above the figures of the previous year.

Tales of Cities.

Fourteen per cent of the area of London is free from buildings, while Berlin has 10 per cent free space and Paris 4½ per cent.

Chicago's amphitheater at the stockyards, where the international live stock shows are held, is one of the largest in the world.

Each twenty-four hours there are arrivals of 120 strangers in New York city who do not arrive by cars or boats, and neither do they walk or come through the air. They are born there.

HUBBARD'S CLOSE CALL

Author Is Pinned to Wall Between Tusks of a Trick Elephant

Portland, Ore., Feb. 17.—While attending a reception in his honor given by the Portland Press club, Elbert Hubbard was attacked by a trick elephant which had been taken up to the club, and it was only by rare luck that he escaped death, or at least serious injury. The elephant is in Portland with a theatrical company.

Soon after Hubbard had seated himself in the club the undersized jungle child was led in and taken to the guest of honor. Hubbard grasped the extended trunk of the animal, which twice wrapped it around the author's neck. Suddenly the beast lunged forward with trunk uplifted.

The tusks passed by Hubbard's head and pinned him fast to the wall. On each side of the guest's neck showed the ugly white tusks, bedded in the wall.

Then the trainer whipped the brute off and Hubbard, deathly pale but uninjured, crept from the chair to a place of safety.

POLICEMAN A THIEF

Sentenced to Four Months In Prison on Three Counts of Larceny

Somerville, Mass., Feb. 17.—William E. Taylor, reserve officer of the Somerville police force, was found guilty of larceny in three counts by Judge Wentworth in the district court. He was given a total sentence of four months in the house of correction on the three convictions. He appealed from each one and was held in $600 for the superior court.

On a charge of breaking and entering and larceny probable cause was found against Taylor and he was held for the superior court in $1500.

The judge scored Taylor's defense severely in summing up. Captain Perry of the Somerville police, who prosecuted the case, asked the court to bear in mind the position of trust that Taylor had held as a policeman.

STARVING CHINESE BECOME CANNIBALS

Stories of Barbarism Are Confirmed by Missionaries

Pekin, Feb. 17.—Several cases of cannibalism, the result of the great Chinese famine, are reported from the province of Kiang-Si, the center of the starvation zone. According to these reports a man, a woman and two children were killed and their flesh eaten by villagers in the community west of the Tayuling mountains, just south of the tea district.

From Canton and Shanghai dispatches were received from missions which confirm the stories of barbarism. Missionaries in the field in the famine belt have sent word that the famished people are insane from suffering and that rioting is frequent. Soldiers sent into the district have been attacked.

ADMIRAL NAZRO DEAD

Had Spent More Than Twenty-Three Years In Sea Service

Boston, Feb. 17.—Rear Admiral Arthur P. Nazro, U. S. N., retired, died suddenly at his home in this city from a stroke of apoplexy. Nazro was commandant at Cavite, P. I., for two years, and while there his health began to fail. In March, 1910, he was retired from the navy, having reached the age limit. He had a sea service of more than twenty-three years, and on shore duty of nineteen years and six months.

Admiral Nazro was born in Milwaukee in 1850, but when young came to Boston with his parents. He received his appointment to the naval academy in 1865. Four years later he was graduated from the academy.

Maine House Passes Resolution Previously Adopted by Senate

Augusta, Me., Feb. 17.—The house passed the resolve resubmitting to the people the constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

The vote was 105 to 40, which was more than the necessary two-thirds majority. The resolution already had passed the senate.

CONTEMPT FOR "FAKE HEROES"

Expressed by Macon In Bitter Speech In the House

PEARY VIOLENTLY ATTACKED

Arkansan Says "Unfaithful Servant and Idle Loafer" Should Be Driven From Naval Service Instead of Being Promoted—"Hero of San Juan Hill" Comes In For Attention—Peary's Friends Reply to Expletives

Washington, Feb. 17.—Representative Macon of Arkansas, speaking in general debate on the naval appropriation bill in the house last night, made a sensational attack upon Captain Robert E. Peary, denouncing him as a "fakir" and declaring that he "should be driven from the naval service."

Mr. Macon, who evoked laughter in the house several days ago by announcing that in using the language "wilful and deliberate liar, dirty little pilferer of words and contemptible little ass," he had gone about as far as his "fellowship with the Methodist church permitted," added some original phrases to the history of debates in the house last night.

He said that Peary's whole story was "a fake pure and simple." He said his contempt for "fake heroes" was supreme, and he intimated that he put "the hero of San Juan hill" in that class. Macon denounced the Peary Arctic club and charged that it maintained a paid lobby in Washington. He said that President Taft's judgment in this matter was not to be accepted, for he congratulated Cook as heartily as he did Peary.

He referred to Peary as a "fur trader," picturing him as "a self-exaggerated, self-opinionated, puffed up near hero," and finally denounced him as "an unfaithful servant and and idle loafer, who ought to be driven from the service instead of being promoted."

Mr. Macon expressed the belief that Peary and Cook, on one of the trips to the north when they were companions, figured out that it would be easy for a man to "fake" a discovery of the Pole, and he charged that they both started out at the same time to claim the discovery.

He said that instead of being rewarded with promotion to the rank of rear admiral, as President Taft and the committee on naval affairs have recommended, Peary's feat was, at best, worthy only of a medal like those awarded to Marathon runners.

The bitter words used by Macon were quickly answered by Peary's friends. Representative Moore of Pennsylvania, after vainly attempting at interrupt Macon, finally got the floor in his own right. He characterized Macon's speech "as unjust, outrageous and offensive."

He said there was always someone to be found to suspect every performance by men of genius and courage. He referred to Captain Hobson's exploit of the Merrimac and to Dewey's victory at Manila bay.

"Heroes like these," said Moore, "have not the time to stop and deal with every dog that barks at their heels."

RYAN'S BODY ENTOMBED

Archbishop Glennon of St. Louis preached the funeral sermon. The body was interred in a crypt behind the altar in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul.

GUILTY OF POISONING

Men Accused of Killing Count Bouturlin Are Convicted

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—A verdict of guilty was returned last night against Count O'Brien de Lassy and Dr. Pantchenko for the poisoning of Count Vassilli Bouturlin.

In the case of Mme. Muravieff, a verdict of not guilty was returned.

The jury recommended mercy in the case of Pantchenko, on account of extenuating circumstances.

To Wed His Stepsister

Lynn, Mass., Feb. 17.—William E. Bell, a local clerk, has taken out a license to wed his stepsister, Miss Fannie E. Burrows. Bell did not see Miss Burrows until a few months ago, but he fell in love with her four years ago, when he was first shown a picture of her by his stepfather.

Little Boy Kills Baby Sister

Plainville, Conn., Feb. 17.—Mary Linquist, 2½ years old, was shot and instantly killed by her brother John, 6 years old, at their home here. The boy was playing with a revolver and accidentally discharged it, the bullet entering the girl's brain.

PIGS, DUCKS AND A GOAT

At the Annual Farmers' Ball at Braintree

The eighth annual Farmers' ball under the auspices of the Braintree club was held in the Town hall, Thursday evening and was by all odds the biggest and best yet given by the club. The hall was crowded to the doors with people anxious to see the fun and seats were at a premium. Hay, straw, harnesses and farming implements were used very effectively in the decorations and the main chandelier was gorgeous with its rows of illuminated pumpkins. Two small pigs with nursing bottles furnished great amusement for the spectators while ducks quacked and flew about at will and a goat with a suitably inscribed blanket was a prominent feature. Vegetables, stacks of fodder corn and bundles of straw adorned the stage and two sheep looked out placidly from a large crate.

The members of the orchestra and the club were cleverly dressed as "Rubes" and aspirants for prizes strode about clad in various original and outlandish guises. Cuff's orchestra of seven pieces furnished flawless music and there was something doing all the time from 8 P. M. until 1 A. M.

Shortly after eight o'clock there was a parade of the farm hands led by Edward P. Cuff, president of the club, with Mr. J. J. Robinson of Brockton as a country constable acting as drum major.

Dancing followed until about 9.30 o'clock when the march of would-be prize winners was reviewed by the judges. The parade was led by Edward P. Cuff and Mrs. John Dyer followed by Ernest Coose and Mrs. Bessie Lowry, Arthur J. Lynch and Miss Gertrude Barnes and about thirty couples in strange garb.

The judges were: Harry Starr of Holbrook, L. B. Rogers of Brockton, William Tonner of Weymouth, Miss May Hyde of Lynn and Mrs. F. R. Grover of Randolph. Theirs was no easy task but the winners were announced as follows:

First gentleman's prize to Arthur J. Lynch of Brockton for most original costume.

Second to Mr. J. J. Robinson of Brockton as the country cop.

Third to George S. Robinson of Monello, who was a hit as the "candy kid."

First ladies' prize to Miss Mary L. Campbell of South Braintree as a milkmaid.

Second to Miss May Darney of Lynn as a farmer's lassie.

Third to Miss Katherine Dean of Roxbury, the champion fat girl.

The ruling of the judges was greeted with loud applause and dancing was resumed. At 10.30 intermission was declared for a few minutes and the following "prizes" were presented to the holders of lucky numbers:

We pare of pigs, Miss Angie McKenna, Boston.

Barrel of Flouar, Thomas Mahoney, South Braintree.

Turkey alive, C. Hendrie, Boston.

One-half ton koal ter burn, Mrs. W. M. Call, South Braintree.

Pare chickens alive fer eggs, Peter Buzzi, Quincy.

Some squash 50 lbs., Miss Etta Hayden, Braintree.

Cabbages 2 dozen fer cookin, E. S. Hall, South Braintree.

Barrel of potatoes fer cellar, P. J. Walsh, South Weymouth.

Ice cream was on sale throughout the evening in the lower hall and dancing was enjoyed until one o'clock with the exception of a short intermission at 11.30. The whole affair was clean, orderly and without a single objectionable feature and reflects great credit on the management. The hall was taxed to its capacity with merry dancers and onlookers and the financial returns must have been of a very satisfactory nature.

The following gentlemen, members of the club, were in charge of the evening's proceedings and also served most acceptably as the committee of arrangements:

Boss of the barn, Edward P. Cuffe.

Assistant bosses, Moses H. McGaughey, Seth Catlin, Jr., Henry A. Barnes, Walter R. Howland.

Farm hands, Dr. C. V. Haworth, Norton P. Potter, Hugh Durward, George D. Willis, Jr., Charles H. H. Bailey, Edward J. Lane, Walter L. Beane, John B. Dyer, George E. Stone, Dudley P. Howland, Frank T. Lyons, Thomas A. Weston.

There were special cars at the close of the dance for Quincy, Randolph and Holbrook.

For the Thin and Bloodless!

The thin and bloodless, with pale cheeks, white lips and frail, angular physique, of this community have been much interested in the reports of physicians and others concerning the effectiveness of the treatment for increasing the red and white corpuscles of the blood, thus adding color and weight with its accompanying vigor to the depleted system. A gain of from ten to thirty pounds is not at all unusual where the treatment is regularly used for several months, while the color improves almost from the beginning. Most good apothecaries supply it in the from of three-grain hypnuclane tablets, put up in sealed packets, with directions for home use. Its action aids assimilation and absorption of the food eaten very promptly.

MASQUERADE AT HOUGHS NECK

Prizes Awarded to T. F. Phillips and Miss Finlay

Upwards fo 75 couples participated in the masquerade party held by the winter residents of Houghs Neck Thursday evening. The party was in charge of W. E. Brown and C. W. Munroe, and was held in the Bungalow dance hall.

A larger part of the participants were in costume and some of the get ups were remarkably good and created no end of amusement. Some of the costumes were original and there were several good take offs of well known residents of the beach.

The participants remained hidden behind their masks for the first four or five dances, and then came the unmasking which was accompanied by roars of laughter as the identity of the masquers became known.

Two prizes were given for the best get ups, and the judges had some difficulty in awarding the prizes. They finally decided that Thomas F. Phillips, who impersonated an Indian chief, should be given the gentlemen's prize, while the ladies' prize should be awarded to Miss Theo Findlay, who wore a handsome and striking fancy costume. Dancing was continued until midnight.

THE RESERVOIR CONTRACT.

The much-talked water contract between the city and the Fore River Ship Building Co., was considered by the Finance committee of the City Council Thursday evening. The discussion was a lengthy one and it was near midnight before an adjournment was reached. Among those present were Mayor Shea and Treasurer Sedgwick of the Fore River Company. Petitions were received requesting that a public hearing be given by the City Council, but the committee is said to be divided on that point. It is reported that the company are ready to make modifications in the contract as drawn, and some amendments will probably be reported. Another meeting of the committee will be held Saturday night.

HOMESICK, HE TRAVELS 78 MILES TO HIS WORK.

Illinois Legislator at Capital Before Others Are Awake.

Buckwheat cakes and country sausage at home in Edwardsville at 5 a. m., legislative duties in Springfield from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. and back to steaming hot muffins and fried chicken at home at 8 p. m.—such is the itinerary of State Representative William Dickman of Illinois in his daily round trip between home and statehouse, with which he staves off nostalgia.

An hour or two before dawn Dickman arises, and after getting the day's work on his farm started he sits down to a toothsome meal of home grown ham and eggs, cakes, sausage and milk, all of a freshness that is a stranger to the lunch counters and dining halls of Springfield.

He takes a trolley car at his farm gate just as the sun comes up and speeds off on his run of seventy-eight miles, reaching Springfield before the call boys at the hotels start to rouse his colleagues from their slumbers.

An hour before Speaker Adkins mounts the deck of the ship of state Dickman is in his seat. He spends the day in legislative activities and at nightfall is off again on his return trip of seventy-eight miles—no homesickness for him so long as home is within three hours' reach.

"I believe in enjoying all the comforts of home so long as my public business does not suffer," says Dickman. "I'm strong for the fresh eggs, the fresh milk and the rest of it. I admit one can get good food in Springfield, but it's worth a seventy-eight mile ride to sit down with one's family, isn't it?"

—The attempt to increase our merchant marine on the high seas by the giving of subsidies will probably fail, says the Christian Register. But, if it should succeed, it would benefit only the trusts without expanding our commerce to its natural limits. Everybody knows why our merchant marine has vanished, and knows that the beginning of its resurrection will come when we abolish our shipping laws and allow American citizens to buy ships wherever they can get them cheapest and bring them under the American flag. This plan would harm nobody and in time would stimulate our ship-building interests and give us back that welcome sight,—the Stars and Stripes floating in all the harbors of the world.

FORMER PASTORS AT BANQUET

voices was very pleasing, and the selections were greatly appreciated by all.

Rev. James A. Matheson, pastor of the church acted as toastmaster in the post-prandial exercises.

Rev. A. M. Thompson, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, spoke briefly congratulating the pastor and people on the splendid work they had done.

Dr. James Alexander told a number of stories in his inimitable manner and extended his heartiest congratulations to all who had done the work and all who would benefit by it.

Mrs. Thomas Milne sang a splendid solo.

Dr. Herbert Manchester of East Boston was called upon. His speech was brief but to the point and met with the approbation of all.

Rev. R. J. Davis, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, extended his congratulations and wished the people the greatest enjoyment in their service of the King in the renewed church.

Andrew Milne, chairman of the building committee, spoke briefly telling of the work of the committee, and expressing for the committee the pleasure they had in seeing the building completely renovated and ready for use.

Forbes Craig, chairman of the trustees, expressed his pleasure in having the church remodeled and beautified.

A very pleasing duet "Friendship" was rendered by Miss Margaret J. Michael and Miss Minnie Miller. At the conclusion the selection was loudly encored.

Alexander Clark, superintendent of the Bible school, spoke of the increased and improved accommodations for classes and the better facilities for carrying on the work with the children and young people.

Alfred Bishop spoke in behalf of the session and added his felicitations to those of the former speakers.

Mrs. Robert Grant then rendered a beautiful solo.

Dr. James Todd of Boston, a former pastor of the church, recalled the pleasure of former years in connection with the Quincy church, and rejoiced with the people in their progress and enthusiasm.

Rev. N. J. Sproul, also a former pastor, was the last speaker of the evening. His reception was most cordial and he reciprocated in his speech by expressing the love he had for the church and people, and the many happy memories he had in connection with his ministry in Quincy. In closing, he wished them Godspeed in their work and expressed his belief they were going on to greater things.

Owing to the long list of speakers each was allowed only a few minutes, but even so it was about half past ten before the last speaker had finished.

The evening was most happy throughout, and all seemed to be in the mood of self-congratulation in that everything was completed as far as the edifice is concerned. It now rests with the people to render better service with their better church building.

QUINCY GRANITE

J. S. Swingle, the "Extra Dark Man." delivered a paper at the recent convention of the Iowa Granite Association which was well received, and went a long ways in advertising Quincy. His subject was:—"What Quincy has to offer." It is reproduced in full and should give Quincy courage:

Quincy offers the best monumental stone in the market for high grade, enduring memorials, and has been the standard of excellence for years past.

While it has been quarried and worked for scores of years, yet the output has not been lessened; in fact, with the increased demand there has been the increased production, and there is more of it and better quality than ever before in the history of this great industry.

At the time of the building of the Bunker Hill Monument there was much fear that there would not be sufficient material to complete this structure, and it was a matter for serious consideration for the Massachusetts legislature in those days.

That condition of years ago is, indeed, interesting when we make comparison with the present and realize the abundant supply of granite which is now produced from our mountains of stone.

The output of the quarries has been tremendously increased of late years, owing to the improved equipment and facilities.

Not many years ago a small upright boiler with engine attached, encased in a building 12 by 20, and a derrick with capacity for lifting 10 tons was the limit, and our quarrymen could be seen straddling a piece of granite drilling holes for splitting with a hand hammer.

In these days all this has been completely revolutionized, and we find our quarries equipped with everything that is up-to-date and modern. Our power houses are permanent, fixed structures built of granite, wherein will be found installed the latest type of steam boilers, ponderous hoisting machinery, and air compressors and other fixtures incident to the business. Our massive derricks reach out toward the sky, guyed with from six to ten heavy steel wire ropes, these derricks being capable of lifting from our quarries great blocks of granite that exceed the limit of transportation.

In days gone by, the derricks, such as they were, had long iron rods for guys welded and chained together, and when the hoist was made, the stones had to be swung from the quarry to the bank with tremendous amount of pulling and tugging by the workmen. This feature is all done away with, and our derricks are new fitted with the patent bull wheel, which is operated by steam power, and the same engineer who manipulates the hoisting machinery also operates and turns the derrick at will, from his station in the engine house.

Thus, it will be seen that we are up-to-date with every labor-saving device in order to save time and expense that we may be in postion to give our customers the very best service possible.

Taking the improvements as a whole, there has been nothing of recent years which has so increased our capacity for prompt delivery of orders as the plug driller operated by compressed air. This is a wonderful labor-saving device and has added to our efficiency many fold. The plug driller gives that delightful buzzing sound, which indicates that there is "something doing."

The big air compressors in the power house distribute the air through pipe lines to all parts of the works, in the same way in which the steam is delivered, so that we have it to use on the bank splitting the stone into dimention sizes, or we use it down in the bottom of the quarry as the demands may require.

Then also, it was the custom years ago to syphon the water from the quarries, but in these days we have powerful steam pumps which keep the water pumped out all the time, so that there is no loss of time on account of the water which might accumulate in the bottom.

The quality of the granite has also improved as well as the amount of granite quarried, for with the increased facilities we have been broadening out and going down deeper all the time, which insures the purest and best stone possible to obtain.

This is a rough outline of the quarry end of the industry, but, of course, there are many other lines of activity carried on in connection with the granite industry, and a visit to Quincy to see the large army of workmen engaged in the various departments is well worth the time of our supporters of the Iowa Retail Granite Dealers' Association and other kindred organizations.

Our inexhaustible, rock-ribbed mountains of granite are not all there is to be seen, for as you look down the valley to West Quincy and South Quincy you see the smoke and steam ascending from a multitude of monumental manufacturing plants, which are fashioning this beautiful stone in the various forms of memorials and structures for commemorating the lives of departed ones.

It is power, power, power everywhere, in the quarries at the monumental works, in the polishing mills, in the turning plants and in the granite sawing plants. Then, of course, there are also the tradesmen who furnish the tools and supplies necessary for the conduct of the business, and taken as a whole it furnishes a great volume of business and hum of our city.

This big investment of capital in Quincy is for the purpose of giving our patrons everything they need in the way of facilities for prompt attention to orders.

The railroad has equipped a large traveling electric crane with a lifting capacity of 40 tons, for the handling of the product after being delivered to them for shipment.

Therefore, you will please bear in mind that though our granite is conceded to be the best on the market for memorial purposes, and we have had the experience that comes from years, yet we are not living on our reputation and past history, but are prepared with up-to-date service to merit all the business that you can send our way, for we realize that your success is also ours, our relations being mutually dependent.

Each member of your association is cordially invited to come to Quincy and inspect all this enterprise, and a special invitation is extended to call and see "The Extra Dark Man." There is a great deal of value to be learned by a personal visit, and those of you who have never taken the time to come East and visit us do not realize the opportunity that you have missed.

The demand for Quincy granite this year past has been very gratifying and all our plants have been working to their full capacity, which gives added assurance that the dealers of the country appreciate the real value of Quincy granite.

We shall hope to hear often from you during the year 1911 and the best that Quincy affords shall be yours.

The Sirolin Sentinel

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.

QUINCY, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1911

Just Caught a Cold?

Then You Should Read This

Bad weather for colds.

Raw, rainy days, with a chill that penetrates.

It is easy to catch a cold—but it is easy to cure it, too, if you use Sirolin.

This Swiss preparation is the most successful remedy in the world for disorders of the pulmonary organs—colds, coughs, bronchitis and grippe.

It has an unequalled reputation in Europe, and it comes to America with the endorsement of leading medical men.

Sirolin is entirely different from the ordinary preparation for colds. It does not depress the heart; it does not give you the "blues" to take it; it does not leave you weak and exhausted after the cold has passed.

Sirolin relieves the distressing symptoms—such as the annoying cough, the feeling of fullness in the head, the discharge from the nose and throat, and the usual headache—almost immediately.

It tones up the stomach, develops a keen appetite, and invigorates the system.

Sirolin contains no narcotics, or harmful ingredients of any kind.

It is a physician's remedy, known and prescribed by leading medical men the world over.

Sirolin Relieves Exhausting Night Coughs

One of the disagreeable features of a severe cold is the constant coughing at night. This keeps the sufferer awake, destroys the rest that he needs, and the constant hacking, tearing cough lowers his general vitality and power of resistance.

Take Sirolin before going to bed, and you will find that the coughing is relieved, and that you can sleep soundly.

All leading druggists have Sirolin.

Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug.

CHILDREN LIKE SIROLIN

Sirolin is a clear liquid, something like syrup in appearance.

It is pleasant to the taste; sweet, with a slight trace of bitter.

Children like it.

Keep a Bottle of SIROLIN in the House

Handkerchiefs.

To whiten handkerchiefs which have become discolored through careless washing, dissolve some pipe clay in warm water and leave them to soak in the solution all night. Next day wash and boil the handkerchiefs in the usual manner, and they will be wonderfully improved in appearance.

For a city the size of Quincy, located as near the metropolis as is this city, we have one of the most complete and up-to-date department food stores of any city in New England. We refer to R. E. Foy & Co., of Water, corner of Quincy street. Messrs Foy & Co. make a speciality of delicacies and if it is something of quality ,you will surely find it on sale in their store. In looking over their advertisement today we see such high-class food products as fancy capons, hothouse and southern vegetables, canned mushrooms, Dromedary dates, Dole's Pineapple juice, Appollinaris water, mammoth olives, Steero, etc., and we doubt if any other store in Quincy can show such an assortment in the food line as this well known store.

METHODIST MEN'S CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the Wollaston Methodist Men's club was held in the vestry on Thursday evening, and although disappointed in their speaker passed a pleasant evening, an unusually large number being present.

The Wollaston Herald, read by its editor, S. N. Belcher, was bright and spicy, while the stunts performed by two small street musicians in the singing, dancing and recitation line brought down the house.

Short addresses were made by J. Arthur Sparrow of the Walther Men's class, Simpson Kay and A. N. Murray. The evening closed with the serving of refreshments in charge of the entertainment committee, composed of A. B. Cassidy and F. A. Sutermeister.

Standpatters Call For the Annexation of Canada

HANDLE SUPPLIED BY CLARK

Quickly Grasped by Opponents of Reciprocity, Who Hope to Cause Defeat of Measure In Dominion Parliament — Administration Embarrassed by Introduction of Resolution In House by Republican Member

Washington, Feb. 17.—Following the concern of the administration over Champ Clark's incidental statement during the debate on the reciprocity bill that he would like to see the annexation of Canada, Representative Bennet of New York introduced in the house a resolution looking toward the beginning of negotiations to bring about such an end.

The Bennet resolution asks that the president shall be requested to begin at once negotiations with Great Britain, which shall be continued from time to time, with a view to the annexation of Canada to the United States. Bennet, a member of the house committee on foreign affairs, declared that he would bring his resolution to the attention of that committee next Monday and would ask a report upon it.

"The resolution expresses my views on the question," said Bennet. "I believe that we should take steps looking to the ultimate annexation of the Dominion, and I will present my arguments in favor of such a move before the foreign affairs committee Monday."

In view of the prominence given the personal remarks of Champ Clark along this line, and the great cry that went up in the Canadian and British press, the Bennet resolution probably will still further embarrass the administration and play a part when the Canadian parliament comes to ratify the reciprocal trade agreement. Champ Clark has explained that he spoke for himself personally when he talked of possible annexation.

The president, in order to reassure the Canadian government that reciprocity is not intended as a step toward the absorption of that country by the United States, sent Representative McCall a letter in which he made it plain that Clark's views were not those of the administration. Clark himself, seeing the trouble he had caused, declared that he did not even speak for his party.

Now comes Bennet, a Republican member of the house, who introduces a formal resolution, calling for annexation. It is hardly possible that the resolution can come out of committee, even at this session. There is practically no chance of a vote on it, but party leaders are concerned nevertheless on account of the indirect effect which it is bound to exert.

Friends of reciprocity now fear that the Clark prophecy and the Bennet resolution may so alarm the people of Canada generally that protests will pour in upon the parliament and that reciprocity will not be approved as readily in that body as it would have been had not complications ensued.

The handle given by Clark to the opponents of reciprocity in Canada by his remarks concerning annexation has been so quickly grasped that the standpatters in congress have hopes that they may cause the defeat of the agreement by scaring Canada. Undoubtedly the move will render more difficult the task of Premier Laurier, as the Conservatives in the Dominion parliament have already made use of Clark's speech to embarrass the government.

Replying to an inquiry, Laurier refused to take the Clark speech seriously, and has assured the Dominion Conservatives that Canada need have no fear in going ahead with the agreement.

Favorable action continues to be urged by various commercial bodies in this country, and by many state legislatures, indicating the far-reaching popularity of the measure.

ABUSES IN COLD STORAGE BUSINESS

Bill to Correct Them Is to Be Set Before Congress

Washington, Feb. 17.—Important cold storage legislation by congress is probable as the result of the action of the senate committee on manufactures, which ordered a favorable report on a bill for the regulation of the cold storage business.

The bill provides for the inspection of articles to be placed in cold storage before they enter storage. Another provision is that if an article in cold storage is once removed from cold storage and allowed to thaw, it shall not be replaced in cold storage. By the terms of the proposed legislation, a time limit is put on the storage of various kinds of food products. The time varies for different products.

The abuses in the cold storage business which were revealed by the investigation conducted by the committee on manufactures have led the committee to report in favor of this important proposed bill.

TO SEND ARMY TO THE BORDER

War With China Threatened by Russian Government

VIOLATION OF 1881 TREATY

Given as Reason For Military Demonstration—Differences In Interpretation of Agreement Which Is About to Expire and Which China May Refuse to Renew—Considered Step In Penetration Through Mongolia

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—The relations of Russia and China are strained to the breaking point. Russia has notified the governments of Great Britain, France and Germany of her intention to make a military demonstration on the Russo-Chinese frontier, owing to China's persistent violation of the St. Petersburg treaty of 1881.

Russian troops will be sent forthwith to the district of Ili. The extent of the demonstration, it is added in the diplomatic note, will depend entirely the attitude assumed by China. The vital questions involved are free trade in Mongolia, the extra territorial rights in China, and the establishment of a Russian consulate at Kobdo, Mongolia.

It is understood that the arrangements have been made for the Russian troops to occupy the Ili region of Chinese Turkestan. In 1881 Russia evacuated Ili in return for consular and commercial privileges in Mongolia and Manchuria. It is also considered likely that the Russian troops sent to northern Mongolia will occupy the town of Uliassutai, in order to put an end to China's anti-Russian attitude.

The Bourse Gazette says that an important conference was held at the war ministry yesterday on China's persistent flouting of treaty stipulations.

There have been rumors recently of an intention by Russia to bring pressure to bear upon China because of alleged violations of the Russo-Chinese treaty. That the situation was acute, however, has been denied both by the Chinese foreign board and by the Russian legation at Pekin.

It has been admitted that there were differences in the interpretations of the international agreement as made at St. Petersburg and at Pekin. The treaty adopted in 1881 expires this month and it has been reported that China was unwilling to renew it, at least not without certain modifications.

The exchanges have been closely guarded by both powers and what stage the negotiations have reached was not indicated until the St. Petersburg Gazette announed that an important conference had been held at the war ministry to consider China's persistent flouting of treaty stipulations.

Her designs of an approach to the sea through Manchuria having been effectively blocked by Japan, Russia has turned toward the back door, so to speak, of the Celestial Empire, and is now planning, apparently, pentration by way of Chinese Turkestan and Mongolia to Pekin.

Despite the treaty of Portsmouth and the Anglo-Japanese alliance, Russia has pushed forward her troops—infantry, cavalry and artillery—until they have a line extending from Kheruloon, through Oorga, Uliassutai and Ooroomtsi, to Kuldja, and thence into Chinese Turkestan.

It is even said that the Russians have troops at Khotan, which is only about 100 miles from the border of Tibet and an equal distance from the frontier of Cashmere. This Russian line extends for about 2300 miles, and the average depth of the encroachment on China is about 300 miles.

In addition, the Russo-Chinese bank, which is really Russia, since it is altogether a governmental inattitution, has obtained the right to exploit two of the eastern provinces of Mongolia, and Russia already speaks of these provinces as within her "sphere of influence."

Mongolia is by no means the desert country which most books of geography represent it as being. There are indications of great mineral wealth in the Sayan mountains immense beds of nephrite have been found, and in the Kitoi Alps, near Lake Baikal, are great deposits of serpentine and graphite. Silver has also been found in North Mongolia, and coal has been found in the Tannu mountains and the Yenisei basin.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train and he is amazed at a coincidence. Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

For several years Valentine works excellently and rises to be assistant cashier. He and Rose love each other, but Valentine knows Doyle is on his track and dares not tell her of his affection for her. A mysterious Mr. Cronin turns out to be old Bill Avery, now reformed and a man of business.

Valentine receives a telegram from Doyle. He tells Red how he has planned to outwit the detective by means of a cleverly concocted alibi.

Rose Lane tells Valentine she loves him and that they are going to marry. Valentine reveals to her his love for her. Doyle appears on the scene to arrest Valentine on a charge of robbing a Massachusetts bank many years before.

Doyle is astounded when Valentine announces that he was never in Sing Sing or in Massachusetts in his life and that his name is Lee Randall.

Doyle is finally convinced by a sensational ruse employed by Valentine that Valentine is not Valentine after all. "I'll land him if it takes a lifetime," he says.

Bobby threw himself into Valentine's arms, sobbing convulsively.

"I didn't mean to do it," he cried hysterically. "I didn't mean to—I didn't know Kitty hid in the vault, and I thought—I didn't know. I pretended not to and shut the door to scare her. Then just in fun I turned the knob"—

"Good God, that baby!" groaned Valentine, wringing his hands and starting toward the vault room.

"You can do it," urged Red. "I'll clear the bank—just you and me. For God's sake, open that vault or that baby will die like a rat!" Red fell on his knees before Valentine and pleaded heartbrokenly for his old time safe breaking accomplice to use once again the skill that had made his name a synonym for success in the underworld.

Valentine hesitated, as well he might, considering the hazardous nature of his position. If any one but Red should see him open the safe—see him at work—all hope of further concealing the nature of his occupation in the past would be destroyed. And Doyle, who wanted to "see Jimmy Valentine work," was even now in the bank building—might return to Valentine's office at any moment, reasoned the assistant cashier.

"Kitty mustn't die—she mustn't—she mustn't!" sobbed Bobby.

Valentine's face set determinedly. He tore off his coat and, rolling up his sleeves, dashed out into the vault room.

"I know! I'll do it! I'll do it!" he cried.

Detective George Doyle smiled sardonically as he softly withdrew from behind the partly opened door which had sheltered him from the view of the frantic actors in the tragedy that had been enacted in the assistant cashier's office. He walked swiftly down the hall.

"Jimmy Valentine, Jimmy Valentine," he muttered vengefully, "you've had your laugh! Now I'll have mine. I've got you now. I'm going to get you red handed!"

CHAPTER XVI.

THE room in the Fourth National bank of Springfield, Ill., in which the new vault had been constructed, was a large, somber inclosure, with a door at one side, opening from the assistant cashier's office, and one directly opposite, which led to a narrow hallway opening into the main hall.

Along this narrow hallway were doors opening into the offices of various officials of the bank. The vaults in which were kept the currency and negotiable papers, bonds, stocks, notes, etc., were on the floor below, and the new vault built against the wall at the rear of the room was designed as a receptacle for the bank's books of account. Therefore it had a larger interior than an ordinary vault, and as the shelves had not yet been built in there were several feet of free space inside, which would be occupied by books and records later on.

The huge steel ribbed door had been left invitingly open by the workmen engaged in adding the finishing touches, and consequently it afforded an unequaled source of delight to Bobby and Kitty, whose active imaginations readily converted the interior of the vault into the cave of daring smugglers who, presumably gone on a desperate enterprise, had left deserted their secret cavern and the precious contraband articles which, Bobby assured Kitty, were surely to be found therein. So what was there for a high spirited little girl to do, when her brother, who never failed at asserting his superiority over a mere girl and the superiority of the "men folk" in general, insisted that she go first into the yawning blackness of the big safe? Surely she must maintain the traditions of the fearlessness of her sex as she knew them and "take the dare" which Bobby forced upon her.

Slowly into the steel bound shadows she went, her waxen faced dolly clutched tightly against her throbbing bosom—yet in she went. Suddenly the huge door scraped shut. All was blackness. As she screamed in her fright she heard the click of the metal bars as Bobby playfully turned the handles. Then all was silent, save for the moans of the little girl as she lurched blindly toward the door of the safe and scratched the metal thicknesses with her tiny nails.

The dolly fell to the floor, the ends of the soft little fingers began to bleed from frenzied contact with the bars that ribbed the interior of the safe door, and after a few moments the wee girl's form sank limply to the bottom of the vault, where she gasped convulsively to breathe in the air that was gradually losing its life supporting qualities. Not many minutes would elapse ere she had consumed all the precious oxygen in the suffocating interior of the necessarily air tight vault.

* * * * * * *

As Jimmy Valentine dashed into the vault room he cried to Red Flanagan, who was at his heels:

"Go get one of the clerks to run for some sandpaper. Pumice stone is too soft for this job. My fingers are not in shape for a trick like this. Go! Run!"

Red turned and darted away on his urgent errand. Well he knew just how necessary it was for Jimmy Valentine to have sandpaper to rescue Kitty if it were true that the skin on his fingers had grown calloused or had reached even its natural thickness.

Jimmy Valentine pulled manfully at the handles of the vault door. Perhaps, after all, the combination had not been turned and only the door's weight held it in place. But the metal barrier would not move. He pressed his ear to the hairlike crack. He heard the sound as of a little body falling to the floor and the faint moans of the prisoner calling, "Bobby, Bobby, Bobby!"

Valentine bent over the combination, peered sharply at it, then began to twirl the cylinders gently. Around and then back he turned the knob. No; it was of no use. Nothing could be done until the sandpaper arrived. His fingers had lost their sensitiveness and hence their cunning, and in the meantime Valentine well knew the prisoner was consuming whatever of the priceless air that remained.

The door leading from his office swung open, and again Red Flanagan darted in. He flung himself on the vault room floor directly below Valentine's knees and held his ear close to the crack of the safe door.

"Think you can make it, Jimmy?" he gasped.

"Guess so; never failed on a lock like this. Why, in God's name, don't that fool come with that sandpaper?" Valentine was desperate at the delay.

"He's gone to a—here he is!" cried Red as he heard hurrying footsteps in the assistant cashier's office. Red jumped to his feet and out into Valentine's room. He seized the roll of sandpaper from the messenger's hands.

"What are you going to do with it?" asked the inquisitive clerk.

Red shoved him away and darted back toward the vault room.

"None of your business," he cried, "and keep out of here."

"Give it here. What is it?" exclaimed Valentine as Red ran to him.

"No. 4."

"That's best. Is the bank empty?"

"Yes, thank God. Mr. Lane has gone. There's no one here to pipe what we're doin'—and even if there was we'd just naterally have to go through with it—for that girl Kitty"—

"Shut up!" cried Valentine nervously. He bent over and rubbed his fingers briskly across the gritty surface of one of the sheets of sandpaper which Red had handed him—rubbed until the white flesh showed pink. Red stood and watched him breathlessly. The sound of Valentine's fingers scraping back and forth across the face of the sandpaper seemed to his feverish brain the physical demonstration of an evil being, appalled him as a sinister omen of impending doom. He had heard a story of his old grandmother's, when a young lad, that of ten when a person was going to die a mysterious tick, tick, tick, tick would be heard in the fated house, the sound coming as though from a mysterious watch concealed in the wall—the "death tick." As the sound of the scraping fingers continued the zip, zip, zip, zip echoed from the walls and smote into Red's ears and into Red's brain—an uncanny reminder of that long forgotten tale.

And, strangely enough, Red's premonition of the presence of an unseen menace was not without foundation in fact. It may be that this active career in the underworld had developed in him that sixth sense of the habitual thief which sometimes gives him warning of approaching dangers.

As Red stood there fascinatingly watching the rapid play of Valentine's fingers the door leading into the narrow hallway noiselessly opened—opened just enough to allow the sound of the scraping fingers to reach the ear pressed against the crack between the door and the jam. A few inches more of space and the face of George Doyle appeared in the doorway.

As the door on opening swung toward the rear of the chamber toward the vault, Doyle, shielded by it, was enabled to put one foot over the sill and stand half within the vault room. Pressing himself close against the door, he could watch in the darkened, shadowy room the operations of Red Flanagan and Mr. Lee Randall, alias Jimmy Valentine.

He saw the sheet of sandpaper flutter to the floor; he saw Valentine lick his fingers with his tongue to ease the burning pain that throbbed through them; he saw Red Flanagan drop on his knees and crouch against the door of the giant safe; he saw Valentine step forward, seize the combination with the tips of his fingers, press his ear against the vault and gently, caressingly, ever so gently, twirl the shining nickeled knob of the combination.

George Doyle had his dearest wish gratified. At last he saw the great Jimmy Valentine at work.

VETO AWAITS PENSION BILL

President Said to Be Opposed to the Sulloway Measure

Washington, Feb. 17.—The prediction was freely made on the floor of the house that President Taft will veto the Sulloway general pension bill if it passes the senate. The bill would increase the pension rolls about $50,000,000 a year.

The matter came up in the house in connection with the proposed abolishment of the office of second deputy commissioner of pensions. Representative Fuller (Ills.) demanded to know of Mr. Fitzgerald (N. Y.) where the latter got his information of the probable veto of the general pension bill.

"Oh," said Fitzgerald, "the White House has a way of letting its attitude be known that is unmistakable. We had a demonstration of that the other day on Canadian reciprocity."

The office of second deputy commissioner was not abolished.

AMUSEMENTS

DOINGS ON THE STAGE OF

LOCAL AND BOSTON THEATRES

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE.

Local theatre-goers have a treat in store for next Monday night in the production at the Hollis Street Theatre, of Porter Emerson Browne's latest drama, "The Spendthrift," which had a long run at the Hudson Theatre New York and broke all records at the Chicago Opera House. "The Spendthrift" was produced in New York last March and remained at the Hudson Theatre all Summer, it being the only drama able to survive the hot nights on Manhattan Island. While this play has been a long time coming to Boston it will be seen at the Hollis Street Theatre exactly in every detail as it was produced in New York. All of the original company have been re-engaged for the coming presentation. "The Spendthrift" is a drama of present day life that tells the story of the wreck of a family's happiness brought about by the divergence of thought and the different paths followed in the pursuit of happiness by a husband and wife. The former is a man of working, saving and home-loving instincts. His wife is the kind of woman to whom the luxuries incidental to a brilliant social career dominate her being. Adoring her, the husband bends every effort towards satisfying his wife's extravagant tastes, but after years of labor find that his reward is in the words of the play, "a house that is no home, occupied by a woman that is no wife." One of the most striking points in the play is that while the woman is wasteful and extravagant she is a most lovable character throughout and is prompted in her wanton lavishness of everything by her desire to provide her husband with a home that she honestly thinks befitting his station in life. At first thought it might seem that this play might not appeal to woman but no play ever appealed to them more. An exceptional cast interprets the different roles. It is headed by Edmund Breese who won country wide distinction in "The Lion and the Mouse" and Thais Magrane, the beautiful young California actress who has never been seen in Boston. There will be matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

Direct from a record-breaking run of six months in New York City and seven months in Chicago, "The Fourth Estate," the great play of newspaper life, by Joseph Medill Patterson and Miss Harriet Ford, will be seen for the first time in Boston at the Shubert Theatre, Feb. 20, for a limited engagement, including the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees. "The Fourth Estate" is a great play of newspaper life, and by a newspaper man who knows the game. Not only is the play beautifully acted, but its mechanical effects and situations are of a nature which not only thrill with their power and startle with their unexpectedness, but the theme of the play is so big, its great questions so easily a part of the everyday life and problems of every man and woman who see it, that it makes an irresistible appeal, not only to the senses but to the mentality. The play has been staged with a breadth and massiveness which could only make for popularity. Its scenes are marvels of stagecraft, and nothing greater than the much-talked of composing-room scene, with its linotype machines, its blazing lights, its toiling printers, and its hum of industry has ever been given to the stage. The cast of players is the same which gave the play its great vogue in both Chicago and New York. This engagement of "The Fourth Estate," which has been called the great American drama, will be the only presentation of the play in New England, and the territory tributary to Boston.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

The event of the season at B. F. Keith's Theatre is due the week of February 20th, when Gertrude Hoffmann and her company of forty will be the feature in Gertrude Hoffmann's New Revue. This is unquestionably one of the most elaborate productions ever offered in vaudeville, or anywhere else, and the work done by Miss Hoffmann herself seems almost incredible. During the action of the piece she impersonates something like a dozen different characters, including Ethel Barrymore, George M. Cohan, Anna Held, Alice Lloyd, Eddie Leonard, Isadora Duncan, Valeska Surratt, Ruth St. Denis, Harry Lauder, and a number of others. When it is considered that for each of these impersonations there is a complete change costume, scenery, and lighting effects, and one scene, a huge bathing scene, introduces a mammoth tank in which fifteen girls of the annette Kellermann type sport in the water, jumping from spring boards and sliding down chutes into the tank, the entire act is on a magnitude never before attempted. This season Miss Hoffmann will introduce several novelties, that have been more successful than any she has proviously given. Notwithstanding this star attraction, the surrounding bill for the week will be of exceptional interest.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The second week of "Faust" begins at the Castle Square on Monday. It is one of the most beautiful and elaborate productions ever made of that play, or of any play, on the stage of that theatre, and its success has been warranted in every respect. The familiar tale of the German scholar who bargained with Mephistopheles for the pleasures of youth, is told in this version of Goethe's dramatic poem with no little skill, and the stage settings and spectacular effects add not a little to its romantic value. Especially startling and effective is the great scene on the heights of the Brocken, where Mephistopheles summons to his aid all the forces of earth and nature. Mr. Craig is displaying wonderful skill as Mephistopheles, and Miss Young's Marguerite is charmingly pretty and very pathetic. Mr. Hassell makes a sturdy Valentine, Mr. Homans a handsome Faust, and Miss Colcord, Miss Curtis, Miss Shirley, Mr. Bertrand and Mr. Younge in their several roles strengthen the cast. There are some thirty extra players on the stage during the progress of the play.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

When Henry Arthur Jones attended a performance of "Madame X" at the Majestic Theatre last week he made the remark that it was the most interesting play he had seen in America and the best constructed melodrama presented for years. From such an authority as this internationally distinguished playwright such an opinion carries weight; yet he but echoes the verdinct of nearly 100,000 people who have seen the play during its seven weeks' stay in Boston. This must be a universal opinion. Otherwise the play could not have met with the phenomenal success it has had all over the country—a success that requires three companies filling the demand for it in various parts of the country, and a success which has occasioned the runs of weeks and months in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston. The last two weeks will begin, Feb. 20. Seats are now on sale for all the remaining performances, and these include the presentations of "Madame X" on Washington's Birthday matinee and evening, Feb. 22, and the 75th Souvenir performance Wednesday afternoon, Mar. 1. The final act which depicts the murder trial of Madame Z, the role played by Dorothy Donnelly, is doubtless the great magnet of the play. Men and women begin to sniff. Eyes are flooded and noses are red. Brave men succumb as quickly as weak women. It is one of the most harrowing scenes the stage has ever known. Matinees are given on Wednesday as well as Saturday.

OFFICERS DESCEND ON BERKSHIRE STILL

Moonshine Plant Is Found In Western Massachusetts

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 17.—The biggest "moonshine" still ever found in New England was raided in West Otis, a secluded hamlet in the Berkshire hills, by United States Revenue Agent Carter, assisted by United States Deputy Marshals Lydon and Miller, who arrested Nathan S. Kalman and Abraham Kravitz.

The prisoners, each aged about 40 years, and natives of Russia, entered pleas of not guilty when arraigned before Commissioner Rice in this city. The commissioner continued the hearing until Feb. 23. One of the defendants could not understand English, and the other spoke English brokenly.

It is understood that the investigation into the alleged illicit distilling began in New York, where large quantities of "Kosher" brandy were found in certain sections of the city where there were large colonies of Russian Hebrews. This "Kosher" brandy was shipped into New York in copper cases, being marked "maple sugar."

DENIAL FROM ARNOLDS

Dorothy Had No Diamond Rings to Pawn as Reported

Boston, Feb. 17.—Following the story that Dorothy Arnold, the missing New York heiress, received $65 on jewelry pawned in Boston in September, come dispatches from New York stating that the girl's brother and his father deny that they have authentic information to that effect. It was reported that she pawned diamond rings. Her brother denies that she had any.

Boston detectives are working on a clue that a young woman who registered at the Quincy House two weeks ago as Miss Dorothy Phelps was none other than Miss Arnold. She stayed for ten days and seemed to have plenty of funds.

WOOD IS SENTENCED

Year and a Day In Prison For False Testimony In Keliher Trial

Boston, Feb. 17.—Sentence of a year and a day at hard labor in the Cambridge jail and a fine of $1 was imposed upon Francis J. Wood, the grocer who committed perjury by his testimony in the trial of William J. ("Big Bill") Keliher on charges of aiding and abetting George W. Coleman, the Cambridge bank looter.

The sentence was imposed by Judge Dodge in the United States circuit court.

PLUNGES INTO RIVER

Aviator Falls Nearly a Thousand Feet but Escapes Unhurt

New York, Feb. 17.—Charles Morok, a professional aviator, was forced to dive into the Hudson river with an aeroplane while trying to fly from a point near the New Jersey Palisades to Central Park in the center of Manhattan island.

The motor of his biplane stopped when Morok was nearly 1000 feet above the river and about 100 yards from the Jersey shore. Within sight of thousands who had gathered on the New Jersey side he plunged to the river.

In descending his aeroplane sideswiped the mast of a schooner, and sank like a stone, carrying its operator nearly to the bottom of the river before he released himself. Morok weighs 204 pounds but he came to the surface and kept himself afloat until picked up by a passing launch.

LADIES' NIGHT OF MOOSE

Entertainment, Presentation, Dance and Refreshments

Few new organizations have come into such popular favor as the Order of Moose, which was attested by the success of the concert and dance at Faxon hall on Thursday evening attended by nearly 300. The program included selections by Ackerson's orchestra and address by Dr. J. H. Anderson, and the presentation of emblematic watch fobs and buttons by Grand Deputy organizer Barden. The fobs went to David Murckle, Leon Claflin, Neil McDonald and Joseph Rogers.

Dr. Anderson's address follows:

"To me has been assigned the duty of speaking a formal word of greeting to you before the festivities of the evening begin. It is the first occasion in the history of Moosedom in Quincy for ladies to be present, and I assure you that however frequently in years to come you may be invited to these social gatherings of the order, the honor which I have this evening will ever remain fresh in my recollection.

"Whatever doubts may have possibly existed up to this time as to our standing and our outlook, now that the ladies have patronized our first social function and graced it with their presence, there can no longer be any question as to either our standing or our future success. We have made a good start.

"We hope that the ladies will manifest more and more curiosity regarding our order; for the more interested they become the more they will learn about it; and the more they come to know about it, the better for the order. We have nothing to be ashamed of; and we have nothing to conceal except a few signs, tokens and mysteries which of course it would not be proper to divulge to any except to those who have been separated from their money and received into our herd.

The more you will learn about the Loyal Order of Moose the more you will think of it and the less you will object when your husbands and husbands-to-be spend their evenings with us rather than at home. Much though you may miss their companionship during the evening hours, rest assured that they are well engaged—learning and practising the principles and precepts of an organization which has started in to do a mighty work in eradicating differences in social stations, removing prejudices and promoting the spirit of fraternity and good fellowship as well as good citizenship throughout the city of Quincy. On with the dance and may joy be unconfined. I thank you for your attention and urge you to co-operate in making this event the most enjoyable event of the season."

The grand march was led by Dictator Labrecque and Mrs. Barden, followed by Deputy Organizer E. J. Barden and Mrs. M. C. McDonald. Refreshments were served during the evening and adjournment came at midnight.

SCARLET FEVER.

The Wollaston school is closed again on account of the scarlet fever scare although through no fault of the School Committee, but because the recent deaths have so frightened the parents of the children that they refuse to send their children to school. The attendance had been so small this week that it was necessary to close the school. It will however be opened again for school next Monday. According to the Board of Health there are now three cases of scarlet fever in Wollaston. One of these is a case of long standing, and the other two are cases that developed this week. None are reported as serious. There are some cases in other parts of the city but the total cases of the city will not exceed seven.

BACK FROM GERMANY.

Harry Drake returned from Germany Thursday afternoon, after a year and a half spent in that country in perfecting his knowledge of the shoe business. Most of his time was spent in the neighborhood of Cologne although he took side trips to the famous resorts. On his trip to and from the country, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, France and England were visited. Now that he has returned he is expecting to live in Quincy and go into the shoe business in Boston.

MILTON

Milton High school plays Noble and Greenough of Boston at hockey this afternoon on Cunningham rink.

A gymnasium exhibition will be given by the team of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union Saturday evening in Cunningham gym.

Milton Academy and Melrose High met at the Cunningham rink Monday afternoon to settle the State hockey championship. After two twenty minute and one ten minute period the score stood 1 to 1, and play was called off until Feb. 22. The teams will then clash again on Cunningham rink and a battle royal may be expected. The contest on Monday was hard fought and exciting from start to finish. Neither team has been defeated in a regular match this year. The Academy was defeated by the Alumni team composed of Harvard students, but has not lost an interscholastic game.

At a Valentine party given by Deacon David J. Brown to the home department of the East Milton Baptist Sunday school, Rev. Irad B. Hardy bid his last farewell to the people of the church. An interesting feature of the evening was the use made of a huge heart shaped valentine which was produced in the latter part of the evening. Sixteen strings led out of the heart and attached to each inside the heart was a small valentine. The one drawn out by Mrs. David J. Brown announced the engagement of Miss Pearl E. Beck of Edgehill road and George B. Tocher of Reservation road.

Leon Field of Bates road is suffering from a broken shoulder blade. The injury was incurred by his coming in contact with a moving freight truck at his place of business in Boston.

William L. Pierce, formerly of Edgehill road, a brother of Miss Alma Pierce, died on Tuesday after a long illness.

The Thursday Evening club will have a whist party in Ellsworth hall on Feb. 23.

The fire alarm was sounded at Box 45 Tuesday afternoon at 2.25 for a fire in the home of Albert E. Avery, 21 School street. The fire started in the chamber occupied by Mrs. Avery who was confined to her bed by illness. The fire was discovered by neighbors and by dint of hard labor it was extinguished by them before the fire department arrived. A chair caught fire from the lamp but Mrs. Avery was unable to do anything but call for help. The damage was slight owing to the quick work of those who responded.

A very successful dance was held in Cunningham gym Wednesday evening. The crowd was larger than at previous dances. Co. K orchestra from Hingham furnished the music. The next dance will be held on March 15. It will be an open night and large crowd will probably attend.

The second day of the Carnival was very successful. In the afternoon the exhibition and sale of Arts and Crafts work was well patronized. The needlework booth was in charge of Mrs. George L. Hathaway and Mrs. Charles B. Hoxie; the woodwork booth was in charge of Mrs. Louis Harlow and Mrs. Francis Ingersoll; leather and brasswork booth—Mrs. Jesse B. Baxter and Mrs. Louis V. Gosselin; food booth—Miss M. Alice Babcock and Mrs. Frederick M. Hamlin; children's booth—Mrs. James H. McGuire and Mrs. Samuel W. Kirkland.. A luncheon was served from 5 to 7 with the following committee in charge: Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Kirkland, Mr. and Mrs. Howard P. Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Francis W. Smart The evening entertainment was under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society. Miss Elsie Leighton Livermore entertained for an hour with original monologues which met with the heartiest approbation of the audience. The committee was: Mrs. Ira M. Hill, Mrs. W. Q. Baxter, Mrs. Caroline B. Webster, Mrs. A. H. Huckins and Miss M. Alice Babcock. After the entertainment refreshments were served by Mers. Benjamin R. Fuller, Miss Ruth H. Abbott, Miss Alma M. Lowe, Benjamin W. Fuller and Lawrence H. Abbott.

There will be another sale this afternoon and a play "Romantic Mary" will be given under the auspices of the Alpha club.

—It is rather amusing to hear some men holler so loudly that eight hours' work is all that any man should be called upon to do, if he is to keep himself in decent physical condition, but who, peeled down to trousers and shirt, will bowl every night from seven until midnight.—Spencer Leader.

LIFFITON ONE OF AMERICA'S BEST HOCKEY PLAYERS

Crescents' Great Center Has Been Playing Wonderfully For Ten Years.

Artie Liffiton, who is considered one of the best hockey players developed on American ice, is going at his regulation speed this season. Artie has always been one of the few men on the ice who calculate and execute every move with deliberation and forethought.

Liffiton has been playing hockey with the Crescents for perhaps the last ten years, and at either center or cover point his playing is hardly to be equaled.

Most of the hockey players who are now in the front ranks are graduates from some college or school in Canada. Up on the other side of the line the youngsters have hardly any other sport than skating, and practically from the time they leave the cradle until they get through the schools they indulge in the pastime. Therefore they are, with few exceptions, the best hockey players in the world.

But getting back to Artie—he played hockey in one of the public schools of Montreal until he was sixteen years of age, and at that period, just the time that he was discarding knickerbockers, he went to New York.

You can't keep a young fellow who has figuratively been born on the ice away from skates, and Artie was one of that sort.

Way back in 1899 he first showed up at the Crescent Athletic club and was put on the squad. Even in that day the managers regarded in terror the reported prowess of the Canadians at the game of hockey, and young Liffiton was given all sorts of opportunities to show his superiority over the New York lads.

Although he had never made good with the fast teams in the schools of Montreal, he soon developed into an expert player and took his position on the regular team of the Crescents.

For two years he captained the seven that won honors for the Brooklyn aggregation, and today, under Captain Kennedy, Liffiton is playing as no other locally developed member of a hockey team.

CANADIAN RACING DATES.

Seventy Days Allotted to Big Tracks Between May 20 and Sept. 30.

The Canadian Racing association, which controls the turf in the Dominion, has decided upon a schedule of racing dates for this year after a conference at Toronto Each of the five tracks holding membership in the association has received seven days in the spring and seven in the fall, in accordance with the new law passed a year ago. This makes a total of seventy racing days from May 20 to Sept. 30, but the gaps between these meetings will be filled by smaller tracks that were formerly outlaws, but are now legalized. The schedule for Canada's leading tracks is as follows:

Toronto, May 20 to May 27; Montreal, June 3 to June 10; Hamilton, June 17 to June 24; Fort Erie, July 1 to July 8; Windsor, July 15 to July 22; Fort Erie, July 29 to Aug. 5; Hamilton, Aug 12 to Aug 19; Windsor, Aug. 28 to Sept. 4; Montreal, Sept. 9 to Sept. 16; Toronto, Sept. 23 to Sept. 30.

Japs to Play Baseball In U. S.

A Japanese baseball team is to invade the United States, landing at San Francisco in April. Games will be played in Chicago, Boston, St. Louis and other cities. The Japanese will return home in September or October.

THIS IS A BASEBALL RECORD.

One hundred and forty-one bases on balls in thirty games is going some. But when the same pitcher hits twenty-nine batters and issues eleven wild pitches said pitcher is going even some more. Pitcher Bauswein of Lave Cross' club at Charlotte, in the Carolina association, was the pitcher who thus averaged six battery errors to a game last year.

SOMETIMES the worst thing a man has against his mother-in-law is that she gave his wife her instructions in cooking.

When you hear a man laying the high cost of living to feminine extravagance you can gamble that his opponent held a royal flush in the last game.

Improving on Nature.

The dress constructing folks combine
With art and strength and skill
To take the human form divine
And mold it to their will.
They do not care where nature placed
The waist with so much care.
According to their whim or taste,
They move it here and there.

One season we may see the maid
Run straight from armpits down,
Almost as slender as a blade,
A bean pole in a gown.
Next in the sunshine she may bask,
A very pretty sight,
As plump as any water cask
And belted as a knight.

If rounded shoulders are the style
They fill them up with care
Or change them in a little while
If fashion runs to square.
You think the limit has been hit,
But fashion, bold and pert,
Don't see just yet the place to quit,
And there's the hobble skirt.

When nature molded womankind,
First practicing on man,
She had it settled in her mind,
A fixed and steady plan,
To turn out something fine and fit,
But those who sew and baste
Imagine they improve on it
By moving round the waist.

STRONG BACKING FOR THE CANAL

Many Boards of Trades and Prominent Gentlemen at the State House Hearing

Quincy and Brockton Men Asked to Frame Resolution

A very enthusiastic hearing was held yesterday before the joint committee of the Legislation of Harbor and Lands on the canal from aragansett bay to Boston harbor.

Representative Langelier, House chairman, had the hearing postponed from last week as many members of that committee were obliged to be at other hearings at that time, and he was desirous of having a full attendance of the committee as the object was of great importance.

Frank Fessenden Crane opened the hearing in behalf of the measure and made a very forcible presentation of the subject. He had maps, showing the canals already constructed from Beaufort, North Carolina, to New York, and the route of the canal from Fall River through to Taunton and Quincy bay.

He was followed by Hon. and Judge Loyd E. Chamberlain, who gave a very complete statement of the advantages of the proposed canal from a humanitarian and economic standpoint, and was listened to with marked attention. He stated that as president of the State Board of Trade he represented the sentiment of 59 local Boards of Trade throughout the State representing more than 15,000 business men. He stated that the agitation for the Brockton Canal, so-called, had attracted the attention of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, and United States authorities to this part of the country, and we were urged to actively cooperate with them in securing the construction of this the last link in the chain of inland canals. He urged upon the committee importance of Massachusetts joining with the states at the south of us in completing this entire system.

He was followed by the City Solicitor of Fall River, who favored the project and introduced A. Homer Skinner of Fall River of the Cotton Manufacturers' Association, who also spoke of the humanitarian and economic advantages of this canal. Being a retired sea captain he could well speak from personal knowledge of the dangers to life and property in the passage around Cape Cod and the re-

Bethany Church Appoints Committee to Call a Council

An adjourned meeting of Bethany Congregational church was held Friday evening in the chapel. Resolutions on the resignation of E. W. Branch as Bible School superintendent, and Charles Miller as treasurer of the church, were adopted.

A committee was appointed to call the council necessary for the dissolution of the pastorate namely: Delevare King, George A. Sidelinger and Mrs. W. E. Alden.

It was voted that he standing committee be given power to appoint the Bible School superintendent.

Letters were granted to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Blanchard to join the Pilgrim Congregational church in Sherborn, Mass.

The annual budget calling for a sum of $5,120 was passed unanimously.

The appropriation for the Bible school was increased to $400 and the amount to be placed at the disposal of the music committee was increased $50, making the total $850. The other appropriations were practically the same as in the 1910 budget.

NEW RESERVOIR CONTRACT

Eliminates Some of the Objectionable Features

The Finance Committee of the City Council meet tonight, and it is reported that the much-talked of contract with the Fore River Shipbuilding company for the use of the water in the old Quincy reservoir will be thrashed out again.

It is pretty well established that the original contract as sent to the City Council by Mayor Shea will not go. While the Council believes in encouraging its industries as well as to encourage new industries to locate here, the proposed contract was too broad in its scope.

At the meeting tonight it is understood that Mayor Shea will present a new contract, which it is believed will do away with the objectionable features of the other contract and at the same time help out the Fore River Co. In many ways the two contracts are similar. The clause, however, which permitted the Fore River to dispose of water to any other industries is eliminated.

Mayor Shea has held a conference with President Bowles, and the new clause proposed seems to overcome the objectionable feature of the contract. This new clause provides that the maximum amount of water the company shall use from the reservoir shall be limited to a certain amount per day, and that the company shall not sell water for any purpose. The city by the new contract reserves the right to dispose of the balance of the water from the reservoir outside the maximum amount allowed the company as it desires. Under this clause the city is left free to sell water from the reservoir to any other industry in the immediate vicinity or elswhere.

IROQUOIS MINSTRELS

Program Replete With Good Music and Specialties

One of the best minstrel shows seen in Quincy in a long time was that given at Music hall last evening by the Iroquois club. This club has been noted for the excellence of its minstrel shows for a long time, but that of this year surpassed any of their previous efforts.

The club were assisted by a number of young ladies, which added greatly to the show. The two rows of black faced comedians with their red coats, white trousers and knee boots formed a pretty background for the scene. The end men were particularly gaudy in their attire. They wore purple suits with Prince Albert coats. There was a bright yellow stripe down the trousers leg, wide yellow pocket lapels, yellow cuffs and collar, big yellow butons and yellow vests.

The attire of the young ladies was equally as attractive. Five of these were gowned as Highland lassies, and six in bright red coats, drab colored vests and white skirts the whole forming a scene of harmonizing color.

Andrew J. Dinegan, an old-time minstrel man, was the director; Leo B. Kenney, the pianist; Andrew Driscoll, the stage manager; and Wilson's orchestra the accompanist; while a half dozen of the clubs handsome young men acted as ushers.

The interlocutor was David S. McIntosh, and the end men who shook the tambos were Fred McDonald, Heinz Grant, Ed. Desmond, Frank Driscoll, Joe Driscoll and Dan Mahan.

In the circle were: George Mullen, Walter Mattie, W. McCarthy, A. Tozzi, A. Austin, J. Donahue, W. Ferguson, W. Houstin, D. Kenily, E. Knight, F. Paradise, C. Hebert, J. Beluchi, L. McIntosh, H. Isaacs, A. Bouchard, Zita Pitts, Evelyn E. Towne, Agnes Smollett, Julia Falvey, Ida DuTemple, Mae Glynn, Florence McPherson, Annie MacDonald, Rose Connelly, Mary Curran, Alice Galvin.

It was a little after 8 o'clock when the sound of a quartet singing was heard, and slowly the curtain went up disclosing the circle. The soloists of the quartet were Edwin Donovan, Peter Sullivan, Russell Sullivan and Chester Leathers. Then came the opening chorus. This was a melody of popular airs, opening with "Listen to that jingle band," and closing with "Moving day in jingle town." Some very pretty dancing was done by the end men and young ladies during this opening number, and there were several specialties introduced. Among these was a minature monoplane which flew across the stage during the singing "Come take a trip in my airship," and the appearance of "Teddy" and two specimens from Africa during the closing.

The program was replete with good music. There were songs by the end men, solos by John Hausman, Miss Teresa Wholey and Henry Ritta and selections by the quartet.

The second number was a Scotch specialty by Miss Zita Pitts, assisted by Miss Evelyn E. Towne, Miss Julia Falvey, Miss Ida DuTemple and Miss Agnes Smollett. This number received especial applause as it was a very pretty affair. It received several encores, and in response to one of these Miss Pitts executed a Highland dance with a grace and ease that carried the house by storm.

Another number was the Scotch specialty by Dan Driscoll, assisted by John Duggan, Thomas Manning, Murray Kerr and Arthur Wentworth. Dan, who is the popular president of the club, impersonated Harry Lauder, and the audience was convulsed with laughter during their entire appearance. One of the special features of this number was the topical song sung by Dan to the air "I loved a lassie." In this song were many sharp pointed darts which evidently found their mark judging from the applause that greeted each verse. Dan and his assistants looked very funny in their Highland costumes.

The third special number was the Irish specialty by John Lyden, assisted by Fred Hayden, John Neagle, Joe Tierney and David Curtin. These were also in costume and were mirth provoking.

The solos by the end men were exceptionally good and the choruses strong and full. The other solos were also good, especially that of Miss Wholey, who has a very sweet voice. The selections by the quartet were exceptionally good.

The two hours' program closed with a finale "I have no other sweetheart but you," by John Hausman and the entire company.

It is hardly necessary to say that between the several numbers there were the usual number of jokes by the end men. Many of these jokes were at the expense of the police force, while Mayor Shea and some of the club members came in for their share of good natured knocks, for none of the jokes were such that any could take offence.

At the conclusion of the minstrel show there was a half hours intermission during which the floor was made ready for dancing which was continued from 11 to 3 o'clock.

President Daniel H. Driscoll was the floor director, Vice President Walter E. Elcock was the assistant, while the aids were Secretary Andrew M. Driscoll, Treasurer Frank Galvin and David McIntosh, Thomas M. Elcock, Joseph H. Elcock, Frank Driscoll, Harry McGrath and William L. Elcock.

The dance order contained sixteen numbers each of which was dedicated to some sentiment. Taken as a whole the fifth annual was one of the most successful the club has ever held.

VAUDEVILLE IN AID OF CAMP MT. PLEASANT

Popular Local Talent Headed by Emery L. Crane Give Delightful Program

Original Comedietta and Shakespeare Minstrel Ladies

Quincy people showed their interest in Camp Mt. Pleasant when they came out in the storm last evening to attend the vaudeville for the benefit of this charity. But the program was entirely by Quincy people who have become favorites on the stage, and all under the direction of Emery L. Crane. Alpha hall was filled and none were disappointed.

The popular Wollaston orchestra opened the program with an overture, and gave other selections and played accompaniments. An original comedietta by Mr. Crane entitled "Her first case" made a great hit. Merton Turner as Jack Lynette, and Miss Mollie Brown as Elizabeth Fennell, were in love ,but the latter was ambitious for a career and treated marriage lightly. Jack put Bess to the test, however, when she wanted to become a nurse.

LET QUINCY PEOPLE
SET AN EXAMPLE
BY CLEARING ALL SNOW
FROM THE SIDEWALKS

He used some "blood red" dye on his arm and pretended to have been seriously cut with glass. When Bess responded she fainted, and when she recovered she was willing to plight her troth.

George E. Brown was certainly very clever as a black face comedian, and was got up as a dandy. His singing was good and many of his jokes new. Mrs. L. H. Sturtevant sang "Yankee Girl" and it met with so much favor that she had to repeat it.

But Emery L. Crane was the hit of the evening in his monologue. He appeared as a black face comedian with a Topsy wig, also a very loose fitting gingham blouse, knee parts of white, stripped stockings, black gloves, etc. He had a long story to tell and it was brimful of local hits. He said one citizen objected to living at Quincy Point because it had become so cosmopolitan so he went to Houghs Neck. There the death rate was the smallest in the State because people did not want to be found dead there. A lady belonging to the Quincy Women's club dressed so tightly, that when she got to the clubhouse she found she could not make a motion. Mayor Shea had ordered the poems of Oliver Wendell Holmes out of the Public Library because they alluded to him as a one-horse Shea. He came back on an encore and is still looking for the actress who first appeared en traine then in short dress, and later in tights.

Friends of William P. Thompson enjoyed his baritone solo, and would not let him off without another selection.

The "Shakespeare Minstrel Ladies" who recently appeared before the Quincy Women's club, kindly consented to entertain the gentlemen and they certainly have modernized the works of the great play writer. They introduced the game of "bridge" and such songs as "When Mr. Shakespeare comes to town," "Minstrel man," "Bring me a rose," "Put your arms around me honey," and "Over at the Bargain Store." The characters were:

Juliet ..... Mrs. Ferguson
Portia ..... Miss Lane
Ophelia ..... Mrs. Hunting
Desdemona ..... Mrs. Ryder
Lady Macbeth ..... Mrs. Davis

Lady Macbeth took the part of hte interlocutor, and all in dress and acting took their parts well.

Mrs. John S. Evans was the accompanist of the evening. The young ladies who acted as ushers also sold home-made candy.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

The town of Norwood, where one of Uncle Sam's postal savings banks has been established likes the scheme, the total deposits the first month being nearly $2,000.. An interesting feature is the fact that a good proportion of the depositors are women, especially married women who deposit money in their own names securing in this way freedom from any interference with the accounts on the part of their husbands. The women like the security of a government bank of this kind and they also like the privilege of drawing any part of their money at any time without having to give previous notice.

Some expect a material reduction in Metropolitan water assessments should the shipyard cease to use Metropolitan water. The same argument was used in favor of the installation of meters, but has not been verified. In 1908 the city was charged with 1,096,314,000 gallons of water, which made the assessment of 1909 $51,230.04. In the year 1909 Quincy used 30,879,000 gallons less water but the assessment was only $280.04 less. In 1910 Quincy used 7,059,000 gallons less water than in 1909, and the assessment may be $100 less in 1911; not enough to pay the interest on the debt incurred for installing meters.

It is reported that the bill of the shipyard for Metropolitan water in 1910 was $4,386.31, which at eight cents per thousand gallons represented 548,288 gallons. Should the shipyard cut off the whole Metropolitan supply, therefore, the reduction in Quincy's assessment would not be $100 less per year. Nevertheless when all expenses are included the average cost of water to the city is about fifteen cents per 1,000 gallons.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

The regular quarterly conference of Universalist churches is to be held on Tuesday in Braintree at All Souls' church. The program opens in the morning at 10.30 with devotional service by Rev. D. Roy Freeman and an address by Rev. Charles Conklin, D.D., which will be followed at noontime by luncheon.

At quarter of two there will be a business session, Rev. Nancy W. P. Smith of the state board of the Women's Missionary association will give an address and Mrs. Caroline Barney will speak on "Sunday School Work."

It is hoped to have Rev. A. M. Gardner, secretary of "The World in Boston" present at the morning session and that he will give an address.

As the church and Braintree is convenient to trains and trolley, it is anticipated there will be a large attendance.

SOUTH BRAINTREE CLUB.

The regular monthly meeting and supper of the Men's Club of the South Congregational church was held in the chapel Wednesday evening. Supper of cold meats, corn, rolls, coffee and ice cream were served at seven o'clock and the members to the number of fifty sat dawn to enjoy the excellent bill of fare. Piano solos by Leroy Day and singing by the club formed an enjoyable feature of the evening.

The speaker selected to address the meeting was the Rev. E. A. Chase of Wollaston, who spoke on "The Value of Out Door Life." Mr. Chase dwelt especially on the benefits to people of a life in the open and of the tonic effect of the fields and woods. He gave a most interesting account of his hunting and fishing experiences in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

It was the unanimous opinion of the club that Mr. Chase's talk was one of the finest yet heard by the members.

The meetings for the rest of the year promise to be both interesting and helpful.

The supper committee consisted of F. F. Tupper, H. W. Borden, M. C. Gillette, E. S. Loring, G. W. Stevens and S. B. Gammons.

BRIEFS

The older classes of the Quincy Grammar school have taken advantage of the excellent sleighing and weather to hold several pung parties. The eighth grade held theirs Monday after school, under the chaperonage of Miss Tolman and Mr. Sampson. On Tuesday the seventh grade went with Miss Teal and Miss Hunt.

It was with regret that Wollaston people heard that the Electric Boat Co.'s plant were to move to New London, Connecticut, as it means the loss of the Theodorus S. Baileys of Park street, the Charles H. Bedells of Prospect avenue the Frank T. Cables of Grand View avenue and the Grant E. Edgars of Grand View avenue.

The men of the Memorial Congregational church are to give a supper Thursday evening. They are making arrangements for an elaborate affair which will be planned, prepared and served by men exclusively.

The executive committee of the Wollaston Parents' Teachers' association has decided to omit its February meeting on account of so much illness still prevailing.

The new train service is calling forth the usual number of complaints in Atlantic. Several trains have been discontinued and there is a wait of an hour in the morning between the 8.20 and the 9.19 that is an especially bad feature of the present service.

Dr. Bushnell is gradually recovering from the effects fo blood poisoning in the hand.

Much interest is being taken in the meetings of John Adams Council No. 1210, Royal Arcanum, because of the souvenir given monthly for the best score at whist. On Monday evening Brother Nicholas P. Kappler received a box of cigars.

Rev. Elizabeth M. Goldthwaite will again occupy the pulpit of the Universalist church on Sunday. Miss Goldthwaite is a convincing speaker being one of the most accomplished of the ordained women ministers of the Universalist denomination.

MILTON

The Friendly Aid society of the Episcopal church, East Milton, will give a play in Ellsworth hall February 28.

Herbert E. Clark of Sheldon street is confined to his home by illness.

The outlying districts, East Milton, Mattapan and the Lower Mills are heartily in favor of the precinct voting idea. The fact that it is is based on common sense and justice should recommend it to all fair-minded townsmen.

The caucus to be held next Monday evening will probably be more sedate than usual. There are few contests for the different offices although nominations for sewer commissioner, school committee and auditor will arouse a little enthusiasm.

The Colonel Oliver Peabody Camp, Sons of Veterans, will hold a dance in Milton Town hall on Monday evening, Feb. 27. The proceeds will be applied to the relief fund.

The winter pastimes are being enjoyed to the full by the young people of the town. In Cunningham park the two toboggan slides and the skating pond are very popular and sleigh rides are very much in vogue.

DOG DIES OF RABIES

Residents of Fashionable District of Boston Are In a Panic

Boston, Feb. 18.—Back Bay dog owners are in a panic. Sandy, a valuable Airdale terrier, owned by Henry Endicott, Jr., died of rabies, or hydophobia, on Feb. 15 in a veterinary hospital. Sandy was taken with the disease several days before his death and fought with and had bitten several Back Bay dogs.

Probably there is no section in the United States where there more valuable prize dogs than in the Boston Back Bay. The uncertainty of the whereabouts of the suspected hydrophobia has set all the Back Bay dog owners into a veritable panic of fear.

The Boston board of health, realizing the danger to Back Bay children from being bitten by some canine suffering from the disease, has issued a warning for the protection of the district.

YIELD IS ENORMOUS

Texas Growers Spend More Than $700,000 For Seed Potatoes

Wharton, Tex., Feb. 18.—Some idea of the wonderful growth of the potato growing industry in Texas and particularly in the Caney creek valley may be had, when it is stated that during the last three or four weeks more than $700,000 was spent by growers for seed potatoes. Most of these seed potatoes were purchased in Maine.

The yield of potatoes in this section is enormous, ranging from 150 to 250 bushels per acre for the spring crop and nearly that much for the late fall crop, two crops being grown each year upon the same land. About 12,000 acres are devoted to the industry.

The price per bushel ranges all the way from 75 cents to $1.25, depending largely upon market conditions.

CANNOT SELL EDDY NOTES

Court Issues An Injunction Against Boston Auctioneers

Boston, Feb. 18.—Another phase of the litigation over the estate of the late Mrs. Mary B. G. Eddy, founder of the Christian Science church, came up in the equity session of the Suffolk superior court when Judge Richardson issued a temporary injunction restraining C. F. Libby & Co. of Boston from distributing a catalogue advertising for sale certain letters written by Mrs. Eddy, or in any manner making public any part of the letters. A hearing was set for Feb. 20. The petition for the restraining order was brought by attorneys for Henry M. Baker of Bow, N. H., executor of Mrs. Eddy's will.

In the bill of complaint Baker states that a number of private unpublished letters written by Mrs. Eddy have come into the possession of C. F. Libbie & Co., and that they have advertised these letters for public sale at auction on Feb. 23 and that neither he nor Mrs. Eddy in her lifetime have given any consent to such sale or publication.

GEMS RIPPED FROM EARS

Aged New York Woman Brutally Treated by "Gas Inspectors"

New York, Feb. 18.—Three men, posing as gas inspectors, committed an aggravated assault in broad daylight upon an elderly woman resident of the East Side, pushing their way into her apartment, knocking her down with a blow in the face and tearing her diamond earrings, valued at $400, from her ears, splitting both lobes as she was held struggling on the bed where the robbers had thrown her. The men escaped.

The victim, Mrs. Rachel Green, 65, was taken to a hospital, suffering from shock and many bruises and lacerations. Her condition, because of her advanced age, is considered serious.

SAYS BALLINGER WAS CAUGHT RED-HANDED

Graham of Illinois Makes New Attack on the Secretary

Washington, Feb. 18.—Characterizing Secretary Ballinger as "unfaithful to the public trust" and deserving of removal from the cabinet, Representative Graham of Illinois, a Democratic member of the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, bitterly arraigned the secretary in a speech upon the house floor, under the license of general debate on the naval appropriation bill.

"Is it not a most humiliating situation," Graham said, "that a cabinet officer, the trustee of public property of untold value, should be caught redhanded in the work of secretly aiding selfish and powerful interests in the work of exploiting the very property he held in trust? And then to think that in spite of this exposure, and in regard of outraged public conscience, he is still permitted to hold his position and continue to administer a trust he secretly endeavored to betray."

EXHIBITION BY CURTISS

Lands Alongside Cruiser and Flies Away Again From the Water

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 18.—Using one of his hydro aeroplanes, Glenn Curtiss alighted on the water alongside the armored cruiser Pennsylvania and within a few minutes Curtiss and his machine were on deck. After a stay of fifteen minutes the machine and its pilot were lowered. The biplane arose gracefully from the water and without incident flew back to its hangar on North Island.

The test was made to show the navy department that an aeroplane equipped like that of Curtiss does not need an especially constructed platform on a ship's deck to make it of practical use to the navy.

KING NICHOLAS DYING

Aged Monarch of Montenegro Suffers Rupture of a Vein

Cettinje, Montenegro, Feb. 18.—The family of King Nicholas were summoned to the royal palace last evening. Specialists called from Vienna attempted to stop the flow of blood resulting from the rupture of a vein.

A slight cessation was noticed but the king steadily grew weaker and because of the monarch's advanced years no hope is held out for his recovery. Nicholas is 70 years old.

RUSSIA BEGINS WAR MOVEMENT

Transportation of Troops to Northern China Is Begun

ANALYSIS OF HER ULTIMATUM

Government Officials Say It Shows Only Desire to Extend Trade and Protect Russian Citizens—China Expected to Appeal to Powers, Including United States, For Fair Play—"Open Door" Is Not Menaced

St. Petersburg, Feb. 18.—Without waiting for China's reply to its ultimatum Russia has begun preparations for actual warfare by transporting soldiers to the Ih district of northern China for a military demonstration. Among the soldiers sent are several regiments of Cossacks from southern Russia.

Russia has the advantage over China in the transportation of troops, due to the strategic value of the two great railroad systems held by Russia—the trans-Siberian and the Chinese Eastern.

Government officials declare they wish to take no unfair advantage of China and declare an analysis of the six clauses of the ultimatum evidences only a desire on the part of Russia to extend trade and protect her citizens.

For instance, the first clause relates to tariff, the second to judicature involving Russian citizens, the third to free trade in Mongolia, the contention of Russia that Russian consulates should be established at Kobdo, Kami and Guchen because of the growth of Russian trading there, the fifth to the protection of these proposed new consuls and the sixth to the right of Russians to acquire real estate in Mongolia.

The greatest curiosity is manifested in diplomatic circles as to the role which Japan will play in the present crisis, and also respecting the attitude the United States is likely to adopt, should Russia carry out her threats. It is believed, however, that President Taft's cabinet will not go beyond gentle intercession.

It is expected that China will appeal to the powers, including America, for fair play. What amount of support she will receive cannot safely be foretold.

At first glance it does not appear that the "open door" doctrine is involved in this affair, for presumably Russia would not attempt to curtail any right of trade in the affected provinces of Mongolia or Turkestan now enjoyed by citizens of foreign countries.

Japanese and Chinese newspapers devote much space to discussions of the danger of a break between Russia and China. The repeated threats of Russia to send a force to occupy Kuldja and to invade Mongolia are the subject of adverse criticism by the Japanese papers.

BRICK FOR HELEN GOULD

Thrown Through Window by Tramp Who Was Refused Alms

New York, Feb. 18.—Angered, when refused alms at the door, a disheveled tramp retired to the street and hurled a brick through one of the library windows of Miss Helen Gould's Fifth avenue residence last night.

Miss Gould was in an adjoining room and was unhurt, but Mrs. Edward Scholes, standing near the window, was struck squarely on the head and escaped serious injury only by an abundance of hair. As it was she was knocked down and a large bump was raised on her head. Police began a search for the beggar, but could not find him.

When he got off the train at Watonga he was arrested for transporting liquor in a prohibition state. He pleaded guilty, when arraigned, declaring, however, the whisky was for purely medicinal purposes. He was sentenced to serve thirty days in jail and pay $50 fine and $28.55 costs, or a total of seventy days in jail.

PRISONERS TO SHARE IN THE JAIL PROFITS

Plan to Be Put Into Operation In Rhode Island

Providence, Feb. 18.—Beginning the first of March, prisoners in the Rhode Island state prison and in the Providence county jail will share in the profits of these two state institutions, according to a statement made by Chairman Read of the state board of charities and correction.

The board will place its plans for a system of profit-sharing in the hands of the warden of the state prison, who will undertake to establish this novel treatment of the state's criminals.

Chairman Read, in speaking of the new departure in state penal methods, said: "Our board believes it will be conducive to good discipline, and be of great benefit to the men, as many of them leave the jail after serving many months' confinement without a cent. It also gives the prisoners, if so inclined, an opportunity to help their families during their terms of imprisonment."

Being St. Valentine's day and cupid having already got in his work it was most appropriate that "hearts" should be played. The score cards were red hearts. Four tables were in play. As was to be expected Miss Merrill got all the hearts and was rewarded with a big valentine, the other souvenir a heart-shaped silver picture frame going to Miss Etta M. Prescott. Tea was served in china of ye olden times. After supper, music, cards and fortune telling were enjoyed until a late hour, all departing for their homes voting it the best time of the season. The following menu was served:

BOYS' CONFERENCE.

The 21st annual conference of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. in the states of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, opened Friday afternoon with the largest attendance in the history of the association. The largest delegation from a single association was that sent by Quincy, consisting of 16 boys and the boys' work directors. It was voted at the opening meeting of the conference to conduct a statewide campaign in both Massachusetts and Rhode Island to begin March 4. Many of the best speakers to boys in the country will address the different meetings. The preparation service was held from 4 to 5 in the Central Congregational church. Rev. Lucius H. Bugbee of Brookline spoke on "A challenge to prayer."

PROTEST FROM INDIANS

Resent Caricatures of Themselves In Moving Picture Shows

Washington, Feb. 18.—As an aid to fiction in its more lurid spots, the American Indian has long been known to fame and nobody has offered any objection. With the development of the moving picture show, however, the situation has changed.

Indian chiefs now visiting the lodge of the White Father have voiced emphatic protests against the base uses to which their face is put in the unwritten literature of the 5 and 10 cent picture shows, and Indian Commissioner Valentine has promised to take the matter up in all seriousness, if necessary, with the White Father himself.

Murderer a Suicide

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 18.—Michael Lilek, who fled from Brocton, near here, after he had shot and instantly killed Miss Alice Hyland, 19 years old, because she objected to his attentions, was found dead on the mountain side, about a half-mile from the scene of the murder. He had shot himself through the head.

Trainer Kills Horse and Self

Pine Bluff, Ark, Feb. 18.—John Mullins, widely known as a trainer of trotting horses, killed his favorite racing mare and then sent a bullet into his own brain. No motive is known.

VALENTINE SUPPER

Delightful Affair of St. Margaret's Guild

Over 200 people gathered in the parish house of Christ church Friday evening to enjoy the hospitality of St. Margaret's Guild at its fourth annual Valentine supper. The room was decked in a new and hitherto unknown attire of hearts in forms palpable, big hearts, little hearts, hearts containing Cupid about to shoot his wicked little darts, and one (which brought delight to all the men) a heart bearing the letter "W-E-L-C-O-M-E" in gold. One was made to feel that here at last was the land of his heart's desire.

At 6.30 the guests gathered around the beautifully decorated tables. After the blessing was asked by Rev. R. E. Armstrong, the rector, all sat down to the following menu: Potato salad, escalloped corn, cold ham, cranberry sauce, pickles, cake, pie, rolls and coffee. The coffee which was contributed by Johnson Brothers was Johnson's best 1775 brand.

Miss Elizabeth Dickie was at the head of the serving committee. She was assisted by Miss Elizabeth Furnald, Miss Annie Denton, Miss Cora Barnicoat, Miss Isabelle Walker, Miss Lucy Moyle, Miss Emily Nicolson, Miss Ethel Schools, Miss Flora Deacon, Miss Anna McDowell, Miss Adelaide McDowell, Miss Mildred Smith, Miss Clara Pierce and Miss Mary McDonald.

Each guest was supplied with a program bearing a gilded Cupid on the front cover. Inside were the menu, the entertainment program and a dance order. A favor consisting of a red dart and a hand made valentine, each of different design, accompanied the program.

The decoration committee, with Miss Florence Ford as chairman, had charge of all these as well as the mural and table decorations. Miss Ethel Schools, a member of the committee made the favors. The committee deserved special commendation for the long hours of work spent in getting the decorations ready and the artistic manner in which they were arranged.

A short entertainment was given by friends of the Guild. Miss Irene Langhorn rendered a piano solo very skillfully. Miss Marion Brown sang a song appropriate to the occasion "Love has wings." Miss Violet Smith played a difficult piano selection very ably and Mrs. James Bingham sang a contralto solo with good effect. All four numbers were loudly encored.

At 8.30 the floor was cleared for dancing and for two hours the couples went "to and fro on the light fantastic toe" to music furnished by Mrs. Effie Rhines.

The waitresses, who were clad in dairymaid costume, looked very fetching with their wide white aprons and little caps studded with hearts.

Everything was arranged in so tasteful and satisfying a manner that as one was overheard to remark "you might know there was a woman at the bottom of it."

Miss Gertrude Jones was chairman of the General committee with the following assistants: Miss Bessie Dimmick, chairman of refreshment committee; Miss Ruth Gardner, chairman of entertainment committee; Miss Louise Mandigo, chairman of the ticket committee; Miss Florence Ford chairman of the decoration committee; and Miss Elizabeth Dickie, chairman of the serving committee.

—We are heartily glad that without equivocation or delay a high court of justice in England set at rest in one day the foul slander which had disturbed the peace of God-fearing men and women of Great Britain. King George V. has been by repute an honest and honorable citizen, an officer and a gentleman without stain and without reproach. He has come to the throne in a time when the public sentiment of the world has become so enlightened and so clean that licentiousness in an English sovereign would no longer be tolerated.—Christian Register.

lief which this canal would afford. He gave an instructive account of the advantages offered by this canal, in the large sums saved in freight and the escape from the vexations and expensive delays occasioned by vessels being delayed by stress of weather in their attempt to get around the Cape.

He also showed that by the construction of this canal ports of entry would be established in the interior towns and steamship lines to southern points would be established giving direct communication with southern ports, thereby enabling these places to receive shipments direct from these ports instead of by the way Boston and reshipment by rail as was now the case.

TEETH DRAWN IN COMMITTEE

Adverse Vote of Ten to One on Bennet Resolution

INSPIRED BY THE PRESIDENT

Friends of Canadian Reciprocity Regard Document as Unfortunate and Embarrassing, as It Bodes More Misunderstanding Among Our Northern Neighbors—Agreement Will Be Speedily Laid Before Senate

Washington, Feb. 18.—Acting upon suggestions which, it is understood, came direct from the White House, the house committee on foreign affairs held a hurriedly called meeting and by a vote of 10 to 1 ordered an adverse report upon the two resolutions introduced by Representative Bennet requesting that negotiations should begin for the annexation of Canada.

The foreign affairs committee made short work of the Bennet resolution which it has been feared by the friends of the Canadian reciprocity agreement might result in such alarm in England and Canada as to impede the progress of the ratification of the agreement by the Canadian parliament.

The Bennet resolutions, one of which requests the president to begin negotiations looking toward annexation and the other inquiring if such negotiations are now in progress, were referred to the committee Thursday.

A call was issued yesterday for a meeting of the committee and Chairman Foster of the committee and Representative McCall, author of the reciprocity bill, were at the White House. It is understood that President Taft urged that in the interest of the agreement decisive action was necessary and that the possible disastrous effects of the Bennet resolution should be immediately nullified by a positive stand against all annexation talk.

Representative Bennet was the only member of the committee who voted in favor of his resolutions. Those committee members opposing were: Chairman Foster, Legare of South Carolina, Cooper of Wisconsin, Cooper of Pennsylvania, Ames of Massachusetts, McKinley of Illinois, Garner of Texas, Flood of Virginia, Hitchcock of Nebraska and Palmer of Pennsylvania.

That the Bennet resolution is an unfortunate and embarrassing legislative document is the sentiment of many of the friends of the Canadian reciprocity. Closely following the casual statement by Champ Clark, who declared during a speech that he favored annexation, the resolution, introduced by a Republican member of the house, is likely to be misconstrued in both Great Britain and Canada.

The Canadian press expressed great alarm when Champ Clark's speech was flashed over the wire. The White House felt it necessary to issue a statement declaring that annexation is not contemplated, and Clark, mindful of the trouble he had innocently brought down upon a reciprocity measure of which he was a staunch supporter, made it plain that he spoke only for Champ Clark and not the Democratic party.

The introduction of a formal resolution, however, and its reference to the foreign affairs committee of the house, boded more misunderstanding across the Canadian border and friends of reciprocity at the Capitol, fearing that it might have effect when the Canadian parliament comes to ratify the reciprocity agreement, have attempted to dispose of it in such a way as to prevent this.

"Without reflecting at all upon the purpose of Mr. Bennet," said McCall, "at this time this resolution might tend toward the same effect in Canada." President Taft is understood to be displeased at the introduction of a resolution which might be construed on the other side to reflect the views of a reasonable number of American legislators.

That the president's fears were not vain has already been shown by the quick hold taken upon the argument given to the Canadian opposition, and by the demand of the British imperialists in parliament for a discussion of the Bennet resolution. Both the Canadian and British opponents of reciprocity are utilizing to the utmost the weapon which has been thrust into their hands.

That the Canadian reciprocity agreement will not be smothered in committee and that it will be speedily laid before the senate for action are the assurances which have been given to President Taft. Not even the most bitter opponents of the measure dare to attempt such tactics in the face of the great popular interest and support which have been aroused. Nevertheless, the senate leaders are expressing the opinion that an extra session will be necessary.

OCEAN MAIL BILL TO DIE ON MARCH 4

Committee Seems Inclined to Dodge Such a Big Question

Washington, Feb. 18.—The chances for the ocean mail bill at this session are rapidly diminishing, and Chairman Weeks does not anticipate that the postoffice committee can reach it this session.

The Gallinger ocean mail bill, which recently passed the senate, Vice President Sherman casting the deciding vote, bids fair to rest in the committee until March 4. For three days the committee has attempted to obtain a quorum in order to take up the measure. It has been found impossible to do so.

There is understood to be a disposition on the part of some of its members to dodge such a big question between now and March 4. Along with a number of other important bills of general import and thousands of private measures, the ocean mail bill, it appears, will die a natural death at noon on March 4.

Man Who Hates Work Receives Horse-whipping From Judge

Stanford, Ky., Feb. 18.—"I got enough whippings when I was a kid, and I liked 'em so well that I'd rather take an old fashioned beating right now than work out a fine on the roads," declared a prisoner accused of intoxication to Police Judge Menefee of Stamford.

Court was transferred to an improvised whipping post, where the judge, who has a strong pair of arms, applied a horsewhip to the prisoner, Lee Long. A big crowd cheered the judge in his efforts to mete out punishment. The prisoner admitted the "licking" was better than the kind mother used to make.

ALL ITS CASH IS WIPED OUT

Women's Clubhouse Corporation Goes to the Wall

CONDUCTED BY THE FAIR SEX

Property Became Buried In Debt Because of Lack of Interest of Stockholders—Creditors Force Sale at $50,000 Less Than Valuation—Investors, Who Are Mostly Women, Stand to Lose $130,000 In Crash

Boston, Feb. 18.—More than 500 investors, mostly women, lost in sums ranging from $50 to $2500, all they subscribed to the Women's Clubhouse corporation at 177 Huntington avenue, one of Boston's largest business ventures conducted wholly by women, its board of directors yesterday reported.

A total of $50,000 paid in as capital stock was wiped away, together with $80,000 realized by the corporation on an old real estate deal.

For thirteen years the women ran the building for the rentals they could get from it. Lack of interest on the part of the women stockholders and lack of capital to keep the building in proper repair, the directors reported, buried the property in debt.

Creditors forced the appointment of two trustees one year ago to handle the business. They sold the property a few weeks ago for $155,000, or $50,000 less than its assessed valuation.

The sale was forced, the trustees said last night, because of crowding demands for payment of interest and current expenses for which the corporation had no money. The creditors quickly gobbled up the $155,000.

All its bills are paid and one of the trustees, Elbridge R. Anderson, said last night there was just enough money left to enable the corporation to go legally out of business.

With all its 500 and more stockholders, the corporation seemed to be making great progress during the last six years. It increased its rentals from $7665 in 1903 to $20,450 in 1910. But the increased revenue was obtained only at great expenditure.

Mrs. W. W. Potter was president and general manager of the corporation, and the other leading figure in the business was the treasurer, Mrs. J. S. Reed. When creditors pressed them they called meetings of the stockholders. Few of the latter attended the meetings, however. Being a strictly business corporation it did not appeal to philanthropists in the city.

The corporation was organized in 1896. It was capitalized at $150,000 and a corps of stock salesmen quickly disposed of $50,000 of the stock, which was let out to the public at a par value of $50. More than 90 percent of the stockholders are women.

GAS FUMES KILL THREE

How a Providence Man Sought Relief From Family Troubles

Providence, Feb. 18.—Ernest St. Laurent, his wife and 3-year-old daughter, Blanche, were found dead from gas asphyxiation in their room. It is thought that the father, who had been suffering mentally, was responsible.

The father, mother and child were in one bed. A long gas tube, used to supply gas to a heater, had been disconnected from the heater. The open end lay on the bed. The gas was turned on at the wall jet.

The arrangements of the tube indicated that the father had planned to end his family troubles. He was ill and had been out of work a long time. He was a carpenter.

GIRL SHOOTS ASSAILANT

Not Arrested After Putting Bullet Into a Man's Back

Albany, Feb. 18.—Luigi Vermillo is in a serious condition at the Albany hospital as the result of a pistol shot wound inflicted by a girl at her home on the New York-Vermont state line, near South Poultney, Vt.

It is alleged that Vermillo attacked Miss Carmelo Covino, aged 17, while the two were alone and that she seized a revolver and shot Vermillo in the back.

The authorities have not arrested Miss Covino, as they maintain that she fired the shot in self-defense. Vermillo is 45 years of age and has a wife and five children.

Endorsed at Home

Such Proof as This Should Convince Any Quincy Citizen.

The public endorsement of a local citizen is the best proof that can be produced. None better, none stronger can be had. When a man comes forward and testifies to his fellow-citizens, addresses his friends and neighbors, you may be sure he is thoroughly convinced or he would not do so. Telling one's experience when it is for the public good is an act of kindness that should be appreciated. The following statement given by a resident of Quincy adds one more to the many cases of Home Endorsement which are being published about Doan's Kidney Pills. Read it.

John R. Duffy, 14 Copeland St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I am so favorably impressed with Doan's Kidney Pills that it gives me pleasure to recommend them to anyone suffering from kidney complaint. I am fully convinced that this remedy will do all that it is claimed to do. If anyone would like to obtain further details regarding my case, I will be glad to answer any questions."

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train, and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1252, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

For several years Valentine works excellently and rises to be assistant cashier. He and Rose love each other, but Valentine knows Doyle is on his track and dares not tell her of his affection for her. A mysterious Mr. Cronin turns out to be old Bill Avery, now reformed and a man of business.

Valentine receives a telegram from Doyle. He tells Red how he has planned to outwit the detective by means of a cleverly concocted alibi.

Rose Lane tells Valentine she loves him and that they are going to marry. Valentine reveals to her his love for her. Doyle appears on the scene to arrest Valentine on a charge of robbing a Massachusetts bank many years before.

Doyle is astounded when Valentine announces that he was never in Sing Sing or in Massachusetts in his life and that his name is Lee Randall.

Doyle is finally convinced by a sensational ruse employed by Valentine that Valentine is not Valentine after all. "I'll land him if it takes a lifetime," he says.

CHAPTER XVII.

AFTER a few moments Valentine shook his head angrily and drew back a step from the safe.

"Red, got a handkerchief?" he snapped.

"Yes."

"Well, get moving. Come on—blindfold me so that I can't see, so that every nerve will be centered on hearing the tumblers click—you know—the old gag."

"Sure thing."

Red scrambled to his feet and hastily tied a handkerchief tightly around Valentine's head, completely covering his eyes. Valentine stepped back to the vault, and Red crouched again at his feet.

Deftly, intently, the ex-convict manipulated the intricate mechanism of the vault.

"Hurry, Jimmy, that kid," urged Red, to whom the suspense was becoming unbearable.

"D—n you, be quiet! If you say another word I'll knock your head off—my hands are like leather."

He again sandpapered his fingers.

"You're bleeding!" exclaimed Red.

"What of it?" returning to his task. "Don't talk. I tell you. I heard it click—I missed it again" turning the combination slowly—"but I felt it that time—I felt the dog lift"—Valentine was intensely excited. "Red, there it is! Hurry with a match!"

Red, well acquainted with the duties required of him, by reason of the thorough education he had received from Valentine in the past, had been waiting expectantly with a match ready for the striking. At the word he illuminated the combination's dial with a tiny flame.

"What is it?" cried Valentine.

The other stretched himself upward and peered at the numbers on the metal saucer—

"It points to twenty-one!" he exclaimed.

Valentine again drew away from the vault.

"Sandpaper!" he cried. Red handed him another sheet. He rubbed his fingers softly across it. His raw, bleeding flesh could not stand more than the slightest contact with the rasping surface. "I'll feel every jar clean to my eyeballs now," he added. He turned the dial back and then forward and then four complete reverse revolutions. "That's the way to get them, Red"—two more forward revolutions—"bare, bleeding nerves"—a half turn back—"raw, throbbing nerves—a toothache in every finger end—eh, Red—there—match!"

After a moment:

"Fifty-two!"

"How many bolts did this door have?" asked Valentine. "Did you notice?" He went on turning the dial.

"Twelve."

"Thought so," jubilantly. "Can you hear her any more, Red?"

Red's ear was pressed against the crack of the vault door.

"No. And God knows I don't want to. Honest, Jimmy, I don't believe I"—

"Oh, yes, you do. So long as she calls we know she's alive"—turning the dial slowly back—"here we are again. If this is eleven I know this old rotation—match!"

"Eleven!" shrieked Red joyously after a moment of racking suspense.

"I've got it! I've got it!" cried Valentine. "If this is it, Red"—reversing the dial again—"she's ours in another minute. Match!"

Red struck another match.

"Ten!" he cried.

A half turn of the dial forward. Valentine's sharp ear detected the sound as though another bolt had drawn back. "Here we are again! Match!"

"Forty-two," exclaimed Red.

"That's it—forty-two—that's what it should be. Do you hear Kitty now?"

"No. Good God, Jimmy, suppose, after all, she's dead?"

Two more turns of the dial.

"Keep your nerve, old pal—there—match!"—

To George Doyle, standing in the doorway, the scene was one of gripping interest. The consummate, almost uncanny, skill of Jimmy Valentine was something to cause in the detective, experienced even as he was with resourceful and intelligent cracksmen, a thrill of genuine admiration. No wonder Valentine had proved the despair of the safe makers, the banking officials and the sleuths of half a dozen states. And a lieutenant governor had pardoned him!

As Doyle surveyed intently the operations of Red Flanagan and Jimmy Valentine in their superhuman effort to rescue their beloved little playmate, Kitty Lane, from the stifling clutches of the steel vault he became aware of a sudden though very slight change in the darkened room, the windows of which, opening into a shaft, gave almost no aid at all to inquisitive eyes. He glanced across the room to the point from which the light seemed to come and saw that the door leading from the assistant cashier's office had been partly opened. Next, to his utter amazement, he saw a plumed hat thrust forward into the opening, and then a girlish figure appeared. The figure halted and turned its face toward the vault where Red Flanagan and Jimmy Valentine were at work.

In practically the same position as himself, though at the opposite side of the room, Doyle recognized that the girl could watch the operations of the two expert cracksmen without detection unless either of them should neglect his work and glance in her direction, and, as he thoroughly appreciated, both Valentine and Flanagan were too intent on their mission of rescue to turn for an instant from their task.

As Red struck the match at the latest command of Valentine Doyle saw the girl bend forward to better gain a view of the proceedings. The side of her face was illumined by the light in the assistant cashier's office, and—could it be true?—yes, Doyle was positive that the form of the witness in the opposite doorway was none other than that of the young girl who had seen Jimmy Valentine in Warden Handler's office at Sing Sing and who had [illegible] on the lieutenant governor [illegible]

A. BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Tax on Bachelors Proposed to Solons on Valentine's Day—Is It Worth Five Dollars Not to Be Married?—Loan Shark "Philanthropy" Gets Rapped at the Hub—Six Years' Work on one Lock and Key, but It's Not a Night Latch—Street Cars Unventilated While Many People Regard Fresh Air as an Enemy.

The bachelor's valentine at the State House on Beacon Hill caused considerable merriment on Feb. 14, although if the bill proposed by Mrs. Charlotte Smith is passed by the legislature the bachelors may laugh out of the other corner of their mouths. A slight discussion arose over the parentage of the bill, as the unmarried representative who had promised to stand sponsor for it got cold feet at the last moment. It looked for a time as though the bill would be orphaned but Mrs. Smith came to the rescue and mothered it. The bachelor's tax bill is designed to place a tax of five dollars annually upon bachelors who have attained the age of 35 years, the income from this source to be devoted to the care of old maids—there are, by the way, some 100,000 bachelor girls in Massachusetts alone. The representative in question admitted that he had rather give up five dollars per annum than get married. Anyone who denies that there is a humorous side to legislative life must admit that it was a stroke of genius to bring about this hearing on St. Valentine's day, and there were sentiments in plenty floating through the atmosphere of the historic chamber. One representative maintained that a bachelor who had been refused should not be taxed, and suggested that women who refused to marry should also be subject to a tax.

Prepare to be educated up to the point of voluntarily expecting the street car conductor to allow a few of the ventilators to be opened in the interest of prevention of colds and pneumonia. The Boston Elevated Railway Company's contention that differences among passengers are the greatest obstacle to reasonably effective ventilation of the cars has been sustained by the findings of a committee of the Twentieth Century Club appointed to work for better ventilation in public conveyances. This committee has reported that it is physically impossible on account of the layout of the city for the Boston Elevated to add more cars to its local service during the rush hours, and that as many passengers object to the opening of ventilators an extended campaign of education is necessary to bring people generally to know that colds and pneumonia result largely from breathing impure air. The conclusion to which the committee has come undoubtedly has expert as well as general value, for one of its members is Royce W. Gilbert of the sanitary engineering department of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, specialist in the ventilation of playhouses, department stores and factories. These investigators found what the Elevated officials have known for a long time that about three people out of five still regard air as an enemy and that even a slight stirring of the atmosphere in a street car is resented by good folk who would stand up bravely under ten times the breeze in an automobile. So that, in order to solve the problem of transportation ventilation it appears necessary to promulgate energetically the doctrine that if everybody would eat right, sleep right, think right and drink reasonable quantities of cold water no colds would be left to be falsely attributed to drafts in trolley cars.

Loan shark philanthropy, which for many years has been blatantly set forth in Boston with alluring invitations to housekeepers and wage earners to "have a good time over the holidays," to "pay back at your own convenience," and, biggest bait of all to receive the money without endorser or publicity—the greatest get-poor-quick scheme of the century came in for hard knocks at a hearing before the legislative committee on banks and banking Feb. 13. That consistent advocate of the working girl's welfare, Mrs. Mary Kenney O'Sullivan, interested in savings bank life insurance and credit unions, told a lot of instances of the evils brought about among wage earning women who have succumbed to enticing advertisements, offering funds with which to pay annoying bills. The men folk are just as gullible, for Rep. William V. Newton of Boston explained how in the days of Boston's bigger council the loan sharks put most of the younger members "on the bum" by advancing them money on their salaries at the beginning of the year. Rep. Norman H. White, of Brookline, who in so many other instances has shown himself a true friend of the workingman, as in his effecting the passage of the Savings Insurance Act of 1907, took a hand in some cross questioning which showed up the profits of a certain "philanthropic" loan association, and made known the existence of a surplus as well. Of another "humanitarian" company which does a pawnshop business Mr. White created a sensation when he said: "It's a plain 'hock' shop and nothing else, and should be under the supervition with the police every day." Reption with the police every day," Representatives of the high rate loaning establishments may have got from these and other thrusts an inkling of what they have to expect should the energetic Brookline man in the near future become governor of Massachusetts. Some, certainly, of the scandals of the continued exploitation of the needy might be abated under a chief executive determined that even the humblest debtor in the Commonwealth should by law receive a square deal.

Six years to make a lock and key sounds like a devotional exercise of some metal working monk of the leisurely middle ages and not like the undertaking of a locksmith in an age of hurry-up. Yet, since 1905, in his evenings and holidays and sometimes in the day when other work was dull, Frank Koralewsky, a Roxbury iron worker has been continuously employed upon a carved steel lock which is now exhibited at the Society of Arts and Crafts. It is wonderful in intricacy and beauty of design. It is in the Gothic style of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, and the work is hand carved and chiselled iron, inlaid with gold, silver and bronze, and ornamented with damascened work in brass and bronze. The motive taken by the artist is one of the famous Grimm fairy tales, the story of "Snow-White and the Seven Dwarfs." A rich vein of fancy, quite in the vein of the best old European traditions, is discoverable in the intricate and interesting details lavished upon this extraordinary piece of work, which is full of delightful surprises. All the designers, craftsmen, architects and artisans who have seen it are very enthusiastic over it, and many invitations have been received to exhibit it elsewhere after the close of the present exhibition, on Feb. 25. So remarkable is it considered that the exhibition committtee of the Copley Society have asked to have it shown at their loan exhibition of work done prior to 1840, at Copley Hall, which opens March 8. Another pressing invitation has come to have it shown in Chicago. It will probably be the only piece of modern workmanship shown at Copley hall.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The body f Miss Elizabeth McDonald, formerly of Quincy, who died in Marion, Ohio, was brought to Quincy this morning for interment at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

The prize winners were Miss Minnie Moody, Miss Margaret Danehy, Miss Mary Costello, T. J. O'Connell, James Greely and Edward J. O'Brien. After the whist there were refreshments and dancing.

It will interest Wollaston people, to know that its young men have organized a permanent club, known as the Samoset club, for the purpose of becoming better acquainted with one another and promoting good fellowship and an interest in the religious, political and social affairs of our city and ward. The young men have been meeting weekly at the homes of members the past four months, enjoying themselves at whist and song. About ten weeks ago the boys decided they would give a minstrel show that would eclipse any yet given in Quincy and plans were at once formulated. Since nothing has been spared in the way of time and money to make it a grand success. George Spaulding, well known in professional minstrel circles and in Wollaston, has been in charge and Chester J. Hogue, also a popular Wollastonian, has taken care of the musical end of it. The following club members are looking after the business end: James E. Claflin, Eugene Sanders, Demi Gourlie, Robert Sibley, Junior Lewis, Carleton Lewis, Max Pinkham, Charles Sayward, Sidney Claflin, Brandt Lupton, Harry Campbell, William Murphy, Harold S. Taylor and W. W. Nichols.

STOOD BY THE FLAG

Sketch Presented by Men's Club at Houghs Neck

A crowded house greeted the performers at the entertainment given by the Union chapel Men's club at Houghs Neck, Friday evening. The opening number was an exhibition in legerdemain given by Curtis R. Southwick. The tricks were skilfully performed and elicited much applause from the spectators.

The second part of the program was a sketch entitled "Stand by the flag." All the parts were well taken, and the work of the principal character "Israel Gordon" portrayed by Henry W. French was particularly meritorious.

MASSACHUSETTS PRESS.

Last Monday the Massachusetts Press Association was the guest of the Christian Science Monitor, Boston, and only about thirty-five of the members were present for this is the busiest month in the year for printers of town reports, etc. The party assembled at noon, just in time to see the forms closed and put on the presses which turn out about 20,000 copies an hour all folded. Then the entire building, which is the cleanest and most modern of any publishing house in the east was inspected. This was followed by a dainty lunch and a business meeting. The Monitor does not brag of its circulation but it is a fact that 23,000 copies more a day are printed than a year ago at this time. It has a field and a bright future.

TO BOOM ATHLETICS

Quincy Rowing Association to Be Interested in All Sports

For the first time in several years Quincy will have an athletic association that bids fair to become one of the prominent organizations of the state. Recently the association was incorporated and behind it are some of the most prominent business men in the city.

Their object is to promote and encourage all sorts of games and diversions and no branch of athletics will be overlooked. The Coliseum will be the home of the organization. As the club gains strength and members the place will be equipped with apparatus of the modern type and a corps of instructors will be secured who will outline the best methods for physical development.

A strong track team will be put on the field to compete at the games of all the best known New England arganizations.

On the diamond the organization will be represented by a ball team that will be strong in every department. Good players are now in view, and the club has received many letters from stars who want to fly the standard of the Quincy Rowing Association.

That is the name of the organization. On the water it will also be a factor. Strong crews will be organized and with the facilities for good rowing in Quincy and vicinity a body of athletes should be brought to the front in a few years who will represent the association creditably on the Charles, the Schuylkill, the Harlem and other rivers.

Rowing will receive more attention than the other sports, as Quincy is so situated that at some day in the near future it may turn out to be the headquarters of many a regatta. Just new there is considerable fault found with the Charles river. The wind chops through the surface and agitates the water so much that neither record time nor good racing materializes.

As this sport strikes the fancy of thousands in New England, Quincy, with its unapproachable car service, would be a splendid rendezvous for the rowing men. Now that the club will be swinging along smoothly in a short time, it is the intention of the officials to make application for membership in the amateur athletic union. This will give the club the right to hold wrestling and boxing exhibitions. track and field games. The receipts of these athletic meetings will be used to equip the gymnasium and in building of single, double, four-oared and eight oared shells. It is a grand good thing for the young men of the city and one that will help to keep mischievous ones off the thoroughfares. There are a lot of athletically inclined young fellows in Quincy who will take advantage of the opportunity to get interested in physical culture through the assistance of the Quincy Rowing Association. It is a good thing and deserves the support of every one.

Officers of the association are now working to make a success of the first athletic entertainment, which will be held at the Coliseum, Thursday evening, March 2. As there is to be a limit to the membership, it will be well to apply for application blanks early. Membership blanks can be had by applying to J. J. Fallon, Washington street, Quincy, or the Quincy Rowing Association, P. O. box 153.

HIGH SCHOOL VICTORY

Took Both Games From Winchester High

Quincy High made Winchester High bite the dust in their own gymnasium Friday afternoon by defeating them 24 to 9. The first half was productive of the keenest kind of a contest, and ended with the score 8 to 6. In the second period Quincy ran away from her opponents and won very handily. Manning was the star of the game, shooting five baskets from the floor and 4 on free tries. The Chapman brothers got two each and played their usual strong game. Prout played a good game at centre and Harmon prevented his man from getting any baskets. For the losers, Flinn and Morteson did the best work.

—The nineteenth of April offers an unusual opportunity this year for a real observance of Patriots' Day. It is a date that so far as Massachusetts is concerned, marks the semi-centennial of the opening of the Civil War. The Old Bay State ought never to forget that it was Massachusetts troops that shed the first blood in the two great wars of the republic. The minutemen at Lexington and Concord, and the Sixth Regiment in the streets of Baltimore, gave to that day a significance that must endure as long as the Commonwealth itself.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

NORFOLK DOWNS INDIGNANT

Commuters Appoint a Committee on Train Service

The residents of Norfolk Downs, especially those who take the trains at that station are very indignant at the train service that is being handed out to them by the new timetable, and their sentiments were forcibly expressed at a largely attended indignation meeting held Saturday night at Polands hall.

John E. Poland presided and Frank J. Kesler was secretary. The train situation was thoroughly thrashed out.

Representative Langelier contrastd the train service at the Norfolk Downs station with stations on other railroads that compared in distance and population with Norfolk Downs, and said if necessary to get better train service he would take the matter up with the Railroad Commissioners.

Ex-Councilman Hobbs said that with every change of time table Norfolk Downs lost trains and if the railroad kept on making changes the time would soon come when there would be no trains. Four trains had been lost by the recent change.

Other speakers told how it was necessary for some passengers to take outward trains that stopped at Wollaston, and walk back to Norfolk Downs in order to get home. There was a crying demand that some of the trains that made stops at Wollaston, but run by Norfolk Downs, should stop there.

A representative of A. B. Robbins & Co. foundry told of the inconvenience the present train service was to his workmen and a representative of Mellen, Bray & Co., told how it was necessary to shut down five minutes before the regular time that the workmen might get trains.

Councilman Parlee and several others added their word of indignation at the way this section was being used. He also spoke of the way that people who used the Montclair station were being used by the new timetable.

It was voted to appoint a committee of five to confer with the railroad officials to see if some of the trains needed could not be obtained for Norfolk Downs and Montclair.

The committee appointed were Representative Langelier ex-Councilman Ralph W. Hobbs, Frank Cochran and Frank J. Kesler.

Before the meeting adjourned the advisability of making the present organization a permanent improvement society was discussed and the general sentiment seemed to be that such should be done.

Sunday the committee held a meeting and discussed what their plan of action should be in their interview with the railroad officials, and what trains they should ask to have stop at Norfolk Downs and Montclair.

CARD PLAYERS ARRESTED.

Inspector Goodhue, with Officers Bishop and Milford raided the premises at 31 Water street Sunday afternoon in search of liquor. They found no liquor, but they did find nine or ten men seated about a table playing cards. There was a grand rush to get out when the officers entered and several got away. Five, however were arrested for gaming on the Lord's day. They gave their names as Agostino Artise, J. Charles Purpora, Joseph Purpora, Joseph Calabro and Frank Russo. In court a sixth man was arrested, who gave the name of Antonio Calabro. Their cases were continued.

The same officers also visited the premises at 26 and 28 Water street occupied by Antonio Valentine and seized thirty bottles of beer, a lot of empty beer bottles and empty beer kegs and bottling apparatus. Valentine was arrested for violation of the liquor law and for carrying a concealed weapon.

TROLLEY TERMINAL

To Receive and Deliver Freight By Trolley

At the last meeting of the City Council a petition was received from the Old Colony street railway for a location for a branch-off track on Washington street near Foster street, and a hearing on the same will be held March 6.

It is well understood that the company intends to use the old Tisdale stable property for a freight terminal for its trolley freight system, and the branch-off is in order that cars may enter the terminal.

The plan filed with the petition shows that it is the intention to build a single track. Washington street at this place is about 55 feet wide and the branch leaves the main line at a point about 19 feet north of Foster street, in front of the Jerusha Hardwick estate. It enters the Tisdale property just south of the house between the house and old stable, crossing Washington street by a sharp turn.

MITCHELL—DYER.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carman, 110 Upland road, the contracting parties being Mrs. Carman's sister Miss Maude Dyer, daughter of Mr. Calvin Dyer, and Mr. Hutcheon Mitchell. Rev. Ellery Channing Butler of First church, tied the knot. Miss Louise Humphrey of Lynn was the maid of honor and the best man was Mr. Howard Andrews of this city. Potted plants and cut flowers made the house most attractive. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have gone to Canada on a wedding trip and on their return are to reside at 110 Upland road.

AERIAL CRAFT EXHIBIT.

The exhibition of aerial craft which is being held in Mechanics building, Boston, this week, under the direction of Chester I. Campbell promises to present to the public a number of startling features in the way of flying machines never before seen under one roof. Such machines as Grahame White's, Wright & Co.'s biplane used by Ralph Johnstone in his record breaking altitude flights, the famous DeLesseps channel machine of Bleriot type, a number of various types from the Burgess-Curtis Company, and many others are on view and so arranged that the public can become intimate with the construction and machinery of these world-famed flying machines. Arrangements are made to have lectures by Augustus Post winner of the International Balloon trip last season, the balloon winding up in the Canadian wilds. This lecture will prove of immense interest to everyone. Besides that lectures will also be given by H. Helm Clayton, J. Emery Harriman, Albert Adams Merrill, and others prominent in Aeronautics. Charles Morok who made a flight over New York last week is to come to Boston and assay a trip over the city, weather permitting. Morok flies a biplane with a 75 H. P. motor. There will be elaborate decorations, together with fine music and various kinds of entertainment, and everything will be done to entertain the visiting thousands. Tuesday will be Governor's and Society night, Governor Foss and staff and many members of the city Governorment will attend.

—Cronje, the brave leader of the Boers' war with England, has crossed over the river of death. He was said to be the greatest general of his day, and his final defeat was due to the over-whelming number of British soldiers and the most modern military equipments which were brought to bear against his small army of half starved, poorly equipped patriots.—Athol Chronicle.

SUDDEN DEATH.

G. Walter Flint of Hancock street died suddenly Saturday afternoon at his home. Mr. Flint had not been in the best of health since last fall, but of late had said that he was feeling very much better. Saturday while eating dinner he complained of not feeling well, and died a short time after, his death being due to heart disease.

Mr. Flint was a son of Jacob Flint for many years sexton of the First church. It was he who tolled the bell when news of the death of President John Quincy Adams reached Quincy, and he also tolled the bell the night when the citizens by their vote decided to throw off the town form of government for the city form.

G. Walter Flint was at one time employed in a large dry goods store in Boston, but of late years has had the care of lawns in the immediate vicinity of his home. He spent many hours making his own home surroundings attractive, and there were no better kept grounds than his. Saturday morning he had been at a neighbors to look after a furnace fire, and was apparently as well as usual.

He leaves a widow and one brother, Frank, who resides in California.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Washington's Birthday on Wednesday will be observed by the Daily Ledger as a holiday, no paper being issued on that day. All the holiday events will be reported in the Thursday paper.

This editorial is reprinted with a correction, as the Daily Ledger wants to be fair in the discussion of water rates.

Some expect a material reduction in Metropolitan water assessments should the shipyard cease to use Metropolitan water. The same argument was used in favor of the installation of meters, but has not been verified. In 1908 the city was charged with 1,096,814,000 gallons of water, which made the assessment of 1909 $51,230.04. In the year 1909 Quincy used 30,879,000 gallons less water but the assessment was only $280.04 less. In 1910 Quincy used 7,059,000 gallons less water than in 1909, and the assessment may be $100 less in 1911; not enough to pay the interest on the debt incurred for installing meters.

It is reported that the bill of the shipyard for Metropolitan water in 1910 was $4,386.31, which at eight cents per thousand gallons represented 54,828,875 gallons. Should the shipyard cut off the whole Metropolitan supply, therefore, the reduction in Quincy's assessment would not be $500 less per year. Nevertheless when all expenses are included the average cost of water to the city is about fifteen cents per 1,000 gallons.

The above calculation is based on these figures of the water supplied to Quincy and the Metropolitan assessments; the supply of one year determining the assessment for the next:

Year.	Gallons	Assessment.
1906	1,113,286,500	$50,027.14
1907	984,368,000	49,285.01
1908	1,096,314,000	51,230.04
1909	1,065,435,000	50,950.00
191	1,058,376,937	*

* Estimate for 1911, $50,850.00

THE TRUE AND THE UNTRUE.

Mrs. E. M. Williams.

He was a dog,
But he stayed at home
And guarded the family, night and day.
He was a dog.
That didn't roam.
He lay on the steps or chased the stray—
The tramp, the burglar, the hen away.
For a dog's true heart for that household beat
At morning and evening, in cold and heat.
He was a dog.

He was a man.
And didn't stay
To cherish his wife and children fair.
He was a man.
And every day
His heart grew callous, its lovebeats rare;
He tho't of himself at the close of the day,
And, cigar in his fingers, hurried away
To the club, the lodge, the hall, the show.
But he had a right to go, you know,
He was a man.

SHIPYARD FAVORED

Not Only in Water but on Bridge and in Taxes

Editor Quincy Daily Ledger:

I have read with interest former Councilman Abele's letter in the Ledger in regard to the proposed lease of the water privileges of the old reservoir for a period of 30 years at $1,000. per year.

If he has stated the case in accordance with the actual facts, I hope that Mayor Shea will not sign the lease in its present form.

I have always been amazed at the excessively high water rates which the thousands of householders in this City are obliged to pay. This Abele letter came as a revelation to me and explained one of the greatest leaks in our Water Department, and why I and hundreds of others have been burdened with a rate out of all proportion to the benefits received.

I believe the Fore River Company should pay not less than $5,000 per year for the old reservoir water, the lease to be 30 years with privilege of either party cancelling after fifteen years on 6 months notice. The Fore River Co. not to be allowed the privilege of selling any of this water outside of its yard.

If these terms are not agreeable to the Company, then I believe they should pay the wholesale market price for water of not less than 15 cents per 100 cubic feet.

I understand that the same concern is asking on purely personal grounds for the widening of the Fore River draw from 100 feet to 123 feet at an expense of something like $50,000, they to pay one half, and certain sections of the county to pay the balance. The ordinary width of a draw is 60 feet. When the bridge was rebuilt, at their request it was made 100 feet wide at a large additional expense. Although a comparatively new bridge, they now ask to have the draw widened 23 feet additional for their benefit, and the county to stand $25,000 of it.

I also notice that a recent statement issued by President Bowles shows that they have of taxable property $3,559 000. Our board of Assessors appraise it at about $1,000,000 or less than 30 per cent of its actual value But upon the house I live in and those of my neighbors, they are assessed at from 80 percent to 100 per cent of the actual value, and the owners are no richer in worldly goods than the Fore River Co.

I may be looking at these items from a selfish point of view but I fail to see why I should be continually called upon to indirectly in my tax bills contribute towards maintaining the Fore River Ship Building Co.

RUNS AMUCK ON STEAMER

Lunatic Causes Great Excitement Among Passengers

New York, Feb. 20.—Dennis Lynch, a second-cabin passenger on the White Star line steamer Laurentic, which came in from Liverpool, caused great excitement among the 832 passengers on the high seas by running amuck with a revolver.

Lynch bolted from his cabin on the Laurentic flourishing a pistol. He fired wildly along the length of the port corridor of the stateroom deck, and men and women darted into their cabins, narrowly escaping seven shots. One shot entered the purser's cabin and the others lodged in the woodword of the ship.

Several officers rushed at the man while he was reloading the weapon and disarmed him. He was locked up until the arival of the ship here and turned over to the immigration authorities.

WOMAN A HORSE THIEF

Says Alleged Accomplice Hypnotized Her Into Crime

New York, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Edna H. Mann, a young matron of striking appearance, was convicted of horse stealing in Long Island City. She is believed to be the first woman horse thief over convicted in or about New York.

Mrs. Mann broke down in court and confessed the theft with a male accomplice of several horses and buggies. She was remanded to jail for sentence. Her alleged accomplice, Sidney Denning, is yet to be tried. He says he is the son of a retired surgeon in the United States navy. Each prisoner professes to have been under the hypnotic influence of the other.

SOLUTION MUST COME QUICKLY

Reciprocity May Be Killed by Tangle In the Senate

SEVERAL INTERESTS TIED UP

Six Urgent Measures, Besides Ten General Appropriation Bills, Have Precedent Over Canadian Pact and Are Strongly Backed—Extra Session Appears Almost Inevitable—President Pins Hopes on Democrats

Washington, Feb. 20.—There is in process a great pooling of opposition interests in the senate. The Lorimer supporters are trading votes with the opponents of Canadian reciprocity. The opposition to popular election of senators is doing likewise. The knitting together of the forces has caused despair to the friends of the administration who hope to get the Canadian agreement to a final vote in the senate this session.

Some of the most active friends of the measure are inclined to acknowledge that reciprocity is done for. There are so many complications that it will be almost a miracle now if the bill is saved. It seems as though so many interests have been tied up that it will require more than usual end-of-the-session diplomacy to break them apart.

The big filibuster in the house and the hostile sentiments developed in both houses, as well as the utter Republican demoralization, all contribute to the ugly situation. The administration's plans may yet prevail in some degree, but a solution must be had before many days if at all.

Ahead of the Canadian agreement for consideration by the senate, in addition to ten general appropriation bills, are measures affecting these subjects:

Popular election of senators, Senator Lorimer's case, permanent tariff board, general age pensions, congressional apportionment and fortification of Panama canal.

Not one of these measures can be side-tracked without a contest. Back of each is a group of determined senators insistent that a vote shall be taken before adjournment. Some of the measures must be left unpassed or the Canadian agreement will die. There is not time enough left for all.

Several Republican senators whose knowledge of the legislative situation cannot be doubted expressed views like the outline given when asked for statements as to what might be expected of President Taft's demand that a vote be taken at the present session on the agreement. Senators who hoped to avoid an extra session by getting a vote on the McCall bill see their chances for success growing less and less.

The general opinion now seems to be that there will be an extra session, and the only senators who are making preparations to go home after March 4 are those whose service expires on that date.

The argument advanced by congress leaders in support of the contention that President Taft will call a special session is that the executive is determined to derive what benefit he can from the changed conditions in the house, where the Democrats will be in control, and in the senate, where the Republican majority will be materially reduced. It is said that the president believes that the senate, as it will be constituted after March 4, would pass the bill.

The senate committee on finance decided to give hearings on the McCall bill today and Tuesday. On Wednesday the bill will be considered in executive session and it will probably be reported to the senate not later than Thursday. Agricultural interests have requested that they be given the privilege of making statements in opposition.

There is no enthusiastic advocate of the McCall bill on the Republican side of the chamber. Some Democrats may come forward as its champion, but his efforts probably would prove ineffective, as his motives would be attacked on the ground that he was seeking to embarrass the Republicans.

GOLDEN WEDDING GUESTS

Receive Invitation Cards Made of Pure Beaten Gold

Moscow, Feb. 20.—To celebrate his golden wedding, M. Spiridonoff, a Moscow mining magnate, invited 200 guests, who were agreeably surprised to find their card of invitation made of pure beaten gold, with the lettering artistically done in enamel.

Each card weighed two-thirds of an ounce, and the 8½ pounds of gold used to make them came from Spiridonoff's own mines in the Ural mountains. The invitations alone cost $5000.

MARTIN W. LITTLETON

Stands For Compromise In New York Struggle

LITTLETON A CANDIDATE

Will Go on Stump In an Effort to Gain Senatorial Seat

New York, Feb. 20.—Martin W. Littleton, newly elected Democratic representative from the First congressional district, announced last night his candidacy for the United States senate to succeed Mr. Depew, and he supplemented his formal statement with a verbal declaration that he will take his cause before the people on the stump.

The addition of one more name to the list of candidates already in the field caused no great excitement among the leaders here, though it stirred some curiosity as to Littleton's motive in coming forward at this time.

CHINA WAITING FOR DISPLAY OF FORCE

Not Inclined to Comply With the Demands of Russia

Pekin, Feb. 20.—The Chinese government displays the keenest anxiety over Russia's threatened military demonstration in Ili province, but, nevertheless, it may not comply with the demands set forth in the note from St. Petersburg until a show of force takes some of the sting out of its humiliation.

It is believed in Pekin that even should China acquiesce, Russia would not accept her promise, but would insure its fulfillment by occupying certain points in Chinese Turkestan.

The foreign board says that it has asked Russian Minister Korostovetz for a more explicit statement of the demands which, it is claimed, are vague. The reply of the diplomat is that his government already has been most explicit.

FORETOLD DEATH IN TEXT

Minister Stricken as He Is About to Begin His Sermon

Montreal, Feb. 20.—"When I saw Him I fell at His feet as one dead," (Rev. 1., 17) was the text from which Rev. Andrew Mowatt was about to preach a sermon on "A Vision of Christ" at the Erskine Presbyterian church yesterday, when he was fatally stricken with heart failure.

The choir was singing the hymn just preceding the sermon when the pastor collapsed. Several helped to carry him to the vestry, where he died without regaining consciousness. The congregation dismissed itself, bowed with grief. Dr. Mowatt was 72 years old.

TREATED TO MILK BATH

Horse and Driver Have Unusual Experience After a Wreck

Dedham, Mass., Feb. 20.—For the time being the "milky way" was transferred from the heavens to Washington street. At least, that was what the driver of W. S. Draper's milk wagon thought when he went to the bottom of an eleven-foot embankment after his trusty steed had shied at Stephen Jacob's automobile.

Neither horse nor driver was much injured, but both had milk baths that would put to the blush for quantity those taken by Anna Held. In all about 200 quarts of Jersey milk splashed over team and driver.

THREE STRONG SHOCKS

Earthquake Felt In a Number of Provinces In Italy

Florence, Feb. 20.—The observatory here reports three strong earthquakes, one at an estimated distance of 6000 miles and the other 650 miles. The movement was east.

The third shock lasted several seconds and affected a number of provinces, the center of the disturbances apparently being Forli, where some of the houses were damaged and several persons were injured.

Pope Is Improving

PIGS NO BURDEN TO CITY FATHERS

So New York May Amend Its Ancient Code.

FENCES NO LONGER CARES.

Neither Are Possible Invasions of Property by "Cattle, Sheep, Hogs or Other Animals," So Aldermen Are Not Called Upon to Decide Trespass Damages on Broadway.

The New York aldermen at present have on their hands the task of bringing up to date the code of ordinances for the city. Mayor Gaynor requested a revision of the code last year and, dissatisfied with the result, has asked the city fathers to do some more codifying.

The mayor's objection to the code as it stands is that it is not up to date. There are many sections which have grown obsolete, he says, and which ought to be cut out along with other sections which are in conflict with state laws which take precedence.

As an illustration of how far behind the times are some of the code's provisions Chief Francis V. S. Oliver of the bureau of licenses thinks that the following paragraphs, which he ran across the other day, are about the worst:

"All outside and boundary fences and all fences erected on the line of any public road, street, lane or avenue in the borough of Manhattan shall be at least five feet high and shall be built of good and substantial materials, sufficient in all respects to keep out and prevent the encroachments of cattle, sheep, hogs and other animals, and shall be kept in good repair and of the height above mentioned.

Up to the Tenants.

"The owner or owners, lessees or lessee, tenant or tenants, of any lot, piece of ground or premises upon which any fence not of the height and that shall not be erected in the manner and maintained at the height mentioned in the preceding section or who, having erected the same, shall not keep the same in good repair shall not recover for any damage he, they or she may sustain from cattle, sheep, hogs or other animals doing damage upon his, their or her premises, nor shall any cattle, sheep or other animal be placed in pound for doing damage unless such fence be erected and kept of the height and in the manner mentioned in the last preceding section.

"In case of any dispute between the parties concerning any fence embraced within this article or the sufficiency thereof the matter shall be determined by the alderman for the time being of the district in which such fence may be situated."

Police In Doubt.

Just how long it has been since any ordinance of this sort has had any application in Manhattan no one seems able to figure out offhand. The aldermen don't know. The only thing they are certain about is that none of them has been called on recently to estimate the value of Jane Doe's pansies destroyed by Dick Roe's live stock.

The members of the police force are supposed to keep posted on everything, and accordingly an inquiry was made of a young Colossus at leisure for the moment from directing streams of traffic at a Broadway crossing.

"Is there any place in Manhattan," he was asked, "where you need laws to keep cattle or other animals from running loose on the streets?"

"Say, friend," replied the traffic man after a minute's close inspection of the inquirer, "what did you see? Was it a pink elephant or a green giraffe?"

Investigation elsewhere was equally fruitless further than to elicit the information that this law of the animal world is one of the ones that Mayor Gaynor wants chopped out.

RHEAS FOR HIS DAUGHTERS.

Man Back From Argentina Tells of the Capture.

R. D. Andrew of Chicago, who sells harvesting machinery to the farmers of Argentina, has arrived home from Buenos Aires with two young ostriches. The birds are each two months old and about the size of full grown turkeys.

The young ostriches, which are called rheas, are of no particular value in Argentina. They run wild in the suburbs of Buenos Aires and may be had by any one who has the energy to chase them on horseback with bolos.

"I have been making yearly trips to Argentina for nine years," said Mr. Andrew, "and have never come back without souvenirs for my two daughters. They begged me to bring back a pair of ostriches this time, so on the day before leaving Buenos Aires I chased a flock and caught two. The birds will give a horse a run for his money, but by throwing the bolos one can easily get them. I killed three birds in capturing the two I have with me."

The ostriches during the voyage of twenty-seven days grew just twice the size they were when caught, and their crate had to be made twice as large to give them room.

The Charitable Tens circle of King's Daughters met this afternoon with Mrs. E. C. Butler.

BETHANY CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Dr. Hardy has returned from a two weeks visit in Chicago and preached at both the services at Bethany church on Sunday. In the morning he continued his series of sermons on the Divine sonship, speaking on the realization. The text was from Ephesians 4:15. He gave tests, and maintained life was a growth, full of glorious opportunity. We are all children of God and should realize it, and bring others to the same view. Every man has the power of choosing. How are we carving?

All departments of the Bible school were largely attended, also the C. E. meeting.

A musical service of marked excellence was given in the evening.

The World in Boston stewards will meet tonight at 7.30.

Miss Blodwen Walters and Miss Mary McDonald were in charge of arrangements and most of the games and stunts were new owing to the ingenuity of the committee. The proceeds will be applied to the organ fund.

WOLLASTON M. E.

Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor gave a helpful sermon Sunday morning with Matthew 15:25 as the text. He showed how ready the Lord is to help us if ready to leave our case in His hands. The theme was "A great need."

The attendance at the Sunday school was unusually small because of the epidemic of scarlet fever.

Mrs. George Crothers was the leader of the Epworth League meeting, the subject being "Making the world acquainted with God."

The stewards study class for the World in Boston will meet Tuesday evening at 7.30.

The W. C. T. U. will meet Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Wiggin, 52 Brook street.

Regular prayer meeting on Friday evening at 7.45.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN

The Rev. Florence K. Crooker occupied the pulpit of the Wollaston Unitarian church Sunday morning. The first Hymn to the text was full of God's greatness; what He is and can be to man. She spoke of man's need of God—not only occasionally but all the time. After showing by many illustrations, God's nearness, goodness and helpfulness, she spoke of God's need of man's help in all work, in this world, saying God was just as dependant upon man to help him do his work as man upon God. She urged everyone to feel his responsibility to help in some way to do God's work here and now. She illustrated these points in a very lucid manner. No one could help feeling the necessity for him to do his best.

A good congregation was present to hear her and all expressed the wish to hear her again.

On account of the new cases of scarlet fever in town the sessions of both the kindergarten and the Sunday school were omitted on Sunday.

KNIFE BLADE IN HIS HEAD

Commercial Traveler Finally Blows It From His Nose

Forsyth, Ga., Feb. 20.—While on the streets of Forsyth, Charles U. White, a commercial traveler, representing a Chicago house, blew from his nose the point of a knife blade ,ve-eighths of an inch in length that had been lodged somewhere in his head for sixteen years.

In an encounter with a man sixteen years ago, he was stabbed in the forehead with the big blade of a pocket-knife, with the result above indicated. The wound healed in the course of a few weeks without having given him serious trouble and without his knowing that the knife blade had been left in the wound.

His feet, where he had waded through a brook for half a mile, were nearly frozen. His wrists were badly cut by his efforts to break off the handcuffs, and he was half starved.

Good Form

Let Him Play Host.

Grant the boy the privilege of having his friends to meals as often as you can conveniently arrange for it. Perhaps you are among those fortunate ones who have a large family with a big table where the addition of an extra plate counts for little. If such is the case your way is simple. Should there be several sons to plan for consider a system of rotation that each may have his guests in a fair ratio. If your family is small, so that it is desirable to have a little notice in advance before adding another hearty boy's appetite to those you have reckoned for, fix on a certain time when your boy may ask a friend in to dinner or supper. Boys are delightfully uncritical creatures, bless their hearts! Give them a cordial welcome and plenty of food and they will never miss frills of serving.

Study other compensations for the abstinence from natural racketing you are obliged to demand from your boy while he is at home. Provide him chances to let off steam elsewhere, in places intended for just such relaxations. Send him out into the open on holidays and give him the means of pursuing any athletic sport which attracts him. Be sure that there is a good playground connected with the school he attends. Encourage him to work in the gymnasium.

All the compensation you offer the boy need not be limited to the possession of a pleasant room and the other privileges I have mentioned. Don't forget that when he displays the consideration demanded of him in a well regulated family he is putting a restraint upon himself you can hardly understand, no matter how close your sympathy with him. Many comments have been made upon the wonderful self control displayed by the child who submits without protest to a prohibition or grants prompt obedience to a command beyond his comprehension. Largely a matter of habit possibly, but there is a great deal of thought going on inside that small head, and oftener than we imagine we parents are being haled before a child's mental judgment seat and condemned unreservedly or with recommendation to mercy.

"How Do You Do?" Merely a Greeting.

It is a wise person, man as well as woman, who when asked "How do you do?" responds by saying he or she is well.

"How do you do?" is really, generally speaking, a casual greeting, accepted by custom as being the simplest form of addressing a person. If either individual takes the greeting seriously and answers that she is not well the other person frequently is much astonished and almost without exception is bored. With close friends a woman—or man, either—may be frank, but with acquaintances it is better to be causual and answer, "Very well" to the salutation "How do you do?"

A fact persons learn with advancing years is that each individual, as a rule, prefers to talk about himself or herself rather than hear others talk.

Nor is the dislike to listening to such topics strange. We feel sympathy only toward those of whom we are fond; to others it is necessary to appear sympathetic, and this is not an easy matter when we would rather be talking on gay topics in which we are really interested.

The person who is most popular is she who amuses others generally, who goes about with something lively rather than something doleful to tell In nine cases out of ten a doleful person will be avoided, while the gay one will be sought.

Postcard Etiquette.

As a general rule a postal card should not be used except for business purposes. Socially it is only to be employed for rather impersonal communications, such as announcing the meetings of a committee or society or forwarding an address. If it is an absolute necessity to send one to a friend or a member of one's family, as, when stopping for a moment at a railroad station, one wishes to send a line home, the sentences should be short and to the point, with an apologetic word for its use. The communication it bears should not be prefaced by an affectionate salutation. All personal messages should be omitted as well as the intimate termination that is proper in a sealed letter. The signature should be simply the initials of the Christian name and the full surname.

Etiquette Books Popular.

The fact that the old fashioned etiquette manual on "How to Act In Society," etc., is still popular, even in the big cities, was shown by the recent distribution by a New York Sunday paper of a book on good form. This pamphlet told the reader how to act on every conceivable social occasion, what to say when spoken to, what not to say, how to say what was to be said, what to do with the hands and the feet under certain circumstances, how to address letters of invitation or decliation or acceptance, and a host of other things. Persons were seen diligently reading these etiquette manuals in elevated and subway trains for days after their distribution.

PLANS WELL LAID FOR BREAKING JAIL

Missing Clothing Furnishes Turnkey Clue to Plot

Portland, Me., Feb. 20.—A general delivery of the prisoners of the east wing of the Portland jail, including several important ones, was frustrated last night.

The discovery made by Turnkey Delano, that some furnished clothing which had been kept in a room in the jail was missing, gave the conspirators away.

The cells were searched when the men were at supper and in one cell was found a solder key which fitted the workshop. In another cell a cold chisel was found, and in the cell used to confine refractory prisoners, which was vacant, the missing clothing was found and several saws.

It was found then that four bars had been sawed off from a window so as to afford an easy egress to the street. There is a time after supper when the men are allowed free access to the corridors, and it is supposed to have been the plan to have taken advantage of this time for all prisoners in the secret to escape. There are 110 prisoners in that wing of the jail.

TWIGGS OFFER REWARD

Will Give $2000 For Conviction In Maryland Death Mystery

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 20.—Two thousand dollars reward "for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who caused the death of Charles E. Twigg" has been offered in a statement signed by Mrs. Urilla J. Twigg, mother; Millard and Vernon Twigg, brothers, and Mrs. Hattie T. Kimmel, sister.

The Twigg family expresses dissatisfaction with the action of State Attorney Robb in abandoning the investigation of the case, Robb having accepted the theory, based upon chemical analysis, that Charles E. Twigg and his betrothed, Grace Elosser, met death accidentally by coal gas poisoning.

ITALY'S CAMORRA, OLDEST OF WORLD'S CRIME ORGANIZATIONS, NOW FIGHTING FOR EXISTENCE

A GREAT trial growing out of the inquiry which the government has been carrying on for four years concerning the Camorra at Naples is now under way at Viterbo, the old papal medieval town about fifty miles from Rome. Here an old Franciscan church has been changed into a courthouse, and an iron cage large enough to hold a hundred persons has been erected in the center of the long, wide hall to serve as a dock for the prisoners on trial.

Another old building, originally a convent and still retaining its name of Santa Maria a Gardi, although used as a prison since 1870, has been enlarged and repaired, while its massive walls have been made higher to prevent the escape of the Camorrists conveyed there from Naples. Apartments are provided inside the prison for the two judges who preside at the trial and the two attorney generals, or king's procurators, who will conduct the case against the prisoners, as attempts on their lives are feared.

Violence Guarded Against.

The garrison of Viterbo has been increased from a company to a battalion, the prison guard has been doubled, and the small town is crowded with carabineers, policemen and detectives. Extraordinary precautions have been taken to prevent the Camorrists from entering the town, and the police of Naples have orders to shadow the relatives and friends of the prisoners, watch their movements and report by wire their departure from Naples in order to prevent their entry into Viterbo.

In the courthouse a squad of soldiers mounts guard day and night over a large wooden box securely locked and sealed, which contains the written evidence of the trial. This evidence consists of fifty folio volumes weighing 170 pounds and includes the reports of the carabineers and the proofs collected by the examining judges during the four years' investigation of the case. The box was conveyed from Naples to Viterbo guarded by armed soldiers who traveled in the baggage van.

The trial will mark the climax of the long struggle between the government and the Camorra. The struggle has been long and fierce. The Camorra, which is the oldest, most powerful and best organized criminal association in the world and which for seven centuries has flourished at Naples and invaded with its ramifications even North and South America, is fighting for its very existence. Practically all the chiefs of the Camorra have been arrested and are awaiting trial, and for the first time in history, it is said, a Camorra execution may be avenged. Its complicated organization, its disciplined and formal rule and its secrecy have for once been powerless to protect the members of the "honorable society" from the carabineers.

The result of the trial is of course impossible to forecast. The trial will last over six months, and less complicated trials have ended with an acquittal in Italy. But it is certain that the Camorra still retains some of its power.

The Camorrists at Viterbo are well supplied with money. They have secured the services of the best lawyers in Italy for their defense, and all are hopeful of acquittal. The police have decided to have each member of the jury guarded, an unprecedented measure in Italy.

Still Choose New Members.

Besides, during the last four years, when all the Camorra chiefs have been under arrest and the Camorra was supposed to have been disorganized, the Naples civil police have on several occasions surprised secret meetings of the "honorable society" held for the election of new members. The Naples newspapers even gave the names of some of the chiefs who had been elected instead of those arrested by the carabineers.

The number of picciuotti, or "boys," generally beggars and pickpockets, who aspire to belong to the society and ask to be initiated has not diminished and many have been admitted on trial and after performing the expected proof of courage have been promoted Camorristi, or full members of the society.

Burglars continue to pay a regular percentage on their spoils. Taxes are levied on every unlawful resort, while money lenders who practice usury pay a small share of their profits to the "honorable society." All the cabs that enter Naples from the neighboring towns and villages continue to pay the usual Camorra toll of a cent, and the farmers who bring their produce to market do likewise.

The crime which led to the trial is the murder of a man named Cuocolo and his wife. Cuocolo was a member of the Camorra, but he belonged to the high class or alta Camorra and was a sort of retired member of the society, very influential and powerful and wealthy. He belonged to a respectable family, and it is reported that he was led astray by a woman of bad repute, Maria Cutinelli, whom he married probably to fulfill a vow generally made by Camorristi, who promise to marry a woman of bad repute in order to prevent her from leading a life of sin.

As in the case of all the members of the high Camorra, Cuocolo benefited largely from the work of the rank and file without doing any work or taking any risks. He lent money at usury, purchased and received stolen goods, levied taxes, took an active part in local politics and municipal elections and increased his income in several ways. His specialty consisted in planning burglaries.

It often happened that the Camorrists cheated Cuocolo and kept a great part of the booty for themselves, but Cuocolo had a good remedy in such cases. He merely denounced the Camorrists to the police and had them convicted of the burglary he planned.

One day over four years ago Cuocolo and his wife were murdered. His body was found on the beach of Terre del Greco, and on it were forty-seven characteristic stabs and slashes of the Camorra, while his wife was found murdered in her house at Naples. There seemed to be no doubt that the double murder was a Camorra execution.

The civil police made a mild investigation and made a few arrests. Among those who testified in behalf of the prisoners was a priest who held the post of municipal chaplain at the cemetery, Don Ciro Vitozzi. This priest is Enrico Alfano's godfather, and Enrico Alfano, nicknamed Erricone, was known to be one of the chiefs of the Camorra. The prisoners were released and the case was practically dropped.

Carabineers Take Case.

A Socialist member of parliament who did not owe his election to the Camorra then broadly hinted that the Naples civil police were in league with the Camorra and suggested that the investigation of the murder should be intrusted by the government to the carabineers, who went at the case vigorously. They made some interesting discoveries.

They found out that on May 26, 1906, a secret meeting of the Camorra was held at Bagnoli which was attended by all the chiefs of the ten districts of Naples and a couple of Camorristi from each district. There seemed to be no doubt that the Camorrists assembled to sit as a tribunal and pass judgment on a traitor. The punishment of a traitor is always death. The carabineers then made another discovery.

On the day the Cuocolo murder was committed a party of Camorrists assembled in a small restaurant at Torre del Greco, where they had supper late in the evening. The windows of the restaurant overlooked the beach where Cuocolo's body was found. There was nothing eventful about the supper except that when it was half through a man rushed in with a wild look on his face and, going up to Enrico Alfano, whispered something in his ear. Alfano merely shook hands with him, and the man left. The Camorrists who attended the secret meeting at Bagnoli and those who had supper at Torre del Greco were the same.

The carabineers succeeding in getting hold of a Camorrist named Abbatemaggio, who explained many circumstances. Abbatemaggio said that Cuocolo had been murdered because a Camorrist named Luigi Arena, who was then serving a long term of relegation or coerced domicile in the island of Lampedusa, had denounced him as a traitor to the tribunal of the Camorra. Arena had worked under Cuocolo and successfully accomplished many burglaries, and yet Cuocolo had him sent to prison and supplied the police with the necessary evidence for his conviction. Arena wrote to the chiefs at Naples and exacted Cuocolo's punishment according to the code of the "honorable society."

Sentenced to Death.

The chiefs of the Camorra passed on Cuocolo the usual sentence of death. Four Camorrists were charged with the execution of the sentence. The death of Cuocolo's wife had not been decreed by the Camorra tribunal, but it was decided on by the murderers themselves, who feared she would avenge her husband.

The carabineers then arrested all the Camorrists with the exception of Alfano and two or three others. While the carabineers were trying to collect all the evidence possible against the prisoners Police Sergeant Petrosino arrested Alfano at New York, where he discovered him at a banquet given in his honor by the representatives of the Camorra in Elizabeth street. It is likely that the murder of Petrosino three years later at Palermo was the Camorra's vengeance for the arrest of Enrico Alfano.

About thirty Camorrists were charged with complicity in the Cuocolo crime and active participation in a criminal association, while the priest Don Ciro Vitozzi is accused of subornation. The Camorrists who will be tried at Viterbo number over forty, but many other Camorrists arrested by the carabineers for other crimes and now still in prison will be called to give evidence. The only Camorrist who evaded arrest is Andrea Attanasio, who is suspected to be in hiding in South America.

The judicial authorities took a year in going over the case before fixing the date of the trial. They realized that it was impossible to have the trial at Naples, where possibly many jurymen would belong to the Camorra, and decided to have the case tried at Viterbo.

FILIBUSTERS' LONG BATTLE

Temporary Truce Is Reached In the House

MANN RETIRES FROM FIELD

New Band Takes Up War Against Omnibus War Claims Bill After All Night Session Which Lasts Until Late Sunday Afternoon—Disorder and Confusion Prevail While Waiting For a Quorum

Washington, Feb. 20.—A truce, arrived at shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, brought the long filibuster in the house against the omnibus war claims bill temporarily to an end.

The agreement to suspend hostilities was reached after an intermission of three hours devoted to memorial services for the late Senator Clay of Georgia and the late Representative Brownlow of Tennessee.

These services, which occurred at midday Sunday, seemed to put the house combatants in a more peaceful frame of mind, and a recess was ordered until 10 o'clock this morning, when the fighting was resumed.

Speaker Cannon at 12:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon made the unique ruling that, in so far as the national house of representatives is concerned, Saturday was Friday. In other words, he sustained the contention that Friday's session was still in progress. Mr. Mann of Illinois had claimed that it was the legislative day of Saturday because the hour set for the recess was the same as that set for the meeting of the house.

When the house convened today an effort was made to adopt a rule shutting off further delay. It was bitterly fought by a new band of filibusters, made up of former advocates of the measure as it came from the senate.

Representative Mann, who conducted the original filibuster, ended his filibuster when he succeeded in having the old French spoliation and the navy yard overtime claims stricken out. This was accomplished when the house voted to substitute a house bill for the senate bill.

The house bill carries only war claims which have been adjudicated in the court of claims.

The Democrats, who were particularly interested in the war claims affecting southern people, were opposed to the spoliation claims. When they voted to strike out the latter, however, they lost the support of the Republican members, who favored the omnibus bill because it included the French claims.

Realizing that the new house bill probably has not the slightest chance of passing the senate, Mann ceased his filibuster. It was immediately taken up by Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, Bennet and Parsons of New York and several New England members.

The New Englanders insisted that unless the bill contained the spoliation claims, it could not pass. They will offer long amendments to the house bill.

The house remained in session all night and until a few minutes before 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Practically nothing was accomplished during the last twelve hours of the sitting, except the pronouncement of the eulogies, which were permitted by unanimous consent. The remainder of the day was sepnt in waiting for a quorum.

Waiting for a quorum was marked by ocasional disorder and confusion. Most of the time, however, the house was being entertained by humorous speeches and songs.

When daylight came a sleepy lot of representatives sat at their desks and waited while the leaders kept watch to avoid being trapped by the other side. One member in the front row was sound asleep, others appeared fatigued, and numerous other members were stretched out asleep in the Democratic cloak room.

When at 5:30 a. m. Mr. Thomas of North Carolina made a point of quorum, there were ninety-five members on the floor, and a call of the house was again ordered.

Mr. Gardner of Massachusetts vainly sought to secure a recess, but the chair declared against him because no quorum existed. Then, on motion of Mr. Heflin of Alabama, the sergeant-at-arms was directed to arrest all absentees and bring them to the bar of the house.

Members became impatient for breakfast toward 9 o'clock, and a formal request by Mr. Candler of Mississippi for leave of absence to go to breakfast struck a popular chord. In a few minutes the house chamber was almost deserted, only the Republican and Democratis whips and several lieutenants remaining to watch each other.

SYNOPSIS.

Warden Handler of Sing Sing prison and Detective George Doyle endeavor to prevail on Bill Avery, a released prisoner, to search out information against a former "pal," a young convict known as Jimmy Valentine. Avery refuses, and Doyle and Handler threaten to attack him. Valentine had a trick of opening safes solely by the sense of touch.

Avery goes. Lieutenant Governor Fay, his beautiful niece, Rose Lane, and two women workers in a rescue mission visit the prison.

Warden Handler hears Rose Lane tell how she was rescued from a thief on a train and he is amazed at a coincidence.

Convict Jimmy Valentine, No. 1259, is brought into the warden's office to open a safe as an object lesson to the visitors, and Rose recognizes him as the man who saved her from the thief Cotton.

Valentine says he can't open the safe, enraging Handler. The lieutenant governor and Rose talk with Valentine. Rose pleads with Fay to aid the young prisoner, who is handsome even in Sing Sing garb.

Fay promises for Rose's sake to ask the governor to pardon Valentine. A stormy interview occurs between Handler and Valentine.

Valentine waits patiently in prison for news. Finally he is pardoned and goes to Albany to thank the governor, Lieutenant Governor Fay and Rose.

Valentine refuses positions offered by the rescue mission workers. To his amazement, he meets Bill Avery and a former coworker, Red Flanagan.

Red and Avery try to dissuade Jimmy from "going square." Detective Doyle appears, and Red and Avery hide. Doyle wants Valentine to tell him where Avery is, for he wants to rearrest him. Valentine refuses.

Doyle departs, threatening to send Valentine back to Sing Sing prison. Avery now tries to kill Valentine.

Valentine finally agrees to "go it crooked" again, but a note from Rose brings him back to his former determination to be honest "in spite of the coppers."

Rose persuades her father to give Valentine a position in his bank in Springfield, Ill. He and Red go to work in the bank.

For several years Valentine works excellently and rises to be assistant cashier. He and Rose love each other, but Valentine knows Doyle is on his track and dares not tell her of his affection for her. A mysterious Mr. Cronin turns out to be old Bill Avery, now reformed and a man of business.

Valentine receives a telegram from Doyle. He tells Red how he has planned to outwit the detective by means of a cleverly concocted alibi.

Rose Lane tells Valentine she loves him and that they are going to marry. Valentine reveals to her his love for her. Doyle appears on the scene to arrest Valentine on a charge of robbing a Massachusetts bank many years before.

Doyle is astounded when Valentine announces that he was never in Sing Sing or in Massachusetts in his life and that his name is Lee Randall.

Doyle is finally convinced by a sensational ruse employed by Valentine that Valentine is not Valentine after all. "I'll land him if it takes a lifetime," he says.

Kitty, Rose's little sister, becomes accidentally locked in a new vault in the bank. Red Flanagan rushes in to "Randall's" office, crying, "Jimmy, Jimmy!" Doyle recognizes Red and realizes that Randall is really Jimmy Valentine.

Valentine tears off his coat and opens the new bank vault through the sense of touch, as the combination had not been sent to him as yet.

Doyle's memory had not betrayed him. It was Rose Lane, who, returning to her lover's office in quest of him, had opened the door of the vault room and had, just as Doyle had done, caught him "red handed." She moved forward a step, as though to speak, but her attention was attracted by Doyle, who moved slightly. She saw him put his fingers to his lips, counseling silence. The girl therefore stood mute, watching the man she fondly loved "cop the gopher" in the bank that between them she and her father owned.

"One," announced Red as the match flared into a blue bright sulphurous gleam.

"That's it! That's the old rotation!" cried Valentine enthusiastically. "Ten off the first"—turning the combination—"then one—two—and three"—turning the dial on the reverse—"then back. Match!"

"Twenty-one!" was Red's frenzied response.

Valentine tossed his head back triumphantly.

"Twenty-one, that's it!" he almost shrieked. "That's it. I've done the trick!"

Valentine tore the bandage from his eyes and, groping forward, gripped the handles of the vault doors in his hands. He threw his weight back and tugged mightily. At first the eight inch steel barrier refused to move. Red, who had lunged to one side out of the way of his superior, gazed apprehensively at Valentine, fearing that after all there had been some mistake.

Then, of a sudden, the crack in the black, sheer, forbidding face of the great safe widened, and Valentine's body, tensely set, fell back as the ponderous door swung open.

And as it did so a wee, white clad body, crouching against the heavy door, rolled out on to the vault room floor and lay limp and apparently lifeless before Red Flanagan and Jimmy Valentine.

"Get that kid," cried Valentine to Red. "She's out, but I think she'll live. She needs air and a doctor, quick!" With these words the ex-convict, almost overcome by the excitement and the nervous strain under which he had been laboring, leaned exhaustedly against the cold steel walls of the vault.

Red lurched forward, seized the motionless form of Kitty in his arms and clutched it to his breast.

"She's dead," he choked, looking down into her white, drawn face, her closed eyes and the lips from which the blood had fled.

"No; she'll be all right in five minutes," instructed Valentine with as much force as he could muster. "Take her to the doctor on the corner."

"SHE'S DEAD," HE CHOKED.

Red straightened and with his helpless burden dashed through the door of the assistant cashier's room—only to come face to face with Rose Lane, who, in an agonized impulse, had drawn back into the office, hardly knowing what to do.

CHAPTER XVIII.

VALENTINE, as yet unaware of the presence of Rose Lane, leaned against the side of the vault, gasping for breath and endeavoring to gain firm control of himself.

As for Red, on being confronted by Rose Lane he stopped short and gasped in alarm, "Then you saw us do it—you saw Valentine at work!"

The girl cut him short with an upraised hand. "Kitty, hurry, hurry!" she warned him in a low voice.

"Don't worry, miss. She'll be all right in a few minutes!" he cried over his shoulder. The girl moved again toward the doorway whence she had retreated a moment before.

Valentine, still oblivious to the nearness of Rose, raised his hands along the edge of the vault door, his back toward the entrances leading to the room. "I beat you! I beat you and saved the little girl from you!" he murmured. Up and down he pressed his hands against the enameled metal. "I beat you! I beat you!"

Slowly he turned away, and as he raised his eyes they met the implacable, scornful gaze of George Doyle. Valentine started back. In the shadowy vault room he thought his eyes had played him false, that he saw only a vision conjured into a temporary existence by overwrought nerves and a correspondingly disordered brain. He pressed his hand to his forehead. Then the "vision" moved toward him. Yes, it was George Doyle.

The ex-convict stood transfixed, as though an unwilling witness of a terror inspiring tragedy. And to him the denouement was all of that. Doyle stood, his hands clasped behind his back, waiting for the other to speak.

Valentine, worn out by the strain of the day's events, was in no mood to continue the fight against the cool, calculating, time abiding detective.

"So this is the end, Doyle," he finally said, with a wan, forced smile on his drawn lips. "The jig is up. Isn't that about it?"

The detective moved closer to the human prey for whom he had so long and so patiently and, so far as the government was concerned, had so expensively sought.

"Looks that way to me, Jimmy. But, remember, back there in Albany, I told you I'd get you some day unless you would do me a favor or two. Always remember that I gave you a chance to keep out of the 'pen' and you turned it down."

Valentine hung his head. Yes, he would never cease to remember the alternative of becoming a "stool pigeon;" that the detective had offered him the alternative of "peaching" on old Bill Avery and going scot free—scot free until Doyle should command him to "turn up" some other friend and companion.

"Come, Doyle, make a quick job of this," was his answer. "You win after all. I'll go without"—

The detective interrupted Valentine by inclining his head and pointing to one side. The ex-convict turned—to see Rose Lane, in whose affectionate embrace he had lingered but a few minutes before on that memorable afternoon.

A deadly pallor overspread the girl's cheeks. She drew near to the two men, her hands clasped nervously against her heaving bosom.

"You saw!" exclaimed the distracted young assistant cashier, peering searchingly at the girl, and with an involuntary twitch of his elbow indicating the opened vault.

Rose nodded her head gravely, stared at the man she had loved and then at the threatening form of the detective.

Valentine strode to her, clutched a pink rose from a bouquet fastened at the girl's girdle. He pressed it in both his hands.

"You won't mind my having that flower, I know," he said brokenly. "I am going—to be gone a long time—and this I want you to know and remember through the years—my love for you—is the only clean thing I ever knew. It is complete, and it will never—never end."

As he concluded he wheeled to face the detective.

"That's all, Doyle," he said in hardly audible tones.

The central office man saw the real significance of the situation. No one with the slightest morsel of intelligence could doubt that the beautiful young girl before him was suffering as only a true woman can when the one she loves is torn bodily from her forever. As for Valentine—well, there must be something good in him after all, reasoned Doyle. If a girl like the banker's daughter could venture her whole life's happiness on the chance of his "going straight." The detective shifted uneasily on his feet as Valentine turned to him.

"Er—didn't you have an—an—engagement with—er—this young lady?" he queried hesitatingly.

Rose caught a ray of encouragement in his tones.

"Yes! Yes!" she cried, springing forward, her cheeks now aglow with the inspiration given by a newborn hope, "and it was an engagement that means my happiness, my love, my life and his life!" She reached forth her hands bewitchingly toward Doyle.

The officer glanced quickly behind him and around the room, making sure that there were no other witnesses to his words:

"Then"—he hesitated—"then I guess we'll just cheat the state of Massachusetts."

Valentine grasped the arm of his long time foe.

"You mean—you mean just what, Doyle?" he exclaimed excitedly.

"I mean that the lady needs you more than Massachusetts does. You had me going, all right, for awhile there today, Jimmy. But just to retain your respect don't think that I fell for that double negative photograph." With an abrupt "Good day," the detective swung around and disappeared through the door by which he had entered—went out forever from the life of Jimmy Valentine.

Valentine addressed the girl with justifiable trepidation.

"You understand"—indicating the doorway through which Doyle had made his exit—"you know who—what he was?"

Rose Lane flung herself into Valentine's arms.

"I only know I love you!" she cried passionately.

He held her in fervid embrace.

"And knowing the truth about me that I"—

"Perhaps I always knew," she whispered fondly. "But if a woman loves she rejects that which does not fit into her dream, but if she loves as I"—

Valentine smothered her words with his kisses. Then, raising his lips from hers for a single moment, he exclaimed in a voice that rang with the determination of a man who would yield his life ere he broke his sacred promise:

"I'll live for you, Rose—all for you. And you'll learn that I am a man once more—a man among men of honor."

THE END.

DOROTHY ARNOLD DEAD

Belief of Her Father, Who Seeks a Criminal Investigation

New York, Feb. 20.—Indicating that a criminal investigation will solve the mystery of Dorothy Arnold's disappearance, her aged father laid bare the story of the girl's life before District Attorney Whitman. Arnold collapsed before he had reached the climax of his statement, but he assured the district attorney he would supply convincing evidence that his daughter is dead and that death was not due to natural causes.

Mr. Arnold asked Whitman to arrange for the conference. After it was over it was admitted by both Arnold and the district attorney that the county officials may be called upon to take charge of the investigation into the girl's disappearance.

LONG HUNT BY DETECTIVES

Great Precautions to Guard Hopedale Mills, Where Sleuths Work In Shops In Endeavor to Ferret Out Culprit—Authorities Fasten Suspicion Upon Man Who Is Said to Have Made a Confession

Milford, Mass., Feb. 20.—The story surrounding the arrest of Frank H. Costello, an employe of the bobbin department at the Hopedale mills, charged with sending threatening letters through the mail to the officials of the Draper company, reads like a detective story in a cheap novel.

Detectives disguised themselves as workers, forces of armed men watched the mill buildings, sleuths shadowed suspicious persons for many weeks, handwriting experts were brought into the matter and finally the suspected person was put through a third degree, during which the police and mill officials claim he made a complete confession. For weeks past every move of Costello has been watched by private detectives, and when he was arrested the entire town was surprised.

Early in January the officials at the Hopedale mills received two threatening letters. They were opened by Charles E. Nutting, superintendent, and later turned over to the directors, of which body Eben S. Draper and his brother, George A. Draper, are members.

Fearing that the sender might carry out his threats, a force of special detectives was employed. Four expert sleuths were assigned to run down the guilty party, while forty others were engaged to watch the factory night and day for fear of it being destroyed.

The first thing done was to secure the signature of every employe of the mills. These were taken and compared with the handwriting of the threatening letters and finally all were thrown aside but three or four.

The persons who wrote these four names were constantly shadowed while another detective, in the disguise of a fellow worker, sat at a bench in the mills and watched the employes. Comparing notes day after day, suspicion finally rested upon one man. He was watched day and night.

Two weeks ago there was a fire in the bobbin department and after the blaze had been extinguished the detectives claim Costello came to them and offered to tell who set it. He was taken through every building but could not point out the guilty party, and then he himself was put through a stiff third degree and told, the authorities claim, four or five different stories.

A few days later Costello was again questioned when two belts running to the main machine were found cut so that they broke when the power started.

Feeling satisfied that they had traced the letters to the right man, the detectives reported to George A. Draper and he swore out a warrant for the arrest of Costello.

He was arrested by Special Officer Ross during his lunch hour and taken to the town jail, where, it is said, he not only made a verbal but a written confession.

"I don't know what I did it for. I wanted $50 and it was to get that amount of money that I sent the letters, I guess. I can offer no other reason," is what he said in his cell.

The warrant against Costello charges him "with sending written communications, threatening life and property with intent to compel George A. Draper to do an act against his will."

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Oyster Soup. One quart of oysters without their shells, a quart of milk, two ounces of butter, half a pint of water, seasoning of pepper and salt. Heat the liquor from the oysters with the water, and when near boiling add the milk, stirring all the time, next add the seasoning to taste, and when the soup is just to the boil, the oysters. Stew these for about five minutes, then put in the butter, and stir till this is melted. Serve with fried croutons. Sufficient for six persons.—Memphis Scimitar.

Fruit Salad. A new rendition of the popular fruit salad, is made by mixing sliced oranges, bananas, pineapple, figs, raisins and Maraschino cherries. Sweeten slightly and add a little lemon juice. With the addition of a pint of dry whipped cream at serving time, a most delectable dessert is evolved.

Boned Chicken. Stew the chicken in salted water until tender; remove bones, fat, gristle and skin. Shred the meat, mixing the light and dark. Boil down the liquor until but little over a pint remains, season with paprika and celery salt, pour over the chicken and cool. When cold serve in thin slices, cut crosswise of the grain and garnish with celery tips.

No Egg Cake. One cupful sugar, shortening size of egg, pinch of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful each of cloves, allspice, cinnamon and ginger. Dissolve one teaspoonful soda in a cupful of sour milk, two and one-half cupfuls flour. Bake in a slow oven one hour. By adding one cupful currants, raisins, citron and nuts an excellent fruit cake is made.

Dressed Meat. A cheap, nourishing, delicious and easily digested meat for luncheon or tea is made by boiling a "shankbone" of veal, one of beef, and one of mutton together until the meat will fall from the bone. Carefully remove all bone and gristle, chop fine, or put through meat cutter. Season to taste, sage and savory may be added if desired. Place half the mixture in a bread tin, have ready five or six hard boiled eggs, cut each end from them so they can be placed close end for end, in a row on the meat in the center of tin. Then add the balance of the meat, press closely, and set away until firm. Slice in half inch slices with a sharp knift so that each piece will have a slice of egg in the center, garnish with parsley. This never fails to be an attractive dish and once made well is in constant demand. The stock can be used for soup.—Mrs. Harriet L. Dutton.

EAST PROVIDENCE PEOPLE VERY GOOD

No Arrest In Nine Days In Big Rhode Island Town

East Providence, R. I., Feb. 20.—The people of this town are on good behavior in the hope of establishing a record. Although East Providence has a population of 15,308, there has not been an arrest in nine days.

This fact cannot be ascribed to lack of police protection, for the town has a force of seventeen patrolmen and a chief. Chief Roderick, whose legal title is "town sergeant," according to the old Rhode Island custom, cannot offer any reason for the unusual lack of work for his force except that the people are unusually good.

SULLOWAY'S PENSION BILL

Opposed by Lodge on Ground That Big Increase Is Unwarranted

Washington, Feb. 20.—Senator Lodge opposed the Sulloway pension bill when it came up for consideration in the senate. He takes the ground the increase of approximately $50,000,000 is unwarranted.

Mr. Lodge is favorable to a moderate increase in the pension budget, but does not see the necessity for an increase which will total $400,000,000 within the next ten years, as the Sulloway measure will probably do.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

In looking over the reproduction of the Boston Herald of Feb. 22, 1863, which accompanied the Sunday Herald, yesterday we noted a name in the advertisements familiar to many Quincy people—that of Russ B. He taught deportment and many of his expressions are still remembered and also his violin which so expressively told the pupil when he was not dancing correctly.

SUNDAY SERVICES

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor preached the Sunday morning sermon from the theme: "The children of light."

In the evening, an optimistic sermon was given by the pastor on the theme: "The kingdom of God is growing."

There will be a meeting of the Building committee on Thursday. The sub-committees will be appointed and preparations made for the consideration of plans and specifications for the new parish house.

FIRST UNIVERSALIST.

An appreciative audience listened with intense pleasure to a deep reaching sermon by Rev. Elizabeth M. Goldthwaite on Sunday morning. Miss Goldthwaite took her text from the 16th chapter of Acts, "What shall I do to be saved."

The Dorcas society meets Tuesday evening with Mrs. B. G. Barnes of Faxon avenue.

The Murray club holds a dancing party in Colonial hall on Wednesday evening.

The Old Colony Association of Universalists meet at All Souls' church, Braintree, on Tuesday morning and afternoon, with luncheon at noon. An excellent program has been prepared and all should make an effort to attend.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The session of the Sunday School was at 9.30.

The Sunday morning church service was held at 10.45. Special music was rendered by the male choir.

The pastor's text was John 12:35-43, "Old time unbelief" was the theme of the sermon.

In the evening the same text was used and the subject was: Unbelief of today. The mixed choir sang a special anthem.

A well attended young people's meeting was held at 6 o'clock. The service was principally musical, but there were several readings, and two of the members read brief essays on the subjects: "Why I believe in the Bible" and "Why I am a Christian."

In place of the regular prayer meeting on Thursday evening there will be a special service consisting of an address by Rev. C. V. Bowman of Boston and a good musical program. A free will offering will be taken for special church expenses. Refreshments will be served in the latter part of the evening.

STUNNING FOULARD FROCK

Just What the Girls Will Consider a "Dear" Little Dress.

OF BLUE AND WHITE FOULARD.

Custom cannot stale the infinite variety of the blue and white foulard frock which as regularly as the spring season comes around bobs up prettier and smarter than ever. Such a rejuvenation has taken place in the frock pictured. The design is neat and attractive, and the blue is the new "king's blue," which is bright and becoming in tone.

The skirt is very like the plaited jupes of several years ago, but the blouse waist is extremely up to date with its natty sailor collar and black satin tie.

Good to Live By.

There is only one way to get ready for immortality, and that is to love this life and live it as bravely and faithfully and cheerfully as we can.—Henry van Dyke.

BOXER IS ALMOST TICKLED TO DEATH.

"Tickled to death" is a common expression, but did any one ever hear of a boxer being tickled out? Young Ahearn, the New York lightweight, is authority for the statement that such a thing is possible. Ahearn recites an instance where the count nine was tolled over him by a referee before he could recover from the tickling in the ribs given him by an opponent. The boxer in question was finding it hard to reach Ahearn, who is an exceptionally clever boxer. Falling in to a clinch, Ahearn's opponent accidentally rustled him in the ribs. The "dancing master," as Ahearn is familiarly known, squirmed and started to laugh. Like a flash the idea struck his opponent, who began to ply his thumb until Ahearn could hardly stand from laughing. Taking the mat, Ahearn had to stay there until nine was counted over him before he could regain his composure. Ahearn came back and whipped his man, however. Here is a tip for some of the boys who may meet Ahearn in the ring some time.

DEMAREST AN IDOL ABROAD.

Crack Chicago Billiard Player Astounding Parisians With His Great Playing.

Ever since his arrival Calvin Demarest, the crack Chicago cue wielder, has been astounding the Parisian billiard world with his wonderful shots and great all round playing. In fact, so pleased are the Parisian promoters with Demarest's great playing that they are making every effort to have George Gray, the Australian, and several other cracks meet the American boy. Gray has been in England for the past few months and has made some record breaking runs in exhibition games. Parisians may also see Willie Hoppe, the world's 18.1 and 18.2 balk line champion in action with Demarest. Hoppe plans to sail for Paris early in March.

CALVIN DEMAREST, WHO IS PLEASING PARISIANS WITH HIS GREAT PLAYING.

Boston Plans Municipal A. A. U.

Boston plans to organize a municipal amateur athletic union to draw the boys, especially the working boys, into the gymnasiums to help in building up their bodies and to have competitions from time to time, with some prize as the inducement.

BASEBALL CHAT

Charles A. Comiskey says that he will train in Cuba next year. He plans to take the White Sox to the island for a visit of from five to seven weeks.

Pitcher Orvie Overall of the Cubs will not quit the game this year, as reported, but is at present working on a new curve to take the place of his drop.

No one has better right to quit the diamond than Cy Young if he feels that he is selected for the down and out club. Young never needs to feel that he was forced to quit before his time.

Fred Clarke predicts a good year for Kirb White, his young pitcher, who sent in his signed contract a few days ago. Kirb looked quite promising last season for a first year man. He won half the games that he finished.

Alexander, a pitcher to be tried out by the Phillies, may become the "iron man" of the National league. Pitching for Syracuse of the New York State league, he won twenty-nine and lost fourteen games last season.

Larry Lejune, long distance throwing champion among professional baseball players, had a mighty nifty season with Evansville in the Central league in 1910. Lejune led the association in batting, base stealing and home run hitting. He swatted at a .328 clip, stole fifty-four bases and made eighteen home runs. Lejune is the leading candidate for right field on the Brooklyn club.

Missing

Some persons of this generation do not know that, though one now seldom sees the American flag at the peak of an ocean vessel, just before the civil war we were fast absorbing the carrying trade of the world. Steam hadn't then displaced sails as it has almost entirely done today, and our clipper sailing ships were the finest and fastest on the seas.

In 1854 I was third mate on one of these ships. We were bound for Hongkong at the time of which I am speaking, having sailed from New York. There was no Suez canal in those days, and we were obliged to go around the Cape of Good Hope. We were approaching the South African coast when we overhauled a derelict.

A derelict is always an interesting object plunging helplessly about among the waves with no hand to even attempt to guide her. Then one's curiosity it always excited as to why and how she was left by those who were on her, and the imagination gets to work at once. Our captain hove to and said to me:

"Mr. Morton, take a boat, go aboard of her and investigate. Take tools to scuttle her and powder to blow her up, as the case may require."

I was much pleased at the order, and it was not long before I was aboard the derelict. I found a good deal of damage done on deck, evidently by a storm. A number of the lights had been broken, and the seas had drenched the cabin. Everything was in confusion as if those on board had been under great excitement. In one of the staterooms hanging against the wood partition was a daguerreotype of a girl evidently seventeen or eighteen years old. The happy young face was a great contrast with the wrecked condition of things about. I took it from its hook and put it in the pocket of my pea jacket.

I couldn't make out anything about the identity of the craft. Some of the boards of the stern where the name was painted had been knocked off apparently by the waves, while other letters were illegible. The letters left were:

R T A S I G O .

I made a copy of them, giving the proportionate spaces between them. But there was nothing else aboard to identify the ship. She had been knocked about by wind and waves so long that her inside was pretty well washed out. I put fifty pounds of powder in her, attached a fuse, lighted it and pulled away from her. Before we reached the ship there was an explosion and she sank.

As soon as I went off duty, choosing a secluded spot, I took the daguerreotype out of my pocket to have another look. There's nothing remarkable in a young sailor out at sea on a long voyage making a companion of a girl's picture and falling in love with it. At any rate, this is what I did.

On our way back I determined to hunt through the whole of North America to find the flesh and blood that corresponded with my likeness. We had a quick voyage, but not quick enough for me, though a hunt for her would be like looking for a needle in a haystack. Nevertheless as soon as we reached our home port I went to work, overhauling the records of all the ships reported lost. But I found so many of them that I despaired of hitting on the right one. If I could supply the missing letters to the ship's name I might get into communication with some one who could tell me about my girl. But this seemed impossible. I made a list of all ships reported missing and compared my letters with their names, but I must have been very stupid, for I couldn't make them fit with any of the names on my list.

Two years later, while on the New England coast, I went ashore with some of my mates to enjoy ourselves in a summer garden. We had hardly got seated when I saw at a neighboring table the original of my picture. She looked up and, seeing me staring at her with a singular expression, looked embarrassed; but when I arose, took the daguerreotype from my pocket—I always carried it with me—and handed her her own picture I thought she would faint.

"Where did you get that?" she asked, flushing and turning pale alternately.

"Is it your likeness?" I asked.

"Yes."

"Are you sure?"

"I know it by the dress and by the artist's name stamped upon the casing. It was taken four years ago. I gave it to my brother just before he sailed on his last voyage."

"In what ship?"

"The Martha Washington."

I took out my pocketbook and drew from it the original memorandum of the letters left on the derelict's stern. They fitted in exactly with the name the girl had given me.

"What became of her?" I asked.

"She was never heard from."

I told her of the derelict I had visited and of the finding of the daguerreotype in a stateroom that had doubtless been her brother's.

I was the means of publishing the fate of a ship that had been on the list of missing vessels for four years, thus giving the relatives of those lost on her the first and only information received by them.

My next voyage I made in a ship I commanded and took the original of the daguerreotype with me as my wife.

WATER ORDERS PROMINENT IN CITY COUNCIL

REDRAFT OF SHIPYARD CONTRACT

Debated and Passed by City Council Without Being Read. · Vote 14 to 7

Appropriation for Meters $15,000 Instead of $36,000

Water was responsible for a midnight session of the City Council on Monday evening, causing two protracted debates. The first was on the order appropriating money for water construction and meters, and the second on the much-talked of contract to allow the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. to use the water in the old reservoir of the Quincy supply.

The first order, as reported by the Committee on Water Supply, was $15,000 for water extensions and $36,000 for water meters. The Finance committee reversed these figures, and after a long debate the order as reported by the Finance committee was adopted. The Finance committee reported a new contract for the use of the water in the old reservoir which was not so broad in its scope as the original. After a two- hours debate the new contract was adopted without being read. Every member of the Council was present.

Councilman Smith offered a minority report that the order ought to pass.

The minority report was rejected and the committee report adopted.

BILLS IN EXCESS.

The Finance Committee reported an order appropriating $749.89 to provide for the excess of expenditures in the house connections with the sewer for 1910, the sum to be charged to the Excess and Deficiency Fund. Ordered to a second reading.

EXTENSIONS AND METERS.

The Finance Committee reported an amendment to the order appropriating $36,000 for water meters and $15,000 for water extensions. The amendment provides $36,000 for water extensions and $15,000 for meters.

On motion of Councilman Cherrington it was voted that when the vote on the amendment was taken the question be decided.

The amendment changing the amount of $15,000 for water extension to $36,000 was accepted on a rising vote, 13 voting yes and 8no.

The amendment changing the amount of $36,000 for water meters to $15,000 was accepted.

Councilman Nowland said when the order was before the Water Committee it was for $30,000 for extensions and $10,000 for meters. Three years ago an attempt was made to meter the whole city. There are thousands of gallons of water wasted. With some parties metered and some not, it was not a square deal

Councilman Cherrington asked as to the installation of meters and Commissioner Bainbridge replied it took two men about an hour to install a meter. He further said that he would be able to meter the whole city in a year. In reply to a further question by Councilman Sodergren he said the time required was from 15 miautes to all day.

LIVE WORK AND TRADE IN QUINCY AND BECOME ONE OF THE HUSTLERS

Councilman Cherrington would like to hear from the Finance Committee why they had reported as they did.

In reply to a question by Councilman Histen, the Commissioner said the $15,000 would furnish enough meters to cover the law. That $36,000 would provide meters for all permanent services. If the appropriation for extension is cut to $15,000 we will have to refuse water to some buildings.

In reply to further questions, the Commissioner said if he had $100,000 he could connect up dead ends and could save at least 25 per cent in labor bills. Last year he did fully 75 "squirt jobs."

Councilman Nowland asked if pipe was replaced with money from the appropriation and the Commissioner answered yes. Under the present system of finance there was no other way to do it.

Councilman Branch—In case of a break is the repair charged to maintenance?

Commissioner Bainbridge—Yes.

BIG DROP IN PRICES AT JOHNSON BROS.

IT IS SURE TO BE A BUSY YEAR AT THE FORE RIVER SHIPYARD IN QUINCY.

Councilman Branch—Is the water that flows through meters charged at flat rates or meter rates?

Commissioner Bainbridge—All services metered before Jan. 1 are charged meter rates; all since at flat rate.

Councilman Leslie inquired if money was appropriated for one purpose was used for another? That is if money appropriated for meters could be used for construction.

President Bryant said the charter provided it should be used as voted only.

In reply to Councilman Cherrington, Commissioner Bainbridge said if a small pipe was taken up and a larger one put in it was charged to construction.

In reply to Councilman Braig, the Commissioner said that $36,000 would meter all the permenent services.

Councilman Nowland referred to the saving Malden had made by metering.

Commissioner Bainbridge said in reply that Malden took advantage early and metered. Malden however did not have the fixed charges we have. Even if we do use less water the Metropolitan assessment will increase.

In reply to Councilman Sodergren, the Commissioner said that water cost the city 5 cents per 1000 gallons and one cent should be added for maintainance. In reply to Councilman Richards he said the installation of meters would cut down the leakages.

Councilman Richards—Is it not a fact that water in Quincy costs 15 cents per 1000 gallons? Is not a great deal of the extra cost due to leagage?

Commissioner Bainbridge. The fixed charges make the cost higher. The only way to do is to change the system of financiering.

Mayor Shea—We have $15,000 only available for water under the Act. Last year there were 700 houses erected and the $15,000 for construction is not enough to carry the city through the year. People are constantly coming to City Hall to ask what the prospects are for getting water before they erect buildings. If you want to stop progress you will vote for $15,000. That sum will not meet the demand. He urged the appropriation of at least $30,000.

Councilman Cherrington—The point is that years ago they did not look ahead, but put in small mains. The most important thing however is to have meters.

Councilman Branch was in favor of meters, but the progress of the city would be handicapped if the appropriation for extensions was cut down. People want to build houses, but will not if they cannot get water. We absolutely need $30,000 or $40,000 for extensions. He maintained that the Water department was on a paying basis. It would be a good policy to meter all public buildings and charge for the water.

Councilman Leslie thought we should look after present property owners before we looked after new buildings.

The order was put on final passage and was passed, 16 voting yes and 6 no. It appropriates $36,000 for water construction and $15,000 for installing meters. The vote:

Yes—Bailey, Bolster, Boyd, Branch, Duffy, Ericson, Forde, Gardner, Histen, Leslie, Parlee, Richards, Ross, Sandberg, Smith, Studley—16.

EVEN BOSTON WANTS QUINCY HELP IN CASE OF A BIG FIRE

COMPLETE AGREEMENT FOR GRANITE CUTTING

Manufacturers Agree to Pay Prices in Other Localities Where Other Granite is Used and is Cut per Piece Rate

The two committees representing the Granite Manufacturers' and Granite Cutters, who have been considering the proposed changes in the bill of prices and agreement for the next five years in Quincy were in session until nearly midnight Monday night but when an adjournment was reached it was with satisfaction of knowing that all matters in the bill of prices and agreement had been settled, and all that now remains to be done is for the bill to be drawn up and signed by the two committees. This will be done within a few days so that the road will be clear by the first of March when the existing bill expires.

The main bone of contention at Monday night's meeting was the clause in relation to the price that shall be paid for the cutting granites other than Quincy. The clause as finally adopted or rather agreed upon reads as follows:

"This bill to govern Quincy granite only. All other granites, when cut by the piece, shall be paid for as per the piece rate paid in the locality from which the granite comes, but in no instance to be less than the Quincy agreement."

The only branches of the trade that has not now reached an agreement are the polishers and tool sharpeners. These men are still discussing their bill, but it is probable that now that agreements have been reached by the cutters and quarrymen that this branch will not be long in reaching an agreement. It is understood that the committees considering this bill will meet Thursday evening when it is probable an agreement will be reached.

WOLLASTON NAMES A COMMITTEE

Will Outline Plans for a "Community House" and How to Finance it

Needs of Such a Building Expressed by Many Present

At a meeting of representative men on Monday evening, at the home of Eugene H. Sprague, the movement for a 'Community House" in Wollaston was definitely launched.

The meeting was organized with Frank A. Page as chairman and J. Harry Hooper as secretary, and a committee appointed consisting of William M. Chase, A. S. Johnson and Percy L. Davidson to select a permanent and larger representative committee that should outline the project and determine the steps necessary to finance the proposition.

An informal discussion took up the major part of the evening during which the matter was thoroughly threshed out and individual opinions extended. As a result of this the organization was effected and the above mentioned committee chosen.

As the father of the idea in its present form Frank A. Page opened the discussion with a general survey of the situation. For over ten years, said Mr. Page, the need has been felt in Wollaston for a larger hall or common meeting place for the community. The fraternal and other organizations have outgrown their quarters. One or two of the churches have started a movement for a parish house. The present time seems to be the psychological moment for the building of a community house. We must build for the future and the building must be placed where it will be a credit to the neighborhood. The proper building would be a tremendous help. It would be an inducement for the stranger to settle here, and would undoubtedly increase the value of real estate.

This building should contain a hall large enough to seat all the people we should desire to bring together anytime in the next 25 years. It should seat at the least 500. The building should contain a banquet hall capable of seating at least 250 or 300, and also include smaller rooms that would accommodate the ladies societies and the philanthropic organizations of Wollaston. The problem of lodge rooms for the various fraternal orders would be solved by securing for them in this structure suitable quarters.

The building should not be attempted unless it were to be done in a suitable and substantial manner. If sufficient interest was shown Mr. Page thought it would be a good idea to form an organization and issue stock.

In the opinion of William M. Chase it should not be wholly a matter of dollars and cents. There should be some sentiment to it, and results should not be based simply upon returns. The building should not only be ornamental but large. It should be built of brick and cement in order that it might be fireproof and lasting. Such a building would mean an investment of at least $30,000 or $40,000 and about $2,500 a year for maintenance, including heating, lighting, janitors fees and the like. In a community of approximately 5000 people we ought to have some such common meeting place. Without it we are forced to go elsewhere. It is not an impossible thing. The only sticking point is, How are we to raise the funds?

Mr. Page said that with such an institution we would find ourselves knitted together in a closer community. We would be brought in touch with other people and unite in a more fraternal manner. We should consider it as a sort of a legitimate tax that will benefit the entire community. Big things are done nowadays by co-operation and they generally get results.

Eugene H. Sprague spoke briefly in favor of the project, and of the benefit it would be as a common meeting place, and the provision of suitable quarters for the fraternal orders.

A. S. Johnson described the present inadequate quarters of the Odd Fellows and told of the larger rooms they had needed for several years. He was especially enthusiastic in regard to the large supper room. At present when this society wants a social they are handicapped by having to go to

SLEEP IS ASSURED
IF YOUR BED IS RIGHT

The average man or woman in buying a mattress and bed spring depend largely on their own judgment as to what they consider they ought to pay for a substantial article.

The other fellow who wants to get the greatest amount of real comfort possible seeks the advice of the furniture man.

Now $35 for a 50 pound soft grey hair mattress and $25 for an upholstered box spring to match might on the face of it seem high in price. Not so—it's as low in price as the real article can be sold for and the individual who owns a combination of this sort made under the Kincaide direction can not only snap his fingers at work but has sleep and rest at his command for his every day life. Own this combination once and you'll wonder why some one didn't put you wise before.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

Washington's Birthday on Wednesday will be observed by the Daily Ledger as a holiday, no paper being issued on that day. All the holiday events will be reported in the Thursday paper.

Monday night's meeting of the City Council made it apparent that the members of the Council are not to be given too much leeway in the discussion of questions before the Council and that President Bryant intends to hold them to the question. Several times at Monday night's meeting he had occasion to pound th egavel and call members attention to the fact that they were wandering from the question under discussion. In so doing however no partiality was shown, all members being used alike.

Another thing that will commend itself to those who desire to hear what is going on was President Bryant calling attention to the rule which provides that no member shall be interrupted while speaking and that there shall be no conversation between members while a question is under debate.

Another ruling if such it might be called made by President Bryant Monday night was to stop proceedings while he informed gentlemen gathered in the rear of the hall if they wished to converse to retire to one of the rooms. President Bryant also impressed upon the Councilmen the importance of being in their seats before 7.35.

WORLD'S LARGEST BAKERY.

In Essen, Prussia, and Makes Fifty Thousand Loaves a Day.

The largest bakery in the world is located in Essen, Prussia, the home of the great Krupp gun factory. It is a vast building in which seventy workmen, divided into two shifts, work night and day.

Everything is done by machinery. A screw turns unceasingly a kneading trough, into which are poured some water and ten sacks of flour of 200 pounds each.

This machine makes about 40,000 pounds of bread each day in the shape of 25,000 small loaves and 25,000 large loaves, produced by 230 sacks of flour of 200 pounds each. All the operations of breadmaking are performed in this colossal bakery. The wheat arrives there, is cleaned, ground and brought automatically to the kneading trough by a series of rising and descending pipes.

There are thirty-six double ovens, and the workmen who watch over the baking of the bread earn from 8 to 10 cents an hour, making an average of 90 cents a day for eleven hours on duty. They have coffee and bread free; also the use of a bathroom, for they are required to keep themselves spotlessly clean and must wash their hands eight times a day.

ONE DICKENS GRAVE FOUND.

Resting Place of Walter, Soldier, Discovered In Calcutta.

Discovery of the grave of Walter Landor Dickens in a Calcutta cemetery is a reminder of how the sons of the great novelist were dispersed. This soldier son died in India; another, Sydney Smith, entered the navy and at twenty was buried at sea; a third, Francis Jeffsey, joined the Canadian northwest mounted police, and two others—Alfred Tennyson and Edward Bulwer Lytton—settled in Australia. A. T. Dickens recently returned from the antipodes and has been touring England with an interesting lecture on his famous father.

E. B. L. Dickens died in Sydney at fifty-one after representing Wilcannia in the New South Wales parliament for six years. Charles and Henry Fielding remained in their native England. H. F. Dickens, K. C., is still in that country.

NEW CONTRACT AT SHIPYARD

Collier to Cost About Half a Million Dollars

On Monday the New England Coal and Coke Company signed another contract with the Fore River Shipbuilding Company of Quincy for a steel collier with a capacity of 7,200 tons, to cost about half a million dollars.

The capacity is the same as the colliers Everett, Malden and Melrose built in Quincy in 1907 but the new collier will be of greater breadth and depth and not so long.

The Malden is 400 feet over all, 53 feet extreme breadth, 32 feet 6 inches depth. It is a single screw steamship of the single deck type with long poop, bridge and forecastle, and constructed on what is known as the self-trimming system.

The Everett was launched July 11, 1907, the Malden on Sept. 19, 1907, and the Melrose Nov. 6, 1907. These three ships have been profitably engaged in transporting coal from the mines to Boston.

Wonder if it will be christened, Medford, Chelsea, Revere or Winthrop The contract calls for completion on Oct. 1, 1911.

METROPOLITAN FIRE SERVICE

Quincy Responds to Four Alarm Fires in Boston

The Transcript of Saturday goes into detail in explaining the new Metropolitan Mutual aid system in the protection of property at big fires. Quincy is included in the system as was explained in brief in a recent issue of the Daily Ledger, and the preliminary system went into effect Feb. 15. Under this new system in case aid is summoned from Quincy the apparatus does not go direct to the scene of the fire in the heart of Boston as has been done in the past, but "covers in" and gradually moves peg by peg toward the scene of active fire fighting as needed.

While the complete system is not as yet thoroughly worked out, several of the details have been and are now in effect.

For instance in case of a big fire in East Boston, Quincy moves to the fire station on Minot street, Dorchester, to cover that section, that company having moved up one peg nearer the heart of the fire.

For a fire in the Dorchester district, Quincy goes direct to the fire, Quincy would also cover Dorchester in case of a big fire at Charlestown, South Boston, West Roxbury or Brighton.

The complete details of shifting apparatus from place to place is still in formation, as is also the plan for sending Boston apparatus to places like Quincy in case aid is needed. Tappers for this neighberly alarm are being installed in fire stations in the cities outside of Boston as fast as possible. According to the running card furnished the Central fire station, in case of a four alarm fire, Quincy covers for engine 20 on Minot street, Dorchester, although in case the fire in Dorchester, Quincy would go direct to the fire on the fourth alarm as stated above.

THE MISCHIEVOUS BOY.

The State House man of the Post says: "The mischievous boy of the House is "Bill" Thomas of Quincy. He is a great joker and is never happy except when he is playing practical jokes on someone else. The other day he twitted Martin Lomasney on the fact that the Ward 8 leader was wearing a blue necktie.

"You are getting to be quite a sport, Martin, wearing a blue necktie and a Grahame white cap," said he. "I think you must have a girl, Martin." Now it is a well known fact that Lomasney is a confirmed bachelor by choice, and he didn't like to be twitted on the girl subject by Thomas, and he said so.

"Go away from me. I am tired of this light stuff," said Lomasney.

GLASGOW'S FOG DEADLY, ACCORDING TO SCIENTISTS.

One Year's Death Roll Because of It Totals 1,063.

The queer superstition still exists that somehow smoke is good for the health. Perhaps it is the Londoner's way of consoling himself for having black instead of pink lungs. But Glasgow runs London very closely in the matter of opaque atmosphere.

Statistics show that during the autumn fogs in Glasgow in 1909 1,063 people died from fog. From being thirteen in the thousand the Glasgow death rate went up to twenty in the thousand during the fog season. When the nation lost about the same number of men during the "black week" in the Boer war it was panic stricken, but not much notice is taken of the commonplace smothering of a thousand people in the Glasgow "black weeks."

Sir William Richmond, an expert in fog facts, has recently had something to say about the way sulphuric acid bites into pictures, a fact first discovered by Faraday when he reported upon the proposed removal of the National gallery. The Elgin marbles appear to be suffering too. The bits of color have gone, and the surface has lost its old transparent look. Sir William Richmond compared the present surface to "opaque putty."

Smoke costs London $25,000,000 a year. R. Russell, another authority, says that if London were only smokeless it would be sunny enough to be a health resort for the rheumatic and aged.

CITY COUNCIL

No—Campbell, Cherrington, Craig, Jenkins, Nowland, Sodergren—6.

NOT VOTING—President Bryant.

SHIPYARD CONTRACT.

On the order authorizing the Mayor to sign a contract with the Fore River Shipbuilding Co. for an unlimited supply of water for 30 years, the Finance Committee reported a substitute order. Each Councilman was supplied with a type written copy and the President did not read it.

Councilman Richards of the committee offered as a minority report a resolution for a hearing March 6, and the question came on adoption.

Councilman Branch and Bailey opposed, arguing that a public hearing was to get information, and be believed the Finance Committee had all the information.

Councilman Ericson also opposed.

Councilman Richards argued that it was a business proposition, and others besides councilmen have views that they would like to express. They have petitioned for a hearing, and have a right to be heard. We are to consider whether the contract is "a square deal." Had no desire to antagonize or retard the shipyard. The company was well represented before the Finance committee. Mr. Richards proceeded to argue the whole question, but Councilman Smith raised the point that such debate was out of order.

President Bryant ruled the question was on giving a public hearing.

Mr. Richards gave way and his motion was laid on the table.

Councilman Smith offered two amendments to the second contract, both of which were rejected after a short debate.

Again the question came on the adoption of the minority report in favor of a hearing.

Councilman Richards argued in favor of a hearing. He was prepared with a lengthy document showing that the proposed contract was not an advantagious one for the city to sign. He was frequently interrupted, it being claimed that he was not speaking to the question. He claimed that at eight cents per 1000 gallons the shipyard had been getting water 25 per cent less than any other industry in the city, showing that the city had not discriminated against the shipyard. He opposed all long contracts, as the principle was wrong, and protested against the delivery of our public utilities. The redraft of the contract was much better, but not right.

Councilman Duffy did not see where city was handing over a public utility.

Councilman Branch told how the city came into possession of the reservoir. It was an important part of the plant of the Quincy Water Co. when purchased by the city, but supply became inadequate and was abandoned when Quincy entered the Metropolitan water district. Some cities sold their reservoirs to the Metropolitan commissioners and made a good deal, but the Quincy one was not wanted. It had outlived its usefulness. He queried what use could be made of it. Was not feasible to have in Quincy a double system, one to supply industrial water. The Fore River Company was prepared to pay cost of connection at no expense to the city, and we have no other proposition. It must be a large customer, and the shipyard was the logical solution. Many amendments had been made in the redraft. The supply has been limited to half the capacity of the reservoir. The question should be, what is the water worth? Believe contract as rewritten as advantageous both to company and city.

Councilman Bailey asked whae revenue the city now received from the shipyard for water. No definite figures were forthcoming, but the Commissioner said about $4,000. He asked whether the city was selling water to the shipyard at a loss. Wished to ascertain how committee arrived at the conclusion that $1,000 was the proper sum to be paid annually.

Councilman Histen told what the shipyard was doing for Quincy. A payroll of $6,000 per day; over 3000 on payroll; increased value of taxable property. It was possible for company to go elsewhere for water, and then the city would loose all income.

Councilman Gardner maintained it was not right to sell any water as low as eight cents per 1000 gallons. There was no profit at that rate.

Councilman Duffy maintained that reservoir water was not worth as much as Metropolitan water as it could not be used for all purposes.

Councilman Richards argued that Quincy reservoir could be made profitable with good management. Would favor selling Metropolitan water at half rather than hand over the reservoir. There were other industries to be encouraged besides the shipyard. Many would be glad to use reservoir water. It has been said by Commissioner that city now received a profit of $1200 from shipyard for water. Why give up this for $1,000?

Councilman Cherrington said the councilmen had had no time in which to consider the redraft of the contract, which had been reported tonight. And no member of Finance Committee had given any information why contract was favorable to city. I figure company under new contract would get water for 4-10,000 of a cent per 1000 gallons. Moved to lay on table.

Vote lost 12 to 10.

Councilmen Histen, Erickson and Branch argued in favor of contract.

Councilman Nowland brought out from the Commissioners that capacity of reservoir was a million and a half gallons per day. City before going into Metropolitan district had sometimes taken out two million gallons per day. Also that cost of reservoir might have been $100,000. That now city made a profit of $1200 from water sold shipyard. Might make $1,500 to $1800 profit under new contract. That water was about 20 feet deep at dam.

That maintenance of reservoir and main would be practically nothing for next 30 years.

After more debate the order was adopted by vote of 14 to 7 authorizing Mayor to make contract. The vote was as follows:

YES—Bailey, Bolster, Boyd, Branch, Duffy, Ericson, Forde, Gardner, Histen, Leslie, Parlee, Ross, Sandberg, Studley—14.

NO—Campbell, Craig, Jenkins, Nowland, Richards, Smith, Sodergren—7.

ABSENT—Cherrington—1.

NOT VOTING—President Bryant.

PETITION TO LEGISLATURE.

Upon motion of Councilman Nowland the Council voted to authorize the Mayor to petition Legislature for authority to borrow $200,000 additional for water extensions.

CRANCH STREET.

Councilman Ericson offered an order $2,100 for completing the drain on Cranch street. Referred to Committee on Streets.

PERMIT GRANTED.

Councilman Bailey offered an order granting Margurite Louise Holbrook permission to give a recital with children on the stage. Adopted.

MORE LIGHT.

Councilman Duffy offered an order for a light on Berkley street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Boyd offered an order for lights on Ashland street. Referred to Executive.

Councilman Studley offered an order for a pole location and light on Cleverly court. Referred to Committee on Streets.

SQUANTUM STREET.

Councilman Parlee offered an order appropriating $11,700 or completing West Squantum to the Boulevard. To Committee on Streets.

TEEL POND.

Councilman Sodergren offered an order requesting the Mayor to have the Board of Health abolish the nuisance at Teel pond. Adopted.

Adjourned at 11.56. Special cars left City Square at midnight for West Quincy, Quincy Point and Wollaston.

KNOW YOUR CITY CAMPAIGN.

Trenton, N. J., Starts Municipal Advertising at Home.

To teach Trenton (N. J.) people exactly what their city possesses in the way of municipal advantages, to show them what its municipal disadvantages are and to convince them of its municipal needs Trenton has planned a "know your city" week.

The celebration will be in the nature of the inauguration of a campaign of municipal education based on the theory that thousands of persons are content to live all their lives in a city without inquiring what kind of city it is in which they live.

Nor is it proposed to end the matter with the six days' celebration, for those who have arranged it have planned to continue the educational work until all the things that are needed to make Trenton a greater and better city shall have been accomplished.

The chamber of commerce was prompt to lend its support to the project. The Civics association, the Contemporary, the Young Men's Christian association, the charity organizations, churches—in fact, all associations devoted to uplifting—rallied to the support of the plan.

The scope of "know your city" discussions will not be limited. Some who attend the meetings may be committed to work for better methods of distributing charity among the poor of the city. These will be given the chance to tell of their work and to suggest plans for increasing its efficiency.

Some may have for their object the boosting of the city as a residence and commercial center, others to proclaiming its advantages as an industrial city.

Electric Lights.

The first incandescent electric light filaments were made of thread dipped in lampblack and tar and carbonized at a high temperature.

MARCHING TO GLORY

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

I didn't know whether it was waking from sleep or dreams or whether during an abnormal condition I had looked upon a vision of that after death period which is almost universally believed to be sealed from mortal eyes.

My theory as to this condition of mine is that, being abnormal, it produced abnormal pictures. We see no colors. What we consider colors are simply millions of waves impinging on the retina of the eye. Comparatively slow moving waves produce red; rapidly moving waves produce violet; those between the two produce intermediate colors. Now, may not the retina when turned awry be readjusted to receive that which it is not intended to receive? In other words, may not what I am going to relate have really existed instead of having been a dream or a vision produced by strained conditions?

I was in the thick of the fight. Men were shot down beside me, in front of me and behind me. The noise was like a thousand thunderstorms. There were the deafening explosions of cannon, the rattle of musketry, the shrill neighing of horses, shouts, groans, shrieks. Presently something struck me and turned me half around. My legs afforded no support; I felt myself sinking; the terrific sounds about me grew faint—then oblivion.

Suddenly I was again conscious. I sat up, supporting myself with an arm. The fight had moved a short distance beyond me. Men were hurrying to the rear, and men were hurrying to the front. Two men were carrying past me another on a stretcher. As I looked I saw something mistlike forming above the one borne along. There was nothing describable about it, appealing, as it seemed to me, to a sense of which I had never before been conscious. Like a smoke wreath, it rose and slowly drifted away.

I knew that a wounded man had died while being carried by me. I did not know how I knew it, but I had no doubt of it. Turning my eyes to the front, where a hundred yards from me a thinned line of my comrades, from whose ranks I had dropped, were receiving a sharp fine, I saw men falling, some crawling away, while others were limping rearward. On some who fell immediately the mistlike substance I had seen on the man who had died while passing me appeared, rose and drifted away. Had I not seen it leave the body I should have taken it for a puff of smoke from the mouth of a gun.

Then I noticed that all these wraiths were moving in the same direction, gathering, clustering about common centers, grouped in what seemed to be one faint luminous cloud. From it broke away a line like men marching by platoon or company front, then another line and another till many such lines at equal distances had moved out from the whole, which gradually grew less till a column of the dead was marching on a rising curve.

At first this curve led them away from me, but the direction, ever changing, presently caused them to pass over my head, yet since they were constantly rising they passed far above me. It was a sight to see, these souls of dead soldiers passing from earth on their way to spiritland. Ever turning as they were, at last I realized that they were passing to their long homes in a gigantic spiral.

I thought of those spiral nebulae, developing universes, seen in the heavens through telescopes and wondered if this form, as it marks the beginning, marks also the end of the infinite combination of matter and soul.

At last the receding column became a single line, growing thinner till it formed a barely perceptible curve like that of a comet.

So rapt was I in this strange vision that I was oblivious to all else. Then I noticed that the battle was ours. I dropped upon the ground again, and gradually all things about me vanished. I must have passed the night unconscious on the battlefield.

When I came to myself right above me and within a foot of my face was a blade of timothy, on the end of which a spider was crawling. I watched him running about on the cereal for awhile, then noticed that it was morning. Occasionally I heard a distant shot. I knew a picket fired it, for with an army in the field picket shots are always to be heard. Occasionally a volley came over the fields which I knew had been fired over some soldier's grave. As I grew more conscious of my surroundings I grew also conscious of a pain in my side and a terrible stiffness through my whole body. Then I heard a voice say:

"This man's alive."

A soldier with a spade in his hand stood over me, and an officer with a sash about his waist, the color of which I knew denoted a surgeon, came and bent over me. He called his assistant, who put a flask to my lips.

"I saw this fellow last evening," said the latter, "and I was sure he was dead."

I recovered and have often since told this story of what I saw on that battlefield. But people usually tap their foreheads knowingly or say, "You were delirious, old man."

I know that what I saw I saw. I did not dream it, for so far as animal life was concerned it was not in me. I was for the time being lifted out of it. I believe I was given a vision of a spirit condition.

Quincy where they lose a certain percentage of attendance on account of the distance. He felt sure that the Odd Fellows could be depended upon as tenants.

Rev. William B. Ayers discussed the relation of the various church men's clubs to the movement and also debated upon the formation of a federated men's club to further the project.

C. A. Boynton stated the disadvantages of going to Quincy to hold entertainments and similar functions. He suggested that the different lodges take shares in the movement.

Louis E. Crosscup advanced an idea that might make the building self-supporting in a few years. He suggested that provision be made for a social club of from 250 to 300. If such an organization were formed it alone would mean a permanent income to the building that would almost support it. There are few communities of this size but what have a club of this kind that is self supporting.

Wendell H. Hull said that we should get together on this thing. There had never been a union meeting of the church clubs because of the lack of a suitable place. The real point lies in hustling and raising money for the building. There is no doubt about providing for the running expenses.

Herbert Y. Follet told the need of the Masons for better quarters. The local lodge is held back on account of its limited accommodations. It would welcome the opportunity for more commodious quarters, and the chance to hold public installations and the like. Political meetings opened another opportunity for its rental. The maintenance of the building is the least of the proposition. Raising the capital is the problem.

Eugene H. Sprague stated as his belief that if the people of Wollaston purchased shares in relation to their means that not only would the venture be self supporting and a great benefit to the community but in time it would yield a legitimate return for the money invested. We need the building, and it is up to the people of Wollaston to produce the thing they need.

Percy L. Davidson seconded the belief of a previous speaker that a church should only be used for church affairs, and that socials, fairs, entertainments and the like should be held in some other meeting place. He also thought we should consider the needs of a social club in Wollaston similar to the Cochato club in Braintree.

Rufus W. Poole was in sympathy with the former speakers and considered the project to be an excellent thing both for the community as a whole and the fraternal orders.

Discussion by the various men present followed and the meeting adjourned at a late hour, after organization, to await the action of the committee appointed.

A convenient broom holder is made in this way: Take a square of cloth a little larger than will cover the brush of the broom. Put a hem an inch wide in each end and run a tape or string in each hem, then all that is needed to have a broom cover is to lay cloth over the broom, draw the string at each end and tie.

MIXED HIS LETTERS.

Senator Barnes of Weymouth is a methodical man says Hennessy of the Globe. He has a stereotyped reply that he makes to letters sent him appealing for his support on matters before the legislature. Most of the requests that senators have received this year relate to the milk question, open season on ducks and woman suffrage. The senator sorts his letters into three piles and then hands them to his stenographer, with instructions to send the proper reply to each.

The senator mixed his letters up a bit one day last week, and the result was that his correspondents got replies that puzzled them. A woman who asked him to support the woman suffrage bill got reply that he was in favor of a closed season on ducks.

A man who wrote him on the milk question received a letter saying that he was unalterably opposed to woman suffrage, and the sportsman who asked him how he stood on the open duck season bill received a letter saying that he was a firm believer in pure milk and that he would vote for any measure fixing the standard the farmers agree upon.

LOOKING FOR EXTRA SESSION

Standpatters Willing That One Should Be Called

FIRM AGAINST RECIPROCITY

Would Sacrifice Presidency to Defeat Pact With Canada—Appeals Do Not Carry Much Weight Because of Disorganized State of Party In Power—Situation at Washington Becoming More and More Muddled

Washington, Feb. 21.—Until the president spoke through Representative McCall of Massachusetts a good many of the legislators were inclined to discredit the extra session talk. Some of them even went so far as to say that the president was bluffing. Now everybody knows just what the situation is.

Whether the plain announcement by the president as to his intentions will have any effect on the senate remains to be seen. Some of the keenest observers here are still of the opinion that the Republicans in the senate will not force the president to call an extra session. On the other hand, men who understand the situation thoroughly are disposed to believe that the old guard in the senate is perfectly willing that there shall be an extra session.

The announcement made by McCall that the president will hold himself in readiness to veto any general tariff legislation at a special session which threatened to overthrow the Republican principle of protection may, some persons believe, have the effect of making certain Republican senators less fearful of a special session.

The situation is unique. The attitude of the standpat Republican senators is that the Canadian reciprocity agreement if ratified would be a distinct blow at the protective system. It is for this particular reason that the standpatters are unwilling that a vote shall be taken at this session.

They maintain that the movement against the protective system should be "scotched" at once, and as they see it, the way to "scotch" it is to prevent the ratification of the Canadian agreement. With that agreement killed they are apparently willing to trust to the future.

Unquestionably the McCall announcement that general tariff legislation which threatened the protective system would be vetoed if enacted is encouraging to them. It may turn out that this announcement will tend to strengthen the movement for the defeat of the Canadian agreement. If this view is correct the promise to head off general tariff legislation of a particular kind at a special session may help to bring on an extra session.

During the next three or four days the Republican leaders in the senate and house will make some effort to reach an agreement as to just what shall be done during the closing hours of the present session. It seems altogether unlikely that an agreement covering all the legislation of importance that is pending can be reached. Indeed, it may turn out that no agreement with reference to anything can be arrived at.

The political aspect of the situation is receiving more attention than ever before. Men prominent in the Republican party, but not sitting as members of either the senate or the house, are urging the legislative leaders to agree to a program that will clear up the legislative situation.

It is beginning to dawn on many prominent men in the party that an extra session may put the party in the hole deeper than it is now. In the past the sort of a political appeal that is being made to the Republicans in the senate would be effective, but in the present disorganized state of the party in power no appeal of any sort seems to carry much weight.

The remark is frequently made here that the old standpatters in congress would apparently be willing to see the Republican party lose the next presidency rather than yield to a policy which they believe would endanger the protective tariff system.

While all the talk is for an extra session and while the Democrats of the house are making ready for the preliminary work which they must do in case an extra session is called, many persons still hold to the belief that during the closing hours of the session the senate will vote on the Canadian agreement and thus make an extra session unnecessary.

While it is true that the Democratic leaders in the house would like to have until next fall to prepare for tariff legislation, they are not particularly worried over the prospect of an extra session.

Charles Gates Rushes Across the Continent For Treatment

New York, Feb. 21.—None the worse for his record run of 2989 miles from Yuma, Ariz., here, in seventy-eight hours, Charles G. Gates, son of John W. Gates, victim of blood poisoning which caused his hurried trip east for treatment, is said to be in comfortable condition at his home, with every prospect held out for his ultimate recovery.

His injury is due to an accident sustained while he was cranking up his automobile on his ranch near San Diego, Cal., a septic condition setting in on the leg and alarming him so that he decided to rush to this city for treatment by his own physician. His condition, while serious, is not considered critical.

The cost of the special train which carried Gates across the continent was $5000, compared with the regular railway fare of $77.50.

FIRE NEAR MAGAZINE FILLED WITH SHELLS

Quick Work Prevents Explosion on Battleship New Jersey

Boston, Feb. 21.—A magazine filled with nine-inch shells was saved from exploding aboard the battleship New Jersey at the Charlestown navy yard last night when flames leaped high in the dynamo room next to the magazine. As they were pressing on to the magazine they were extinguished by sailors acting in regular fire drill.

A canvas covering of one of the unused dyanmos had caught fire from a short circuited wire. The oils in the canvas sent up a high blaze and a kind of smoke that made approach dangerous. The 300 officers and sailors aboard at the time of the fire were for a time in danger of their lives.

Had the shells in the one magazine next to the dynamo room exploded they would have wrecked the ship, for although they were situated far in her forward part they were nine-inch shells and numerous.

THE STATUS OF EDDY CHURCH

Courts Will Be Called Upon to Decide It, Says Chandler

TO DETERMINE ITS RELIGION

Question as to Whether Christian Science Is Denomination Similar to Other Religions, a Charity or Medical Organization—Quotes Executor of Eddy Estate and Directors of Mother Church as to Its Doctrines

Concord, N. H., Feb. 21.—William E. Chandler, counsel for George W. Glover, who is fighting for the possession of the residuum of the estate of his mother, Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, which was willed to the mother church in Boston, declares that the case is to decide whether Christian Science is a religion, a charity or only a medical organization.

"As a result of the answers recently filed in court in Concord by the executors of Mrs. Eddy and the directors of the Christian Science church in Boston," says Mr. Chandler, "there is likely to be a decision made by the New Hampshire courts; possibly by the United States supreme court, and this decision will interest the public.

"The decision will determine what the religion of Christian Science is, whether, before the law, the society is only a religion like other denominations, or whether it is a special charity to be helped and protected as such by the courts more favorably than it would be if it were only a religion; or whether it is only a medical organization endeavoring to cure physical diseases for money.

"The answer made by Henry M. Baker, executor, and the directors of the church, and filed Feb. 4, describes the church as the mother church and says it has 50,000 members and more than 1200 branches, widely distributed, and then proceeds:

"'It is one of the doctrines of Christian Science as taught by said Mary Baker G. Eddy, and a part of the religious belief and the practice of the members of the said mother church, as well as of all other members of the Christian Science denomination, that sin, suffering, disease and distress can be, and are, relieved and overcome by the divine power of God invoked through prayer as taught by, and practised in primitive Christianity.

"'The fundamental purpose for which said church was established and exists, namely, the promotion of the doctrines of Christian Science, is essentially charitable, the objects sought to be furthered by such promotion being the furtherance and spreading of religion, the spiritual education of mankind, and the relief and overcoming of sin, suffering, disease and distress.'

"These questions do not appear to have been raised by Mr. Glover in the bill in equity, but are distinctly raised for the first time in the litigation by the executor and the church. The bill does not undertake to state or put in issue the principles of the religion of Christian Science and makes no statements about them. The answer puts them directly in issue, subject to the taking of testimony, argument and decision.

"It seems now to be Mr. Glover's opportunity if he desires it to meet the issue made against him by the church and upon its invitation to secure a court decision of the questions, What is Christian Science? Is it a religion? Is it a charity, giving but not taking, or is it in law merely a band of practitioners taking money for trying to cure disease?

"Without regard to the motive of the church for bringing into the financial litigation for decision these questions, the public will be glad that they are raised in court and are to receive judicial exposition."

How Is Your Weight?

While it is true that too much weight is not to be desired yet the fact remains that many men and women are thin to the point of danger. This danger lies in their having no reserve force or nerve power to combat deadly diseases. A little extra flesh is needed by all to feel well and to look well, and this calls up the question of how best to increase the weight. Physicians and chemists, by experiments have solved the problem of increasing the white and red corpuscles of the blood, by the administration of 3 grain hypo-nuclane tablets, and this is always followed by an increase of weight. Obtain in sealed packages, and take for a period of several months according to directions with packages.

The Service Behind the Lenses!

Optical defects in the human eye—a lack of perfect vision—can be overcome by the expert optometrist. With equal ease the comfort of the eyesight can be marred or ruined by mechanical defects artificially created.

There must be service behind the lenses—a service that adapts itself to your own individual requirements when it comes to the adjustment of the frames which hold the lenses.

This is the sort of service we are prepared to offer you—a service that embodies in its detail the highest paid experts in its various branches, coupled with one of the best equipped operating plants in the United States.

It is likewise a service that appeals first to your intelligence and then to your purse.

Urinary disorders quickly follow:
Diabetes and finally Bright's disease.
This is the downward course of kidney ills.

Don't take this course. Follow the advice of a Quincy citizen.

Mrs. George L. Nott, 99 North street, Quincy, Mass., says: "I have every reason for holding a high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled a great deal by headaches and dizzy spells which were so severe at times that I had to grasp something for support to keep from falling. My sight was also affected, spots often appearing before me and my back ached intensely. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills, I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store and began their use. I was helped from the first and after I had taken the contents of five boxes, my case being of long standing, I was cured. Other members of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills with equally good results."

SETTLED OUT OF COURT

Bucks Company and Labor Officials Reach an Agreement

Washington, Feb. 21.—The case of the American Federation of Labor against the Bucks Stove and Range company, generally known as the boycott case, was dismissed by the supreme court of the United States because of the announcement that the contending parties had reached an agreement out of court.

The Bucks Stove and Range company of St. Louis, in December, 1907, obtained an injunction against the American Federation of Labor, restraining the latter from publishing the name of the former in its "unfair list."

The federation, after the injunction had been issued, but prior to the time it was made permanent, again published the name of the company in the "unfair list" of The Federationist, and it was in consequence of this fact that Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison were adjudged in contempt, this being a case distinct from the Bucks Stove case appeal, and still awaiting final decision by the supreme court.

LIABILITY LAW UPHELD

Employes' Claim Not Affected by Benefits From Relief Department

Washington, Feb. 21.—The constitutionality of the law of Iowa, enabling an employe of the operating department of a railroad to sue a railroad for injuries, notwithstanding the fact that he had received injury benefits from a relief department supported partially by the railroad, was upheld by the supreme court of the United States.

The constitutionality of the law was attacked when Charles L. McGuire sued the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad company for $2000 damages for injuries. McGuire had been given $882 by an association maintained by the railroad and its employes.

STORAGE EGGS AT 2 1-2 CENTS A DOZEN

But They Were Unfit For Food Eighteen Months Ago

Chicago, Feb. 21.—Caught by the breaking of the cold storage warehouse corner in eggs and butter, Chicago commission merchants now complain that retail dealers are holding up prices and preventing disposal of their surplus stock.

While the wholesale prices of eggs and butter have dropped to a low figure, the consumer still is paying fancy prices. It is contended by commission men and wholesalers that reduced retail prices would cause the housewife to use larger quantities of eggs and butter. The president of a large packing company said:

"There are eggs today in Chicago which have been in storage twenty-four months. They were unfit for food eighteen months ago. One concern offered by circular letter to sell its eggs at 2½ cents a pound, claiming they had been spoiled in the cold storage where they were stored. The price is equivalent to about 2 cents a dozen."

FILIBUSTER IS ENDED IN HOUSE

Democrats Help In Adoption of the "Gag" Rule

DEBATES ARE NOW CHECKED

All Measures Can Be Rushed Through Without Amendment After Forty Minutes' Debate During Remainder of Session—War Claims Bill Passed After Eliminating French Spoliation and Navy Yard Overtime Claims

Washington, Feb. 21.—It was still the legislative day of Friday in the house when that body met Monday in pursuance of the recess of the twenty-eight-hour session ordered shortly before 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

One of the omnibus claims bills which held the house in a tangle since Friday last was still under consideration. It was the house bill carrying war claims only, and omitting the French spoliation and navy yard overtime claims, and there was still a filibuster proceeding against the measure. Mr. Mann of Illinois, who commanded the filibuster under which the French claims were stricken out, was lined up with those in favor of the bill, but several advocates of the spoliation claims had taken up the fight against the bill.

As soon as the house convened the point of no quorum was made and a rollcall ordered. The clerk reported 201 members present, a quorum. The reading of the omnibus bill for amendment was begun.

The great majority of the Democrats in the house voted with the Republicans, 173 to 43, for the adoption of a rule providing that all house rules can be suspended on a two-thirds vote during the remainder of the session, so that appropriation and other measures can be rushed through without amendment after forty minutes' debate. The Democratic leaders announced that they were willing to do anything in reason to assist their Republican brethren out of the predicament in which they find themselves so near the end of the session.

The adoption of the rule, which was characterized by Mr. Bennet of New York as a "gag," had the effect of ending the three-days' filibuster against the omnibus war claims bill which provides for the payment of $1,160,000 of war claims but does not include and French spoliation or navy yard overtime claims. The claims bill was passed by a two-thirds vote. The yeas and nays were not demanded.

The rule adopted by the house practically puts the entire condition of affairs for the next two weeks in the hands of the speaker.

The claims bill passed by the house is the senate measure, carrying only Southern war claims. The senate bill was thrown aside in its entirety. It is doubtful that the senate will accept the house bill, with the French spoliation item eliminated.

Representatives Underwood, Clayton, Shirley and Fitzgerald, Democratic leaders, advised the minority side to vote for the special rule because it will give the Democrats the absolute veto power on any bill, inasmuch as a two-thirds vote is now required to pass any measure and this cannot be obtained without Democratic help.

The omnibus claims bills which passed the house is not the senate measure, in which the spoliation claims were included. The house bill goes over to the senate and the full fruits of the Democratic victory and the conquering of the filibuster cannot be had until the senate accepts the house claims bill.

BIG AWARD IS CONFIRMED

End of Telephone Suit Which Has Lasted Twenty-Eight Years

Boston, Feb. 21.—The long standing suit of the Western Union Telegraph company against the American Bell Telephone company for an accounting of receipts from telephone licenses, was brought to a close by an opinion by Judge Colt in the United States circuit court, confirming an award of $2,579,914.64 and 20,087 shares of telephone stock to the Western Union.

The award, which was made by Everett W. Burdett as master, was objected to by the Bell company, and also by the Western Union. The latter objected because the award was not larger.

In all fifty-seven exceptions were taken, and all of these were overruled yesterday. As the contending parties were merged a few months ago, it is believed that the suit, which lasted for twenty-eight years, is now at an end.

KILLED WHILE BOXING

Sailor Has Fatal Fall While In Friendly Bout on Battleship

Washington, Feb. 21.—While engaged in a boxing bout with a friend on board the United States battleship New Hampshire, now engaged in practice at Guantanamo, Cuba, Edward J. Scully, a seaman, was accidentally killed by a fall, according to a wireless dispatch received by the navy department from Captain Rodgers, commanding the New Hampshire.

Following the usual custom, Admiral Schroeder, commander-in-chief of the fleet, undoubtedly will appoint a court to investigate the matter.

Scully was a native of Providence, where his father is now living. He entered the naval service about two years ago.

TORCH AND SWORD PREVAIL IN HAYTI

No Mercy Shown Rebels Who Offer Resistance

Cape Haytien, Hayti, Feb. 21.—Government troops, after recapturing Ouanaminth from the rebels, got out of the control of their officers, pillaged and burned the town and massacred those of the inhabitants who were unable to escape. Jean Pursperi, a citizen of France, was assaulted, his 13-year-old son killed and their home burned.

The army moved on to Ouanaminth with President Simon at its head. The rebels were found in possession of the town and they offered resistance. No mercy was shown by Simon's forces and sanguinary fighting followed. The rebels were soon beaten back but the officers could not stop the advance of their men. The soldiers got out of hand and the pillaging that followed was horrible.

The killing of the Frenchman by the soldiers may result in complications with France.

Quincy lodge of Elks, which was instituted in 1905, will celebrate its sixth anniversary Thursday evening by a high class athletic and musical entertainment at Alpha hall. The entertainment will take place at eight o'clock and will be followed by a banquet in Union hall.

Word has been received of the serious illness at her home in Toledo, Ohio, of Mrs. John Halloran formerly of West Quincy, and a sister of Mrs. Stephen B. Little. This morning Mrs. Little, with her sister Josephine, and her mother Mrs. Kelley, left for Toledo.

Last evening Quincy chapter No. 88, O. E. S., held its regular meeting in Electa hall. At half past eight a recess was declared, at which time Mrs. Wilson Marsh was presented and spoke for the Quincy Women's club in behalf of Associated Charities. At the close of the meeting an excellent program was rendered by members of the Chapter, consisting of vocal and instrumental music and readings, after which refreshments were served in which the "cherry and hatchet" were much in evidence. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

Miss Marguerite Davis, daughter of Dr. E. E. Davis of Chestnut street, is one of the first seven in scholarship in her class at Vassar. Of the seven, four are from Massachusetts and all are from New England. The seven are known as honor girls. Miss Marguerite Davis of Quincy and Miss Katherine M. Forbes of Worcester received honorable mention. The other five honor girls were: Miss Virginia L. Butler, Bridgeport, Conn., Miss Ellen K. Eayrs, Cambridge, Mass.; Miss Gladys Fisher, Keene, N. MICHIGAN'S BIG BEAN CROP.

Product Worth Nearly $20,000,000, It Is Figured.

When Michigan's bean crop of 1910 shall have been converted into the baked article and otherwise almost $20,000,000 will have been spent for the product of that state by the people of the world who indulge in this food.

Reports show that Michigan grew 6,150,000 bushels last year, easily outranking any other state in this specialty. The retail price of beans everywhere, excepting for the selected, hand picked variety, all of which is added to carry you a little higher, is 10 cents a quart.

HEAT AND COLD ROLL STONE BALL

Ohio Monument Puzzle to Scientists of America.

THINK THEY HAVE SOLUTION.

Granite Sphere Thirty-six Inches In Diameter and 4,200 Pounds In Weight Shifts Rough Spot Which Rested on Pedestal In Irregular Manner—Geologists Find Sun's Rays Responsible.

In the last few years the attention of scientists and of the public in general has been attracted to a remarkable phenomenon discovered in connection with the monument to the memory of C. B. Merchant, in the Marion cemetery, at Marion, O. The monument consists of a stone base, rough in finish, upon which is mounted a polished granite ball. The ball is thirty-six inches in diameter and weighs 4,200 pounds.

When the ball was placed in position in 1896 the monument builder left but one spot of it rough. This was the segment of contact with the stone pedestal, or that part of the ball which rested on the supporting stone. So thoroughly was the rest of the ball polished that its surface is like a mirror. It reflects perfectly the trees and shrubbery which surround it.

In 1900, four years after the monument was erected, a visitor to the cemetery discovered that the granite sphere had shifted its position. Investigation proved that the rough spot was no longer in contact with the pedestal. Repeated efforts on the part of cemetery employees failed to return the ball to its former position.

Those who attempted the task realized that the ball had not been turned by human hands. At first its movement was ascribed to the motion of earth.

Scientists Study Problem.

Men of science from the Ohio universities made special trips to Marion to study the problem. As the story of the ball was spread scientific men from universities further away went to study the ball.

When the first professor of physics looked at the sphere the rough spot on the ball was about one-half way up toward its top as it rested on the pedestal. He took a photograph of the ball in that position, the rough spot designating that the ball was moving in the vertical circle.

The next scientist who took a picture of the ball showed it in a different position. The ball had turned in part in the vertical circle and then had revolved in the horizontal. This led to further controversy until many men of science met to study the unique problem.

Many theories were advanced as to the cause of the movement of the ball. Finally many geologists of note and recognized authority evolved a theory which is generally accepted as true. That is:

The constant moving of the ball—that is acceded—is due to the unequal expansion of different parts of the sphere's surface. As a sphere its surface is presented to the four winds of heaven, and the portion of it to the rays of the sun would become more highly heated than the part of the surface exposed to the north and its cold winds. Also the surface of the whole would be more apt to become more heated during the day than would the base upon which it rests, as the latter is larger and heavier than the ball itself.

Heat Causes Creeping.

Now, if one part of the ball expands a minute quantity more than the other with each heating of one side and contracts in the same ratio on cooling there would tend to result a slight creeping movement which in time would move the ball sufficiently to let the change in its position be noted by the naked eye. Naturally the expansion of one side of the ball would make that side heavier than the chilled side, and the heated side would work its way toward the bottom.

The case is considered one of the most remarkable on record and has furnished science with a new idea concerning the expansion and contraction of solids. The conclusions of American scientists who examined the ball were submitted to scientists of Europe. All agree that the action of heat and cold of the four seasons causes the ball to change its position a minute particle every day.

SHIPS SNOW SOUTH TO MELT

Railroad Finds It Cheaper Than Haul to Lake Michigan.

The Illinois Central railroad has found a novel way of helping Chicago get rid of some of its snow. It consists of filling southbound coal cars with the snow from its yards and shipping it south. Most of it melts en route.

What is left when the cars reach their destination is shoveled out and melts in a short time. As the cars are wanted in the south anyway, the scheme is cheaper than paying for hauling snow to Lake Michigan.

Britain Likes Motor Vehicles.

The United Kingdom is using 218,689 motor vehicles, an increase in one year of 36,925.

MATTY HAS AMBITION TO BECOME ACTOR.

Christy Mathewson, the great pitcher of the New York Nationals, has an ambition to be an actor. Says he:

"If my arm ever goes back on me—and arms last just about so long, you know—it wouldn't take much coaxing to get me to try to be a regular actor. There's something fascinating about stage work, and it's a whole lot easier way to make money than by getting out in a boiling sun and trying to fan batters. I have all the time I can fulfill for the next five years offered me in vaudeville, and down in Baltimore one man wants to put me in for a season in stock as leading man. Of course I prefer baseball just at present. If they ever begin talking bush leagues to me, though, I'll jump to the footlights in all probability."

CRACK BOWLERS TO MEET.

Champions of West and East Will Roll For National Title In Buffalo.

Bowling enthusiasts throughout the country are deeply interested in the coming series of games between Smith and Gebhardt of Buffalo and Gilbert and Franz of Cleveland for the two man championship of the United

JIMMY SMITH, ONE OF COUNTRY'S BEST TENPIN ARTISTS.

States. Although no definite date has been set for the contests, it is more than likely that the games will be rolled during the National Bowling association tournament to be held in Buffalo, Feb. 25 to March 18.

Franz and Gilbert are two of the greatest bowlers in the middle west, while Smith and Gebhardt have cleaned up everything in the east. Jimmy Smith has been conceded the world's champion bowler for several years. He has won the championship of Greater New York three times running, and experts who know the game declare the conditions governing the G. N. Y. championship the hardest laid down for any tourney. In that tourna ment it is necessary to bowl on seven teen different alleys. He finished sixth in the American bowling congress tournament held in St. Louis recently.

Hackett to Run In England.

William J. Hackett, the Brookline (Mass.) gymnasium association long distance runner, who won the Brockton fair Marathon in 1909 and 1910, is to compete in the English Marathon, May 24, in London. He will leave April 1.

COMING SPORT EVENTS

Columbus, O., was awarded the grand American handicap, the prize trap shooting event of the United States. It will be held in June.

The national tourney of the National Association of Scientific Angling Clubs will be held in the Washington park lagoon in Milwaukee this summer.

The American court tennis championship will be decided at the Tennis and Racket club, Boston, the first week in April. Champion Jay Gould will be one of the competitors.

The national basketball championships which were scheduled for Jan. 5, 6 and 7 and which were postponed are to be decided March 16, 17 and 18. They will be held in Oswego, N. Y.

Jake De Rosier, who won many races on the saucer bicycle track at Los Angeles, Cal., on a motorcycle, will go to Great Britain to compete in the tourist trophy motorcycle race in the Isle of Man next June.

Because of a conflict of dates in the applications of the Louisville and Latonia tracks no time was assigned for the spring meetings at those courses. Lexington's (Ky.) application for April 29 to May 11 was granted, and the 1911 racing season will open with that meet.

We've got to pick a president
About a year from now.
Some people think we should begin
At once to mix the row.
When in his mind the saner man
The question well has turned He'll think that we deserve to take
The rest that we have earned.

This thing of pawing up the air
Two seasons in advance
Is not the thing that it would seem
At first and careless glance.
We ought to have a little while
To pause and contemplate
Some other weighty public things
Before we make the slate.

Each year sufficient to itself
Is quite a rule to make.
By starting now it might be hard
To keep the folks awake.
Let politics go chase itself
Or pause to take a nap.
Not any trouble will we have
In filling up the gap.

Suppose that we should rave and rant
The proper man to find.
Are we assured that any one
Will keep our choice in mind?
In days gone by the early booms
Have seldom won the prize.
Some person hardly mentioned now
May find it just his size.

FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH ARGENTINA

May Be Cause of Investigation Relative to Contract for Two Battleships

State Department Undoubtedly Gave Assistance But Advisedly

The most prominent story in a Boston Traveler of Tuesday was founded on the following alleged dispatch from New York, upon which it commented at length in a sensational way:

New York, Feb. 12.—Admiral Garcia chief of the commission in charge of the building of two monster battleships for Argentina, says that it was the influence of the United States state department that gave the contracts to America.

"I met Secretary Knox in Washington," he said, "and was introduced to Secretary Meyer. I was informed that confidential relations had been established between the United States and the Argentine. The relations are extraordinary. The United States minister, Mr. Sherrill, at Buenos Ayres, obtained remarkable concessions from your government. We have carte blanche to all information your navy department has and we are free to call for drawings, devices or expert advice. We can also use your proving grounds for testing our guns. We have been allowed to put our naval officers on board your ships to study your navy and methods. These new ships will be more powerful than any in your navy—indeed than any in the world."

President Bowles of the Fore River Company declines to be interviewed on the dispatch.

Whatever action the State department may have taken was undoubtedly done advisedly and to the benefit of this country as well as the Argentine Republic.

The Herald prints a Washington dispatch Feb. 22 as follows:

Senator La Follette wants an investigation of published charges that government naval secrets are being disclosed to the Argentine Republic through the construction of two battleships in this country.

He introduced two resolutions today designed to bring information from the departments of state annd navy concerning the contracts which private shipbuilding companies received from the Argentine Republic, desiring to learn whether administration officials were responsible for the procuring of the business.

The charge was printed that Secretary of State Knox, through communications to American Minister Sherill at Buenos Ayres, had influenced the situation by guaranteeing up-to-date men-of-war through the use of secret devices which were used in building vessels in the United States. One of Senator LaFollette's resolutions directs the secretary of state to send to the Senate any communication between officials of his department and representatives of Argentina pertaining to the construction and armament in this country of the two battleships in question.

A resolution calling upon the secretary of the navy for information goes much further. It demands communications between the navy department and private ship yards and inquiries what, if any plans of guns or appliances pertaining to the armament of battleships were transmitted or communicated either to representatives of Argentina or to any shipbuilding company. The resolution demands, further, whether any plans for the battleships being built under contracts with Argentina covered devices which hitherto, through patents or secrecy, have been the exclusive property of the United States. The resolution goes into a number of other subjects designed to bring out any facts as to whether naval secrets have been disclosed for the purpose of bringing business from foreign countries to shipyards in the United States.

Very Successful Affair of the Sacred Heart Church

The eighth annual reunion of the parish of the church of the Sacred Heart was held Tuesday evening at Music hall, Atlantic. The attendance was more than the capacity of the hall and there were doubtless some who were unable to get in. Atlantic is lacking in public halls, and if many such gatherings are to be held it will be necessary to have a larger hall. The affair Tuesday evening was in charge of a large committee of which Henry Cunningham was chairman and F. K. Browne secretary. The matrons from the different sections of the parish were:

During the first part of the evening there was an pleasing entertainment which was in charge of Erastus Osgood, which was a sufficient guarantee that it was a pleasing one. The program included violin, guitar and vocal solos and closed with a side spliting farce.

After the entertainment refreshments were served in the lower hall by an efficient committee composed of J. Herne, R. A. Cole and Daniel J. Nyhan. By this time many of the older ones had gone home but the young people remained for the dance which followed. But still the capacity of the hall was taxed. Cuff's orchestra furnished music and the floor was in charge of Wendell J. Sprunk assisted by James Keohane and James Duggan and the following aids:—Edward McCarthy, Timothy Keohane, Patrick Duggan, Aloysius A. WASHINGTON BIRTHDAY PARTY

Gentlemen's Night of Woman's Guild at Wollaston

Gentlemen's night, which took the form of a Washington Birthday party, was the most successful social affair ever given by the Woman's Guild of St. Chrysostom's church and was held Wednesday evening in the parish rooms. The social committee of which Mrs. Alice J. Bainbridge is chairman, planned a most delightful evening's enjoyment for those who were privileged to attend.

The place cards which were prettily decorated and suggestive of the day were given by Mrs. George H. Bean as were the decorations which were most effectively done under her supervision, red, white and blue festoons from the ceiling, to which were attached numerous small flags and miniature hatchets and standing flags, were placed on the tables. All were given little hatchets tied with tricolor ribbons which had to be matched for partners.

At 6.30 all stood while the blessing was asked by the rector, Rev. Frederick H. Steenstra, then an excellent supper of escalloped oysters, sliced cold meats, chow chow, chicken salad Mayonnaise dressing, chocolate cake, Washington pie with whipped cream and decorated with maraschino cherries, rolls and cafe noir.

During a social hour which did not end until 10 o'clock the gentlemen were blindfolded, and with a crooked cane, hooked for prize packages attached to a line stretched across the room—the opening of which caused a great deal of laughter and much good natured joking. Billikens in boxes, nodding "coons" jumping jacks, miniature hand organs, blow horns, butterflies, mice, etc., were thoroughly appreciated by the men especially the "small boys" who played with the donkeys and spinning tops.

CHILDREN'S PARTY.

Cochato club of Braintree observed Washington's birthday by giving the children of its members a good time. At half past two a cantata was given by the children under the direction of Mrs. William F. Holgate. This was well done by the children and was pretty to look upon, the bright faces crowned with wreaths of flowers presenting a most attractive picture.

After the entertainment general dancing was enjoyed by the children and they were served with ice cream and cake to further add to their pleasure.

The affair was in charge of Mrs. William A. Norton who was assisted by Mrs. George W. Andrews, Mrs. George E. Williams and Mrs. Gordon M. Keating. There was a large attendance of parents and friends.

—"Every member gained by Methodist Episcopal church in 1910 represented an expenditure of $1,000 and a property investment of $7,000," declared Rev. Dr. E. Blake of Chicago, in an address before a convention of Methodist Episcopal Sunday schools of the Columbia River conference in Spokane, which was attended by delegates from all the northwestern states. "The Methodist Episcopal church is facing a serious situation," Dr. Blake added. "The net gain in members was only 41,337 in 1910, an increase of about 1.2 per cent. This convinces me that the old methods of evangelism are not producing results. We have never had more evangelists than at the present time and they have never accomplished so little as now. The weakness of modern evangelism in that it makes its main appeal to adults, when it is a matter of fact that 85 per cent of all conversions are under 18 years of age. The church must make its appeal to youth and the earlier this is made the better the result will be for the church."

MEN'S LEAGUES MEET HERE

Addresses by Rev. W. B. Barr and F. H. Lawton

The annual meeting of the Men's Leagues of the Boston Presbytery of United Presbyterian churches was held in the Fort Square church on the afternoon and evening of the holiday. Delegates were present from Lawrence, Lowell, Cambridge, Boston, Worcester, Whitinsville, Providence, Clinton, Brockton, Fall River, Saundersville and Chicopee, Mass., Providence, Central Falls, and Cranston, R. I.

Kenneth Carmichael of the entertaining league presided at both sessions. Rev. S. A. Jackson of Lowell read the scripture at the opening session. Rev. A. A. Thompson, pastor of the home church offered prayer. An address on Adult Bible class work was given by Mr. Henry Dinsmore of Providence, R. I. He pointed out the value of organization, and told much that was interesting and instructive of the work in Providence.

Rev. W. B. Barr gave a very interesting account of the work among the Italians in Providence. There is, as is well known, a large colony of Italians in that city, and the mission work of the churches among them is accomplishing great results. Mr. Barr was given a cordial welcome by his former parishioners, and he expressed his pleasure at being among them again.

Reports from the delegates showed all the leagues in a vigorous condition, greater both in size and efficiency than a year ago.

A banquet was served by the ladies of the church at 6 o'clock. After all the appetites and yiands had disappeared, the guests listened to after dinner addresses by the following: Rev. R. J. Davis, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church; Rev. James A. Matheson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. A. A. Mitchell of Providence; Rev. S. A. Jackson of Lowell; Rev. T. C. Atchison of Lawrence; and Rev. W. B. Barr of Central Falls.

The evening service was opened at 7.30 by a congregational hymn. After scripture reading and prayer by Rev. W. B. Barr and another Bible song, Carl Croson of Cambridge was introduced. His address was on the subject "Perspective in religion." Mr. Croson spoke very ably and forcibly urging a closer unity between the commercial world and the Christ spirit.

Fred H. Lawton of the Anti-Saloon League gave an excellent address on the work of the organization he represented. He spoke of the efficient work the league was doing for the country, and read an excerpt from an article in the North American Wine and Spirit Journal, showing the fear the liquor dealers have for the Anti-Saloon League. The Bar and Bottle bill was fathered by that organization, and the Miller-Curtis bill, also introduced through the instrumentality of the league will be the next to be passed. The idea which is being carried out is that of bending all the energies of the league to one measure each year. As Mr. Lawton expressed it, to keeping gnawing away at the rope which is tying the liquor lion to our country and being satisfied with parting one strand at a time. In concluding his address, the speaker told his audience that t hey had every reason to feel encouraged with the progress of prohibition, and urged each one to use what influence he had in support of the work of the league.

After the singing of an anthem by the choir, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. R. J. Davis, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church.

AFTERNOON WITH THE BLIND

Women's Club Entertained by Young Men and Little Tots

The second lecture in the series by the Arts and Crafts Committee of the Quincy Women's club on Tuesday was a delightful occasion, for the large audience present realized what Massachusetts is doing for the blind. Miss Lucy Wright of the State Commission was thespeaker and was very entertaining. She was accompanied by an orchestra of four pieces from the Perkins Institute for the Blind, and also six little blind children all under five years of age from the Boston nursery, a private charity for the blind.

Miss Wright told of the work being accomplished at the seven factories for the blind, and gave an exhibit of rugs, needle work, knitting, sewing, basketry, etc. The work also includes woodwork, cane seating of chairs, etc. The orchestra of young men was very accomplished and delighted all. The little blind children took a keen interest in everything. They wanted to examine the piano and musical instruments, to climb the stairs, etc., and were very talkative but always obedient. The children came in a limousine, and it seemed a pleasure to the chauffeur to carry the children in his arms to and from the car.

PATRIOTIC DANCE.

The Murray club, a young people's society connected with the Universalist church, held a largely attended dancing party Wednesday evening at Colonial hall. The hall was prettily decorated with the National emblem and the party was honored by the presence of George and Martha Washington. George and Martha, who were impersonated by Mr. and Mrs. Bertram G. Barnes, occupied a position of honor at one end of the hall. A large American flag served as a background for their throne. They received informally during the entire evening. Small American flags served as favors and the party savored of the patriotic spirit. Dancing was enjoyed until 11.30. Frappe was served during the entire evening.

WEST QUINCY SOCIAL.

The second in the series of "free will offering socials" under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Hall Place M. E. church was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Fuller, Hall place, Wednesday evening. The evening's entertainment was in charge of Miss May Williams and the program included: Singing, "Life of Washington" by Miss Hilda Francis; reading by Miss Sarah Fuller; piano selections by Mrs. F. W. Bent; and Reading by Miss Ada Williams. The social hour was also in charge of Miss Williams. Miss Cassie Thayer took first prize in writing the largest number of words from the word "Washington." A very pleasant time was spent in playing games and guessing contests. College ices and cake were served by the hostess.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Judging from the pictures in the papers those Mexican revolutionists have better press agents than tailors.

The old fashioned boy who hoped for red-topped boots now has a son who is an authority on silk socks.

Because of the private sales it is hard to keep track of the market price of votes.

Our candid opinion is that the ground hog belongs to the Overcoat Trust.

A political boss is always willing to save the voters the trouble of picking out a senatorial candidate.

Does Senator Root recall what the Force bill did to the Republican party twenty years ago. People are tired of fighting the war over.

The escort of police at the Gould wedding cost the city of New York over $800, but think of the advertising New York got out of it.

Political opponents in Paris, Ill., having agreed to refrain from buying votes, all that is needed is an agreement to keep the agreement.

For the next 30 years the Fore River Shipbuilding Company can secure an annual water supply of 150,000 thousand gallons, at a cost of one cent per 1,000 gallons, the total average cost being $1,500 per year or less. We congratulate the company on securing such an advantageous contract. It shows that the city does encourage its large industries. The same amount of water from Metropolitan supply bought at cost (what it costs the city of Quincy) would total $22,500.

Aside from the Water and Sewer departments and the maturing debt and interest, the total of the city estimates for 1911 to be raised inside the $12 debt limit is $429,404, divided as follows:

By Mayor,	$269,154
By School Committee	160,250
	$429,404

The 1910 appropriations and the increases for 1911 are shown below:

By Mayor	$251,264	$17,890
By Schools	153,474	6,776
	$404,738	$24,666

Mayor Shea reported in his Inaugural address that the maximum amount which could be raised by Taxation for current expenses in 1911 was $387,834, as against $375, 695 in 1910, an increase of but $12,139. Estimating the "receipts" the same in 1911 as in 1910, it looks as if the estimates of 1911 would have to be reduced over $12,000 to keep them within the limit.

THE NEW EMBASSIES.

The passage by Congress of the bill providing for purchase of embassies for our diplomats will bring to a close the sorrowful period of house hunting which has usually begun an ambassadorial residence abroad.

At a period when our representative would naturally be wrestling with laws and diplomatic customs, he usually has been engaged in a struggle to extract decent terms and comfortable apartments from the maw of rapacious foreign real estate dealers.

Our government's policy in dealing with ambassadors has been semibarbarous. Until recent years they were given only the title of ministers. Hence they were considered lower in precedence than many representatives of third rate powers. They had to cool their heels in ante rooms, while pompous ambassadors from Borrio-Boola-Gha were admitted to the awesome presence of the high and mighty.

Under the system of renting embassies, it has been a common saying among the cabmen, when asked the location of our government house, "It's on wheels, year before last it was on such a street, last year on another, and this year, I don't know."

It may seem to the embattled tax payer as if a diplomat on $17,500 salary, should be able to keep the butcher and grocer smiling, and live in a house as good as that of the average American.

But when you reflect that 300 people often attend week day receptions at some of the embassies, and 2000 an evening function, it becomes evident that an ambassador needs something better than an ordinary eight room mansion in Commuterville.

It is slightly galling to find other nations represented by buildings whose distinction suggests power and dignity, while our diplomats occupy dwellings that look like a boarding house.

The diplomats of countries of the same class often spend four times the salary of our ambassadors, having usually an allowance for entertaining. The result is that in appointing our diplomats, a candidate's bank account has been a preliminary qualification. The American people would like it fixed so that this consideration can be ignored.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

The passage of the Appalachian mountain bill, or the Weeks bill, as it is more commonly called, is a national triumph. Having twice recommended the conservation of White Mountain forests as well as those of New York and Pennsylvania, President Taft must be well pleased with the passage of the Weeks bill, and his approval of the bill with his official signature is not a matter of the slightest doubt. The struggle for the accomplishment of what has been done has continued for years. In the meantime the destruction of the forests has proceeded with all the energy possible on the part of those whose only thought was for the lumber that could be secured by the sacrifice of the trees. At last Congress has found voice to say, "Woodman, spare that tree," and the hand of the destroyer will be stayed.

Congressman Weeks will enjoy the triumph as much as anybody, for he has been active as the defender of his native forests and has been unsparing in his efforts to secure the conservation of the wooded slopes of the White hills, which are the most valued asset of New Hampshire.

Ex-Governor Guild will share in the pleasure that comes to the Forestry association, of which he is the president, and all who have contributed to the work of pushing the measure to a successful issue have now good cause for mutual congratulations.

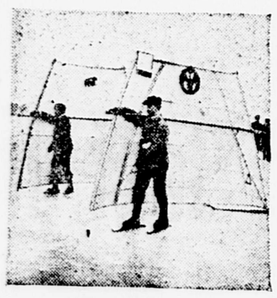

States in the West and Southwest have certain public reservations of which they are justly proud, and which the national government annually pays $5,000,000 for their maintenance. Congressmen from those States have fought the Weeks bill up to the last moment, mainly because the principal benefit would accrue to the eastern and Atlantic States, forgetting or unmindful of the advantages they enjoy by reason of the liberality of the national government. But at last the East has come to its own, and the States stand on a common footing in regard to the national reservations.—Lynn Item.

SAILING ON THE ICE.

Skaters Use Sails to Drive Them Along at Giddy Speed.

One of the sports that have recently become popular in northern states is that of ice sailing. On Great South bay, one of the finest places for skating around New York, scores of skaters propelled by sails have been seen this winter, and various clubs have had races that were thrilling.

Nerve is the principal requisite for sailing on the ice, though, of course, sharp skates and a sail are necessary. The sail is easily made, a few yards of stout cotton cloth and some poles and strong cord or small rope being all that is necessary.

SAILING ON SKATES.

In gliding over the ice the skater must exercise skill or be toppled over. Balance is maintained, of course, by leaning against the wind, and when the breeze is stiff it often looks as if the skater were about to fall backward, but the wind holds him up and maintains his balance.

The sail is manipulated exactly as the sail of a catboat, and better speed is made when going at an angle than when going directly with the wind. It is nothing unusual for experts to attain a speed of close to a mile a minute.

CIVIL WAR NARRATIVE.

We have come to the 50th anniversary of the most stirring events in American history, the great revolt of the south and the mighty uprising of the north in the war that overthrew slavery and kept the union whole. The Boston Globe will unfold for its readers the story of that tragic period day by day, so that they can follow its dramatic occurrences just as if they were living in the historic days of '61.

All the stirring scenes will be reproduced in a way that will vividly bring them back to the memories of the older people and indelibly impress them on the minds even of the children. There will be a story in the Boston Globe every day that will mark the semicentennial of some important action in the drama of the nation on the eve of the civil war.

Collected, the articles will form a simple, complete and accurate pictorial history of the successive steps that led up to the first shot in the great conflict. In a scrap book they will make a unique journal of the greatest conflict in American history.

The time to begin the series is now, as it is already running in the Boston Daily Globe.

LOWEST RATE IN STATE.

The Lynn municipal council gave a hearing this week upon the petition of George M. Nichols, who wants the council to ask the gas commissioners to order the Lynn Gas & Electric Company to reduce the price of gas in Lynn to 55 cents per 1000 cubic feet. The present price is 80 cents, but a month ago the company announced a voluntary reduction to 75 cents, to go into effect April 1. Mr. Nichols called attention to the company's report to the commissioner of corporations showing a net profit for the past year of $366,000 upon a capital stock of $1,000,000. He argued that the figures indicated a return of 36 per cent, on the original investment, which he maintained was excessive in a public service corporation with a monopoly.

Prince of Sarawak Weds

London, Feb. 23.—The Rajah Muda, or crown prince, of Sarawak, Charles V. Brooke, was married to Sylvia Brett, daughter of Lord and Lady Esher, at Cranbourne, Windsor Forest.

—In a murder trial in Salem the presiding justice informed the jurors that he proposed to allow such as were drawn to go to their homes every night, unless something was brought to his attention which would warrant a return to the old custom of keeping the jury together. If this innovation ever becomes general in this commonwealth, one very marked objection to serving in capital trials will be removed.

NOT GUILTY THE VERDICT

Even Though Mrs. Arethusa Had Married Nine Times

There was any amount of fun Tuesday evening at the mock trial at St. Mary's hall under the auspices of the St. Mary's C. T. A., and the large number in attendance were kept in a continuous roar of laughter. The prisoner at the bar was Charles J. Morrell, who went under the name of Mrs. Arethusa and she was charged with polyamy having admitted that she had been married nine times and in each case the spouse was a tailor.

Peter J. Farrell was the judge and Thomas F. O'Brien the clerk. Henry T. Pease was the attorney for the government and James E. Geary looked after the interests of the prisoner. The sheriff was Frank Mullen.

The witnesses were the defendants husbands. They were James Donovan, Peter Z. Morrissette, Thomas McLaughlin, Joseph Rooney, Alphonse Reinhalter, Bernard McGee, Joseph Morrissette, Charles E. Stanton and James McLaughlin.

The jury answered to the names of Asa Spades, Mr. Mutt, Mr. Jeff, Mr. Dingbat and others. As stated above, the defendant admitted that she had been married nine times. The jury in summing up the case and finding its verdict, said that since it is said that it takes nine tailors to make a man the defendant is not guilty of the crime with which she has been charged.

While the jury were out the sheriff and several of the witnesses gave some vocal selections. After the trial there was general dancing.

ST. GEORGE ANNIVERSARY.

Joseph Tinney was floor director, Stanley Collins assistant and Charles Vanner, Ernest Collins, Stephen Tinney and John Tite the aids. The several committees in charge of the evening were

A pedler who gave the name of Charles F. Bent of 115 Buttonwood street, Dorchester, and his two helpers, William J. Meade of 171 Tudor street of South Boston, and William W. Weld of 8 Mill street, Dorchester, were placed under arrest Tuesday afternoon by Special Officer McKay. Bent is charged with obtaining money by false pretences and the two helpers with peddling without a license.

Several complaints were received by the police during the day that three men were peddling eggs from house to house. They sold the eggs at 30 cents a dozen and claimed them to be fresh eggs, while it is alleged that the purchasers found them to be bad eggs. When arrested there were about ten dozen of the eggs left unsold. They were arraigned in court.

BASKET BALL VICTORY.

In one of the hardest fought games of the year, Quincy High defeated Newton High in the local gymnasium on the afternoon of the holiday by a score of 10 to 8. The defense of both teams was so good that the score was exceptionally small. The team work of the visitors was perhaps better than Quincy's, but Manning's men outplayed their opponents and if the game had been lost it would have been on fouls. The good work of the referee made the game especially satisfactory and no unneccessary roughness was noticeable. Every man on both teams played well, and it is difficult to select the stars. Harmon deserved special mention for holding Cady down to one basket and for getting one himself. Mil Chapman played a great defensive game, and Manning was everywhere at once. The excitement was at its height when with the score a tie at the end of the second half, it was suggested by the Newton coach that the game be continued until one side scored two points. The whistle had scarcely finished its trill when Manning had the ball and before the Newton men knew what had happened, he had shot clean and true and won the game.

Prout played a good game at centre, despite the fact that he was half sick. His two baskets were as pretty as one could desire and assisted very materially in the victory. H. Chapman played a strong game and did some timely blocking although he was unable to get a basket. If fortune had favored Quincy, and all the chances to shoot had been fruitful, she would have defeated her opponent by a wider margin. As it was she shot five baskets to Newton's two, and during the last half the play was under her basket most of the time.

Cady was the big man for Newton, but he was well watched by Quincy, and his opportunities to shoot came at rare intervals. Nash shot one basket in the second half, but during most of the game was on the defensive.

The Newton guards, Daiger and Whitney played well. The former was opposed by "Bill" Manning, and thus may be excused for letting the two baskets slip by him.

The holiday crowd which attended the game gave zest to the occasion and whenever Quincy scored a basket, the "gym" looked like a madhouse for a number of minutes. The Newton team was well supported also, and the spirit of the rooters was noteworthy.

The summary:

THE SECOND TEAM

The second team had less difficulty in defeating their opponents than the first team. The final score was 17 to 7 in favor of the home team. Findley playing only in the first half scored 10 points for Quincy and practically won the game although in the second period the visitors only scored 4 points to Quincy's three. Tirrell got two baskets, one in each half and "Les" Chapman shot one in the first half. The defensive work of the backs, Sutermeister and Johnson was of great assistance to Quincy in winning the game. Sam Prout went in at the beginning of the second half but he was too light to get much of a chance at shooting.

Blue played a good game at back for Newton, and Hyatt, Wanska and Tucker did some good work.

The summary:

WOODWARD INSTITUTE.

The Junior-Senior masquerade party of Woodward Institute was held in the music room of the school Tuesday evening. About 75 members of the two classes and members of the faculty were present to enjoy the frivolities which the evening had to offer.

As the guests entered the rooms they were conducted to the further end of the room where they were introduced to Folly, impersonated by Helen Croucher. The grand march was next and then dancing was started. At the end of the second dance, all were asked to unmask and there were many looks of astonishment when it was found out Who was Who. In place of the fourth dance a sailors hornpipe was executed by Miss Frazier.

This was followed by a play "Dane's Dress-suitcase" given by the entertainment committee, Mary Beal, Helen Croucher and Esther Dasha. Mr. Dane a nephew of Dr. Norman the superintendent of an insane asylum is in the doctor's sitting room with his wife when Thomas Scott, an agent enters to sell a suitcase. Believing that Mr. and Mrs. Dane are lunatics, the agent attempts to humor them by acting like a lunatic and he in turn is taken for an escaped lunatic because of his actions. The situation was extremely humorous and the parts were taken admirably. Everything is finally cleared when the agent finds that the young man and his wife are sane and harmless but newly-wed and when his sanity is proved he urges the audience to purchase a suitcase. The cast was:

Mr. Dane	Mary Beal
Mrs. Dane	Helen Croucher

Tromas Scott, an agent Esther Dasha

Scene—Dr. Norman's sitting room.

After the play there was more dancing and then refreshments consisting of ice cream, cake and candy were served by Junior girls. The refreshmen committee was: Irene Williams, Harriet Waterhouse and Grace Hunter.

The evening's pleasure was concluded by a moonlight waltz. The room was very artistically decorated in red, white and blue and the scene was indeed a pretty one when all the quaint and weird and funny-costumed girls were flashing about the floor under the light of the benignant moon.

The Junior class president, Esther Beckford had general charge of the party. She was assisted by the committees which have been named above Music for dancing was furnished by Edith Ames '13 and Dagmar Nelson '14. Among the most conspicuous personages were: George and Martha Washington impersonated by Silbyl Marsh and Esther Dasha, "Buster Brown," Mariam Miller, 'Red Riding Hood," Esther Beckford, Bride and Groom Isadora and Mary Beal, Dutch girls, Miss Towne and Miss Dinegan, Indian Maiden Margaret Knight, Gypsy girl Miss Steele, Gypsy dancer, Doris Cummings.

Many other costumes were worthy of special mention, clowns and sailors, football players and so on but space, not inclination is lacking to tell the names of those who wore them. The mere telling of the success of the party is as inadequate as it is unnecessary.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Anson F. Bicknell of Hingham, the most widely known Grand Army man in New England, died suddenly the holiday afternoon at the Hingham depot. Mr. Bicknell with his wife and two daughters had attended the Bicknell family reunion at the Essex house Boston, and he was on the way home. He complained of feeling ill on the train, and died after reaching the Hingham station. Mr. Bicknell was formerly in the bakery business, but was suddenly stricken blind a number of years ago. Although blind there were few more cheerful men than he, and he was always to be found at gatherings of Grand Army. He was quite a musician and was a general favorite. He served during the war in Co. B, of the 43d Massachusetts Inf., and in Co. G, of the 4th Massachusetts H. A. He was a member of Reynolds Post, 58, G. A. R., of Weymouth, and Old Colony lodge of Masons of Hingham. He was 64 years of age and leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Joshua Q. Litchfield formerly of Wollaston and Miss Olive Viola Bicknell, a teacher in the Quincy schools.

OLD COLONY ASSOCIATION.

The quarterly conference of the Old Colony Association of Universalists was held on Tuesday in Braintree at All Souls' church. There were about 125 ladies and gentlemen present from the Weymouths, Hingham, Norwell, Abington, Plymouth, New Bedford, Brockton, Braintree and Quincy. At 10.30 A. M. there was a devotional service followed by a welcome from Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman, pastor of All Souls' church. Dr. Charles Conklin, D.D., of Boston, gave an address on "The value of church membership." Arthur Warren Smith, secretary of deputations, World in Boston, with office at 4 Ashburton place, gave an address on "World in Boston."

Luncheon was served at 12.15 by a large number of the women of the church. About an hour was enjoyed as a recess during which time the guests inspected the Cochato club building. At 1.30 a business meeting was held the president, Rev. O. Howard Perkins of Brockton in the chair. Reports of secretary and treasurer were read and accepted. It was voted that a vote of thanks be given All Souls' church for its hospitality.

Two addresses were given in the afternoon; Rev. Nancy W. P. Smith of Beverly, a member of the state board of Women's Missionaries, spoke on "Missionary Work and Social Service," and Mrs. E. M. Barney of Medford on "Sunday School Work."

Three invitations were extended the association and accepted as follows: April meeting at Brockton, June meeting at New Bedford, October meeting at Hingham. Rev. O. Howard Perkins is planning to make the April meeting the most interesting and largest of the series.

BRIEFS

An old folks dance that was largely attended was held in Wollaston hall on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. A. G. Fletcher holds a whist party at her home on Garfield street tomorrow afternoon.

Three of the Quincy built warships were gaily dressed with flags at the Boston navy yard on the holiday—the battleship New Jersey, the cruiser Des Moines and the destroyer Perkins.

Quincy members of the South Shore commandery, Knights Templar, with ladies attended the annual holiday reception, banquet, entertainment and dance at the asylum at East Weymouth.

Among the 250 members of the Knights of Columbus upon whom the fourth degree was conferred on the holiday in Faneuil Hall were Edward D. Barrett and J. W. Lynch of Quincy council.

Members of the Quincy Point Billiken Whist club celebrated the eve of George Washington's birthday by having dinner at the United States hotel, Boston. The dinner was up to its usual standard of excellence. In the evening the party went to the Tremont theatre and saw the "Follies of 1910."

Cochato club of Braintree is to have a fine entertainment tomorrow night in its series of entertainments. Elizabeth Pooler Rice is to give a reading of the play "Miss Hobbs" assisted by Helen Allen Hunt, soloist. Mrs. C. Frank White has charge of the evening's program.

The Wollaston Young People's Social society held its monthly meeting in the Unitarian vestry on Tuesday evening. Members came wearing emblems that denoted the names of various books. Many of these were decidedly clever and some were exceedingly puzzling. A prize was awarded the contestant guessing the largest number. Races and other contests were enjoyed, the club adjourning with a game of Winkum and refreshments. The evening was in charge of Miss Grace Bishop and Miss Estelle Rice.

KAISER WILHELM'S FRIEND.

Favorite of the German Emperor Annoys Restaurant Throng.

Prince Egon zu Fuerstenberg, the richest man in Germany, has several claims to distinction besides his wealth. In the first place, he is a favorite with Emperor William, which fact enables him to do about as he pleases, and, in the next place, he has a habit of shocking people by conduct that would not be tolerated in a less august personage.

A party of Americans was recently dining in a fashionable restaurant in Berlin. The orchestra was playing selections from "The Merry Widow" and suddenly some one began whistling the air very loudly and very shrilly. The Americans scowled at the whistler, but the Germans recognized him, smiled and said nothing.

Finally the Americans called the manager of the restaurant and asked: "Who is that boor? Why don't you throw him out?"

The excited manager whispered hurriedly:

"Hush! That is the emperor's friend, Prince Fuerstenberg."

The Americans stared at the prince in amazement, and then, quite unabashed, one exclaimed:

"Heavens! Can't the emperor teach his friends manners?"

Some Germans who knew the prince explained to the Americans afterward that it is his habit to try to shock people by a display of what in less mighty personages would be regarded as bad manners.

According to Berlin gossip, the emperor rather enjoys these unconventional exhibitions and incites Fuerstenberg to fresh breaches of decorum.

Chicago Has Hot Mayoralty Fight Started

CHICAGO is having a lively time in electing a mayor this spring, and unusual interest is being shown in the campaign. This is due to the fact that the city is preparing to construct a subway system to cost more than $50,000,000 and is also considering plans of beautifying the city that will ultimately cost several times that sum.

This means that the next mayor of Chicago is to have unusual opportunities for being of value to his city, and it also means that he will have opportunities of being of much value to himself and his friends. Citizens who are deeply concerned about the future of the municipality are anxious that no mistake should be made in choosing the city executive.

CARTER H. HARRISON.

While there were half a dozen candidates for the Republican nomination in the field early, only three Democrats announced their candidacy. Two of these were men who had formerly held the office that they again sought.

Carter H. Harrison, who has been four times Chicago's mayor, said he was willing to take the job again. He based his claim on his previous record and pointed out that he had fought the city's battle against the Yerkes street railway combine and was thus the father of municipal ownership.

Edward F. Dunne, who succeeded Harrison as mayor, also based his claim to consideration on the fact that he had been a consistent advocate of immediate municipal ownership of public utilities. He was elected before on that platform.

Andrew J. Graham, a banker, entered the race with the backing of Roger C. Sullivan, Democratic national committeeman from Illinois. He did not have a record as an officeholder, but his business reputation was excellent.

NEGLECT.

A little neglect may breed mischief. For want of a nail the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe the horse was lost; for want of a horse the rider was lost.—Benjamin Franklin.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE young man who hasn't the price of a theater ticket should take the girl to the revival. It might make a hit with mother.

A girl may think she is pretty, but for a real verdict you have to ask the other girls.

No matter how much one woman may hate another, she will still borrow her latest sleeve pattern.

Every woman thinks she bakes good bread, and every man knows his watch keeps good time.

The thing a woman can forgive is having her intimate friend let it be known that her best evening frock was made from the rag bag.

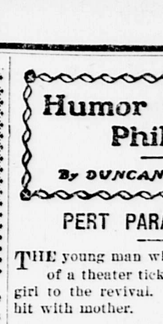

All men have some vanity, but some appear to have nothing else.

The worst thing about being dependent on another man for a job is you have to say you never heard it before when he feels facetious.

A man doesn't mind so much that dinner is late if it is he that makes it late.

Quite Accommodating.

"Got a match, Bill?" said the man who presumed on short acquaintance.

"Sure thing," replied the new friend.

"Now, have you a cigar to go with it?"

"You bet I have! And to anticipate your next request," said the new friend, biting off the end carefully and leisurely striking the match on his trousers, "I will gladly smoke it for you. Is there anything else I can do to make you happy?"

Restitution.

We ease our conscience in a way
That makes a mule haw-haw,
For if we steal a load of hay
We give away a straw.
On charity we spend a dime
For every hundred dollar crime
And throw a beggar man a crust
Because we've organized a trust.

We think full measure to repay
By tossing in the plate
Some sliver that was in the way
And cumbersome as freight.
When we have grafted left and right
We buy a hungry man a bite
Or in his hand a nickel force
When we have sold a balky horse.

Making Progress.

"Do you try to keep up with the latest fiction?"

"Oh, yes; right up to date. I read 'Robinson Crusoe' last summer."

"Fine. Keep right on. You will get around to 'Ten Nights in a Barroom' next."

Proved It.

"Called to see young Brown yesterday."

"Where does he live?"

"On the fourteenth floor of an apartment building."

"He always said that he was bound to get up in the world."

No Dead Hero.

"He called me a liar."

"Did you lick him?"

"No."

"Then you are no gentleman."

"You will observe I am not a corpse either."

Valued.

"He is a good friend."

"Is he?"

"You bet."

"How good?"

"Oh, say for about a tenner."

Nobody can deny that postage stamp collecting is a great help in teaching children geography. Jack showed this at school, when the teacher asked him where Nicaragua was, and what it produced chiefly.

"It's on page 98," said Jack, "and it produces more sets of stamps than any other country of its size in the world."

Mrs. Lydia C. Hultman entertained informally at whist on the evening of the holiday at her home on Washington street.

Roy C. Baker of Everett street was granted patents on February 14 for several improvements on vacuum cleaning apparatus.

Several Quincy people were among the 4383 persons who attended the State House reception given by Gov. and Mrs. Foss on the holiday.

Quincy members of the Ancients were present on the holiday at the annual dinner and reception of the command at the American house, Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Guy and party of Butler road have returned from an extended tour of the West Indies, Panama and South American countries.

The seventh and eighth grades at the Coddington school enjoyed a glorious sleighride Tuesday afternoon, going to Mattapan and returning by way of Milton Lower Mills.

There were several sleigh parties in City Square from out of town on the evening of the holiday stopping long enough for some of the party to purchase candy etc. for the ladies.

Walter Hunter of Wendell avenue, who has been on the cruise around the world with the battleships but, was detained in the Philippines by sickness, is expected home the latter part of this week.

The funeral of G. Walter Flint was held Tuesday afternoon from his late home on Hancock street and was largely attended by his friends and neighbors. The services were brief and extremely simple in accordance with the wish of the family. Rev. Charles B. Ames read the scriptures and Rev. Ellery Channing Butler made the prayer. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. There were many flowers.

Some people happened to be born on the same day of the month as was President George Washington. One of these was Charles H. Penniman who entertained a few friends informally on the evening of the holiday at his home on Revere road. Bridge occupied the attention of the guests for a few hours, after which a birthday supper was served which included the cutting of a birthday cake upon the top of which appeared the figures which birthday told which birthday Mr. Penniman was passing.

The officials of the state house who were delegated to tabulate the number of visitors at the reception reported to the newspaper men, when the reception ended, that 4383 persons had taken advantage of the opportunity to shake the hand of the governor.

The number received by Governor and Mrs. Draper last year was 4671. The record breaking year was in 1909, when Governor and Mrs. Draper shook hands with 5557 persons.

FINE RUNNING STUNT

Newspaper Employe First In a Ten-Mile Foot Race

Boston, Feb. 23.—Henry L. McCormick, an employe of the press room of The American, won the annual ten-mile cross-country run of the Armory A. A. after an exciting finish, in which he nosed out his nearest competitor for the honor by a scant five yards at the finish. McCormick covered th distance in 57 minutes 5 seconds, a fine mark, considering the condition of the streets.

McCormick was apparently in good condition at the tape. His feat was all the more remarkable from the fact that he entered the event after twelve hours of work, without a bit of rest and scarcely time for refreshments.

CALLING FOR VETO REFORM

House of Lords Will Yield to Verdict of Recent Election

A SURRENDER BY LANSDOWNE

Leader of Tories to Introduce Resolution Modifying Power of Peers—Tide of Popular Reform Setting In Not Only For Irish, but For British People as Well—Asquith's Bill Will Make Great Changes

London, Feb. 23.—Lord Lansdowne, in his capacity as leader of the house of lords, has given sign that he at least of his party is reading the "handwriting on the wall." It was indeed a remarkable event in the history of British Tory leadership when the most pronounced among them, as Lansdowne is, gave notice of his intention to introduce at an early date a resolution "modifying the powers of the chamber."

The Lansdowne resolution is not expected by the Liberal leaders to be a full concession of the government's demands. Naturally Lansdowne will try to drive as hard a bargain as he can and save as much as possible for his rapidly passing order out of the wreck of their privilege that is sure to come.

But the hour has struck for the house of lords. The whole mass of public opinion throughout the British empire is now either openly antagonistic to the hereditary chamber with its unbridled veto or else is reconciled to the rising of the tide that is certain to sweep it from its throne of arrogance.

The anti-house of lords majority in the house of commons is made up of three elements which are utterly immovable on the issue against the lords. Neither the Asquith Liberals, the Irish Nationalists, nor the English, Scotch and Welsh Laborites will back down one foot from their position of hostility to the lords veto, as it now stands.

Premier Asquith's bill says in a sentence that hereafter any measure introduced in and passed by the house of commons can only be rejected twice in the same parliament by the house of lords.

The thid time it goes straight to the king for his signature if the lords are still obdurate. This, it can be seen at a glance, places a Liberal prime minister in complete control of the legislation of parliament.

It also makes certain home rule for Ireland, the disestablishment of the Episcopal church in Wales, the abolition of plural voting on the part of proyerty owners, and without a doubt before five years have passed, home rule for England, Scotland and Wales. In fact, if the Asquith bill, now before the commons, becomes enacted into law, and its rejection is highly improbable, the tide of popular reform, not only for the Irish, but for the British people as well, will be rapidly accelerated in its flow.

The fact is, and Tory statesmen see it as clearly as their Liberal opponents, that the times have leaped wonderfully ahead in the sentiment of the British people toward democracy and popular rights.

The chief strength of the house of lords in this fight lies in its powerful support from the Tory press. But despite the fact that those powerful journals, the Times, Standard, Telegraph, Pall Mall Gazette and a dozen influential magazines, to say nothing of a perfect flood of weekly journals, were all on the side of the Tories and the house of lords, the electorate gave their vote for the Liberals.

Lord Lansdowne's resolution is nothing more or less than a "surrender. Two years ago he would have laughed to scorn the very mention of such a move on the part of any of his colleagues in the peerage, but two years have worked a mighty change, and what was revolutionary then with the leader of the upper house is today pure politics of the most practical and domestic kind.

PROTEST FROM FIREMEN

Spartanburg, S. C., Feb. 23.—Because the chief of the fire department bathes his bull pups in the tub set apart by the city for the firemen, a spirit of discontent exists in the local fire department.

FLOWERS AND FRIENDS

Barred From His Bier by Man Who Never Sought Publicity

Williamsburg, N. Y., Feb. 23.—This was the letter left by David Nichols, who died at his home in this city:

"I want no flowers at my funeral. I want no obituary notice in the newspapers, nor do I want anyone outside of my immediate family and the few I have named here to know anything of my death. I have lived simply and apart from the world, never seeking publicity or notoriety, and it is my desire that my death should pass in the same manner, unnoticed, as I have been."

Nichols was 81 years old. While he lived here for many years, he scarcely ventured far from home after retiring from the wood engraving business.

DEATH OF MRS. HARPER

Worked For Anti-Slavery Cause by Writing and Lecturing

Philadelphia, Feb. 23.—Mrs. Frances E. W. Harper, one of the most widely known anti-slavery workers in this country, and a woman who has probably done more for her race by writing and lecturing than any of her sex, died at her home here, aged 86.

Born in Baltimore in 1825, Mrs. Harper attended a school for negro children until she was 14, at which time she entered domestic service. She then took up dressmaking and eventually beame a teacher in York, Pa. In 1854 she was called to the lecture platform by the Maine and Vermont Anti-Slavery society.

In 1860 Mrs. Harper gave up her work on the lecture platform and made her home with a daughter in Philadelphia.

HUSBAND OF ONE DAY IS ARRESTED

Bride's Father Says She Is But Thirteen Years Old

Charlton, Mass., Feb. 23.—A bridegroom of less than twenty-four hours, William A. Gilbert, who was married to Miss Agnes Laurence, was arrested on the charge of attacking the bride.

The complaint was made by Alexis Laurence, the bride's father, who claimed that the girl is but 13 years old. When Gilbert secured the license to marry from the town clerk he gave the age of the girl as 18 and his own age as 21. They were married almost immediately by Rev. Richard Scoles at the Congregational parsonage.

It is said that the bride's father came on from Jacksonville, Fla., to cause the arrest.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Quincy People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Quincy.

P. J. Garrity, 367 Granite St., Quincy, Mass., says: "Some time ago I suffered so severely from kidney disease that I could hardly get about. I was restless at night and could not find any position that was comfortable. The kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained a heavy sediment. I was rapidly growing worse and was at a loss to know what to do, as the many remedies I tried failed to help me. Finally Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I procured a supply at the Cox Drug Store. After I had taken the contents of four boxes, I was in good health. I highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to other kidney sufferers."

SPEECH OF FOUR HOURS' LENGTH

Lorimer Makes Defense In Person In the Senate

MOVES AUDITORS TO TEARS

Tells of His Life's Struggle and Declares That No Democrat Ever Voted For Him Except From "Pure and Unadulterated Friendship"—Impression That He Will Retain Seat If Matter Comes to a Vote

Washington, Feb. 23.—With almost every fellow senator in his seat and a great many members of the house of representatives on the senate floor and the galleries densely packed, Senator Lorimer of Illinois made a speech of four hours' length in defense against the charge that his election to the United States senate was accomplished by the bribery and corruption of the legislature of the state of Illinois.

Mr. Lorimer's speech was distinctly a "human interest story" filled with homely relation of incidents that kept up the interest of his hearers. More than once there were evidences that the speech was moving some of the auditors to tears.

The names of many Democrats were mentioned as among those who had voted for him because of personal friendship; among them was Senator Broderick.

The senator then related some incidents to account for his Democratic friendships. Most dramatic was Lorimer's recital of his first acquaintance with "Hinky Dink" Kenna, who, when Lorimer was a bootblack and newsboy, compelled to earn his living on the streets, came to his rescue and saved him from the loss of a bundle of Chicago Tribunes. It meant a loss of $1.50 to him, the speaker said, and "that dollar and a half meant more to me than a million dollars would mean to some men now.

"If this senate," continued Lorimer, with a sweep of his arm taking in the whole room, "can believe me to be the low, vile creature that the senator from New York (Mr. Root) and the senator from South Dakota (Mr. Crawford) and other senators who have attacked me"—he looked straight at Senator Beveridge just across the aisle—"there is a plain duty staring you in the face, regardless of the testimony, regardless of this record.

"If I could be the foul wretch that these senators have sought to paint me, I should be driven from yonder door, branded with the stamp of infamy. I am not pleading for sympathy; I am trying to relate the truth of my election as it was and not as the senators from New York and South Dakota would have this senate believe."

Thirty-four Democrats, Lorimer said, voted for him because they were his personal friends and not because they were "delivered" by Lee O'Neill Browne.

After saying that his first vote was cast for James G. Blaine for president, Lorimer said he had been getting Democratic votes ever since. He then lived, he said, in a Democratic precinct and he went to work to organize his party in that section of the city. Many Democrats were brought into the organization so that with a year the ward became Republican.

But for the organization of that section the city of Chicago would have been as strongly Democratic during the past twenty years as the city of New York has been, he declared.

"It wasn't very long until the leaders of the party looked to our territory, and as a consequence I was made the Republican leader in that Democratic section," he continued. "In that territory 90 percent of the Democrats will tell you that they would rather have Lorimer in congress or anywhere than any member of the Democratic party."

Mr. Lorimer asserted that no Democrat ever voted for him except from "pure and unadulterated friendship," and he received in his district 3500 more votes than President Taft.

During his speech Lorimer occupied the floor and reviewed practically all the charges which have been made against himself. He said that he made an effort to induce Governor Deneen to become a candidate to break the senatorial deadlock, and, in effect, he said that if Deneen had been so inclined he could have elected Hopkins by throwing his vote to him.

What effect, if any, the speech will have upon the vote in the senate, it is, of course, impossible to say. The general impression about the capital is that Lorimer and his friends have, safely pledged the votes with which to defeat the resolution which would declare his seat vacant, and that if the matter comes to a vote the result will be a Lorimer victory.

Allen's Body Taken to Maine

Washington, Feb. 23.—The body of Representative Amos L. Allen of Maine was taken to Alfred, Me., on a special train. The body was accompanied by committees from the house and senate.

STRIKE OF TAXI DRIVERS

May Be Extended So as to Include Horse Vehicles In Boston

Boston, Feb. 23.—Unless some agreement is made between the striking chauffeurs of the Boston Taxi Service company and the officials of that company at a meeting which is to be held today, there is every prospect of a widespread strike which may quickly tie up every taxicab and public horse vehicle owned by taxicab companies in the city.

The striking chauffeurs form nearly 80 percent of the operators of public vehicles, and the big hotels and the South station were left wholly without service yesterday.

The only relief offered was by independent cabmen, and every livery stable that could dig up anything resembling a carriage sent it out, and they made some money.

HUB BEANS AND PORK CURE WHITE PLAGUE

Declared to Be More Effective Than Cod Liver Oil

Rutland, Mass., Feb. 23.—Boston baked beans and pork will be made a regular daily article of diet at the state sanatorium here for consumptives, beginning today. They will be given a two weeks' trial on the mess to determine if they possess special properties tending to cure tuberculosis, alleged to have been newly discovered.

A report by Sir Hiram Maxim, an English authority on consumption, that experiments have proved baked beans and pork especially good for the disease has been read with great interest by Superintendent Bartlett of the state hospital.

An announcement of the report cabled to this country reads: "Sir Hiram Maxim, in a letter to The Daily Express, extols the health-giving properties of American pork and beans, and protests against the concoction canned in Germany and masquerading as the real thing. He calls 'Boston's pride' the finest in the world and says it is more effective than cod liver oil as a cure for consumption."

RECIPROCITY WILL WIN

Treaty Will Be Ratified Before March 4, According to Carter

Washington, Feb. 23.—Opponents in the senate of Canadian reciprocity have given up hope of defeating the Taft trade pact. This was admitted by Senator Carter of Montana, who is against reciprocity, after he had a conference with the president at the White House. Carter said the treaty would be ratified before congress adjourned on March 4.

Representative McCall of Massachusetts, who championed the treaty at the request of the president, also had a conference with Mr. Taft on the reciprocity situation. He was smiling when he left the White House.

HARBIN IS PLAGUE CENTER

All Manchurian Ports Closed by Chinese Customs as "Infested"

Tientsin, China, Feb. 23.—The pneumonic plague is raging in Manchuria. The sporadic cases are increasing in Chihli and Shantung provinces. In Harbin there are fully 3000 cases and they are increasing at the rate of 100 a day; Mukden, 180 cases and increasing 20 a day.

All ports of Manchuria are classed by the Chinese customs as "infested," including Dalny.

The only deaths of foreigners reported are at Harbin, where there have been fifteen, with others expected to die.

So far every case has been a death. Except in Manchuria there have been no cases among foreigners.

WANTS PENNY POSTAGE

Congressman Thinks It Amply Sufficient For All City Letters

Washington, Feb. 23.—Penny postage for all local or city delivery letters is proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Griest of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Griest figured out that the official statistics show that the government now has a profit exceeding 1½ cents on each local delivery letter; that with 1 cent postage it would continue to have about ¾ of a cent profit, and that every reduction of letter postage has resulted in increased volume of mail and enlarged postal revenues.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED. by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

DOCUMENT IS CONFIDENTIAL

Japanese Treaty Ready to Be Submitted to Senate

TS ULTIMATE FATE IN DOUBT

Absence of Clause Restricting Immigration Expected to Lead to Protracted Discussion—Present "Gentlemen's Agreement" of 1908 Is Undisturbed—Opportunity Is Given Japan to "Save Her Face"

Washington, Feb. 23.—The senate foreign affairs committee yesterday considered the new Japanese treaty in secret session, and Senator Lodge was authorized to report it favorably to the senate. Nothing concerning the deliberations of the committee on the treaty was given out and as yet its provisions are closely guarded.

Pacific coast senators intend to use every effort to defeat it because of the absence of any clause restricting Japanese immigration on the Pacific coast.

The understanding is that this all important question is left to the national honor of the Japanese government, which is expected to enforce at her home ports the limitations now enforced under the Root-Aoki agreement in the matter of her subjects who seek entrance to the United States.

In addition to this it is said that coincidental with the signing of the treaty the diplomatic representatives of the United States and Japan will sign a joint note in which it will be expressly stipulated that the right is reserved to the United States to adopt such laws and regulations touching upon the question of immigration as seem necessary to her legislative authorities.

It is the expectation here that the treaty will be the subject of protracted discussions in the senate, and whatever its ultimate fate it is beyond question that it can be ratified at the present session of congress.

Pending ratification, the treaty is submitted to the senate as a confidential document, wherefore it is impossible to secure its exact text. It can be said, however, that the note which will be exchanged by the representatives of the two governments will set forth, in addition to a recognition of the rights of the United States to legislate as it desires on the question of immigration, a declaration of the intention of the two governments to enforce the present status of the immigration question.

Under this arrangement, which followed the completion of the Root-Takahira "gentlemen's agreement" of 1908, the Japanese government promised to discourage in every way the immigration of its subjects to the United States and to induce as many of them as possible to return to Japan.

It is the claim of the state department that through the operation of this agreement the Japanese population on the Pacific coast has been greatly reduced. The Root-Takahira agreement, which served also to define the peaceful purposes of both Japan and the United States in the Pacific, is not disturbed by the new treaty.

A state department official says that all of the rights of the United States have been safeguarded in the new treaty and no principle abandoned. Even though the treaty omits the reference to immigration that was embodied in the old treaty of 1894, which the former is to supplant, it was explained, the interests of the United States are amply protected by the notes which will be exchanged on the ratification of the new covenant.

It was to enable Japan to preserve her dignity—to "save her face," in other words, that the immigration clause was omitted from the new treaty.

The new treaty, which has been in course of negotiation for some time, has been formulated a year ahead of time. The present treaty went into effect one year after Japan's other treaties, which she made in 1894 and all of which expire in July of the present year.

REMAINS IN THE ARMY

Kaiser Says Soldier's Attempt at Suicide Is His Own Affair

Berlin, Feb. 23.—The finding of the military tribunal condemning Count Hans Pfeil to dismissal from the army for attempting to commit suicide recently has been set aside by the kaiser.

In his memorandum in the case he says that the count, in attempting to kill himself, is responsible only to God and his own conscience. His act is not the subject for any tribunal to pass on, and consequently the kaiser orders the setting aside of the judgment.

Two Engines Derailed

PIERCE CALLED A TRAITOR

Hisses In Legislature Over Memorial to Ex-President

Concord, N. H., Feb. 23.—Hisses were mingled with applause in the house of representatives as Franklin Pierce, the only son of New Hampshire who ever became President of the United States, was denounced as "a traitor to his country."

The bitterness of a controversy which has divided the state for more than half a century was revived as a result of the report of the committee on public improvements upon a bill to appropriate $25,000 for the erection of a statue to Pierce in the state house grounds. The majority report favored it.

After a spirited debate the house adopted the minority report by a vote of 144 to 129, and the bill was sent to the committee on appropriations.

ONE SOLDIER SLAIN

Result of a "Battle" Between Riotous Troops of Haytien Army

Cape Haytien, Hayti, Feb. 23.—One soldier is dead and several others are fatally injured, as the result of a battle between the riotous troops of the government's army.

Having routed or massacred all of the rebels, the troops, maddened by blood lust, fell upon each other with swords and bayonets and battled through the streets.

SUNNY MONDAY

Soap is cheaper than clothes and it pays, therefore, to get the best soap, even for laundry purposes. The best laundry soap made is a white soap called "Sunny Monday," which contains no rosin and is kind to clothes. One bar of Sunny Monday will go as far as two bars of ordinary yellow laundry soap which contains rosin; its use, therefore, means economy.

Sirolin (Pronounced Sir-o-lin): The celebrated Swiss remedy for coughs and colds.
QUINCY, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1911

This Diagram Tells a Story

These squares with the black crosses in them show, by their respective sizes, what proportion of the annual mortality in the United States is the result of diseases of the lungs, compared to the number of victims caused by other ailments.

More people die annually of lung troubles—and this means consumption, influenza, pneumonia and bronchitis—than the combined total of deaths from all diseases of the stomach and intestines, heart disease, kidney disease—with typhoid fever thrown in.

Mortality statistics show that one person in every four dies of a lung disease, and in the United States this rolls up a total of 300,000 deaths a year

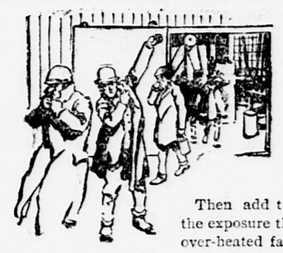

Think of this army of victims, with the half a million or more besides who are constantly incapacitated; and you can realize vividly that consumption and its allied diseases constitute the greatest plague in all history.

It is the plain duty of all of us to strengthen the resisting powers of our respiratory organs so they may throw off these diseases.

This can be done by using SIROLIN and following the rules of hygiene—which are simply fresh air, good food and exercise.

You will be practically immune from consumption and other pulmonary diseases if this course is followed.

Sirolin contains no morphine, codeine, habit-forming or constipating drug

Do You Work In a Hot, Badly Ventilated Shop?

Lots of men and women do. They have to. But they should know that stuffy workrooms, where foul air is breathed, are the fertile breeding grounds of the consumption germs.

Then add to this danger the risk resulting from the exposure that takes place when you go from the over-heated factory into the wintry wind and sleet, and it is easy to understand why the consumption death rate among men employed in shops and factories is 18.8 per cent. of all mortality against 9.5 per cent. among men in out-door occupations.

Protect yourself by using Sirolin. It increases the vitality; makes the lungs hardy and disease-resisting; and keeps the system in tone.

Siroiin speedily cures coughs, colds and grippe. It is a clear, syrup-like liquid, pleasant to the taste.

Your druggist has it. Stop to-day on the way home and get a bottle.

Harry Soloriff alais Solou was arrsted Wednesday for assault on Mrs. Samuel Goldberg of Sumner street. The alleged assault grew out of a trouble with children. She then procured a knife and was trying to pry open the window of the Soloriff house when Soloriff saw her at work on the window from a neighbor's and rushed home. A quarrel of words immediately followed, during which Mrs. Goldberg claims Soloriff knocked her down. It is claimed that while down, Soloriff in trying to get the knife from the woman, it was drawn through her hand making a bad cut. The case was heard in the district court this morning.

—President J. D. Moffat of Washington and Jefferson college at Washington, Pa., announces, on behalf of the trustees, that they decline to receive a bequest of $40,000 because if they should do so the income from the estate would not be sufficient for the needs of the widow and six children. The Journal of Education is moved by the incident to say that "there would be many more bequests if there were more men like President Moffat." There is humanity and righteousness in the stand taken.—Milford Gazette.

HOUGHS NECK SCORED

Mayor Shea Says They Are Not Keeping Promise

The annual ladies' night of the Houghs Neck Associates was held on the evening of the holiday and was one of the most happy occasions of the many held by the Associates. The hall of the Associates was the scene of the gathering, and flags and bunting tastefully festooned transformed the bare walls into a scene of beauty. Around the hall there were also hung many appropriate mottoes.

The guest of the evening was Mayor Shea. It is not so much the attractiveness of the beach at this season that calls him there so frequently, but according to dame rumor the propects of the bachelor tax is worrying him, and he is seeking relief from this tax through Houghs Neck.

In his speech the Mayor told of the many ways the city had for the money it could appropriate, and then drifting to the school house proposition took the residents to task for not fulfiling the agreement. When the question was being agitated before the City Council the Mayor said the claim was made that the building would be quickly filled with children. The returns by the School Committee, however, showed that there were many vacant seats in the building, and he did not think the residents were doing their duty.

Mr. McMeeken, in reply, said he had done his part toward filling the building, as he had recently become a happy father. He had no doubt that if given time the building would be filled.

Capt. Fosdick spoke briefly on what the Associates had accomplished.

President James Wall outlined the policy of the Associates an dspoke of the effect the bachelor tax law would have on the Mayor if passed, and urged him to open his eyes and look about.

City Messenger Tirrell made one of his accustomary speeches which called for much applause.

Tom Dwyer was introduced as the bachelor Mayor of Houghs Neck. He acknowledged that he would be amenable to the law if passed but hoped that next year being leap year he might be able to escape. He promised to get an opera hat, Prince Alebrt coat and walking stick and parade along the new boulevard which he thought would be built by that time, and with these endowments accompanied by his good looks and winning smile he expected to have many fair maidens at his feet.

The various speeches were interspersed with a vocal and piano duet by little Miss Brown and Miss Acorn, piano solos by Waldo Hutchings and vocal solos by E. P. Powers.

Interesting remarks were also made by Dan Maloney and Thomas Phillips.

After this there was a social hour during which a fine lunch was served by George Irwin.

HOLIDAY BASE BALL

An Indoor Game of Union Club was Great Sport

A game of indoor baseball between the Mutts and the Pikers, captained by Frank Burgess and Mr. Merrill respectively formed the entertainment at the monthly meeting of the Park and Downs Union club on Wednesday evening. Early in the game the Pikers proved to be the best hitters, but as the innings progressed the Mutts got in their licks and in the last inning forged ahead beating the Pikers by a score of 14 to 12. The novelty of the game caused great enthusiasm, and when two baggers and home runs came in there was no limit to the excitement. Rev. William B. Ayers acted as umpire and cheated strongly for both sides. Refreshments and a social hour followed. At the business meeting in charge of President Burgess several new members were admitted. Plans are being made for a ladies night to be held in March.

THE QUINCY PATRIOTS

Effort Being Made to Mark Graves of Revolutionary Heroes

The Boston Transcript says: Information is greatly desired of the following-named Revolutionary patriots, supposed to be buried in Quincy, with the exact location of their graves, and how the same are at present marked, in order that the graves may be honored at an early date by the white marble marker, designed for that purpose by the United States War Department. The cost of setting the markers in the cemeteries is to be defrayed by an appropriation already made by the city of Quincy for that purpose.

Much historical research has disclosed the names of the following men, but it is supposed there are many other patriots buried in Quincy. The following-named men, whose services are recorded in the Archives at the State House, Boston, are buried in Quincy, but the exact location of their graves and how marked is necessary for placing the markers.

Elihu Adams
Daniel Baxter
Joseph Baxter
Edward Willard Baxter
Seth Baxter
Ebenezer Brackett
James Brackett, Jr.
Joseph Brackett
Moses Brackett
Peter Brackett
Edmund Billings
John Briester
Peter Bicknell
Adam Curtis
Samuel Curtis
James Faxon, Jr.
Elisha Glover
Joshua Hobart
Bryant Newcomb
Thomas Newcomb
Ebenezer Penniman
Seth Spear
Daniel Spear

Other Revolutionary patriots supposed to be buried in Quincy are Jonathan Baxter, James Brackett (five men by this name in Archives); Samuel Brackett (four men by this name in Archives); Eleazer Beales, Isaac Beales, Nathaniel Beale, James Clark, (thirty-three men by this name in Archives); James Clark, Jr., (two men by this name in Archives); William Spear ,eight men by this name in Archives); John Nightingale, Samuel Nightingale, Ebenezer Nightingale.

There are many other revolutionary soldiers probably buried in Quincy, but the difficulty in identifying such patriots is great, after the lapse of years. For example, with thirty-three men by the name of James Clark, who enlisted from Massachusetts in the War of the Revolution, and two men by the name of James Clark, Jr.; the question arises, "which of these men is buried in Quincy?"

In replying people are urged to give dates of birth and death and to state the name, rank (if above private), company and State regiment to which the patriot belonged. Information must be accurate and from church or town records, as no grave can be marked unless it can be positively identified with the patriot whose Revolutionary service is recorded in the archives at the State House, Boston. Answers should be, if possible, typewritten and two copies furnished, one to be sent to Washington and the other for record in Quincy.

All persons interested in historical and patriotic work are cordially invited to assist in this work to search out the graves of these Revolutionary patriots as soon as possible and notify Mrs. Nelson V. Titus, Squantum post office, Quincy, Mass. As the War Department only receives applications for these markers quarterly, only on Jan. 1, April 1, July 1 and Oct. 1, all persons will oblige by sending information at once to Mrs. Titus, in order that she may send the order before April 1.

The men whose graves in Quincy are known and those whose final resting places it is desired to find served in the regiments of Colonel Jonathan Bass, Colonel Benjamin Gill, Colonel Ebenezer Larned, General Warner's brigade, Colonel Benjamin Lincoln, Colonel Lee and the Braintree company of Grenadiers.

MAYOR'S ESTIMATES.

It was the 1909 appropriations and not the 1910 figures that the Daily Ledger compared on Tuesday with the Mayor's estimates for 1911. They showed increase for two years not one year therefore. A comparison with 1910 will appear later.

REMINISCENCES OF LINCOLN

Related by Col. Anderson at Men's Meet on Holiday

A very enjoyable meet of the Point church Men's club was held in the church vestry on the evening of the holiday. The speaker of the evening, Col. Edward Anderson, was introduced by John W. Hendrie, president of the club.

Col. Anderson's subject was "Patriots—Washington and Lincoln." The address was richly flavored with anecdotes, and in speaking of the martyred President, with many personal reminiscences. The Pilgrim fathers came to New England not by accident but by God's will, they came that they might have liberty. George Washington was a born aristocrat by blood and breeding, but he was a born leader of men and he could lead men who were not of his own type. Slavery was introduced before Washington's time and the early presidents were opposed to it but with the introduction of the cotton gin slavery became important and the South controlled the Presidency.

Jefferson Davis was secretary of war at the time of the introduction of the Kansas-Nebraska bill which allowed a new state entering the Union to come by their own vote either slave or free.

John Brown, the famous exponent of freedom was the forerunner of Lincoln, as John the Baptist was the forerunner of Christ. Lincoln was born a poor white, and because of his poverty he was sneered at even by Negroes. Col. Anderson knew him before he became president and in one of their conversations he told the colonel about his childhood. It was said of Lincoln that he was all legs except for his brains.

When asked as to the proportion of a man's body to the length of his legs, Lincoln thought his legs should reach from his thighs down.

When Lincoln first saw a slave market, the sight so touched his heart that he resolved to study it and strike it hard the first chance he got. The Civil war was brought on by John Brown when he started to abolish slavery in the north. Colonel Anderson told of the number of boys who enlisted in the army and gave several instances of methods of dodging the age limit. One boy took off his shoe and put in it a slip of paper with the number 18 written on it. He then told the enlisting officer that he was over 18. A great many such tricks were worked by boys so they could enlist under Col. Anderson. He gave some interesting figures concerning the number of boys of different ages who enlisted. Graphic accounts of a number of the battles were given and other reminiscences of Lincoln.

The address was greatly enjoyed by a good audience and the colonel, who was pastor of the church for two years, received a very cordial reception. A rising vote of thanks was given him at the conclusion of the address, and then all adjourned to the back vestry where a fine oyster stew was served by the refreshment committee.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Care of Earthenware Casseroles.

A point emphasized by the manufacturers of the best earthenware casseroles is that before using at all they should be placed in a pan or large kettle and completely covered with cold water. Bring slowly to a boil and then remove the pan from the fire, letting the ware cool in the water before taking out.

Avoid changing the temperature from hot to cold or cold to hot too abruptly, lest the ware be cracked.

A Fig Dessert.

How about molasses fig pudding? Do you know it? If not you might try it out on the family.

Mince very fine one half pound of figs and mix them with one half pound of finely grated breadcrumbs, six ounces of soft butter and enough molasses or best sirup to make into a paste. Butter a mold and fill it with the mixture, then boil or steam for one and one-half hours. Serve with cream, either plain or whipped.

Ginger Puffs.

One cup molasses, one cup sugar, one cup sweet milk, three-fourths cup butter or part butter and lard, one egg, one tablespoon soda, one tablespoon ginger, one tablespoon cassia, four and one-half cups flour. Drop in spoonfuls in a greased pan. You may think there is too much soda, but there is not.

LENSES REVEAL WORLD BUILDING

Creation of New Planet Seen From Los Angeles.

PHOTOGRAPHS SHOW PROCESS

Swirling Mass of Gases Five Hundred Billion Miles In Diameter Now Throwing Off Matter That When Cool May Become Inhabited Like the Earth, Astronomers Assert.

The powerful reflection mirror of the Mount Wilson sixty inch telescope, near Los Angeles, has found and photographed a swirling mass of gases 500,000,000,000 miles in diameter in the act of throwing off a new world.

The photograph shows a spiral nebula, apparently disproving the nebular hypothesis of the famous French astronomer La Place and substantiating the more recent nebular hypothesis of Professor Chamberlain of Chicago university.

This photograph is by far the most distinct photograph of a spiral nebula ever taken. It was taken by Professor G. W. Ritchey of the observatory staff. Chamberlain and his colleagues recently evolved the theory of a spiral nebula whipping from its gaseous masses matter to become its satellites. These, cooling, will become planets and may become inhabitable like the earth.

The spiral nebula in the Mount Wilson photograph is known to scientists as Messier 51, according to the chart of the French scientist Messier.

Invisible to Naked Eye.

Using the lower limit or most conservative base of figures, it is calculated to be 5,865,696,000,000 miles from earth. Not even the faintest glimmer of its light can be seen from earth by the naked eye. To the smaller telescopes it seems a blur—hazy, without form or shape.

The new world or sun, which scientists on Mount Wilson have photographed pendant from the parent mass by one of the luminous branches, because of its density will be whipped clear. It is now some 150,000,000,000 miles from the central luminous area of the larger nebula. It may itself become an independent nebula and roam in that section of the firmament occupied by the spiral nebula from which it sprang.

More probably, say scientists, the larger body will hold it in attraction to a regular elliptical orbit.

Walter S. Adams of the Mount Wilson solar observatory of the Carnegie institution discussed the nebula theory. Mr. Adams is in charge of the observatory during the absence of its director, Dr. George Ellery Hale, who is in Egypt.

Can't Prove Theory.

"We have not time to prove any hypothesis," said Mr. Adams. "It would require thousands of years to observe definite change in any of the nebulae. But we find many more of the spiral nebulae than of the other variety.

"The nebula we have photographed is one of the comparatively few of which broadside views can be obtained and is really remarkable. This nebula is undoubtedly composed of gaseous and possibly liquid substances like the sun. With the sixty inch telescope we hope before long to obtain a spectrum which will decide the question. The light is, however, so extremely faint that an exposure of hours will be necessary.

"The 100 inch reflector will have nearly three times the light gathering power possessed by the sixty inch instrument, and with it we should be able readily to obtain a spectrum of the central mass for analysis giving us the chemical components of the nebula."

BAN OFF FINGER BOWLS.

Dessort Adjunct to Be Restored For English Royalty.

One indication of the way in which things are changing in England's new reign is the announcement that King George has caused it to be known among those persons with whom he may be dining during the coming season that he does not insist, as has been the custom hitherto, on the absence of finger bowls at dinner.

These dessert conveniences were banished from the royal tables over a century and a half ago at a time when certain adherents of the young pretender were wont to drink the health of "the king over the water" by passing their wineglasses across the finger bowls and thereby signifying their adherence to the old regime.

This custom of doing without finger bowls obtained throughout the reign of Queen Victoria and King Edward, even when the latter was Prince of Wales and dined out privately with his intimate friends, but the new king despises these old fashioned superstitions and traditions, and henceforth the usual accompaniments to dessert will appear on the royal tables and on the tables of those who entertain royalty.

RELAY RACE WON BY Y.M.C.A.

Indoor Athletic Meet at Coliseum on Holiday

A new feature was introduced at the Coliseum on the evening of the holiday in the shape of an indoor athletic meet lasting from 9 until 9.45. Relay races were run by Y. M. C. A. and Fore River Apprentices and the Q. H.S. Independents and Y. M. C. A. teams and the High school Independents were the contestants.

The race between the Q. H. S. Independents and the Y. M. C. A. Independents was the most interesting of the three. The former would have won had not Sutermeister fallen in taking one of the corners. In consequence the High school team was allowed to run in the finals.

The 30 yards dash was run in four heats with semi-finals and finals. All the races were close and the judges had a difficule proposition before them. In the final heat R. Cranshaw of High school looked like the winner, but the judges picked Phelan for first, Estey for second, and Traskfor third, not giving Cranshaw a place. The meet was strictly amateur, judges and all.

Summary of relay races:

Quincy Y. M. C. A. (E. Prout, Dineen, Wood, Phelan) defeated Fore River Apprentices (Dunn, Hackett, Emby, Coleman.)

Y. M. C. A. Independents (Johnson, Hogan, McInnes, McArdle) defeated Q. H. S. Independents (Trask, Sutermeister, Estey, Cranshaw.)

Finals—1st Y. M. C. A. 2nd Q. H. S. Ind., 3rd, Y. M. C. A. Ind.

In the 30 yards dash:

1st heat: E. Prout, 1st, Dunn, 2nd.

2nd heat: R. Cranshaw 1st, Trask 2nd.

3rd heat: Estey 1st Embry 2nd.

4th heat: Phelan 1st Hackett 2nd.

Final heat: Phelan 1st, Estey 2nd, Trask 3rd.

Heat for second men, won by Trask.

Medals were given to the members of the winning relay team and to the first three men in the finals of the dash.

Earlier in the evening, Reynolds beat White in a mile race on roller skates in the record time of 3 m, 15 sec.

Exact Bill Before Legislature for "Real Boston"

ALL NEW WARSHIPS UNDER EIGHT HOUR LAW

National House More Emphatic This Year Than Ever on this Point

Also Hit the Steel Trust Hard on Armor Plates

All the new warships must be built under the eight-hour law which may exclude all private yards. The Boston Transcript says:

A thoroughly emasculated naval appropriation bill, so amended by the Democrats, in pursuance of an eight-hour-law policy, that it will cost the Government about $10,000,000 additional to construct the increase authorized was passed by the House Tuesday. Not only did Representative Hughes of New Jersey, a Democrat, succeed in keeping in the bill the provision authorized last session that all battleships must be built under the eight-hour law, but, in addition, he secured amendments that torpedo boat destroyers and submarines built hereafter must also be constructed by contractors who observe union hours.

The Navy Department has shown that such a programme costs the Government hundreds of thousands additional, and the Committee on Naval Affairs recommended the repeal of this provision.

Representative Padgett, who will be chairman of the Naval Committee in the next House, arose at the close of the debate and said:

"I wish to announce that, in view of the amendments just adopted, it will cost the Govehnment perhaps $9,000,000 additional to carry out the naval increase planned this year and next. I say this in order that this amount may not be charged up against the incoming Democratic administration."

"Why, not," demanded Mr. Mann. "The Democrats are responsible for the adoption of these amendments."

Chairman Foss predicted that the eight-hour law restrictions would costs perhaps $10,000,000 additional, the Navy Department having shown before the committee that if the New York and the Florida, authorized last year, are to be so constructed they will cost considerably more than the amount authorized.

The so-called Steel Trust also had a bad hour in the House. The naval bill required that armor and armament should be of "domestic manufacture." Representative Rainey of Illinois offered an amendment providing that this armor might be purchased abroad, and it was adopted by a vote of 90 to 69. Then Representative Stanley, proposed an amendment that no armor or steel plates used in battleship construction shall be bought of any firm or corporation engaged in a monopoly of trade under the Sherman anti-trust law. The amendment was adopted by a viva voce vote.

Representatives Fitzgerald and Calder who were contending for the Brooklyn Navy Yard, were successful in their efforts to defeat the Naval Committee's plan to repeal the existing provision that at least one battleship each year should be built at a navy yard. The Naval Committee declared that private contractors can build the Dreadnoughts far cheaper, but the House rejected its plan to have both battleships built by private contract. Likewise, the House declined to permit the construction of the Florida, begun at the Brooklyn yard, to be transferred to a private contractor, or to increase the appropriation authorized therefor last year. The increased cost will amount to about $1,500,000.

PATRIOTIC SERVICES OF THE W. R. C.

Grand Army, Spanish War Veterans and Other Organizations Take Part

Addresses by Supt. Barbour and Others

Patriotic services of the Women's Relief Corps were held in Colonial hall Thursday evening under the direction of the patriotic instructor, Mrs. C. P. Gould of Adams street. An orchestra, led by John Johnson of the United Spanish War Veterans, opened the service by reading several selections of a patriotic nature. The color bearers escorted the speakers to the platform, first Mrs. C. P. Gould, patriotic instructor; then Commander Ring of Paul Revere Post 88 G. A. R.; Mrs. Emma E. Marnock, president of the Relief Corps; Captain David Hanson, Sachem of Hodenosaunee tribe of Red Men; Albert L. Barbour, superintendent of schools, and Commander Walter Carman of the Spanish War Veterans.

After a few opening remarks by Mrs. Gould, a splendid solo was rendered by Mrs. Wheatland. Commander Ring of the G. A. R. was introduced. His remarks were on patriotism. Miss Lucy Morton gave an excellent reading, and Miss Ethel Humphrey played a splendid piano solo.

Mrs. E. E. Marnock, president of the Women's Relief Corps gave a reading on "Washington." This was followed by a solo by Althea Gould, "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." As she began the second chorus the audience joined in with great enthusiasm, and made the walls reecho with the melody.

Commander Carmen of the Spanish War Veterans was the next speaker. His address thought brief was full of patroitism and the spirit of loyalty to the flag.

The orchestra rendered another patriotic selection and then Superintendent Barbour spoke of 'Patriotism in the schools," and gave an excellent account of the assimilating influence of the "Star and Stripes" upon those from foreign shores.

A very pleasing dialogue was given by Misses Viola and Sadie Files. Mrs. E. E. Nason sang an enjoyable solo, after which an impressive reading was given by Past Commander George L. Phillips of Post 88.

Mrs. Belle Morton, president of the Auxiliary to the Spanish War Veterans gave a fine reading on the life of Washington. Mrs. C. P. Gould spoke briefly and then called upon David Hanson of the Red Men.

Mrs. Wheatland gave another solo at the conclusion of his address and Mrs. Kate Blaisdell gave an especially enjoyable reading. After another selection by the orchestra the flag salute was given, and the services were concluded by the singing of America by all with the orchestra furnishing the accompaniment.

The evening was thoroughly enjoyable and the exercises were fitting and appropriate to the Washington Birthday season. Not a little was added to the attractiveness of the scene by the patriotic decorations of flags and bunting, tastefully arranged by the ladies of the corps. The services were well attended, and the spirit of loyalty to the Stars and Stripes was uppermost in the minds of all.

LODGE STILL HOPEFUL.

The Herald bureau at Washington reported on Thursday that Senator Lodge today introduced a revised bill for reconstructing the bridge across the Weymouth Back river. It carries an appropriation of $50,000 or so much thereto as may be necessary and makes the money available when the Massachusetts Legislature has apportioned the necessary amount to be paid by the adjacent towns. This is expected to meet, in some degree, the objections to the bill expressed recently by a report from the army engineers of the war department.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Oh those eggs !

When Mayor Shea enters the Metropolitan Council he will perhaps become the "Real Boston" Bill.

No serious objection can be raised against the "Real Boston" bill, unless it be that the Metropolitan district is to pay for printing Boston statistics and the expense is to be charged up to cities according to consumption of Metropolitan water. Brookline is not in the Metropolitan water district and therefore will escape as usual. The valuation of Brookline is over $100,000,000, three or four times that of Quincy, but its total Metropolitan assessment in 1910 was only $138,188, where that of Quincy was $94,701. Cambridge is another city that is not in the Metropolitan Water district.

The only proper assessment should be levied on the valuation of the cities and towns included, not on water, or parks, or boulevards or sewer. By valuation, Quincy is a smaller part of the "Real Boston" than it is by Metropolitan assessments as will be seen by these figures. The valuation statistics are from the Manual for the General Court of 1910, but are really two or three years back. The assessment was for 1910:

Boston	$1,335,014,488	$2,770,410
Cambridge	111,308,472	160,269
Brookline	109,073,832	138,188
Newton	77,001,855	109,257
Lynn	64,765,172	103,955
Somerville	61,678,378	210,237
Malden	36,841,031	103,955
Quincy	27,428,409	94,701
Milton	27,392463	57,164
Chelsea	26,421,137	91,261
Waltham	25,315,436	39,005
Everett	23,474,573	89,852

Why should Somerville pay any more than Cambridge, Brookline, Newton or Lynn, for the expenses of "Real Boston?"

SIZE OF THE NEXT HOUSE.

Congress is now discussing the fateful reapportionment question. The states instead of individual office seekers are now scrambling for positions under the plum tree. As some of the states are nearly stationary, the readjustment will reduce the representation of several, unless the total size of the House is increased. An increase is not generally favored by students of parliamentary work. The present room is already so large that real debate is scarcely possible. Only a leather throated Congressman can make himself heard over that big room above the undertone of so many restless, inattentive, and disrespectful human beings.

The directors of any business corporation provide a secluded room of appropriate size, where business matters can be discussed with a calm unbroken by disturbance. Yet in our Congress, where the issues handled are thousands of times more important, conditions are such that it is not possible for the majority of the members to make known their views and those of constituents by word of mouth in the give and take of debate. It would of course be possible to get around the difficulty, and take care of the states that are stationary in population, could the House be seated like the English Parliament. There the members have no comfortable arm chairs and convenient little desks after the ancient manner of our Congress.

Instead they sit on long benches, which are comfortably covered with cushions, but give a member little chance to stow away his belongings. Thus a much larger seating capacity is gained in a smaller room. Champ Clark insists that business anyway will be mostly done in committee. But the country wants big issues fought out where the reporters can listen, and would like either a membership so small, or seating arrangements so concentrated, that great American concerns can have as careful debate as would be given in a fifth rate business corporation.

COMPARED WITH 1909 AND 1910

How Estimates of the Mayor Have Grown in One Year and Two Years

It was the intention of the DAILY LEDGER of Tuesday to have compared Mayor Shea's estimates for 1911 with the appropriations of 1910, but in reality the comparison was with those of 1909 Perhaps it is more interesting to compare with two, five or ten years ago, but today the LEDGER gives in addition the appropriations of last year. The estimates of the School Committee are also added :

LADIES' NIGHT ON HOLIDAY

North Quincy Club Enjoy Whist Music and Lunch

Ladies' night was enjoyed at the Club House of the North Quincy A. C. on the evening of the holiday and was a pronounced success. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Eben Sanborn, Mr. and Mrs. James Thornley, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bent, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lapoint, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Downer, Mr. and Mrs. David Davis, Mrs. Harry Stevens, Mrs. William Cox, Mrs. Edwin Lyons, Miss Corinne Cobb, Miss Lillian Sanborn, Miss Clara Cox and Messrs Joseph Cox, Frederick Thornley, Murray McLeod, Walter Crook, Harry Tabb, Edgar Sanborn, Clarence Sanborn, Percy Lyons, Frank Merrill, Samuel Cleaves, Thomas Griffin, Arthur Stevens, Walter Anderson, Jesse Height, Frank Cox, William Ober.

During the evening whist was played and the following were the winners: Ladies' first prize, Mrs. Edwin Lyons; ladies second prize, Mrs. Harry Stevens; ladies third prize, Mrs. Frederick Bent; gentleman's first prize, Pierre Lapoint; gentleman's second prize, Samuel Cleaves and gentleman's third prize Walter Anderson.

The club trio composed of Messrs. Curtis, Merrill and Sanborn rendered several songs in a pleasing manner. Luncheon was served by Frederick Bent, steward of the club who was ably assisted by Harry Tabb. The club is in a flourishing condition and has many applications for membership on the waiting list.

MILTON SUICIDE.

Edward Clune, aged 56 years, of 432 Adams street, East Milton, celebrated the holiday by shooting himself twice in the head on the sidewalk near his home, at 8 A. M. The day before, Clune remarked to his family and neighbors that he was going to make a sensation on the holiday, for which he had purchased the revolver, but nothing strange was thought of it until the shots were heard. They rushed out of doors, but before a physician arrived he had died. No reason is given by the family for the suicide, other than the hint that financial matters had made him dispondent for sometime. Clune was a painter, and recently moved to Milton from South Boston. He leaves a wife four sons and four daughters.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

A very interesting lecture will be delivered in Coddington school hall this evening by Charles H. Johnson. The subject of the lecture is "Historic Quincy" and over 200 views will be thrown on the screen in illustrating it. Mr. Handy, the manufacturer of the new reflectorscope will operate it himself. This lecture is the same one that Mr. Johnson gave in Keith's theatre last year, and should recommend itself to all who wish to know the history of the "Granite City." Miss Margaret Langtry of Boston, a violin teacher, will play a number of selections. The evening will be one of pleasure and profit to all who attend.

"REMAKING A RAILWAY."

"Remaking a railway: a study in efficiency" is the story of the upbuilding of New England's transportation system, interestingly told in a Brochure just issued by the New England lines. The author is Sylvester Baxter, secretary of the Metropolitan Improvement League of Boston. It is a reprint of an article which attracted much attention in the "Outlook" and in its present form it contains considerable additional text and many new illustrations.

The Booklet tells interestingly how the unification was accomplished; why it was necessary and what it means in the development of a greater New England. The reconstruction of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and the Boston & Maine railroad by President Mellen is a colossal undertaking. You will read in this booklet that $116,000,000 has been spent in seven years for the sole purpose of obtaining transportation efficiency in the railroad service of southern New England. You will learn how this vast sum was expended: How the trackage was multiplied, how economy and efficiency have been obtained by constructing tunnels, elminating grade crossings, strengthening bridges and utilizing electricity as a motive power.

Mr. Mellen's ambition to extend the benefits of this unification to all parts of New England is told in detail. Improvements involving an expenditure of at least $100,000,000 within the next five years are forecasted. A sympathetic word picture of President Mellen is included. The author writes with genuine appreciation of his subject and describes Mr. Mellen as a man who is preeminently constructive, intensively imaginative and gifted with rare foresight and visualizing power.

A copy of Mr. Baxter's book may be obtained free by addressing the New England Lines, Room 537, South Station, Boston.

Plumpness Makes Health Thin People Heed This.

If you are too thin; if you are pale and sallow; if what you eat seems not to strengthen you; if your lips and cheeks are colorless, it is because your blood is deficient in red corpuscles and disease can easily overcome you, as you have no reserve strength or nourishment to uphold you.

A pharmaceutical product, called 4 grain hypo-nuclane tablets, is much prescribed for these conditions, and if taken for several months, rapidly increases weight and improves the color. Buy in sealed package of any well stocked apothecary shop.

MEMORIAL HALL MEETING

Patriotic Societies Have Appointed Committee to Act

Members of the Memorial hall committee representing the different patriotic orders of the city met Saturday evening at the home of C. P. Gould, Adams street, to discuss plans whereby Quincy might have a memorial hall in memory of the Boys of '61-'64. Harry Gould, commander of the Sons of Veterans was elected chairman with Lieut. George Wardwell as secretary. Much interest was taken in the discussions of different members and the question was asked, Why has such a building never been erected Where are our patriotic citizens and business men that such a memorial has never been built. For years the patriotic orders have tried to have the city help them with their plans, and now we hope that in the near future when asked by strangers where our Grand Army hall is, to be able top oint with pride, to our new memorial hall and not be ashamed, as now, to point out a wooden building that looks like anything but a hall. Each year the ranks of the Grand Army grow smaller. Let us give those remaining the pleasure of knowing that when they have answered that last call a memorial remains to always be a reminder ofthose brave boys who went out at our country's call and where so many gave their lives that we might have Old Glory waving over our land forever. Another meeting of the Memorial hall committee will be held at Mr. Goulds Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

MAIN STREET FIRE.

The alarm from Box 171 at 4.35 Thursday afternoon was for a fire in a double house on Main street owned by William Harkins and occupied in part by the family of Thomas Cameron. The family had a hot fire in the parlor stove and went out without regulating it properly. The result was that a lounge near the stove took fire, and was practically destroyed and several holes burned in the floor before the firemen arrived. Smoke was seen coming from the house when the alarm was sounded. The firemen made short work of the blaze which did a damage of about $75.

QUINCY MAN PUBLISHER.

John Adams Thayer, formerly of Quincy and widely known in publishing circles, has purchased outright from the Ess Ess publishing company The Smart Set magazine, which was established in 1900 under the ownership of Col. W. D. Mann. From the first it has been brilliantly edited and naturally met with the success such work deserved. Mr. Thayer helped build up The Ladies' Home Journal, introducing many complete novel features and starting the campaign for clean advertising. For a time he was associated with Munsey's magazine as business manager, afterward assisting in rehabilitating the Delineator. He was with Everybody's magazine when it got its great start, and now, with the unhampered control of The Smart Set in his hands, his admirers all over the country are interested to see what will happen.

QUINCY MAN CREDITOR.

William V. Hayward of Chestnut street is one of the large creditors of Capt. Charles Glen Collins, a retire officer of the British army, who filed a petition in bankruptcy on Thursday with liabilities of $414,805, and assets of $838,750. Mr. Haywards claim is placed at $8,000. Capt. Collins says he has been expending a great deal of his time and money in the last two years trying to reorganize a consolidation of marble properties in Vermont. Delay in the process, he said, had made the creditors impatient, and they had threatened to bring suit. "Consequently, I have thought it wisest to file a petition as I shall then be free of suits and able to work in an unrestricted manner with the help of my friends in Scotland and this country, to raise the requisite capital. I believe that my assests will eventually pay my creditors 100 cents on the dollar."

GALAHAD CLUB SOCIAL.

About 20 couples of young people gathered in the parish house of Christ church, Thursday evening for another of the popular socials given by the Galahad club. Dancing was in order throughout the evening and Frank Boutelier, one of the club members, furnished the music. Henry Boutelier acted as floor director and Robert King had charge of the refreshments. Mrs. Armstrong and Miss Gardner served as chaperons. The usual number of two-steps and waltzes were interspersed with "moonlights" schottisches and square dances. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all. Inasmuch as it was the last social before Lent, the young people were out for a better time than usual, and the hours passed altogether too quickly to suit those who participated.

TODAYS COURT.

Harry Saleriff was araigned for assault on Mrs. Goldberg at Quincy. Case continued until March 4.

John R. Wren was sent to the State farm for drunkenness at Quincy.

Kate Blair was araigned for assault on John Lah at Quincy. Case continued until Saturday.

POLISHERS ALSO AGREE

Another Night Necessary With Granite Tool Sharpeners

Meetings of the committees from the union and granite manufacturers who are considering the new agreements between the manufacturers and tool sharpeners and polishers met Thursday evening although not together as there is a separate committee for each trade.

The polishers and manufacturers reached an agreement before adjournment, the agreement being that the minimum wage shall be $3.25 per day for the next five years. This bill will be signed this week.

The tool sharpeners were not quite as successful as they did not reach an agreement at Thursday night's meeting. Another meeting will be held Saturday evening, and it is expected that an agreement will be reached at that time.

The bill agreed upon between the cutters and manufacturers is already and will be signed by both committees Saturday evening.

COOK ARRESTED FOR ASSAULT

How Will John Get His Breakfast Now?

Officer Larkin was called to the National Sailors Home this morning to place under arrest Kate Blair, the cook at the home, on the charge of assaulting John Lah with a bread knife.

The trouble arose this morning when Lah ventured into the kitchen to remonstrate because his breakfast was not ready. He had evidently not heard that it was dangerous business to monkey with the cook. A war of words ensued during which it is alleged the cook waved her bread knife on high and in some way the knife came in contact with the forehead of Lah, cutting a small gash which although it bled profusely was not of a dangerous character.

Officer Larkin place the cook under arrest. The patrol auto was called and the woman taken to court where she was arraigned. She was held in $300 until Saturday morning for a hearing.

CITY SQUARE LIGHTING.

The Electric Light Co. are arranging to give an exhibition of lighting City Square as it should be done. A large number of new lights are being put in, and it is expected the current will be turned on Saturday night. The new light consists of a cluster of four Tungsten lights arranged in one globe. The great advantage of this light over the ordinary arc light is, when anything is wrong with an arc light everything is left in darkness. With the new light, the advantage is that if one of the four lights burn out, the remainder will continue to burn.

DIED IN OHIO.

Word was received Thursday night of the death earlier in the day at Toledo, Ohio, of Mrs. John Halloran, who was Miss Annie Kelley of West Quincy, a daughter of Mrs. Mary Kelley. Word was received early in the week of the serious illness of Mrs. Halloran, and her mother and two sisters, Mrs. S. B. Little and Miss Josephine Kelley, left immediately for Toledo. They arrived shortly before Mrs. Halloran died.

TOO MANY EGGS ON HAND

Boston Cold Storage Men Are Threatened With Heavy Loss

Boston, Feb. 24.—Cold storage men are crestfallen over the sweeping reduction in the price of freshly laid eggs as announced by the fruit and produce exchange yesterday. These dealers are aware that, should the present abundant supply continue, their stock would be practically worthless.

The price of eggs is 20 cents less than one year ago at this time. The best local eggs may be bought at retail for 32 cents a dozen. Only a few days ago these eggs were sold for 45 cents a dozen. Cold storage eggs are down to 15 cents.

IMPROVEMENTS WANTED

Needs of West Quincy Voiced by Improvement Association

A regular meeting of the West Quincy Improvement Association was held Thursday evening and as usual was largely attended. In the absence of President S. B. Little, John Evans the vice president, presided.

The committee appointed to see what arrangements could be made toward securing the hall in the Willard school building for a patriotic meeting reported that here was no way to light the hall, or to heat it, and that there were no seats there. This being the case teh plan to hold a patrictic service will be given up for the present.

The banquet committee reported that money enough had been received to meet all bills and they were ordered paid.

It was voted to have the Ward Four councilmen introduce an order calling for an appropriation of $3,500 to repair Willard street between the depot and the boulevard.

It was also voted to have the councilmen interview the Commissioner of Public Works in regard to putting up street signs in West Quincy as well as to place a large sign near the depot reading "Belknap Square."

The local councilmen will also be asked to either see the Commissioner, or introduce an order in the City Council, calling for an appropriation of $250 to fix up the public park at the junction of Copeland, Common and West streets.

CHILDREN'S PARTY ALSO.

The details for the annual parish reunion of St. Mary's church have been completed and it is expected that Monday evening's affair will be the best ever held in the parish. Owing to the large crowd expected a party for the children has been arranged for Saturday afternoon, which will give the little ones the time of their lives. The party will last from 3 to 6, and the program will consist of moving pictures, singing, recitations, and games. This affair will be in charge of the following committee: Misses Anna Kapples, Catherine McKenna, Mary Kapples, Cecelia Shea, Lulu Pickering, Susie Pickering, Nellie Morrissette and Mrs. John Minihan.

NEW PARISH HOUSE.

The meeting of the building committee of the Swedish Lutheran church which was scheduled for Feb. 23, was postponed to March 7, since there was some uncertainty about the date. The committee of eight with the pastor as chairman will be subdivided at the meeting. Plans and specifications will be called for and then estimates of cost of building, furnishing, etc. The new parish house will probably be erected in the spring on the lot adjacent to the church.

"HEIMGANG."

"Heimgang!" So the German people
Whisper when they hear the bell
Tolling from some gray old steeple,
Death's familiar tale to tell;
When they hear the organ lirges
Swelling out from chapel dome,
And the singers' chanting surges,
"Heimgang!" Always going home.

"Heimgang!" Quint and tender saying,
In the grand old German tongue,
That hath shaped Melancthon's praying
And the hymns that Luther sung,
Blessed is our loving Maker,
That where'er our feet shall roam
Still we journey toward God's Acre;
"Heimgang!" Always going home.

Character Lessons to Train Youth

By JAMES TERRY WHITE.
[Copyright, 1909, by the Character Development league.]

XVI.—Courage.

JAMES T. WHITE.

WHILE fortitude consists in bearing manfully that which is painful or disagreeable, courage consists in not shrinking from the painful or unpleasant experiences which may be demanded of us. Fortitude will endure the amputation of a limb; courage will do that and also face the cannon's mouth that causes the injury that requires the amputation.

The essence of courage is manliness and fortitude and belief in one's strength and skill which nothing can dismay. The root of the word is the Latin cor, heart.

The habit of courage is acquired by education and discipline—as a soldier overcomes his timidity, as a medical student his faintness at the first sight of blood, as a child gradually learns to confess a fault.

There are two forms of courage, physical and moral. Physical courage is the resolute facing of danger. Courage is bravery, but is not bravado, which is recklessness or frequently foolhardiness. A reckless man does not see danger, the foolhardy man makes brag and show of doing, while the courageous man sees the danger and bravely faces it. "Courage is resistance to fear, mastery of fear—not absence of fear."

The lack of courage is cowardice, which has been held up to scorn from the beginning of the world. It implies a want of common sense, a want of belief in oneself.

Moral courage is obeying one's convictions in the face of opposition and disapprobation; doing what the conscience says is right against the scorn and ridicule of associates; standing up for truth and righteousness against the whole world. Moral courage is bearing a taunt rather than to degrade oneself by some mean and unworthy action. This is the highest kind of courage.

What is needed today is courage to be honest, courage to resist temptation, courage to speak the truth, courage to be what we really are, courage to live honestly within our means and not dishonestly upon the means of others. It takes courage to wear threadbare clothes while one's companions wear broadcloth and silk. It takes courage to remain in honest poverty when others grow rich by questionable methods. It takes courage to say "No" squarely when others around you say "Yes." It takes courage to be laughed at, scoffed, ridiculed, derided, misjudged—to stand alone with all the world against you.

ADMIRAL FARRAGUT.

To espouse an unpopular cause often requires more courage than to lead a charge in battle. But "mankind loves and admires the man who dares to look the devil in the face and tell him he is a devil."

Although Admiral Farragut was a southerner and prayed "God forbid that I should ever raise my hand against the south," yet when Virginia seceded Farragut remained faithful in his allegiance to the government. He was assigned the task of taking New Orleans, defended by forts which in 1815 withstood the entire British fleet for nine days. With unexampled intrepidity he pushed his fleet by the forts through a fire of shot and shell from 200 guns and destroyed the opposing fleet and the forts.

Practice.—Let everybody resolve to put fear out of his mind and let him say, "God is in his heaven." When occasion comes for an act of bravery, as a sudden fire, a child in danger, trust yourself and act quickly and with resolution. When it is an occasion for standing by what is right, treat it as you would a lie and scorn to belittle yourself by yielding. Say over and over, "No, no, no!"

Woman's World

No American Girl Type, Says a Famous Swedish Artist.

MISS MAURINE RASMUSSEN, THE REAL "FISHER" GIRL.

"There is positively no such thing as the American girl."

Mr. Bror Kronstrand settled back in his easy chair and, placing the tips of his artistic fingers together, looked as bland as a May morning and utterly unconscious of the disillusionizing blow he had dealt.

Mr. Kronstrand is a Swedish portrait painter of international reputation, and after pretty thoroughly painting the crowned heads of Europe has come to America to paint the portraits of women in social and diplomatic circles. He has already painted a beautiful portrait of the first lady in the land, Mrs. Taft.

"I am absolutely firm in my opinion that there is no such thing as the much talked of American girl," he continued. "If there is she has been kept in the dark since I have been here and I have not had one peep at her.

"The American girl is always a woman; that is why I make the statement that seems shocking. As far as I have observed, from her days in the nursery until she is a mother she is a woman by instinct and in manner.

"Why, I have seen small children in this country older in manner and expression than young women of eighteen and twenty in some other countries. They have a sophisticated expression of eyes and face that comes to them long before they know really anything about the world, and this expression stays with them through life.

"I can't say that I dislike this child-woman of yours at all—in fact, she is very lovable and charming—but why call her an American girl? Call her a woman always and you will be paying her intelligence a great compliment.

"You see, here the children are brought up in such close association with their elders that they lose their baby manners before they leave the nursery. They have their teas and matinee parties, their fads and games; they are permitted to exercise their fancies on the selection of clothes and are consulted regarding their food. The very first of their early days are fraught with a knowledge of business and social affairs, because such things are talked before them, and I am utterly astounded to hear the wise remarks of very young girls on matters concerning state and business."

In spite of Mr. Kronstrand's assertion, Harrison Fisher has recently evolved a new "Fisher" girl. She is Miss Maurine Rasmussen of Chicago who this year is studying art in New York city.

A New Game.

Games which have for a long time been taboo as a mode of entertainment for people in society are beginning to be revived. Some are most amusing and can be successfully used.

One of the best of these is the Japanese fan fight. Let your players divide into two sides. Each side must have a den. These dens are made by curving over a large sheet of cardboard at each end of the room. Stretch a tape across the middle of the room, and on it place one feather for every two people. Have feathers of different colors and give each player a Japanese fan, with the word that each is be ready for the fight.

Let the two sides now face one another at either side of the tape, two opposing players being opposite each feather. At a given signal the fight begins. The object is to waft the feathers into their opponents' dens. When a feather is blown into a den he who loses it pays a forfeit, and he and his conqueror are onlookers until the end.

Denkeepers are appointed and have a lively time keeping the dens from being invaded. If Japanese fans and feathers are not available, pieces of colored tissue paper may be substituted for the feathers and folded newspapers for the fans.

Saving Tablecloths.

It is well to have your tablecloths and sheets folded widthwise occasionally, instead of lengthwise, as this prevents the fold from always coming i nthe same place and thus causing that place to wear out first.

GARDNER IS ACQUITTED

New York Race Track Bribe Case Proves a Failure

New York, Feb. 24.—The state's first effort to make a criminal case out of the alleged attempted purchase of legislators' votes to defeat the anti-racing betting bills three years ago, collapsed last evening, a jury in the supreme court announcing the acquittal of State Senator Frank J. Gardner.

He had been on trial for a week charged with offering a $10,000 bribe to ex-State Senator Foelker, who is now a congressman, in the interest of the race track men.

HOUSEKEEPER GETS BULK OF FORTUNE

No Contest Over Probating of Ex-Mayer Fifield's Will

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 24.—The will of the late George W. Fifield, a former mayor of Lowell, who left the bulk of his $500,000 estate to his housekeeper, Mrs. Dora A. Chase, was allowed by Judge McIntire in the probate court here.

Fifield in his will left $10,000 each to the St. John's hospital at Lowell and the Lowell general hospital, $5000 to the Grace Universalist church, to his sister, Connie S. Wilson of Wentworth, N. H., $20,000, and to his sister, Abbie M. Fifield of Belmont, N. H., $50,000, which he cut to $1000 in the codicil.

All of his real property, his home and the residue of his estate is left to Mrs. Chase in addition to a gift of $50,000 in cash.

When the will was filed it was rumored that a contest would be made. It is understood that a settlement has been reached.

Philadelphia's New Postmaster

Washington, Feb. 24.—Thomas D. Smith was appointed postmaster for Philadelphia in place of Postmaster Ashurst, who disappeared some weeks ago.

"Scribbler says he thinks it is a perfect shame the way women are monopolizing the literary market; that they were never intended to write, anyway."

"Well, that's strange. How does he prove his point?"

"Simply by the word 'manuscript.'"

NEW DELAY ON RECIPROCITY

Leaders of Insurgents and Standpatters Unite In Senate

CUMMINS OFFERS RESOLUTION

It Summons President to Deliver to Senate Information Bearing on Negotiating of "Arrangement" With Canada—Hale Co-operates With Iowa Senator In Distributing Burden of Responsibility For Extra Session

Washington, Feb. 24.—Senator Hale, of Maine, leader of regulars, and Senator Cummins of Iowa, leader of insurgents, clasped hands over another plan to delay consideration of the Canadian reciprocity bill. Cummins moved, Hale seconded, and the senate adopted a resolution requesting the president to transmit to the senate such information as the tariff board has gathered respecting pulp wood, wood pulp, paper of all values, wool, raw and manufactured cotton thread, cloth and clothing, carpets, boots and shoes, iron ore, pig iron and iron and steel manufactures, agricultural implements, coal, meat, flour and lumber.

Cummins did not attempt to speak upon his resolution, but Hale greeted it with a shout of joy, figuratively speaking, and even went the Ohio statesman one better by expressing the hope that he would either amend or offer another resolution calling for all papers relating to the negotiations between the commissioners of the state department and the Dominion of Canada, "resulting in the so-called reciprocity bill."

Cummins demurred, saying that Hale's suggestion touched a wholly different phase of the question. His resolution, he said, included those things which the senate will need in considering the bill and he asked its immediate consideration that there might be no delay.

The Maine senator, with others of his colleagues, has been careful not to spare the feelings of the administration during the hearings in the finance committee, and he seized the opportunity Cummins gave him to say more publicly some of the things that have made the hearings noteworthy.

"I think the senator from Iowa is right," he commented savagely. "We should have these facts at an early day. I have reason to believe that the bill never was submitted to the tariff board, that it was not consulted regarding its provisions, and that it had no knowledge of what was being done. There are additional reasons why the resolution should pass—the sooner the better."

Replying to Senator Smoot, Cummins admitted that he intended to offer amendments covering the articles named, many of which are not included in the Canadian agreement. His purpose, he said, was to propose such amendments to this "arrangement," as he contemptuously termed it several times, as would permit free trade between the United States and Canada in those things which the farmer sells. He desired merely to know if the tariff board could supply any information as to why the duties should be retained on these things.

The Cummins move gives evidence of the intention of the progressives to stab the bill in the back, but to proceed consistently with their own policy of studying all tariff changes through the medium of the tariff board. Of course, it will take days if not weeks for the tariff board to prepare its reports upon the many subjects named by Cummins. These reports cannot be presented and studied between now and March 4.

The move of the insurgents is considered a deliberate one to put the administration in a hole and to make political capital among the farmers. The insurgents want an extra session, to oust Lorimer, to carry direct election of senators and to begin upon a wholesale tariff revision.

Senator Burrows, acting for Lorimer, is pressing for a vote, believing that the Lorimer side will win. Senator Gallinger, a pro-Lorimer man, recalled his announced intention to speak on the case, remarking incidentally that the anti-Lorimer resolution would be defeated.

By co-operating with Cummins, Hale now has lifted from his own shoulders and those of a few associates the burden of responsibility for an extra session and distributed it all over the chamber.

THE JAPANESE TREATY

Taft Appeals to Governor of California In Its Behalf

Washington, Feb. 24.—Anxious that the California legislature shall take no action inimical to the new treaty of trade and commerce between the United States and Japan, which is now before the senate, President Taft telegraphed to Governor Johnson of California asking him to explain the treaty arrangement to both houses of the legislature. The president's message says:

"I have the resolution transmitted by you. The treaty and the assurance from Japan as to the continuance of the recent arrangement are exactly such as you approved when the secretary of state and I explained them to you. Will you not explain this to the two houses of your legislature, to prevent action by reason of a misunderstanding?"

RAILROADS CANNOT RAISE THEIR RATES

Increase Refused by Interstate Commerce Board

Washington, Feb. 24.—The interstate commerce commission unanimously decided against the railroads in both the "eastern" and "western" cases. The decision, eagerly awaited by roads and shippers alike, was handed down late yesterday.

Proposed advances in class freight rates in official classification territory, aggregating among all the railways in the territory approximately $27,000,000 a year, were disapproved by the commission.

In the case involving the increases by the railroads in western trunk line territory the commission also declined to approve the proposed advances in commodity rates.

The carriers in both cases are required to cancel on or before March 10 their advanced tariffs and restore their former rates, which are the rates now in effect.

STATE HOUSE IS BESIEGED

Great Woman Suffrage Demonstration at Boston

THOUSANDS MARCH IN PARADE

Five Hundred Squeeze Into Committee Room, the Capacity of Which Is Reckoned at Less Than Half That Number, and Overflow Meetings Are Largely Attended—Each Side Has Counsel In Presenting Arguments

Boston, Feb. 24.—The most remarkable woman suffrage demonstration ever witnessed in Boston ended just before midnight when thousands of women who besieged the state house to tell the members of the joint committee on constitutional amendments why women should or should not vote, fired their last broadside of verbal artillery.

Suffragettes and anti-suffragists, they were a tremendous host of earnest, militant femininity, a living expression of what a political campaign of the future will be, should the suffragettes win their cause.

From Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the fighting suffragette of England, to Mrs. J. B. Millett, a quiet-mannered Boston woman, who spoke for the antis, every argument and phase of the whole whole gamut of opinions on the question of "Votes for Women" were presented for the enlightenment of the committee.

Committee room 240, the biggest in the state house, was not one-hundredth big enough to hold those who wanted to get inside. Its capacity is reckoned at 200, but fully 500 were packed and jammed within. The windows and doors had to be kept open wide to prevent the throng from suffocating. Hisses and applause and numerous verbal tilts enlivened the hearing.

The suffragette host was marshalled in Park square early in the evening. With banners and transparencies they marched in martial array through the streets to the state house grounds. The colors of their faith, green, white and violet—signifying "Give Women Votes"—were pinned on every breast and furnished the color scheme for many of the elaborate costumes that were swept along the wintry streets.

House bills 116 and 582, which propose to give women the vote by striking out the word "male" from the constitution, were the theme of the legislative hearing.

John W. Sherman, a lawyer, appeared as official representative and spokesman of the suffragettes, and Charles R. Saunders, also a lawyer, appeared for the antis.

Hundreds of the suffragettes held an overflow meeting in Ford hall on Ashburton Place, where many leaders addressed them amid scenes of great enthusiasm. Other hundreds shivered for long hours on the state house grounds, while suffragette champions courted pneumonia and sore throat, haranguing for the cause.

The suffragette speakers were Hiram K. Moderwell, Mrs. Sue A. Clark, Henry Abrahams, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Edwin D. Mead, Mrs. Charles Park and Mrs. Teresa A. Crawley.

The anti-suffragist speakers were Mrs. J. B. Millett, Professor William T. Sedgwick and Mrs. A. J. George.

Mr. Saunders himself, as the attorney for the Massachusetts Association Opposed to the Extension of Suffrage to Women, delivered the feature address against the bills.

RUSSIA HOLDS UP TROOPS

Points Now in Dispute With China Can Be Easily Adjusted

St. Petersburg, Feb. 24.—The treaty differences between Russia and China will be settled by arbitration. Intercession by foreign powers brought about the change in Russia's attitude.

The foreign office announces that China's answer to four out of the six points in the Russian note relative to the treaty of 1881 is wholly satisfactory, and that the remaining two can be easily adjusted.

Further pressure on China, it is stated, is not contemplated, and the idea of a military demonstration has been abandoned.

Boston, Feb. 24.—Manslaughter was the verdict returned against William R. Remington by a jury in the superior criminal court. Remington was indicted for second degree murder following the death by shooting of Max Sorokien in his grocery store at 203 Harrison avenue on July 31, 1910.

The government put in evidence an alleged confession by Remington in which he stated that he committed the crime while suffering for want of morphine.

PARK THEATRE.

As a keen observer of men and manners, James Forbes, author of "The Commuters," now playing at the Park theatre, Boston, has no equal in the large army of American playwrights. That he is a master of his craft was proven when his famous comedy, "The Chorus Lady" was produced, and become a whirlwind success. He followed this up with "The Traveling Salesman," which has caused millions to laugh. For the third time he has hit the bull's eye of success with his latest play, "The Commuters," which the Chicago "Daily News" characterizes as "the play with a thousand laughs." The story of "The Commuters" centers about Larry and Hetty Brice, a young couple who reside in a suburb of New York. The husband's boon companion is Sammy Fletcher, a bachelor, with a strong distaste for life in the suburbs. Possessing the intuitive qualities common to a great many wives, Mrs. Brice assumes that her husband's occasional annoying but innocent divergences from the straight and narrow path are due to the influence of Sammy. Mr. Brice, wishing to overcome these wifely prejudices invites Sammy to spend a day at his suburban home. The bachelor's unexpected advent in the Brice household causes a temporary breach between the young people. In his attempt to repair the damage, Sammy only succeeds in bringing down upon him the wrath of both husband and wife. After a series of laughable complications and ludicrous situations, in which a number of typical suburbanites participate, the tangle is straightened out.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Gertrude Hoffmann at B. F. Keith's Theatre is proving one of the biggest drawing cards that popular playhouse has ever had, and anyone who has seen her mammoth production and Miss Hoffmann herself in twelve different impersonations of well-known stage celebrities can readily explain the popularity of this feature. For the coming week Miss Hoffmann will vary her program considerably, one of the new features being a gorgeous production of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," with a beautiful stage setting and light effects, and the wood nymphs and wonderful music that has proved one of the biggest hits in her entire renortoire. Such popular features as the bathing girls, the bell girls, etc., will be retained and an exceptionally strong surrounding bill has been provided. One of the features will be the return to Boston of J. K. Murray and Clara Lane, the old Castle square favorites who have for the past year been playing with wonderful success in the West in a musical sketch called "A Quiet Honeymoon." In fact, this has proved one of the great successes of recent years in vaudeville, and the return to Boston where these popular players have so many friends, will be an event. On the same bill will be a New York Hippodrome attraction, Hoderveld's Simian Jockeys, a troupe of trained monkeys that ride horses, and do all sorts of bareback stunts. Other features are Hawthorne and Burt, the Hebrew comedians in a new Sketch, Van Hoven, the mad magician Eddie Mack and Dot Williams in a comedy sketch, and the Dennis Brothers in hair raising feats on the revolving ladder.

COLONIAL THEATRE.

At the Colonial Theatre, Boston, on Monday, for a limited engagement Jos. M. Gaites will present the new musical play "The Girl of My Dreams." There will be a large cast of principals, headed by that clever team Johnny Hyans and Leila McIntyre. Miss McIntyre has always been regarded as one of the cleverest comediennes, but until Mr. Gaites provided her with this vehicle, the book of which was written by Wilbur D. Nesbit (the Innocent Bystander of the Chicago Evening Post and President of the Famous Forty Club, and Otto Hauerbach and the music by Karl Hoschna, composer of "Three Twins," "Bright Eyes" and Madam Sherry," she had never been provided with a character so suited to her peculiar talents. As Lucy Medders, a little Quakeress, on her first visit to a city she presents a character at once amusing and altogether human. The humor is extremely pleasing and entertaining, and the music is not only high class, but exceedingly catchy and melodious. Besides the principals Mr. Gaites will bring to the Colonial a chorus of young women who have never yet had to ask the services of a beauty doctor. The music in "The Girl of My Dreams" is said to be one of its most attractive features. The story of the piece tells of a bachelor's downfall before the charms of a demure little Quaker girl.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

"Arms and the Man," which Mr. Craig will produce at the Castle Square Theatre next week, is a brilliant satirical comedy by George Bernard Shaw, whose "You Never Can Tell" made an emphatic hit at that house two seasons ago. "Arms and the Man" was first played in this country by Richard Mansfield, and the success that he made with it will doubtless be repeated by Mr. Craig. Of especial interest also is the fact that the scenes, characters and plot of "The Chocolate Soldier," the most popular comic opera of the day, are taken from "Arms and the Man."

Mr. Shaw's play is delightful throughout because it is genuine comedy. It is merriment in the best sense of the word. its action takes place in Bulgaria, but the characters are universal. Its first scene is the chamber of Raina, daughter of a major in the Bulgarian army who has gone to the war. During the night the retreating army of the enemy is pursued through the village, and Bluntschli climbs the waterspout, seeking escape, and finds refuge in Raina's boudoir. Startled at first she soon realizes the humor of the situation, which is added to by Mr. Shaw's clever dialogue. She feeds Bluntschli, for he is exhausted with hunger, from her store of chocolates, and as the curtain falls on the first act she leaves him slumbering peacefully in calm possession of her room. This is the starting point of a succession of situations no less ingenious, and no less filled with wit and humor.

The leading character of Bluntschli will be acted by Mr. Craig with Miss Young as the heroine Raina.

GREAT PRODUCING MANAGER.

The firm of Liebler & Co., who are responsible for the production of the famous newspaper play "The Fourth Estate" playing at the Shubert Theatre, Boston to crowded houses, today is considered by theatrical experts to be the greatest producing firm in the world, and the name of this organization as sponsor for any attraction has come to be regarded in the world of the stage as a guarantee of its merit. To those on the inside, Liebler & Co. principally is George C. Tyler, and it is Mr. Tyler who is America's greatest producing manager. When a play is offered Mr. Tyler he judges it absolutely upon its merits, An unknown author may have his play read because it has been his particular effort to develop talent from the unknown. And often he is of great assistance, supplying the technique which a new author is so often in need of. Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford had their first efforts in "The Fourth Estate" and "The Little Brother of the Rich" recognized by Mr. Tyler, as did Walter Hackett with "The White Sister" in which Miss Viola Allen is now playing. Year by year the firm of Liebler & Co., has become greater. This season its stars number: Viola Allen, Margaret Anglin, Olga Nethersole, Annie Russell, Gertrude Elliott, Bessie Abbott, Lena Ashwell, Emmy Wehlen, May Irwin, George Arliss, Walker Whiteside, H. B. Warner, Wm. T. Hodge, "Chevalier," Dustin Farnum and Edward Terry. The attractions include: "Marriage a la Carte," "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," "The Man from Home," "The Fourth Estate," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "The White Sister" "The Melting Pot," and "When All Has Been said."

TAKEN TO STATE PRISON

Two Lynn Bandits Will Soon Go to the Electric Chair

Boston, Feb. 24.—The two survivors of the trio of bandits who shot and killed Thomas Landregan, a Lynn shoe manufacturer, and Policeman James S. Carroll, in an attempt to rob Landregan of $1500 which he was taking from the bank last June, were taken to the Charlestown state prison yesterday afternoon. They will be electrocuted the week beginning March 5.

The doomed men are Wassill Icankowski, aged 19, and Andree Isten, aged 21. The third member of the gang was killed by the police.

The holdup and chase of the robbers was one of the most sensational events of the kind that ever happened in Lynn. The police of that city distinguished themselves in running down the three men. The two survivors were tried an deonvicted of murder. They were locked up in the Salem jail until yesterday.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TORIES WOULD DELAY ISSUE

May Try to Force Deadlock on the Veto Question

BOMB DROPPED BY CHURCHILL

Announcement That Government Will Havc Measure Which Will Deprive Landowners of Plural Votes Causes Consternation, as It Strikes Tory Party to Its Very Vitals—Asquith's Bill Is Strongly Backed

London, Feb. 24.—Dismayed by the overwhelming success of the government on the first reading of the veto bill, curtailing the powers of the house of lords, the Tories now plan a deadlock, if possible, on the measure until after the coronation of King George V, hoping thus to put the Liberals in the position of having to create a number of new peers in order to force the measure through the upper chamber.

Lord Lansdowne's counter bill for a reform of the lords is regarded by many expert politicians as more in the nature of an attempt to delay the issue and force a deadlock than as a real surrender of the powers asserted by the house of lords.

A little scene which came and went with the rapidity of a flashlight during Secretary Churchill's speech has stirred the country more than anything else that has happened in the exciting days it is passing through.

Mr. Churchcill had just said in the quietest tones imaginable, as if he were only speaking about the weather or the price of electricity per kilowat. "In addition to home rule, the government will have a measure for creating a fair and evenly constituted second chamber."

He was about to proceed when from the Tory benches came excited cries of "When?" "When?"

For a moment Churchill was taken off his guard. But he recovered himself in a second by replying: "I cannot reveal the government's intentions as to its future policy on a chance question."

His words carried dismay to the already well cowed Tories. They mean the death knell of plural voting on the part of wealthy real estate owners. As the law now stands a man owning property in London, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Cardiff, Cork and Dublin can vote in each place. This explains the absurd custom of holding elections on succeeding days in those cities and stringing a general election along for weeks. The "property owner can use his motor and the rail road and connect with each election day.

Churchill's slip, if it were a slip, foreshadows "One man, one vote." This would strike the Tory party in its very vitals.

The tremendous enthusiasm of the ovation tendered Premier Asquith in the commons after the passage of the veto bill on its first reading has further helped to demoralize the rank and file of the Tories, who had hoped the government majority might be cut down appreciably when the measure came to a direct vote.

Their hopes were dashed when the bill was passed by the full government majority of 124. The vote was 351 to 227.

When the vote was anonunced the Irish Nationalists rose in their places, cheering wildly and waving their hats. The Liberal members quickly emulated their example. This exhibition of enthusiasm was repeated a few minutes later when Asquith quietly left the scene of his victory in his initial action against the lords.

The debate maintained a good oratorical level, but presented few new points. The dominant note of the Unionist speeches was an invitation to the government to settle the matter by agreement.

DEATH OF GENERAL BRUN

Noted French Soldier Was Minister of War Under Premier Briand

Paris, Feb. 24.—General Brun, minister of war in the cabinet of Premier Briand, dropped dead from a paralytic stroke at the offices of the ministry a few moments after he had received the members of his staff in his private office.

General Brun entered the cabinet formed by Briand in July, 1909, when the Clemenceau ministry retired. He had been head of the general staff of the army for three years and a half and was a personal friend of President Fallieres. He was born in 1849.

Canal Work Blocked by Slide

Colon, Feb. 24.—Work on the Culebra section of the Panama canal is practically at a standstill as a result of a landslide which carried half a million cubic yards of earth into the cut. An army of workmen is engaged in clearing away the mass of earth and rock.

"MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY"

Position of Diplomat Who Renounced American Citizenship

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Having renounced his American citizenship to enter the Norwegian diplomatic service, and debarred from his Norwegian citizenship by a technicality, F. H. Gade finds himself a man without a country.

Gade, who was born in Norway, came to this country when 18 and was graduated from Harvard college in 1895. He afterwards became mayor of Lake Forest, Ills., and Norwegian consul in Chicago.

The Norwegian government has refused to grant his citizenship until he has lived in Norway two years. To grant him citizenship would violate a treaty between Norway and the United States.

WOMEN WIN IN SEATTLE

Gill Administration Meets With Another Defeat In Primaries

Seattle, Feb. 24.—For the second time in a month, the votes of women have worked a revolution in Seattle. In the primary election to choose eighteen candidates for councilmen to be voted on March 7, the women voters followed up their vote of Feb. 7, which ousted Mayor Gill and his appointive officers, by defeating all but three candidates who were accused of being on intimate terms with the late Gill administration.

Most of the nominees are wealthy men, and some have devoted much time to the study of civil government. The proportion of women voting, compared with the total registration, was larger than that of the men.

ALMOST FIST FIGHT OCCURS IN HOUSE

Brought About by Use of the Short and Ugly Word

Washington, Feb. 24.—Another bloodless battle was fought on the floor of the house of representatives late yesterday. It occurred during a heated debate on a bill for the leasing of coal lands in Alaska. The lie was passed, and as the short and ugly word rang out, Delegate Wickersham of Alaska made a rush for Representative Mondell of Wyoming, who was seated at a nearby desk.

The big Alaskan's right arm shot out twice in the direction of the man from Wyoming, but members who surrounded the disputants at the time say that both blows fell just short.

The house was in an uproar in an instant. Several members hurled themselves on Wickersham; others were struggling with Mondell, who had gained his feet and was making for his assailant.

Members rushed toward the group from every part of the chamber and soon there were nearly a hundred men in the crowd about the still struggling legislators.

The historic mace of the house, the emblem of authority, was carried to the floor by the house officials. Members, however, had taken the matter in hand and had succeeded in bringing both Wickersham and Mondell to a cessation of hostilities.

"HELLO" ALMOST PROFANE

Its Use Prohibited In Pittsburg Telephone Exchanges

Pittsburg, Feb. 24. — "Hello" henceforth is barred in telephone exchanges, and the public is expected to do its share to stop using the old salutation. The telephone companies here have decided that it is improper in polite telephone conversation, but they have recommended no substitute.

Operators have been forbidden to use the word in calling for a number. One company says that frequently the use of "Hello" is regarded as too harsh, and Pittsburg ministers say it is almost profane. The girls in the big exchanges have one week to stop the use of the salutation.

NO VOTE ON LORIMER

Beveridge Has Not Yet Concluded His Long Speech

Washington, Feb. 24.—No vote was taken on the Lorimer case in the senate Thursday, nor could a date for such a vote be fixed. Senator Beveridge of Indiana spoke four hours, but did not finish. He announced that he would resume today.

Just before the senate went into executive session, Senator Burrows tried for the second time to have a time fixed for a vote. He suggested that it be before adjournment today, but Senator Stone objected because he desired time in which to be heard on the case.

EIGHTY GIRLS WALK OUT

May Affect Hundreds of Other Employes In Lawrence Mill

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 24.—Because their demand for an increase of wages was denied, eighty girls, menders in the Ayer mill, went on strike. It is thought the perching and shipping departments of the mill will be affected, which means that in all several hundred employes will be out of work.

The girls walked out after holding an indignation meeting. While the meeting was in progress, the girls were told to either go to work or go to the agent, or leave the mill. They took the latter course.

Baseball Player's Sacrifice to Increase Speed on Bases

Little Rock, Feb. 24.—A precedent in operations has been established here in a surgical feat performed on Ed Griffith, a promising minor league baseball player, who submitted to his toes being cut off, on advice of his physician, to increase his speed on the bases and in the field.

Griffith has always hit like a cyclone and fielded and threw well, but his abnormally long toes prevented speed.

An express team dumped three or four crates of oranges and grape fruit on Thursday afternoon at the corner of Maple and Chestnut streets, and they were scattered all over the street. The boys got busy.

The Finance Committee of the City Council met Thursday evening and will meet again next Monday evening. Consideration of the annual budget occupied the attention of the committee.

John Adams aerie of Eagles held an entertainment and dance at Protection hall Wednesday evening. The entertainment included songs by Duncan McKimmock and Bert Ranson, buck and wing dancing by Michael O'Brien.

The submarines of the Atlantic torpedo fleet, Cuttlefish, Tarantula, Viper, Grayling, Bonita, Narwhal, Salmon, Snapper, Stingray and Tarpon, all built at Quincy, and the tenders Castine and Severn, will leave the Norfolk yard about March 1 for Chesapeake bay, where they will operate during March, April and May.

MEN'S SUPPER AT ATLANTIC

Men Must Serve All of the Suppers Hereafter

About 140 members of the Atlantic Memorial church gathered in the vestry of the church Thursday evening to partake of an excellent supper served by the men. An efficient corps of servers and waiters made it possible for all to be served quickly and well, and the bountiful supply of viands allowed no one to go away wanting. The menu included: Roast beef, mashed potatoes, mashed turnip, boiled onions, pickles, celery, rolls, pie and coffee.

After the supper two excellent vocal solo were rendered by Mr. Sulias of Somerville with Miss Annie Harding as accompanist, and then a social hour was enjoyed. The object of the supper was to give the people of the church an opportunity to get acquainted as well as to give the women a chance to see what the men could do. The lower floor of the church was well filled, and the guests acknowledged a like condition at the conclusion of the supper.

The committees in charge of the supper were as follows: Reception—B. F. Thomas, W. F. Cummings and Charles A. Hall. Waiters: Charles E. Cherrington, William Harding, Paul Butler, George Bean, Percival Hall, David Hamilton, George Hight, Jr. Service: Charles Safford, Lyndon D. Gurney, Frank Badger, Kenneth Blake, Charles Hadlock, William Buckley, Henry Hallock, and Edgar E. Wyllie. The corps of servers and waiters was so divided that everything went like clockwork, and the ladies were greatly astonished at the ability of their husbands, brothers, etc. The coffee which was made by Edgar E. Wyllie was very much in demand and as may be imagined was of rare excellence. The better half of the Atlantic Memorial church is not a suffragist, but she is willing that the men should serve the suppers hereafter since this first attempt was crowned with such great success.

DAVIS CLASS BANQUET.

The Red and Blue banquet of the Davis class was held in the vestry of the Calvary Baptist church Monday evening. Members of the class served an excellent supper to about 50 men. The membership contest between the Reds and the Blues was won by the former. J. E. Mundie, president of the class, acting as toastmaster called on John L. Miller as the speaker of the evening. The thought of his address was taken from the text: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth for thee to do, do it with thy might." The field of endeavor pointed out was broad, including physical, mental and spiritual striving, with special emphasis on the latter.

In addition to the address by Mr. Miller, the pastor spoke briefly, and all the members were called upon to respond to toasts. The sentiments expressed were fine and the post prandial exercises were surely a source of inspiration to all present.

LOCAL SPORTS.

Quincy council, K. of C., will run the second meet of the pool tournament in the club rooms tonight. A large number of members will compete and the interest and enthusiasm is running high.

Saturday evening Quincy Council will have a prize pitch party followed by a collation and entertainment. This is one of the course of the Saturday evening socials greatly enjoyed by the members and their friends.

The Quincy High boys will meet Powder Point Academy in the relay races of the B. A. A., at Mechanics Building on Saturday.

The Milton hockey team lost to Boston at the Boston Arena on Thursday 12 to 1.

The Old Colony Driving club held its annual banquet on Thursday evening at the Braintree Town Hall with members of the Brockton and Dorchester clubs as guests. A gold pin was presented to Theron L. Tirrell the retiring treasurer.

Quincy High was to meet Thayer Academy in Braintree this afternoon, but for some reason or other the latter arranged a game with Braintree High and Quincy will not play today.

THE D. A. R. CONCERT

Adelphi Male Quartet with Mrs. Carpenter as Reader

The concert given under the auspices of the Abigail Phillips Quincy chapter, D.A.R. in the Wollaston Congregational church Thursday evening was a most successful affair. It was a delight to listen to such singing as the Adelphi male quartet. The program was a careful preparation of a repertoire to which they did full justice. It was, as is customary with this quartet, agreeably varied. The audience was wholly appreciative of the exceptional ability of Mrs. Carpenter and her monologue was full of exasperating familiarity especially to the ladies. The high standard which the organist Mr. Weston has developed is well known, and his interpretation of his numbers were masterly in every way. During the course of the program those taking part were most heartily applauded and there were several encores and by special request Mr. Hunting sang "The Rosary" by Nevin.

ELKS OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Series of Boxing Matches Followed by Banquet

A large number of Elks and their friends gathered at Alpha hall Thursday evening to celebrate the sixth anniversary of Quincy lodge. The entertainment took the form of a series of boxing matches during which an array of talent appeared.

The first being of three rounds was between Willie McDonald of West Quincy and Robert Volk of Quincy, both well known young men. Jack Edwards of Roxbury was the referee, John Gillant timekeeper and Eddie Bean was the announcer.

The second bout was between Billy Burke, 105-pound champion of West Quincy, and Edward Fitzgibbon.

The next bout was between Patsy Duggan, 145 pounds, and Billy Sullivan of South Boston. The men were evenly matched and gave a good exhibition.

Then came vocal solos by William McDonnell and little Fred Vose.

Bout number four was between Young Brennan of West Quincy and Jack Reiley of Philadelphia. Early in the first round in warding a blow, Reiley got hit in the pit of the stomach which doubled him up and he quit.

Then Johnnie Morris and Harry Kelly of Boston, both 133 pounds, gave a three round exhibition bout.

John Gillant, 115 pounds, of Boston, and Al. Malnati of Quincy, 123 pounds, had a bout of four rounds and the sound of the gong at the end of the fourth round just saved Malnati from a knock out.

The last bout of the evening was one of six rounds between Joe Berchill and Billy Ryan, two Cambridge boys. This was very fast and the spectators witnessed some good boxing. While the bout resulted in a draw, it was evident had there been another minute in the last round Berchill, although much the heavier of the two men would have been knocked out.

During the first part of the evening and between the bouts an orchestra furnished music. The exhibition over the party adjourned to Union hall where Thompson served a banquet which included lobster salad, creamed oysters, rolls, coffee, ice cream and cake.

GIANTS MOVE UP IN LEAGUE

Tigers and Athletics Fight It Out for Lost Place

The Athletics and Tigers were unable to scare up more than three men on a side for their match in the Makaria league series at the Granite street alleys Thursday evening. The first string was nip and tuck but the Athletics finally got the strangle hold and won by one pin. The second string went to the Tigers by 29 pins and the third reverted to the Athletics by 19 pins. The big margin in the second string gave the Tigers a lead of 9 in totals and the points were split, two on a side. Jones and Troupe the opposing captains were tied for highest single string with 99 apiece. Troupe won out on best three strings with a total of 270.

GIANTS—PIRATES.

By defeating the Pirates, three points out of four, the Giants passed the Cubs and now have a good grip on second place. The Pirates were obliged to play with a dummy which of course was a disadvantage. In the first string, S. Bates' 109 aided the Giants in winning by 22 pins. The second string went to the Pirates by 6 and the third to the Giants again by 7 pins, giving the totals to the Giants by 14 pins.

"Stan" Bates was high man on single string with 109 but he was unable to continue on that plane and was passed by Dell, captain of the Giants, in totals. He had a pinfall of 277.

The only change in the standing of the Makaria league teams comes in the breaking of the tie for second place between the Giants and the Cubs. QUINCY AVIATION SCHOOL.

An aviation school is to be opened at Quincy as soon as the weather becomes suitable for flying. It will be on the grounds of the Harvard Aeronautical Society at Squantum and already several pupils have been enrolled. This announcement made this week by the Burgess Company and Curtis, the Marblehead aeroplane builders, under whose name the school is to be conducted, assures to the aviation grounds interesting events to cover the spring, summer and fall months, and is expected to do much to encourage amateurs and others to take up the science of flying.

W. Starling Burgess, head of the Burgess Company and Curtis has just arrived from Augusta, Ga., where he has been attending Wright Brothers' aviation school for several weeks, coming home early on account of the airship show, and he is enthusiastic over the plans for the school at Squantum. Before April 1, a hangar for three or four aeroplenes is to be built on the field.

JIM SULLIVAN IS ON THE WARPATH

Former A. A. U. Head Would Revolutionize Amateur Sports.

RECOMMENDS SOME CHANGES

Thinks Drafting by Big Clubs Should Be Done Away With—New Plan Would Concentrate Responsibility of Registration Committee.

Jim Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic union, is on the warpath. Needless to say Jim Sullivan means business. When the genial though dynamic, good natured though aggressive emperor of amateur athletics yanks his six feet of energy out of the revolving chair in his throne room in New York city and, hurling his perfecto out of the window, forcefully opines that such and such a thing for the betterment of sport is going to happen events generally shape themselves in conformity with his remarks.

Recently Jim threw away his perfecto, got down the big stick and said things that warrant certain parties taking to the cyclone cellar. Mr. Sullivan will recommend changes in three rules which if carried out will affect clubs, colleges and officials in all parts of this country and Canada.

He will send a letter to every member of the national body recommending that the union abolish all district registration committees, prohibit any athletes from joining and competing for one club until two years after he shall have been released from another club and prohibit any college man from competing for a club until after his graduation from college.

"In my mind these changes are essential to good, clean sport," said Mr. Sullivan recently. "The little clubs must be protected. The time has come now when we must stop the unscrupulous recruiting by the big clubs if we want to encourage sport among the little fellows.

Big Clubs Draft Youngsters.

"For several years the little clubs throughout the country have been developing champions. And what has been the result? As soon as a boy displayed good form a recruiting officer from a big club would drag him off with promises of this and that kind, with the result that the clubs that had struggled hard to develop him lost his membership just when he should have been earning them fame.

"I believe, and I think every fair minded man is of the same opinion, that the big clubs should not be allowed to persuade an athlete to leave the club in which he has been developed."

In regard to the college rule Mr. Sullivan said:

"I think that rule will be best for all concerned. Being a member of a college team does not mean that a collegian shall not be allowed to compete in open competition. To the contrary, the Amateur Athletic union invites him to compete. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred an athlete prefers to compete in his college colors, but some of them like to compete both for a club and a college. This is what they are allowed to do now.

"During the summer vacation they are allowed to compete for any club. As it is during this period of the year that most of the championships are held, many college men are recruited by the big clubs. They remain with the club during the summer season, win championships and points for it and then are rarely seen again in its colors. This also helps to discourage the small clubs. They cannot offer sufficient inducements to get the champion collegians to run in their colors, with the result that they are further handicapped in the championships.

Responsibility Divided.

"There is too much divided responsibility with the registration committees. Time and again claims are made by athletes and clubs that they are not getting justice from the committees in their districts. When traced they invariably result in one committeeman placing the blame on another. My plan is to concentrate responsibility. If each district had one man as a judge of its athletes' actions there would be no way in which that man could evade his responsibility.

"He should be a high class man, a man of integrity and one who knows the rules thoroughly. I think it would be a good scheme to pay him a salary. He could then be held accountable for his actions and if found wanting could be removed at a minute's notice. Under the present rules it would take weeks to bring charges against a committee, and then it would be mighty hard to remove it."

Mr. Sullivan's scheme might work well in the east for a time, but it will not be tolerated in the west. In the east some of the clubs that have not the proper facilities for bringing out the best that is in a boy will fight to have such a rule made, but they will soon tire of it. Fewer youngsters will join their ranks because they will be deprived of eventually joining one of the world famous organizations.

In the west the clubs are made up almost entirely of college men. The Chicago A. C., Illinois A. C., Olympic A. C., Seattle A. C. and Multnomah A. C. are represented almost entirely by university men. To put through a rule prohibiting college men from competing for a club until after their graduation would mean the end of athletics in the west.

In Evidence.

Yes,
I guess
You will have to admit
Without arguing it
That the backbone of winter
Is some classy splinter.
You may break, you may shatter,
With tremendous clatter
Every vase
About the place
If you will,
But the backbone of winter is a different pill.
It isn't brittle
Or a soft stick for small boys to whittle.
It isn't made of plastic clay—
Nay;
Not on your Uncle Bill's tintype!
When it is ripe
It requires an extraordinary gent
To make a dent
In its frame
Or to bend the same.
You think as snows diminish
You see its finish,
But wait.
It doesn't forget the date
Nor why it is on the job.
It will bob
Up when you least expect
And connect
With an old fashioned storm
In flawless form.
There comes a gushing thaw;
But, law,
That doesn't mean all!
The blow will fall,
And it will be some blow,
Accompanied by snow
And trimmings that are not Exactly hot.
No; it is here to stay
Until it goes away.
On that
You can bet your old straw hat.

Eight Hour Naval Bill Would Be Great Blow to Fore River and Other Private Shipyards

Cost Will Be Very Much Larger at the Navy Yards

Massachusetts interests in the Fore River shipyard will suffer seriously if the Senate adopts the House naval appropriation bill. This was agreed upon Wednesday by the Bay State members of Congress. As a result the two senators are being looked to to save the yard and to put back into the bill the provision for a floating crane for the Charlestown navy yard. Senator Lodge has already announced he will offer the amendment for the crane. This was knocked out in the House in spite of the fact the navy yard and the navy department have asked for it.

A Washington dispatch of Friday to the Herald says: The action of the House in stipulating that the vessels of war authorized in the "building program" of the naval bill should be constructed under the eight-hour law brought a delegation of representatives of the shipyards on the Atlantic coast before Secretary Meyer today to ascertain the exact extent and meaning of the labor provision. The delegation was headed by Francis T. Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company.

Secretary Meyer was unable to enlighten the shipbuilders, informing them that the matter at present time was wholly a legislative question. The secretary said he would appear before the Senate naval committee Monday to discuss the features of the pending bill, and indicated that he would place before the committee all the information in his possession bearing upon the difference in cost of vessels contracted for under the eight-hour law and those built without this restriction.

The interpretation of the eight-hour proviso in the naval bill of last year caused some confusion and concern to ship builders when bids were asked for battleships and other vessels authorized. The attorney-general held that the provision meant that all labor performed at the "situs" of the vessel under construction must be controlled by the eight-hour law.

Neither the navy department nor department of justice, however, were willing to say whether "situs" referred to the entire shipyard or only the immediate location of the ship, declaring that this was for the courts to decide if the matter were brought up.

THE EIGHT HOUR DAY IS A VICTORY FOR LABOR BUT A BLOW TO PRIVATE SHIPYARDS

HIGH SCHOOL CONCERT.

The Quincy High school concert which is to take place Saturday, March 4 in High school hall promises to be one of the best of its kind ever given in Quincy. The High school orchestra will be assisted by a number of graduates in rendering the instrumental music. The cantata "Joan of Arc" by Gaul is to be the principal feature of the concert.

The High school chorus of 150 voices will be assisted by Miss Rosetta Key, soloist at Dr. Edward Everett Hale's church, Boston; Edward E. Bullock of the Temple quartet; and Bertel A. Willard, instructor in music at Harvard University. Miss Key has a wonderful lyric soprano voice. Mr. Bullock is too well known to need any introduction. Mr. Willard has a magnificent bass voice.

Mrs. Elvie Burnett Willard, instructor at Emerson school of Oratory, Boston, will be the reader. Mrs. Willard has the reputation of being the best imitator of children in the United States.

The double male quartet and the girl's glee club will sing two selections each, and the girl's sextet will sing once. Miss Key and Mr. Willard will render several solos beside taking solo parts in the cantata.

The program has variety and the faithful work of the pupils under Miss Perkins as well as the prestige of the soloists and reader should merit the support of the people of Quincy.

SETTLED FOR $4,000.

The suit of Nettie M. Fraser, administratrix of the estate of Alexander Fraser of Quincy, against the Boston Elevated for $30,000 for the death of Mr. Fraser, which has been on trial at the Superior court at Dedham was settled by agreement Friday. The plaintiff is to receive $4,000.

HYDE PARK FOR ANNEXATION

Vote Was 982 to 744 at a Special Town Meeting

Hyde Park, a Norfolk county town and a part of the Quincy Senatorial district, voted last night, 982 to 744, in favor of annexation to Boston. The article in the warrant read:

"Shall Hyde Park authorize the selectmen to prepare a bill for presentation to the Legislature for the annexation of the whole of Hyde Park to the city of Boston"

The vote was a representative one, as the town only casts about 2,000 votes at a State election.

The action is not final, as will be observed by reading the question on which the vote was taken, and it is very doubtful if the Legislature grants permission.

Quincy and Norfolk county are now interested in the question. Annexation of Hyde Park to Boston would mean a larger county tax upon Quincy and the other Norfolk county towns as the expenses would be decreased very little. It would give Norfolk county a smaller representation in the Legislature. It would make it necessary for people of Quincy and other East Norfolk towns when driving by road to the shire town, to go out of the county in part.

Hyde Park has a population of 15,507 and is the second town by the census in the State. It has 2,055 assessed

TWO PLAYS AT ALLIANCE

Admirably Presented by the Wollaston Dramatic Club.

The Junior Alliance made a very happy choice when the Wollaston Dramatic club was secured to furnish their entertainment Friday evening in the Unitarian chapel. The two plays "Who is who" and "A case of suspension" were given with a snap and dash that would have done credit to players of long experience. The audience, though not as large as might have been desired was highly appreciative and altogether satisfied that he evening was well spent.

The first play "Who is Who," was a farce in one act. Bloomfield Brambleton, a country gentleman was expecting a model young bachelor who was seeking the hand of his daughter, Cicely, and a valet from Mayfair who was recommended by the registry office. The names of the two were not known to Mr. Brambleton and when the valet arrived, his distinguished air marked him as a gentleman of leisure and he was taken for the model young bachelor and was dined and wined by the expectant parent. The young bachelor arrives shortly afterward and he is set to blacking boots, etc., inasmuch as he is taken for the new valet. The superior maid of the household Matilda Jane falls in love with the distinguished valet believing him to be the young bachelor and the plainer daughter of the household reciprocates the affection of the young bachelor each thinking the other is a servant. The tangle is finally straightened out much to the satisfaction of all the parties concerned and much to the amusement of the audience.

All the parts were taken equally well although some gave better opportunity for the display of talent than others. John Norrie as Mr. Bloomfield Brambleton was especially good and Willard E. Keyes took the part of Lawrence Lavender wonderfully well. Matilda Jane, the superior housemaid, was impersonated with skill by Miss Ella Packard. The part of Simonides Swanhopper was a difficult one inasmuch it called for looks and actions and speech which just escaped being simple. Ernest W. Arnold gave an excellent interpretation of the part and deserves special mention. The part of Cicely, Brambleton's daughter was well taken by Mrs. Louise W. Fleming.

Preceding the performance and between the acts some excellent music was furnished by Miss Bertha F. Estes.

The second play "A case of suspension" was a lively college comedy. Three college girls plan a spread in their room and ask three boys of a neighboring college to join them. Prof. Edgerton got wind of the affair and in attempting to thwart it

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

Nobody seems to kick against Wall street when it sees the bright side.

One thing against an extra session is that it would conflict with baseball.

Now that Miss Gould is off our hands let's get down to tacks.

All the Mexican revolution needs is a tent over it and a man at the door to charge admission and take the tickets.

Is the hen really on the job again or have the dealers got frightened and are in a hurry to unload?

The one objection urged to a small House of Representatives is that it would save the government half a million or so a year.

The per capita circulation of money has reached the sum of $34.43, but somehow or other some of us don't catch it either coming or going.

General Keifer of Ohio and Colonel Bartlett of Georgia have been fighting the Civil War over again. We are glad to note that there are no casualties.

The Chicago girl who offers to marry any man who will give her brother $5,000 to build an aeroplane has rather flighty ideas regarding a matrimonial contract.

"Officials are servants and not masters of the people,' " declares the Walker County (Ala.) News. What an unsophisticated "has been" our contemporary must be.

A Milwaukee woman disappeared rather than marry a man with only $13. Served him right. Why did he not raise another dollar or spend a nickel of the $13? He ought to have known that some women are very superstituous.

There will probably be a scarcity of girls over in South Weymouth as a former resident Miss Beatrice Farnham is on her way home to organize a colony for the Navajo county in New Mexico. Miss Farnham is an artist whose specialty is Indians and she says "The west is the place for the woman who wants a manly husband." Don't crowd girls.

As the Home Furnishers' Association of New England has grown in membership and financial strength during the years of the presidency of Col. Henry L. Kincaide and his own busines is ever increasing it would seem to even a most casual observer that any advice given by him would have considerable weight. At the Association banquet and meeting in Boston the other night Mr. Kincaide urged the members to increase the profits of their business by adopting a profit sharing system with their employes. "Watch carefully for a man in your store who shows ability and interest in his business, push him ahead, give him some share in the business, and every time you will profit by it." That is certainly good advice.

Valuation of cities should be the basis of all assessments on account of the Metropolitan Boston Council, because valuation is the proper basis for all taxes. Section 4 of the "Real Boston" bill provides that "said Council shall receive and consider all petitions and memorials relating to the affairs of Metropolitan Boston," so it will be seen that all the business will not be confined to water, parks and sewers. In fact they will hereafter be but a small part of the business of the Metropolitan council as they are well established. Therefore the assessments should not be levied upon cities "in proportion to the amount assessed upon each city or town for Metropolitan water, sewer and park maintenance." Rich towns like Brookline, Milton, and Newton should not ask for any such favoritism, but cheerfully pay according to valuation, and if anything a little more. They can afford to.

PROFITS OF THE MAGAZINES.

An illuminating statement was made recently by Postmaster General Hitchcock bearing on the ability of the magazines to help make up the government's postal deficit. As we have previously shown, the average magazine haul is 1049 miles, while the average newspaper haul is 291 miles. Why should the magazines get nearly four times as much transportation for the same price?

The argument has been advanced, that the magazines, with particular reference to the "muck-raking" type, represent the most active and efficient force now working for a betterment of government, and should be encouraged by low postal rates. While it is true that several magazines are doing excellent work, we would like to leave it to the average reader, if the ordinary magazine represents a higher educational and uplift force than the average newspaper.

Let the citizens walk up to any news stand and cast his eye over the dish water mess of sentimental fiction and padded writeups that make up the body of this mass of alleged literature. A glance at the covers of the majority of these publications gives an idea of how seriously they are to be taken. Sloppy pictures of men and women in garish colors and eccentric attitudes, with undue prominence to the hosiery and petticoats of the women, shows an appeal to the coarser sides of human nature.

The typical magazine story today, even in the better magazines, is one in which the dominating effect is for mere piquant novelty. It is an endeavor to strain the attention and tickle the fancy by the unexpected, without serious study of human nature.

This kind of thing, as Mr. Hitchcock points out, is selling at profits often amounting to nearly $1,000,000. The character of the matter distributed is not such as to warrant a government subsidy.

ENGAGED TO COUNTESS

Rhode Island Man to Wed Divorced Wife of an Austrian

Providence, Feb. 25.—The engagement of Samuel Norris, secretary of the United States Rubber company and a member of the Rhode Island bar, to Countess Margot Von Beroldingen of Newport has been announced to the intimate friends of Norris in Bristol.

It is expected that the wedding will take place in Newport within a short time. At present Countess Von Beroldingen and her mother are visiting friends in Washington and Norris is in New York.

The countess is the daughter of Mrs. Joseph F. Stone of New York and Newport. She did not live very long with her husband, an Austrian, after their marriage, before they were divorced.

TAXI MEN'S STRIKE ENDS

Point at Issue in Boston to Be Settled by Arbitration

Boston, Feb. 25.—The taxi drivers' strike is settled. Under the terms of settlement the Boston Taxi Service company agrees to re-employ every chauffeur and carriage driver who took part in the strike. The question of reinstating the two men whose discharge caused the initial strike order to issue is left to arbitration.

Taxis and cabs were manned yesterday afternoon and sent to the South station, Hotel Lenox, Parker House, Touraine, Young's hotel and the Thorndike, all of which have been without carriage service since the strike was called on the eve of Washington's birthday. One hundred and forty men were affected by the strike.

AT LEAST FIFTEEN DEAD

Miners Are Overwhelmed by Fire In a Nevada Mine

Tonopah, Nev., Feb. 25.—Fifteen bodies of miners burned to death in a fire in the Belmont mine were brought to the surface. It is believed there are from four to eight bodies still in the mine.

The last four bodies removed were frightfully mutilated. They came from the bottom of the shaft, which is 1196 feet deep.

The fire did little damage to the mine. Six Americans are among the fifteen known dead, the rest being Slavs.

TWO PLAYS

became entangled himself. The girls lowered a clothesbasket from the window of their room and were pulling the boys up one by one. The Professor got in and the girls got him half way up before it was discovered that it was not Jack but the Professor. He was made to promise secrecy under threat of being left suspended in mid-air. As the jollification is going on the matron, Miss Ophelia Judkins comes into the room to find the Professor unwillingly capering about the room. After considerable remonstrance she enters into the spirit of the occasion and Kathleen the "maid" and Jonas the "man" who are implicated also are pardoned.

The specialities which went with this play added greatly to the enjoyment of the audience. Miss Nellie A. Louden, taking the part of Kathleen, Miss Elsie Moulton, taking the part of Dorothy and Miss Dorothy Packard, as Alice, all did remarkably well. Miss Moulton costumed as a German maiden met with the special approval of the audience and was called back for an encore.

Miss Packard's song "The Girl With a Bit of a Brogue" was supplemented by the chorus and by several fancy figures in which all the college boys and girls participated.

The audience was startled into profound silence near the conclusion by the rendition of "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland" by a number of Quincy High school students. The inference was plain that the youths behind the scenes were singing in their sleep.

The accompaniments to the songs in the second play were played by Miss Eva Hungerford. The acting was exceptionally good and not a bit amateurish. Willard E. Keyes, as Professor Emilus Edgerton was the star performer. The college boys and girls and the man and the maid all took their parts with ease and ability.

THE IDEAL MAN.

"The ideal man of the twentieth century must be a married man" said Rev. W. B. Barr in his lecture Thursday evening at the United Presbyterian church. The topic of the lecture may be found in the first seven words of the first sentence, "The ideal man of the Twentieth Century." Mr. Barr considered that the man who laid claim to being ideal must be loving. His fondness for wife and children must be so great that the wheels of domesticity will run smoothly. He must be true to his friends and to himself and true to his country by being a good citizen. Most important of all he must be a Christian, true to his God and his fellowmen.

The lecture which was of one hour's duration seemed scarcely fifteen minutes in length because of its great interest and the steady flow of humor running through it as an undercurrent. In giving an idea of what an ideal man should be it was necessary to make much use of his relations with woman. Special emphasis was laid on the domestic side of life although he dwelt upon man's business and social relations to a considerable extent. In illustrating his points, Mr. Barr showed himself a master of the principles of humor and many of the stories told were so new and so ludicrous that the audience was convulsed during a large part of the discourse. But through it all was that grain of good sense and undeniable truth that made the lecture altogether worth while. The church was well filled and Mr. Barr was given a very cordial reception by his former parishioners.

$3,470,000 ASSETS ABOVE LIABILITIES

Boston, Feb. 25.—F. A. Heinze, the New York and Butte copper man, is worth $3,470,000 today above all liabilities, according to the statement in the supreme court of his attorney, Walter I. Badger. The assertion was made during Badger's final argument in Heinze's suit against a score of Boston brokers and money lenders whom he charges with conspiring to defraud him of securities valued at $300,000.

During the panic of 1907, when Heinze was being crowded to the wall by Wall street, he borrowed $700,000 through A. D. F. Adams of Boston, who is now in jail for larceny from customers. He gave Adams $800,000 worth of stocks and bonds as security for the loans. Adams disposed of the securities through the various defendants and Heinze charges the transactions were fraudulent.

GIRLS PRESENT A FARCE

Pleasing Program by the Girls Friendly Society

Every seat was occupied at Colonial hall Friday evening, when St. Chrysostoms branch of the Girls Friendly society gave an exceptionally good entertainment.

When the curtain went up sixteen young ladies in artistic Greek costumes, all white, with long flowing hair, made a picture which was delightful to the eye, even before they made a pose. They illustrated with poetical gestures Longfellow's poem "Sandalphon" set to music and gave expression by posturing, waving of arms and pantomime with ease and grace. The young ladies were: Misses Amy Rhodes, Lydia Hennigar, Edna Fowler, Muriel Wheelen, Helen Ketchum, Robina Atkins, Lillian Purdon, Edith Atkins, Alice Hennigar, Zoe Fowler, Pearl Bellyea, Gertrude Allen Bladys Parlee, Nettie Parlee, Helen Croucher. Mrs. Frederick H. Steenstra read the poem and Miss Louisa Allison Ross was at the piano.

Mrs. William H. Spooner of Wollaston Park sang "My Dreams" by Tosi, in a sweet soprano voice which found much favor as did her second selection of a southern lullaby with negro dialect.

Mrs. Morgan J. Walker of West Somerville gave a reading "The professional boarder." Her success lies in her ability to select the prominent characteristics of the characters she interprets in such a way as to make it easily possible for her hearers to visualize them and thus make them complete. She was warmly applauded and pleased her listeners with a southern story which gave a glimpse of a Negro Mammy and childish singing of an old familiar tune.

Misses Jessie and Edna Fowler sang "O that we two were Maying" with a requisite lightness and dash. They are always received with enthusiasm and responded to an encore.

Fred L. Doten of Boston rendered Capriccio by Goltermann in such a manner as to show him to be a professional and pleasing celloist. Full appreciation was shown by the audience and he responded by playing Schuman's "Traumerei."

A farce "Dead Heat" was lively and very funny and showed many awkward situations when things are taken for granted especially matrimonial proposals with eligible Counts and ended with the audience guessing which one after all married the jolly good fellow Tommy Morton. The characters were:

Bertha Vanderwade, Mabel Anderson
Fannie Alliston, Ruth Parker
Christine Vanderwade, Ruth Bean
Lady Emma Fitzhugh, Margaret Sibley
Susan, Dorothy Bean

MORE TRIPLETS.

News comes from Ashland that Mr. and Mrs. Maurice F. Fitzgerald of Pond street, are receiving congratulations upon the birth of triplets, three sons having been born to them Thursday. Mother and children are reported doing finely.

Quincy has triplets born on Nov. 11 last to Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wentworth, all of whom are flourishing.

FORESTERS' ANNIVERSARY.

John Adams court, Foresters of America, celebrated its twelfth anniversary last evening, taking the form of a ladies' night. The affair was held at Clan McGregor hall and was very largely attended. Everything was of an informal nature, and there was no set program of entertainment. There were several vocal solos during the evening by James Cowie, Jas. Murphy, John Troupe, Miss Alice Williams and others.

Dancing was the chief diversion and this was continued until 1 o'clock. During the evening ice cream and refreshments were served by an efficient committee.

HISTORIC QUINCY.

The lecture on "Historic Quincy" by Charles H. Johnson was delivered in Coddington hall Friday evening before a large audience. The two hundred pictures used in illustration were thrown upon the screen by means of the new reflectorscope which was operated by its manufacturer, Mr. Handy.

The lecture was illuminating and interesting in every respect, and met with the heartiest approval of the audience. Miss Margaret Langtry of Boston rendered with great skill two violin selections, both of which were encored.

MILTON

The Milton hockey teams were all defeated on the holiday but all played gamely and fought to the finish. The Academy team would have had a better show with its two regular players in the lineup instead of substitutes. The High school was clearly outclassed by Somerville High, and the Milton hockey club lost by a small margin.

The carnival of the East Congregational church was a great success from start to finish, and the untiring efforts of the committees is to be commended.

Much interest is being shown in East Milton in the Quincy Rowing Association which will open March 4 in the Coliseum, Quincy.

Milton High school defeated Braintree High by a score of 42 to 19 on the holiday and thus won their way to a place at the top of the league.

John Lawton died at his home on Adams street last Saturday. He was buried in the family lot in the Milton cemetery on Monday. Heart trouble was said to be the cause of his death.

Box 67 was rung in Monday afternoon for a slight fire in the house on Adams street owned by Mr. McDonald and occupied by the Skinner family.

The alarm at Box 47 Thursday afternoon was for a chimney fire in one of the houses on Brookside street off Canton avenue.

P. E. Bates has consented to run for selectman and his chances for election are very bright.

The Thursday Evening club held a very enjoyable whist party in Ellsworth hall Thursday evening.

The Silent Five were defeated by Portland Y. M. C. A. on the holiday by one basket. The first game o fthe season was played in East Milton on Christmas day and was won by the Milton team.

The cake and candy sale held in the Episcopal church, East Milton, on Tuesday evening was very successful.

The annual ladies' masquerade was held in Cunningham gymnasium Thursday evening. The men were all curious to get a peep inside and see the costumes but the verdict was "No men admitted" and the letter of the law was carried out.

The Milton Academy girls had a very pretty Washington party on the holiday. All were gowned in colonial costumes and a colonial tea was served by a number of the youthful matrons.

Herbert Clark of Adams street is ill with scarlet fever. His case is not considered dangerous by the physician in charge.

Henry E. Sheldon and wife started for Spain this week to be gone until sometime in the month of May.

The town warrant has appeared in the post offices and the atmosphere is becoming more and more political as the time of the town meeting approaches.

Ralph Frethie of East Milton is about town again, having recovered from the effects of a difficult operation.

The Boston Y. M. C. A. defeated the Milton Five on Wednesday by a score of 26 to 20. The Milton Brownies defeated the Chelsea Brownies by the score of 21 to 16.

CHAS. W. GUY WRITES

Of His Trip to Cuba, Panama and Other Ports

Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Guy and Miss Perkins, a sister of Mrs. Guy, returned this week from a 28-days' trip which took them to Havana, San Juan, Colon and the Panama canal, Venezuela, Port of Spain, and Bermuda. They made the trip on the steamship Moltke and report a most interesting and enjoyable time. Mr. Guy, who is of a very observing nature, made copious notes of what he saw on the trip and sent home a series of letters which make very interesting reading. It is the privilege of the Daily Ledger to publish many of these letters which will be read with interest.

Mr. Guys first letter was written on board the steamer on the morning it left Hoboken. In it he says:

We left Quincy Jan. 22, for New York by the Fall River line and arrived in New York the following morning. The ground was covered with snow and it was very cold. We took a ride in one of the "Seeing New York" auto cars, and I was surprised to see what a growth New York had made in the past few years. That afternoon we went to Hoboken as we had obtained a special permit to go aboard the steamer the night before the sailing, as the boat was to leave at 9 o'clock sharp. On account of an accident to the tunnel however it was 9.30 before the steamer started.

There were on board 350 passengers its full compliment, as well as officers, stewards, sailors and others on the pay roll to the number of 387. The rates of fare are from $240 to $1700 per room for the round trip, according to the location of the stateroom. There are seven decks to the boat and we got a good stateroom. Our room is six and one half feet long by ten feet wide. There is an upper and lower birth and a good wide couch on one side of the room. We have a commode with running water and other conveniences. The couch is a good to sleep upon, so that the room will accommodate three. The berths are 24 inches wide with a wide rail. The upper berth is superior to the lower on account of ventilation.

The lower berth sags some, so that it touches our steamer trunk. Each room has an electric fan to keep the air in circulation. This room is the same as the $1,000 rooms although not so high as that of the tony passengers. There are two dining rooms. One on the upper deck and one on the third deck. All eat at the same time and all have the same service. There is no difference, except the tony people pay higher. Being a landsman, and not a sailor, I must talk as a landsman, Hence I will call the lower part the basement. Then comes the first floor, then the second floor, where our dining room is, and the third floor above.

Those that get up at sunrise find on the deck at 6 o'clock coffee and sandwiches. At 7.30 the bugle sounds, and in fifteen minutes sounds again to announce breakfast is ready. It takes an hour for breakfast. All dining cards are printed in English and German. At 11 o'clock we find on deck lemonade, hot coffee, sandwiches and fancy crackers. At 12.30 the bugle sounds twice for lunch in the dining room. At 3 o'clock ice cream, lemonade, hot coffee and sandwiches are served on deck. At 7.30 the bugle again sounds for dinner, the principal meal of the day. It is a good menu, cooked German style, but some of the New Englanders missed their baked beans.

Many no doubt ate too much, causing sea sickness, but being an old sailor, owning a boat on Butler's pond, I did not have a day of sickness.

The next letter, dated Jan. 26, says: We are now running along the Florida coast but there is no land in sight. The waves are high and there is a good light wind. Where our steamer chairs are, which we pay $1 apiece for we can see both sides at once. In the afternoon we saw two steamers and two flat boats showing us we were getting near land. We passed Cape Hatteras in the night, but knew nothing of the roughness. It was cold when we left, but now so warm that we have left off overcoats. As I remarked before our great trouble is we eat too much.

We expect to reach Havana this afternoon. We expect to land at 4 o'clock. I have been making some of my pictures for a little boy, and he appreciates them. The mountains on the left show a beautiful shade of green. We have been 1171 miles from New York and the sail has been a nice one. Havana said to be the most beautiful city in the world is in sight at 4.30. Our people are all dressed in white. The shore and all the city begins to look grand. There are big forts on each side as we enter.

"Remember the Maine." At 5.30 we are not ready to land. We have a look at the Maine. There is not much work done on the coffer dam. I think it will be imposible to tell why she blew up. I do not think the Spaniards did it. If we ever find she did not blow it up where would we be. McKinley opposed war, but the papers of New York, Washington and Boston were for the war. If we had not had war, Porto Rico and the Phillipines would not belong to the United States. Five hundred millions would not have been spent. It is the King's birthday and the band plays God Save the King which is the same tune as America, so that the English and Americans both enjoy it.

We are obliged to stay quite a distance from the wharf as no foreign vessel is allowed to tie up to the wharf, but must send passengers by lighters. We saw one American flag in the harbor one day. It was 8 by 20. About all of the passengers live in the United States but must sail under another flag.

These letters will be continued from day to day.

BRIEFS

Galahad Brotherhood of Christ church holds the last of its popular socials before Lent on Tuesday evening in the parish house. Dancing will follow a short musical program.

The Quincy Point Hose did not arrive at the fire on Main street, Thursday because of a peculiar circumstance. The horse which was drawing the hose pung felt his oats somewhat and became unmanagable. Breaking away from the pung he dashed up the street leaving his burden behind him and thus the hose did not arrive. The recall was rung in before the horse was recovered.

Thursday evening was a gala affair for Wollaston lodge, A. B. S. Five candidates were initiated into the order and two applications read. At the close of the meeting tickets in the form of dainty valentines were sold. Each one containing a ryhme which caused much merriment. Refreshments were served and a social hour spent in singing college songs. All departed for their homes thoroughly satisfied with the evening.

The Ladies Aid society of the Point church are making great preparations for their fair on March 1 and 2. For a number of weeks the ladies have been meeting at the homes of different members, one day each week, for an all-day sew. The usual fancy tables, childrens table ice cream and candy booth and so on will be on hand. An entertainment will be given the first evening by members of the Y. P. R. U. of the First church and a Colonial tea will be given by the ladies. On the second night, Thursday, the entertainment will be given by the Ladies Aid society of the church and a full fledged supper will be provided.

Mr. Bernarth H. Smith, who is to lecture at the Women's club house next Tuesday afternoon is chief of the Bureau of Food and Drug Inspection in Boston and comes most highly recommended by Dr. Harvey M. Wiley. He will tell first handed about what is found in adulterated foods in Boston and about the sanitary conditions of the markets. The meeting is free to the public.

The Y. P. R. U. minstrels will be given in the Unitarian chapel on Friday, March 3. An old fashioned minstrel show including songs, dances, local hits, etc., will be the first part of the program and an olio will follow. "Charlie" Slade has been secured as interlocutor for the minstrels, and well known young men and women connected with the Y. P. R. U. will act as bones, tambos and circle. The olio will contain stunts, vocal and instrumental music, shuffles and clogs and a variety of new and original capers.

The Stewards Study class of the Wollaston M. E. church will meet in the vestry at half past seven. The prayer meeting on Friday night will be followed by a board meeting.

TO PREVENT THE GRIP.
LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE removes the cause. There is only one "BROMO QUININE." Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. 25c.

WIDE SEARCH IS REWARDED

Davie, the "Boy Broker," Is In Grasp of the Law

IS CAPTURED AT RIO JANEIRO

Bostonian Who Had Meteoric Financial Career by Which Prominent Men Were Duped Had Been Sought For Three Months—Secured Many Victims by His Apparent Profession of Religious Feeling

Boston, Feb. 25.—Robert E. Davie, who was familiarly known about Boston as the "boy broker" and who suddenly disappeared late in November, leaving behind him many people who are said to have lost upwards of $300,000 through entrusting their money to his care for investment, has been arrested in Rio Janeiro.

News of Davie's arrest upon information sent to police officials throughout the world, in the form of a circular bearing the broker's picture and description, came to Deputy Superintendent of Police Watts at police headquarters in the form of a cablegram which read as follows:

"Davie arrested. Wire instructions. Advisable obtain provisional order of detention from Secretary of State. Siechta, Consul."

Consul Siechta represents the United States government at the Brazilian capital. Watts immediately communicated with Governor Foss to make the proper move for the desired papers. As soon as arrangements can be made, inspectors will be sent to Brazil to bring the broker to Boston for trial.

The career of Davie furnishes one of the most sensational chapters in local "high finance," for he not only obtained the confidence of many people in ordinary walks of life, but also of business men of wealth, prominence in public life and the best financial standing. Not a few of these well known men of Boston and Massachusetts, with two or three of international reputation, are said to have been among his victims.

Davie had a fine suite of rooms at 53 State street, an attractive apartment in Brookline, and a partly finished summer place at Weston, in the section known as "millionaires' hill." His career had been meteoric, and like the famous rocket he "came down like a stick."

Starting as a modestly-paid clerk in a broker's office he quickly branched out in the brokerage business for himself and is said to have made money at a rate almost beyond belief.

One of Davie's strongest points was his apparent—almost too apparent, on second thought—profession of religious feeling. He discussed the prophets of the Bible with almost as much fluency as he did the profits of his brokerage investments and with equally telling effect upon his ministerial and other religiously-inclined friends. He always kept several copies of the Bible in his office and at his suite in Brookline and he showed remarkable familiarity with them for a layman.

Not only did Davie know the Bible by heart and have at his tongue's end innumerable quotations from the Scriptures, but he showed his interest in religion and church work in many other ways. For one thing, he gave liberally towards charitable works, institutions and churches, and usually, it is said, he quickly got back fully as much as he had spent, through the churchmen's aroused interest in him and their expressions of confidence in the form of cash handed to him for investment.

Since Davie disappeared, a short time before the police began to look him up, several law suits have been instituted against him and his estate, and his household goods have been disposed of at public auction.

Davie's deceptions and unfair dealings are said to have had a much wider scope than the stock market, especially during the latter part of his stay in Boston and when he is believed to have been hard pressed for money. On this latter point, however, opinions differ, some claiming that he lost about all that he had obtained and others alleging that he left with a large amount of cash.

Declared to Be Penniless

Rio Janeiro, Feb. 25.—Robert E. Davie was arrested here yesterday and is in so pitiable a condition that he will waive extradition. He has been here three weeks, absolutely penniless, having worked his way as a coal passer on a merchant steamer which arrived from the United States.

For three weeks he has slept nearly every night on park benches. Thursday he obtained work. Just as he seemed about to become self-supporting he was recognized by Director Clark of the Young Men's Christian association, who notified the American consul.

Boston, Feb. 25.—The body of Captain William H. H. Fuller, retired sea captain of Wrentham, was cremated in this city yesterday, in accordance with his last wishes. The captain died Wednesday of pneumonia at his home in Wrentham. He was 75 years old.

"Boston has the greatest harbor in the world," said Fuller, shortly before his death. "I want to sleep there."

WOMEN CAN "MAKE EYES"

Court Appreciates Pretty Orbs as a Mark of Beauty

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 25.—There is no law to prevent a woman with pretty eyes using them in any way she likes, Alderman Donohue decided.

Miss Marion Chapelle of Brooklyn, who has been visiting friends in Kingston, near here, and who is known among the young men there as "the girl with the laughing eyes," was arrested at the instance of Mrs. Annie Ludow, who was annoyed because her young son, Henry, had fallen under their spell.

"We are really glad to have such a captivating person in the community," Donohue said, Gallantly. "It is no crime for a woman to have pretty eyes and to use them, and there is no law to govern the use of such eyes."

EVIDENCE OF CONFIDENCE

Our New Treaty With Japan Is Promptly Ratified

ROLLCALL IS NOT REQUIRED

Fears of Pacific Coast Senators Regarding Admission of Coolie Labor Are Soothed After Many Wrangles—Restrictions on Immigration of Japanese Laborers Into United States Will Continue In Force

Washington, Feb. 25.—The new Japanese treaty of trade and navigation was ratified last night after a two-hour executive session of the senate.

The action of this government in promptly confirming the new agreement is expected to do more to prove the feeling of cordiality that this country has for Japan than anything that has been done for many years. It is regarded as a manifestation of highest confidence in the advanced civilization of that nation. The effect will be to permit Japan to enter at once upon a reorganization of its fiscal system, and upon making a new tariff with all nations.

When the new treaty was received from the president on Tuesday, it immediately became the subject of wrangles. Pacific coast senators feared it might have an effect upon the labor situation on the western slope, by reason of the omission of the clause in the treaty of 1894, which it supersedes, recognizing the right of this government to pass an exclusion law.

Friends of the treaty explained that the diplomatic notes accompanying it definitely pledged the Japanese government to prevent an influx of undesirable coolies by a rigid scrutiny of all passports. An alien without a passport would, of course, be liable to deportation.

The California senators, it is said, became satisfied that the change would not menace the labor situation in their state. Several other western senators became alarmed, however, at what seemed to them unseemly haste in pressing the senate to act. They desired sentiment to crystalize in their states and therefore prevented action for three days.

Supporters of the treaty endeavored to show that the presence of the clause on the subject of immigration in the treaty of 1894 was obnoxious to the dignity and pride of the Japanese empire, especially as neither it nor any similar clause is in any treaty with any other country. It was argued further that the present treaty would have expired in another year and this country could not hope to induce Japan to sign a new treaty containing such a clause.

After a full discussion the western senators said that they would not stand in the way of ratification, which was accomplished without a rollcall. The injunction of secrecy concerning the treaty was not removed and no public announcement of ratification was made.

Details of the contents of the treaty show that there is a supplemental clause to the treaty in which Japanese Ambassador Uchida, speaking in behalf of his government, guarantees that the restrictions on the immigration of Japanese laborers into the United States shall continue in force.

The treaty is comprised of eighteen articles and, while the immigration clause is not a part of the treaty proper, it is expressed in plain terms that the limitation and control of Japanese immigration to America shall be carried out in the future.

The treaty covers the following subjects: Reciprocal rights of Japanese and Americans when traveling in the country of the other, safeguards of the rights of citizens, the appointment of additional consular agents, reciprocal freedom in trade and commerce, tariff relations and military duties of citizens.

FOSS' FIRST VETO

Brings on War Between Governor and Lomasney of Boston

Boston, Feb. 25.—Martin M. Lomasney declares that he will make a fight in the house to have the first veto of Governor Foss overthrown. War between ward 8 and the executive chamber broke out when Governor Foss sent back to the legislature house bill 502, which provides that the civil service commission shall not make inquiry whether an applicant for public employment has been arrested before he is 16 years old.

"The bill is a good one. It's a just bill. I believe in it now just as I did when I argued for it before the committee on public service and I shall tell the house so when the veto comes up next Tuesday," declared the ward 8 leader last night.

KICKED INTO THE SENATE

Committee Reports Reciprocity Bill Without Recommendation

BUT LITTLE HOPE FOR ACTION

President Already Outlining His Program For Extra Session—Democratic Leaders Will Be Given Time to Make Organization Complete—New House Expected to Pass Agreement and Then Attack Tariff

Washington, Feb. 25.—With a report ordered by its enemies in the finance committee the McCall Canadian reciprocity bill is now before the senate. The finance committee sent in the bill "without recommendations" and without amendment, thus giving it a contemptuous kick into the legislative arena.

Filibustering is now the order of the day. Mr. Beveridge of Indiana, still talking on Lorimer, took the floor again yesterday, but not until after he had been baited by other senators. He is now working as hard against a vote as he was for one a week or two ago. Attendance upon the Beveridge speech averages less than ten, and rollcalls occupy most of the time.

All this is in the face of a solemn warning by Mr. Hale that no less than nine great appropriation bills had not been considered by the senate at all and less than six legislative days would remain after today. This glut of business unquestionably is intentional, as the committees have been marking time or not meeting at all. Hale warned the senate that evening sessions might be necessary, but he did not move that they be held.

The senate now has the excuse, legitimate or otherwise, that it will have no time to consider anything but the supply bills from now until March 4. Not only does President Taft expect an extra session, but he will consult with the Democratic leaders before calling one and suit their convenience somewhat. The call may issue promptly on March 4 but it is expected that the president will allow thirty days to intervene before reassembling.

The Democrats want to organize their house completely and they say that unless adequate time is allowed they will be compelled to adjourn every two or three days to resume their slate making, hence no real progress would be gained by hastening the extra session.

No doubt exists that Champ Clark and Oscar Underwood have a fairly good understanding already as to the course to be followed. It is a reasonable presumption that the reciprocity bill will go through the house as a separate measure and that instead of ripping the tariff wide open, the house Democrats will attack first certain schedules, like "K," which deals with wool and woolens, and proceed thus in order.

The tariff board yesterday talked over what they might be forced to do under the Cummins resolution. As previously intimated, the board can make only a fragmentary report on most items enumerated in the Cummins resolution and can submit no analysis whatever.

A legitimate use of the tariff board never has contemplated a report without an analysis of the facts and figures submitted, hence such premature reports as it might submit within the next few days would be comparatively of little value. The fact was known, of course, to Cummins and Hale. The authority of the resolution will expire with this congress, however, and the board will be relieved of this needless interruption of its regular work, at least until the new congress comes in.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Free Dentistry for Little Johnny Bostonbeans—Airships Again in the Capital of Culture—Desire to Get Dallin's "Appeal to the Great Spirit" Elicits Appeal for Funds—A Suffragist-Socialist-Laborite Combination Storms the Citadel of Conservatism on Beacon Hill.

The molars of little Waldo Emerson Back Bay Brown are already carefully attended to by a high priced dentist; but the thousands of young citizens whose parents have to look carefully at every dollar do not universally receive the dental care they ought. Henceforth, however, these little Bostonians will have dedicated to them one of the unique philanthropies of the age. The Forsyth Dental Infirmary, which is to be housed in an architecturally and technically adequate structure on the edge of the Fenway, is to be devoted to the dental needs of children of ages from five to sixteen. It has been found that ninety-six per cent of the children in the public schools have diseased mouths, caused by early neglect of the teeth. The prevailing idea of many people that the first teeth of children are merely a makeshift pending the arrival of the permanent set is gradually becoming recognized as the cause of unlimited ill health in after life and the chief handicap to what would have been otherwise a successful career. The late James B. Forsyth bequeathed $500,000 for the purposes of founding a dental infirmary in Boston for the treatment and education of children of rich and poor alike, and his brothers have given generous assistance in donating the tract of land on Hemenway Street and in otherwise carrying out Mr. Forsyth's ideas. Everything possible will be done to obviate any impression of the place being a chamber of horrors to the youthful mind, and the staff of regular and visiting dentists and nurses will be selected from among the most competent in the profession. Boston thus will acquire one of the most important institutions in the world in preserving the physical well being of its rising generation in a century when the race is no only to the swift but to the strong.

A white Washington's Birthday followed by a yellow and red 23d will stand recorded in Boston history, for immediately after the holiday came the combined suffragist-socialist-laborite demonstration at and about the Statehouse—a march with flags flaunting in the name of justice to both sexes from Park Square to the summit of Beacon Hill; a hearing managed by a representative of the American Federation of Labor, before the legislative committee on constitutional amendments; overflow meetings at which Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of the great English suffragette leader, Miss Mary Neal, member of the Social and Political Militant Suffrage Association of Great Britain, and several other eloquent speakers aroused the enthusiasm of friendly and appreciative audiences. Plans were made months in advance in order that this year's hearing might be memorable in the annals of the long fight for woman suffrage in Massachusetts. A new element in the situation was the very active participation of the labor union bodies, which have heretofore been favorable to the movement but not apparently inclined to force the issue. Now leading Bay State laborites are red hot for "votes for women," as was shown not only by their taking general charge of the affair at the State house but by their passing a glowing resolution in the Boston Central Labor Union which puts it directly up to every legislator who is friendly to labor to help the suffragists in their efforts. The Socialists, of course, have always been shouters for equal suffrage, believing that only through the ballot can social democracy be achieved. The most humorous feature of the demonstration was the curt refusal of the "antis" to accept a courteous invitation to speak for half an hour at the Ford Hall overflow meeting. They perhaps feel that their arguments are too precious and esthetic to be used commonly.

Airships and aviators again have the mercurial Hub up in the air. The second National Exhibition of Aerial Craft is filling the street cars with crowds of limber necked citizens, bound for the Mechanics Building, and once more the talk of the town is temporarily confined to biplanes, monoplanes, skids, hangars and the other subjects of interest connected with the mechanical birds. All the world loves an aeronant, and most people hope sooner or later to take unto themselves wings.

Too frequently the prophet is without honor among his own people, but Cyrus E. Dallin's equestrian statue of an Indian, known as "The Appeal to the Great Spirit" and exhibited with eclat in the Paris Salon where it won a gold medal, is now in demand for an appropriate setting in the Back Bay Fens. The Metropolitan Improvement League, backed by a body of the foremost painters, architects and sculptors, has issued an appeal for subscriptions amounting to $12,000 to secure the work, which is now cast in bronze in Paris. Mr. Dallin, though born and reared in a cabin in a lonely canon of Utah, is essentially a Boston artist, beginning his studies and spending most of his life here. He studied for a while under the foremost masters in Paris, after which he returned to take charge of the instruction in modelling in the State Normal Art School. The work which is the subject of interest at present is a remarkably strong interpretation of the poetry and strength of the Indian, both horse and rider being embodiments of savage grace as the one stands motionless while the other, with arms unlifted, gazes in mute appeal to the rising sun.

HAS LOST HIS VOICE

Caruso, the Great Tenor, Compelled to Talk In a Whisper

Atlantic City, Feb. 25.—Enrico Caruso, the Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera company, is here for the benefit of his health, although outward appearances would not suggest, even in the most remote degree, that anything was the matter with him.

It is only when he attempts to hold conversation that one discovers he has completely lost the use of his voice. Caruso consented to whisper to a reporter, for he does not talk out loud now.

The Kaiser Going to Corfu

Berlin, Feb. 25.—The imperial yacht Hohenzollern has sailed from Kiel for Venice, where it will take on board Emperor William, the empress and their grandchildren and convey them to Corfu early in March.

SUNNY MONDAY

Sunny Monday Laundry Soap will remove grease spots from clothing and carpets. It cuts the grease from dishes and glassware and gives them a spotless brilliancy. It is invaluable for washing paint and woodwork, not only removing the dirt and grease, but restoring the surface to its newly-painted freshness.

Try a bar and note the surprising results.

ENVY AT BROCKTON

Over Quincy's Happy Solution of Granite Wage Scale

The Brockton Enterprise envies this city. It says editorially:

"Quincy ought to feel content with the wage agreement in the granite business that is due to stand for five years. That is a very good way indeed in which to run the business of the workers of a city—have an agreement that will run for a long term. Then there is a feeling of certainty and an absence of the doubt that assails a city oftentimes when the story crops out that there may be an industrial argument over wages or hours.

"We all realize here in Brockton that there have been many times when pending the signing of an agreement on prices in some department of the factories, there has been a very shaky feeling among business men and operatives and everybody interested in Brockton and in Brockton's future.

"Where there is a certainty, or practical certainty, that a large industry is to run along for several years without a break it gives confidence to the workers and confidence to the entire community. Plans can be made ahead by every inhabitant, and there will be an absence of the doubtful feeling that comes to everybody when there is no certainty even from week to week that business will continue firm and prosperous and unmarked by breaks and disagreements.

'What a boon they would think it in Lynn if the shoe business there was run on a five-year agreement! Brockton is doing finely, and getting along with very little trouble in the industrial line; but even here we could use a five-year agreement of all hands in the shoe business very nicely."

PLAY OF SIGNAL CORPS

Greeted with a Crowded House at Atlantic

The third play of the Atlantic Signal Corp, which occurred Friday night at Atlantic Music hall, made an even bigger hit than any of their previous entertainments.

"The Game" staged and produced by the 1st Lieut. C. W. Stocker, assisted by Gordon Livingston, was certainly interesting from the first moment the curtain arose. The first act introduces Harry Templeton and Will Thornton, two chums, on their way to college at Bellville. They encounter Harry's sister Anna and her chum Eleanor Wells, with whom the boys are in love. James Clark a college crook is also in love with Eleanor and takes every means in his power to down his rival. The plot hinges upon a game between the rival college teams of Bellville and Westley. Great dependence is placed upon the quarterback of the team, Harry Templeton. Through a misrepresentation of Clark's he is unjustly accused of theft, but is exonerated just in time to save the game and win the girl.

Both the leading actors Carl Stocker and Ryder Gay did some splendid work. Lionel Goyette as the heavy villian did his part finely. Frank Ewen, the Irish Guard, George Breasole, the Yiddish tackle, and Welland Knapp the rube, should receive special mention. Another feature was the talk that Will Rice, the coach, gives the team. The audience gave him great applause.

Miss Margaret Read, who played leading lady, did so at twelve days' notice, and looked very lovely, when she sang, "Just for a dear, little girl." When Miss Jean Arthur denounces the crowd for not standing by her brother she shows decided talent as an actress.

Solos, duets and choruses introduced during the performance are well rendered and received numerous encores. The young men in the play, and the girls in the chorus show what splendid training they have received.

The cast is as follows:

Harry Templeton — Carleton W. Stocker
Quarterback on the team and his freshman year.
Will Thornton — Ryder Gay

CHOOSE MANNER OF DEATH

Privilege May Be Allowed Condemned Men In Nevada

Reno, Nev., Feb. 25.—Condemned men in Nevada will have the choice of death by hanging, shooting or poison, as provided by a proposed statute drafted by the code commission and presented to the legislature. Hydrocyanic acid is the poison mentioned, and one drop on the end of the tongue will produce instant death.

The proposed statute says that the judge at the time of pronouncing sentence shall allow the defendant to designate which method of death he desires. If the condemned person elects voluntarily to take poison he shall be provided with a sufficient quantity to cause instantaneous death at least ten minutes before the time for carrying out of the death sentence by the prison physician at the order of the warden.

Should the prisoner fail to take the poison then it is specified that he shall be hanged forthwith.

MAKARIA NIGHT.

GENUINE SURPRISE.

A score of the most intimate friends of Nathaniel H. Bird of 104 Hillside road, East Braintree, tendered him a genuine surprise party at his residence Tuesday evening. Several from out of town were present including Ex-Chief T. W. Gowen of Malden who has been a life long friend of Mr. Bird, they both having served in the Boston fire department for forty-five years. Chief F. O. Whitmarsh made the hit of the evening when in a glowing eulogistic speech presented Mr. Bird a handsome parlor writing desk of the Mission design. Mr. F. W. Thrope of the Red Jackets Veteran Fiemen's Association followed Chief Whitmarsh with a witty speech and presented Mr. Bird with a large historic picture. Among others who took prominent part to make the occasion enjoyable were Capt. J. H. Frazier and Capt. D. J. Gallivan of the local fire department. Mr. Bird who is familiarly known as "Nat" has a wide circle of appreciative friends oweing to his long connection with the Boston fire department as well as the leading spirit he takes in the G. A. R., he being a member of Post 68, also a member of the Prisioner of War Association.

CUMMINS IS PLEASED

Thinks Courts Will Sustain Ruling In Railroad Rate Case

Washington, Feb. 25.—Senator Cummins, who in the senate led the fight of the progressives to get the railroad law so shaped as to put the burden of proof on the railroads that proposed increases of rates are justified, a proposition which made the present action of the interstate commerce commission possible, expressed himself as much gratified at the decisions of the commission.

He said the decisions showed the wisdom of the efforts made by the progressives in congress last session to get the railroad measure amended and that the railroads, in his opinion, could not successfully appeal to the courts from the decisions of the commission.

LYNN UNANIMOUS FOR DEPRESSION

Regardless of Expense and the Work That Has Already Been Done They Say

It is the Only Way to Abolish Grade Crossings

The proposed plan for the abolition of the grade crossing at Water street will be shown at the regular March meeting of the Board of Trade on Wednesday evening. The proposed Old Colony boulevard from Boston to Quincy and the South Shore was also assigned for this meeting.

The grade crossing question has renewed interest since the action of Lynn on Saturday evening, reported in part by the Globe as follows:

A mass meeting of citizens at the Oxford club hall voted unanimously tonight that the sentiment of the people favored the depression of the tracks of the Boston & Maine through the central part of Lynn. The railroad will be asked to make the change from elevation to depression and if not agreeable the city will appeal to the legislature.

No matter what the additional expense might be, the 500 or more representative citizens went on record as unanimously favoring depression and agreed to carry the contest as far as possible. Even though two of the grade crossings have been abolished at the ends of the city by elevation, the opinion was that the tracks should go underground through the principal part of the city.

Every member of the municipal council and every member of the legislature from Lynn was present. Great enthusiasm was shown in regard to the depression of the tracks and at the close of the meeting, while lunch was served, nearly everybody present stated they would attend the legislative hearing and espouse the cause of underground tracks through the city.

It is reported that half a million dollars have been expended in abolition work in Lynn, and that the railroad has expended a million more for real estate.

The committees representing the Granite Manufacturers Association and the Granite Cutters Union and also the polishers met Saturday night and signed the new agreement and bill of prices which is to run for the next five years.

The tool sharpeners and manufacturers met but did not reach an agreement. The two committees have agreed as to the number that shall compose a gang, but the hitch seems to be on a clause desired by the manufacturers which will enable them to return to what is known as piece fire. The two committees meet again tonight, when it is thought an agreement will be reached.

Tuesday evening a mass meeting of the three branches will be held in St. Mary's hall when the new bills of prices and agreement that have been signed will be read to the members of the unions for their information.

John A. McDonnell Passes Away After Long Illness

John A. McDonald, the well known granite manufacture of Water street, died this morning at his residence on Bigelow street after an illness of several weeks. He retired from active business about 10 month ago.

Mr. McDonnell was born in Ross Common, Ireland, Sept. 6, 1846, and came to Quincy about 45 years ago.

He learned the trade of a granite cutter and in 1876 became a granite manufacturer, with sheds on Water street, at which he was successful.

He was a charter member of Quincy court, M. C. O. F., and Quincy council K. of C., and also an active member of the Board of Trade, and while in business a member of the Granite Manufacturers Association. He emulated the ideas of President Roosevelt and Dr. Eliot, having nine children, seven of whom are now living. He also leaves a widow; one brother, the Rev. Matthew McDonnell and three sisters, Mrs. James Kelley, Mrs. Mary Whorisky and Miss Teresa McDonnell.

Funeral services will be held on Wednesday morning.

IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

Organized for the Advance of Norfolk Downs

Directly following a mass meeting at Poland hall on Saturday evening in protest of the present train service at Norfolk Downs, a permanent organization was formed to be known as the Norfolk Downs Improvement association. Of this organization Frank Burgess, the head of the Boston Gear Works, was unanimously elected as president, and a committee consisting of John E. Poland, J. Harry Hooper and Walter Winlock was appointed to fix the date of the next meeting and further perfect the organization.

At its next meeting the remainder of the officers and committees will be elected, and steps taken to place the association upon a working basis. Frederick J. Kessler consented to act as secretary until a permanent one was elected at the next meeting.

The mass meeting on train service opened with John E. Poland in the chair, and Frederick J. Kessler as secretary read the report of the previous meeting.

Representative Louis F. R. Langelier, as chairman of the committee appointed, told of their interview with the railroad officials. The committee requested that the trains leaving Wollaston at 7.30, 8.54 and 12.07 be stopped at Norfolk Downs, also that some train be put on between 7.10 and 8.13 P. M. For the benefit of factory employes they asked that the train leaving Wollaston at 5.03 leave about 5.10.

They also asked that the trains leaving Boston for Wollaston in the evening at 4.50, 7.15 and 11.30 be stopped at Norfolk Downs.

They further requested that the trains leaving East Milton at 7.02 and 8.05 A. M. be stopped at Montclair and that the 11.12, 12.15 and 3.12 be made flag stops. They also asked that the 9.22 train from Boston stop at the station. The needs were gone over thoroughly and the railroad officials promised to see what could be done.

On Thursday, Mr. Langelier received a very brief letter which said that the best that could be done would be to put on a train for Boston at 9.03 A. M., a train that had not been asked for.

The committee's report brought out a spirited discussion, and a motion was made to carry the matter before the Railroad Commission. This was carried and the committee was instructed to arrange for a hearing.

Among the speakers was John E. Poland, who said that on account of the present train schedule Norfolk Downs people are compelled to buy tickets for either Atlantic or Wollaston and walk back. This swells the receipts of the latter stations and they get all the credit.

Ward Six is at Atlantic, Ward Five is at Wollaston. Norfolk Downs is between the two and doesn't get anywhere. They are sidetracked, as it were. An improvement association would be a good thing.

Frank Burgess told of his coming here a number of years ago, and said that in the future Quincy and its suburbs would be an ideal place for industrial purposes. The trouble is that the town is not boomed. In a few years, by reason of its rapid growth, Norfolk Downs will be the place. Norfolk Downs has no playground or skating place as have Wollaston and Atlantic. The electric car service is another thing that should be taken up. There are all things close at hand for an improvement society to work on. It is time Norfolk Downs woke up.

Upon motion of Walter Winlock it was voted that typewritten petitions be circulated on the matter of train service. The meeting then adjourned.

A number of women were present on Saturday evening, and although they did not have anything to say, it showed that the male residents were not the only ones that took exception to the present schedule.

DR. HARDY CALLED TO CHICAGO

In Fact Two of the Large Churches Want Bethany Pastor to Come West

Large Increase in Salary and Other Inducements

Since it has become known that Dr. Hardy is to sever his pastorate with the Bethany church, there have been a number of churches seeking to secure him as pastor. The first formal call, however, came Saturday from the First Congregational church at La Grange, Ill., which is situated fourteen miles from the heart of Chicago representing to that city a suburb like Newton to Boston, an entirely residential locality.

While in Chicago recently Dr. Hardy was invited to supply the pulpit at the LaGrange church which he did, but not as a candidate. During his stay there he was given an informal reception by the church and invited to become its pastor. Saturday, as noted above, he received notice that an unanimous call had been extended to him to become pastor at a salary much larger than that received in Quincy with all travelling expenses paid by the church.

When seen this morning, Dr. Hardy said that he had not as yet decided whether he would accept the call or not. He showed a representative of the Daily Ledger a letter received this morning stating that a much larger church, also near Chicago, was ready to call him if he would consider it.

Col. Edward Anderson, who was formerly a pastor of a Chicago church, when seen this morning said LaGrange was a very fine place. It had the best of schools and was one of the three great suburbs of Chicago, comparing favorably with Oak Park and Evanston. The church has recently completed a $60,000 stone edifice, and is about the same size as Bethany church. It is growing rapidly and is ranked as one of the very strong churches of the middle west. Col. Anderson said that he knew other churches in Chicago and the immediate vicinity were seeking to secure Dr. Hardy as pastor.

The Hon. Thomas C. McMillan who was the moderator of the last National council of Congregational churches is a member of the church, and many leaders of Congregationalism in the middle west are connected with this church. The LaGrange church is also very prominent in missionary work and has already raised for the year the sum of $5,000.

PROTEST FROM FAIR PLAY

Objects to Freight Depot in Residential Neighborhood

Editor Daily Ledger:

The report is current that the property upon Washington street, formerly occupied by Mr. Mahoney as a livery stable, has been sold to the street railway people to be used by them as a freight depot.

If the report is a correct one, we think a great injustice will be done property holders in the near vicinity, both on account of the depreciation in value to their property and the noise and confusion incident to the use of such property for freight purposes.

A freight depot ought not surely to be located in the heart of a busy city upon one of its principal streets, already badly congested by the tracks of this same company.

Objections were raised to placing the new court house upon the Nightingale lot in the square owing to the noise made by the cars. The same objection can be offered to the use of the property upon Washington street as a freight depot. It will be especially annoying at night as the noise will "murder sleep," as almost anyone can testify who has tried to sleep in the immediate neighborhood of noisy car tracks.

The spur tracks running into the depot and connecting with the main tracks will block traffic and badly congest an already too narrow street. There is one express office in the immediate vicinity already and the large autos are often standing in the middle of the street owing to the lack of room in the yard.

It seems already as if sufficient concessions had been granted to the company and the public inconvenienced enough by the tracks running through our streets, the accumulation of snow about the tracks, etc., without further inconvenience being forced upon it.

The depreciation in value to nearby property would be tremendous and the whole neighborhood would deteriorate in consequence.

Why shouldn't this company be obbliged to locate their freight depot in some more remote locality where the public will not be inconvenienced or surrounding property depreciated in value and not build freight stations in one of our busiest streets, near our post office and in the heart of our residential section and near our beautiful library.

Would anyone want to buy property or locate near a noisy busy freight depot? Why are not the many residents in this section and the public worthy of as much consideration as the railroad who are granted all these concessions and without expense to them?

"Fair Play."

Business Women's Don'ts.

When starting out to earn your own living don't think you know it all; there are a few who know very nearly as much as you do.

If your employer tells you a secret, keep that secret; store it away in a little recess of your mind and let it lie there until he asks you about it. If he doesn't ask you, it won't matter.

When you enter an office or business house for the first time do exactly as you are told; don't ask too many questions; use your eyes and see what is to be done.

Don't visit with your employer; he doesn't hire you to entertain him; his wife can do that.

Be on time—if you lose an arm to do it; get to business on time above all else, and don't be two minutes late.

Don't have friends constantly calling you on the telephone; the instrument was put into an office for business, not for visiting.

Don't think because you have read somewhere that a man has married his stenographer that your employer is going to marry you; sometimes he is married before you enter his employ.

Don't think that because your employer is sitting at his desk and apparently doing nothing he wants you to talk to him; sometimes his mind is on a weighty problem and he doesn't need your help in planning it out.

Be pleasant as soon as you step inside the office; nobody wants to know about your own troubles; your time is not your own now; it belongs to someone else, and he doesn't hire you to look gloomy.

Be loyal to the man or woman who employs you; if you know he is doing wrong don't censure him; make as good an impression on him as you can; one human being cannot judge another

Healer Accused of Practicing Medicine Without a License.

Christian Scientists all over the country are anxiously awaiting the verdict of the court in the case of Willis Vernon Cole of New York, recently arrested on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. defend the legality of his conduct. He says that the right of a Christian Science healer to treat sufferers according to the tenets of the faith and to receive fees for such treatment has been repeatedly upheld in the courts.

The attorney engaged to defend Mr. Cole contended that he was merely practicing the tenets of a religion and was not infringing upon any laws of the state.

"I am of the opinion that the treatment of disease by inaudible prayer is a violation of the laws of this state," said Magistrate Freschi, who held Cole for trial. "The Christian Scientist has the right to believe that he can heal by prayer, but I am of the opinion that if he carries and puts that belief into practice for hire he exceeds his rights as an individual under the law."

There are said to be more than 100 Christian Science practitioners in New York city, while the number throughout the country will run into the thousands. As they do not administer medicine they claim that they are not amenable to the laws regarding the practice of medicine and are not subject to examination as other physicians are.

LEFT FORTUNE TO CITY.

Detroit Hesitated About Accepting Gift That Included Statue.

Detroit has finally decided to accept the $500,000 fountain bequeathed to the municipality by James Scott, known to all the city as Jim Scott, and it will be erected on Belle Isle, the city's pleasure park, and it will have as one of its features a life size statue of the donor.

Jim Scott was a character. He had a generous side, and he also had one that was different. When he tried to buy a vacant lot beside one that he owned and a price was asked that he thought was excessive he erected a narrow house on his own lot, a house that looked from the street like a magnificent mansion, but from the other side was a blank wall, that rendered the lot he had wanted to buy practically valueless.

This house, which was never occupied, was locally known as "Scott's folly." It cost $20,000. After a quarrel with a big Detroit grocer Scott built a little building beside the grocer's establishment and on top of it erected a gigantic gilded figure of a hog. It was a costly but expressive way of showing his sentiments.

When Scott died a short time ago and it was found that he had left five-sixths of his $600,000 estate to the city to be used in constructing a fountain objections were made to the city's accepting the gift. The claim was made that Scott was a gambler and that his fortune was the result of running poker and faro games.

Scott's friends rallied to the support of his memory and showed that he had never been a gambler or had run a gambling house. Then the gift was accepted by the city council, and it will be erected, with a statue of Scott embodied as one feature.

State Board of Health Gets After Boston Dealers

AN ANALYSIS TO BE MADE

Upon Its Result Will Depend Whether Dealers Will Have to Surrender $100,000 Worth of Canned Food Which Has Been Declared Injurious to Health—Dealers Fearful That Industry May Be Wiped Out

Boston, Feb. 27.—Not only the entire loss of $100,000 worth of frozen eggs, but the prohibition of any further sale of these articles of food in this commonwealth hinges upon the decision of the state board of health this week as to what shall be done with the 1600 cans condemned by the board in Boston storage warehouses.

If the state board adheres to its claim that these eggs are injurious to health it sounds, in the opinion of the dealers, the death-knell to a business which has become very extensive and very profitable. It means the wiping out of an industry built up by many years' work in this state and it is feared might furnish a precedent for prohibiting the freezing of eggs throughout the country.

The state board of health has notified six dealers in frozen eggs that their product contains too high a percentage of bacteria to be safe for food consumption and has formally requested them to turn over to its inspectors 1600 cans of these eggs now in storage in the various warehouses in Boston.

These 1600 cans are in fourteen lots or consignments. Each can contains about forty pounds of the frozen eggs. The dealers claim the eggs are sound and object to any seizure of their goods, at least until the state board has analyzed them and some competent commission has decided they are not fit for food.

Frozen eggs are eggs broken and poured into cans, shipped to the storage warehouse, frozen and kept at a mean temperature of five degrees below zero.

These eggs are put up for the wholesale trade and are used wholly in cooking. They are purchased extensively by restaurants, hotels and bakeries, where eggs are used in enormous quantities in the manufacture of cake.

It is estimated that there are perhaps fifty dealers in frozen eggs in this city, many of them handling but a few, but several having thousands of dollars invested in these commodities. If the frozen egg industry were prohibited in the state the dealers say it would mean a very material increase not only in the price of other eggs, but in the articles into the manufacture of which they go.

According to the Boston dealers the federal government is now trying to get hold of the eggs in this market through the state board of health, which is the only board having authority to confiscate them. For it happens that the eggs in Boston warehouses were prepared here and are consumed here so that none of them can be touched by federal officials under the general interstate commerce law.

By agreement all of the six dealers refused to accede to the request to surrender their eggs and retained as counsel Edward P. Barry, who appeared with two of the dealers before the board, with a demand that they analyze the eggs and decide for themselves if they are unfit for food.

The conference was amicable and there appeared to be no disposition on the part of the state officials to arbitrarily seize the eggs without allowing the dealers all the opportunity to state their side of the case.

FLEET COMMANDERS SELECTED BY MEYER

Osterhaus For the Atlantic and Murdock For Asiatic

Washington, Feb. 27.—Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, commandant of Mare Island navy yard, was selected by Secretary of the Navy Meyer to succeed Rear Admiral Schroeder as commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet about June 1, and Rear Admiral Murdock was selected to succeed Rear Admiral Hubbard as commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet on May 19.

The appointments are incident to the approaching retirement of Schroeder and Hubbard on account of the statutory age limit of 62 years.

It is the ambition of the naval officer to crown his career with fleet command and consequently the announcement of the appointments of the commanders-in-chief of the Atlantic and Asiatic fleets created considerable interest in naval circles.

EXTRA SESSION APRIL 4

No Hope For Vote on Reciprocity at This Session

Washington, Feb. 27.—So probable is an extra session of congress to insure action on the Canadian reciprocity agreement, that President Taft has fixed April 4 as the date on which such a session may be called.

The April date was selected after consultation with Champ Clark, who will be speaker of the next house, and Representative Underwood of Alabama, who will be chairman of the ways and means committee, which will have charge of and report the reciprocity bill in the house.

There is no change in the situation in the senate regarding the agreement, and the leaders see no hope of bringing to a vote at this session the McCall bill to carry the agreement into effect.

SUNDAY SERVICES

ATLANTIC METHODIST.

Rev. John L. Garland the pastor, spoke on Sunday morning on the subject "The Four-Square City." Text Rev. 21-16. "The city lieth four-square." The object of the subject was to impress the thought that the four sides of the city faced human incompleteness—the side of love facing human need, the side of hope facing human despair, the side of obedience facing human will, the side of righteousness facing human action. He emphasized the fact that while the holy city—the destiny of true manhood—had four sides yet only one path led to it—the path of faith, and that a person is started on this pathway by and through just such a personal and distinct experience— love, hope, obedience, righteousness—as is needed by that particular soul for its completeness.

In the evening he spoke on "The better things of Christ's blood." Text in Hebrews XII. 24. "The blood of sprinkling that speaketh beter things than that of Abel." The terrible appeal of Abel's blood for justice for sin compared with the sweet forgiving cry of Jesus' blood for mercy for sin.

On Wednesday evening the ladies of the church will give a supper and entertainment. Supper from 6 to 8. Immediately after supper there will be a brief business meeting of the Epworth League.

On Thursday evening, the regular monthly meeting of the official board will meet in the vestry at 8. A full attendance is requested.

At the regular Friday evening prayer meeting at 7.45 the pastor will speak on "The translation of Elijah."

At the Sunday morning serives during March, the pastor will give a series of talks on "Sources of Power" in the following order:

Mar. 5, "Power through a vision of God."

Mar. 12, "Power through temptation."

Mar. 19, "Power through defeat."

Mar. 26, "Power through victory."

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN.

A sermon in accordance with the spirit of the Lenten season was preached at the Wollaston Unitarian church on Sunday morning. The Rev. Carl G. Horst made a strong and earnest plea for a recognition of the need of solitude and meditation, for the soul which would become strong to meet the deep experiences of life. Strength to bear what many come out of the unknown future, must be stored up from day to day, must be the growth of time and character; else will it not be a source from which to draw when the crisis arises. This need of retirement for a season of meditation and self-communion is an universal need—such intervals of rest bringing refreshment to the soul and being to its life what winter is to the world of nature and night to the world of work; a cessation of outward activity and a restoring and renovating of the deep springs of being. The Lenten season has come to be to all churches a reminder of man's relation to God, and to those higher things of life which help him to aspire, to hope and to worship. The great soul insists that the things of the world take their proper places, that it may be free to lay up for itself treasures that cannot be taken away, and so goes apart for discipline, inspiration and a communion with the eternal.

A sermon of peculiarly fine quality and one which must have appealed to every heart, closed with the singing of J. G. Whittiers hymn beginning:

Dear Lord and Father of mankind,
Forgive our feverish ways!
Reclothe us in our rightful mind;
In purer lives thy service find,
In deeper reverence, praise.

Rev. Carl G. Horst attended the sessions of the Boston Ministerial Union today. In the morning Dr. Richard C. Cabot of Boston spoke on "Engenics" and in the afternoon the Rev. Richard W. Boynton of Buffalo gave a paper on "Absolute immanence and the moral ideal." Wm. H. Boynton the clerk of our church, is a brother of the Buffalo clergyman.

The first of the series of special mid-week Lenten services for the deepening of the moral and religious life will be conducted by the Rev. Roderick Stebbens of Milton, Wednesday March 8, at 7.45 P. M. The public is cordially invited. Soloist for the evening is Miss Winnefred White, the well known Wollaston singer.

At our annual parish meeting last month Frank A. Page recommended the erection of a "Community House" with an assembly hall, supper room, parlors, reading room etc. The proposition was received with hearty applause and we are glad to record that not only the local churches and secret societies, but the citizens in general are giving this project most hearty approval. Every citizen in Wollaston realizes the great need of such a Community House. A large committee representing the various organizations is being formed to consider ways and means. Let every one put his shoulder to the wheel and help on the good work. Consider now how large a contribution you can make and so be ready to tell when you are solicited.

The next meeting of the Ladies' Aid Alliance will be held March 15, instead of March 1.

The Wollaston Social Club will give an entertainment in the vestry, March 2 and 3.

The annual contribution for the American Unitarian Association will be received next Sunday morning, March 5.

The members of our church are invited to be present at installation services of the Rev. Henry D. Stevens as minister of the First parish church in Walpole, Thursday, March 2, at 7.30 P. M.

WOLLASTON M. E.

Rev. Wesley Wiggin, the pastor of the Methodist church preached an excellent sermon Sunday morning on the theme "True worship," his text being from Psalms 96:9.

Miss Margaret Nichols of Dorchester president of the Boston district, was the leader of the Epworth League meeting; subject "The influence of a great passion."

Miss Nichols also spoke at the evening service of the church, her subject being, "The needs of the hour."

The Whatsoever circle, King's Daughters, will meet this evening with Mrs. E. A. Sayward, 253 Belmont street.

The Stewards study class will meet in the vestry Tuesday evening at 7.30.

The Epworth League will have a business meeting and social Thursday evening with Mrs. Lane, 126 Brook street.

The question for the Friday evening prayer meeting will be: "Why so far out at that meeting?"

On Sunday at the Methodist church there will be a love feast at 10.15, and communion at the close of the morning service.

FINNISH CONGREGATIONAL.

The pastor preached a telling sermon at the Sunday morning service taking his thought from the 13th chapter of 1 Corinthians. "True love" was the subject of his discourse.

At the Sunday School service the pastor told the children of his recent trip. A special service for older boys was addressed by the pastor on the subject of "Law abiding citizens."

The Young People's society met at 5.30 with a splendid attendance. The pastor gave a short address on the theme "In battle for Jesus." Seven young people took their stand for Christ at the service.

The theme of the evening address by the pastor was: "Spiritual poverty and eternal riches."

A lecture for men will be delivered by the pastor Wednesday evening. The subject is: "What American citizenship should mean to a Finlander."

The regular mid-week prayer meeting will be held on Thursday evening.

SWEDISH LUTHERAN.

The pastor began a series of Lenten subjects at the services on Sunday. At the morning service a girls' quartet sang some fine selections.

A church supper will be held in Electa hall Thursday evening from 5 to 9. A short program will be given after the supper.

The Dorcas society will meet with Mrs. John F. Johnson, 33 Revere road, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

For the Children

A Little Musician and a Big, Big Bass.

Boys and girls will surely be amused at the comical picture of a little mite of a girl playing on the double bass tuba. That is, she looks as though she were playing, but it is extremely doubtful if she had breath enough to fill that vast horn. As is seen, it is larger than herself, though she seems to hold it without difficulty. Apparently she is making a brave effort to extract music from its profound depths. But the truth is she sang in the instrument, and what a queer lot of sounds she must have produced! Her childish treble, broadened and deepened, passing through the tuba, doubtless delighted all those fortunate enough to hear it. The little girl is the daughter of an English bandsman, and the picture was taken at the national band festival held not long ago at the Crystal palace in London.

Story of a Tame Bear.

Tom is the name of a big tame bear which is owned by a Pennsylvania farmer. The bear has a pen between the house and barn, and a long chain fastened to his collar lets him play all around the pen. One moonlight night the farmer was awakened by a great growling and rattling of the chain. Looking out of the window and seeing nothing, he shouted to Tom to keep quiet, but just then Tom broke his chain, ran to the barnyard fence and quickly climbed it. The farmer pulled on his clothes and ran out to the barnyard and found Tom trying to make a wild bear drop a sheep which he had stolen from the yard. The sheep was bleating and kicking in the bear's paws and Tom was dancing around the thief, cuffing him and doing his utmost to head him off. The wild bear dodged to the right and left and then suddenly dropped on all fours, seized the sheep by the neck with his teeth and started to drag it along the ground. Tom sprang upon his back at once and bit him in the neck, and then the wild bear let go the sheep and gave battle to Tom. During the fight the farmer ran to the barn and got an ax, but for a long time he had no chance to use the weapon. Finally he saw his chance and buried it in the wild bear's neck, and Tom then easily finished him.

Problems With Forty-five.

How can 45 be divided into four such parts that, if to the first part you add 2, from the second part you subtract 2, the third part you multiply by 2 and the fourth part divide by 2, the sum of the addition, the remainder of the subtraction, the product of the multiplication and the quotient of the division be all equal?

The first is 8, to which add 2—10.
The second is 12; subtract 2—10.
The third is 5, multiplied by 2—10.
The fourth is 20, divided by 2—10.

Subtract 45 from 45 and leave 45 as a remainder.

9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1 equals 45
1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 equals 45

8 6 4 1 9 7 5 3 2 equals 45

Remarkable Fish.

The curiously named trigger fish are plentiful in Japanese waters. They are of the balistes genus, and their popular name is derived from the trigger-like peculiarity of the second spine of the dorsal fin. When the fin is erected the first ray, or spine, which is very thick and strong, maintains its elevated position so firmly that it cannot be pressed down by any degree of force, but if the second spine is pressed the first immediately falls down with a spring, like the hammer of a gunlock when the trigger is pulled. These fish are marked in a striking manner, some of them being very richly colored—ashen gray, blue and gold.

A Short Delay.

A little boy set out for school one morning, and he crept
Along the way as slowly as a snail could ever go.
He pouted, and he lifted up his voice, and then he wept
And laid the dust with all his tears, which came in steady flow.

"I do not want to go to school," he whimpered in despair.
"I want to stay outdoors and play with other little boys.
I will not go!" He sat down resolutely then and there
As if forever, but just then there came an awful noise.

It was the bell a-ringing, calling children to the school
And threatening to punish them if they should stay away.
And little boy, with all his hot resentment grown quite cool,
Got on his feet and dried his eyes and pattered on his way.

A SMUGGLER.

The chief of the New York police was evidently in a bad temper.

"Remember, Curtis, this is absolutely your last chance.

"Yes, sir."

"You don't deserve another. You remember I told you that if you missed catching Purvis on his last run with the diamonds I should dismiss you. He did get the diamonds through the customs without paying any duty. We know that, but we don't know how he did it."

'This time I am going to send you over to Paris. You will there have plenty of opportunity to shadow him, and if you don't succeed in catching him it will be your own fault."

"Yes, sir."

Inspector Curtis was not at all in love with his job. Much experience of defeats had made him hold Purvis in great respect, but he felt now that he must strain every effort to trip up his wily foe.

He booked his passage by the same liner. He flattered himself on his "make-up"—that of a benevolent-looking, white-haired old gentleman making his first trip to Europe. Purvis was not disguised, and it was not long before he made overtures to the inspector.

The inspector met his quarry's advances halfway.

"My name is Silas Harper. I am retired on my means and before I die I am just making a trip to have a look at the old country," he said, in a friendly way.

"Indeed!"

"Yes sir. And what may you be? I guess you are an American."

"I am a diamond merchant and a cosmopolitan."

"I don't quite know where that country is, sir, but you certainly speak like an American."

A twinkle of amusement appeared in Purvis's eyes.

"I guess the old chap will be pretty well done before he gets home again," he muttered to himself. But he took quite a fancy to old Harper as he thought him, and they became the best of friends.

Purvis confided to him that he was going to Paris.

"Why don't you go?" he asked, abruptly.

"I rather think I will, but I don't speak the lingo. Do you?" he asked, abruptly.

"Didn't I tell you I was a cosmopolitan?"

"I didn't know they spoke French in that country."

Again Purvis smiled sweetly.

"I wish you would take me with you, if it isn't asking too much," Harper suggested, diffidently.

For a few moments Purvis appeared to be thinking deeply.

"But I am coming back in a month," he said, doubtfully.

"Let me come back with you, then. I am beginning to feel a bit lonesome now. If you were only with me the whole time, it would make all the difference."

"You are asking a great deal."

"Yes, I know; but—"

"All right, I'll look after you. You had better hand me over a thousand dollars. I'll look after the paying for you."

The old man took out his wallet and counted out the notes, which Purvis immediately pocketed.

They had a pleasant trip to Paris. For the first week after their arrival Purvis took his pursuer round, showing him all the usual sights.

"Now, old man, I am going to do some business today. You must amuse yourself," he said, when the month was nearly up.

The old man did amuse himself, for Inspector Curtis, without his white wig, was engaged in making small holes through the door leading from his bedroom to Purvis', through which he could get a good sight of the other's room.

He heard, Purvis return, and his heart beat wildly when he saw him pour on the table six large diamonds.

Then he noticed that he had taken up a book—an ordinary novel. When this was opened he saw that there was a cavity inside. The diamonds were wrapped in cotton wool and immediately concealed in the cavity. The book was shut up, and then, by some mechanism, it remained closed unless a secret spring was touched.

Inspector Curtis felt that the game was his. All that remained was to see where the book was concealed.

He went to Purvis' door and knocked entering almost immediately afterward.

Purvis had placed the book on a piece of brown paper, and was making it up into a neat parcel. Next he took pen and ink and wrote an address

Curtis (we will drop the Harper cognomen) sidled up to the table, but he was unable to decipher the address.

"I am going to the post," Purvis exclaimed.

"I'll come with you," Curtis broke in, eagerly.

They made their way to the nearest bureal des postes, and Purvis handed the parcel to the clerk.

"Registered—New York—please," he said, curtly.

He paid the fees and took away a receipt. In vain Curtis tried to get a glimpse of the address. His heart sank as they left, and he was about to go to the prefect of police and explain the matter to him, when, on going into Purvis's room, he saw the receipt lying on the table.

He quickly noted the address—"Miss Irwin, 27 Forty-second street, New York City." He felt that he had gained the day.

In the morning, when he awoke, he found a letter awaiting him. It was from Purvis.

"I did not care to disturb you, but I had to leave Paris for a few days."

Curtis went to the office and found that a French liner was leaving Cherbourg that evening. He retained a berth in the name of Hiram Evans, packed his portmanteau and started.

When Mr. Hiram Evans, alias Inspector Curtis, left his reserved carriage at Cherbourg the white hair and whiskers had disappeared. In place of them was a spruce, dark mustache. Altogther his air was juvenile in the extreme.

"Got him!" he exclaimed in delight, when one of the first people he saw on the deck was Purvis.

The voyage was a quiet one. In acordance with his habit, Purvis made friends with every one, Mr. Evans among them. But this voyage Curtis had got what he wanted and kept to himself.

New York came in sight, and when they arrived at the customs Curtis left his luggage to take care of itself.

He watched Purvis pass his portmanteau and dressing case through, and order the same to be put on a cab. "Waldorf Astoria," he said to the driver.

In a second Curtis had followed him.

"Central Police Station," he said, curtly. "I am Inspector Curtis; drive there at once."

The black mustache and wig had disappeared.

When Curtis looked, he saw a revolver pointing at him.

"Better not, Purvis. The game is up," he said, lightly. "Smuggling doesn't mean hanging, you know."

With a laugh, Purvis put back his weapon.

"What's the charge?"

"Wait till you get to the station."

Purvis was locked up that night, and in the morning was taken before Capt. Brynes, the chief of police.

"Caught at last!" the chief cried, as he fingered the packet. "We have long wanted you."

Purvis made no reply.

With nervous fingers the chief opened the parcel, disclosing the book.

Curtis looked on with a triumphant smile.

"Don't grin too soon, Harper, old fellow," Purvis exclaimed, serenely.

A strong pull and the book opened displaying the diamonds.

"They are fine," the chief finally remarked.

"Yes, fine paste, and of no value," Purvis replied, quietly. "You know I am a judge of diamonds."

His manner convinced the chief. A jeweler was hastily summoned, and gave the same opinion—excellent paste.

"Done again!" the chief cried, with an angry look at Curtis.

"We have all his luggage here," Curtis suggested.

A minute examination was made of all his baggage without success. He was stripped to the skin, but no diamond could be found.

His revolver, his boots were in turn scrutinized, but with a like result.

"I suppose I may go now." Purvis remarked sweetly. "There is no charge against me."

"Discharge him," the chief said, abruptly.

That evening with a glass of excellent champagne before him and a good cigar alight, Purvis related his adventure to his friend, the diamond merchant.

"I recognized Curtis the second day on board. I think the paste idea was splendid. I like to worry the poor devil."

"But where are the diamonds?"

"I gave him a ripping time in Paris. Next go, I'll——"

"But where are the diamonds?" the other demanded.

"You should have seen his face in the cab driving to the police station. Even this revolver"—as he spoke he drew the weapon from his hip pocket—"didn't frighten him."

"Where are the diamonds?" shrieked the merchant.

'They examined the revolver," Purvis continued, quietly, 'but——"

As he was speaking he drew out the eight cartridges. Then with his knife he pried the bullet from one. A shake, and out rolled a diamond.

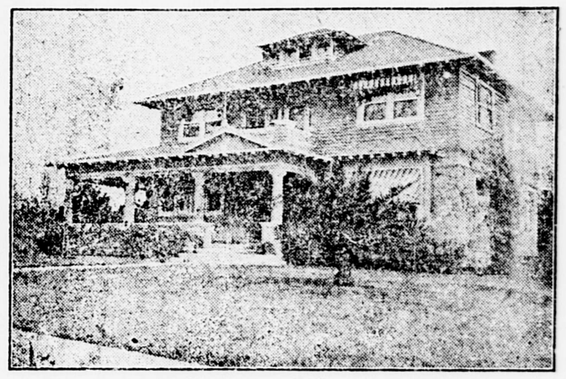

"Eight beauties!" he exclaimed, when he had finished the whole of them.

"My boy, you're a genius," the diamond merchant cried, enthusiastically.—Illustrated Bits.

STYLISH, YET SIMPLE IN DETAIL.

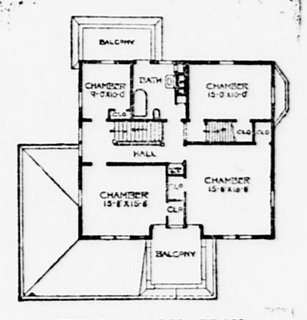

Design 942, by Glenn L. Saxton, Architect, Minneapolis, Minn.

PERSPECTIVE VIEW—FROM A PHOTOGRAPH.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN.

SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

Simplicity is the keynote in the treatment of both the exterior and interior of this economical home. The arrangement of the rooms is novel. One feature is the location of the chimney, which provides a flue for a beautiful fireplace in the library, one for the kitchen range and a larger one for the heating plant, all combined in one, a combination which means a saving of about $120. There is a full basement seven and a half feet deep. The first story is nine feet high and the second eight and a half feet high. Birch floors throughout. First story finished in red oak and the second in pine to enamel, with mahogany doors. Cost to build, exclusive of heating and plumbing, $4,800. Width thirty-six feet, depth thirty-two feet.

By special arrangement with me the editor of this paper will furnish a complete set of plans and specifications of design No. 942 for $35.

MAY OBJECT TO EXTRADITION

Davie Is Expected to Put Up a Fight In Brazil

HUB POLICE ARE SUSPICIOUS

Inclined to Doubt "Boy Broker's" Story of Poverty—Said to Have Securities Valued at $80,000 "Salted Away," In Addition to $8000 or $10,000 In Cash When He Left Boston—Talks on "Wages of Sin" Recalled

Boston, Feb. 27.—Extradition papers to bring Robert E. Davie, the "boy broker," back from Rio Janeiro, are on their way from Washington to Boston. As soon as they arrive William B. Watts, deputy superintendent of police and head of the bureau of criminal investigation, will send two headquarters men for Davie.

Chief Watts is suspicious of the report that Davie is penniless. He rather expects Davie to put up a fight against coming back here.

Davie, according to cables from Rio Janeiro, told a story to the effect that he was penniless; had to work his way to South America in a menial position, and was compelled to sleep many nights in the park for want of money. He had just succeeded in getting a job when he was arrested.

"I don't believe he is broke," said Watts. "We have positive knowledge that just before he went away from here he got cash amounting to from $8000 to $10,000 on stocks that he negotiated. All that money has not been spent since he left.

"We have now discovered that, when Davie left Boston, he had about $80,000 worth of negotiable securities 'salted away.' The stock was of the London issue of the Kansas City Southern Railway company. It is a standard stock, easily negotiable in any part of the world. It looks as though he had it tucked away for use in case of emergencies.

"I don't believe the story that he will come back without a fight, either. We will have a lot of trouble about getting him extradited. It may take two or three months before we get him back here, but we'll get him.

"I have not decided yet who will go after him. Two men will probably go. Whoever goes will take the steamship Byron that sails from New York on March 4. It is a seventeen days' trip down there, so you see it will be some time before we get Davie back to Boston, even though he comes without a fight, which I do not believe he will."

Davie fled from Boston in November. He kept up appearances of having thousands of dollars at his call to the very last. He is charged with swindling clients out of about $500,000 entrusted to him to carry out brokerage commissions.

Davie had often talked at evangelical meetings in churches on the "Wages of Sin," and how a career built on the sands of waste, extravagance and lies and theft, can end only in disaster. His own short career brought this Biblical command fresh to mind to his Boston friends when they heard of the pitiable ending of the broker.

"I am penniless," Davie told the American consul when arrested. "I came here working as a stoker on a freight steamer."

He was dressed, when arrested, in the same dirty, oily suit he wore on the tramp steamer. His appearance prevented him from getting work, and he took refuge at the Y. M. C. A. under an assumed name. By the strange turn of fate, it was the Y. M. C. A. in Boston to which Davie the bright young religious broker, gave generous contributions.

It was through the Y. M. C. A., too, that he was caught. He hung around the streets and slept on park benches, occasionally asking for work at the Y. M. C. A. building in Rio Janeiro until finally Director Clark became suspicious. The South American papers had printed photographs of Davie when he fled from Boston charged with stealing $500,000, and from these photographs Clark finally recognized Davie, in spite of his growth of beard, his discouraged, hangdog look, his old, wornout clothes.

MAJORITY DWINDLES ON CONFIDENCE VOTE

Premier Briand and His Cabinet Tender Resignations

Paris, Feb. 27.—Premier Briand and the members of his cabinet resigned today.

The bare majority of sixteen which the government received in a vote of confidence in the chamber of deputies was a sore blow to the premier and his associates. In the end Briand declared that he was "sick of it all."

The only reason for waiting until today to present their resignations to the president is that the ministers wished to show their respect for the memory of their late colleague, General Brun, whose funeral took place this morning.

Wellesley College Janitor Stole Cats For Students to Dissect

Natick, Mass., Feb. 27.—John Squires of Wellesley, a janitor of Wellesley college, pleaded guilty before Justice Mulligan to the charge of "larceny of one cat, property of Mrs. Elmer Bent of Pond streeet, Natick, on Feb. 13." He was fined $15, which he paid, after which he was severely admonished by Mulligan, Mrs. Bent and her sister, Mrs. William W. Clark of this place.

Squires frankly admitted purloining cats for the college anatomical laboratory to be used in dissection and not in vivisection. He said he was sorry, but his repentance did not save him from the tongue lashing of Mrs. Bent and Mrs. Clark.

PUFFS, RATS AND PAINT

Their Use by Young Clerks In Department Store Is Prohibited

Kansas City, Feb. 27.—An order was issued by G. C. Peters, general manager of the largest department store in Kansas City, prohibiting girl clerks between the ages of 14 and 16 years from using powder and paint on their faces, or wearing puffs, rats and switches in their hair.

According to Peters the order was made necessary by the tendency of some of the younger clerks to overdress. The store wants its clerks to make a good appearance, but marks a limit beyond which they should not go in the matter of personal adornment.

DEATH CHAIR FOR A WOMAN

Mrs. Consumano Guilty of Murdering Her Husband

MASCIOLI IS ALSO CONVICTED

Testimony of Woman's Daughter Clinched Decision of Jury After an All-Night Session—Case to Be Taken to Supreme Court—Last Execution of a Woman In Massachusetts Occurred In 1778

Plymouth, Mass., Feb. 27.—For the first time in this state a woman has been doomed to die in the electric chair. After an all-night session the jury in the Frank Cusumano murder trial filed into court Sunday morning and declared Mrs. Lena Cusumano and Enrico Mascioli to be equally guilty.

"First degree" was the finding. And this verdict means death by electricity at the state prison.

The woman met the fateful finding with the composure of a stoic. In marked contrast was the behavior of her companion in crime. He muttered imprecations at the jurymen. Then he dropped back to glare at them. Not until they had filed out, homeward bound, did his eyes lose their belligerent stare.

"My little girl—she did it," Mrs. Cusumano was heard to mutter as she marched back to the gloomy prison that she had hoped to leave forever by means of a verdict of acquittal. And court attendants agreed that she had hit on the real cause of her conviction.

For the story of 9-year old Lucy Cusumano, the eldest child of the accused woman, was the testimony that is believed to have clinched the decision of the jury.

After the prisoners had left the dock counsel for the defense stated that the case will be taken to the supreme court on exceptions. A long fight is expected in their attempt to save the lives of their clients.

The case of Lena Cusumano is a record one for Plymouth county. She is the first woman convicted of murder in the first degree in the last twenty-five years, and her case is the first where a verdict was returned on Sunday. The trial is said to have been the longest one for a capital offense oin the books of the county court.

The body of Frank Cusumano was found wrapped in a bed quilt on the beach at Hull last September. The body was bound with telephone wire and the badly crushed face and skull led the police to believe that death had resulted from foul play. An investigation followed which resulted in the arrest of Lena Cusumano, wife of the murdered man, and of Enrico Mascioli, a boarder at the home in Hull of the couple.

Nine-year-old Lucy, or Accusia, Cusumano, whose testimony convicted her mother, received the announcement of the finding with complacent mien. "I'm glad," her first words, were followed by: "My father was good and kind, and she killed him."

The girl is now living at Hull with her aunt, Mrs. Josephine Perrio, in the very next house to the one in which her father was hewed to death.

Lucy's declaration was supplemented by her aunt's statement: "They got just what they deserved. It makes no difference if she is my sister."

As far as can be learned, the last woman to die on the scaffold in this state was Bathsheba R. Spooner, executed July 2, 1778, in Worcester.

OVERCOME BY GAS FUMES

Thirteen Persons Narrowly Escape Suffocation While Asleep

Medford, Mass., Feb. 27.—Thirteen people, including six women and three babies, were overcome by gas at 69 Winchester street and would probably all have been killed but for the assistance of neighbors who had heard the shrieks of one of them and investigated.

The gas, leaking from a large main in the street, came through into the cellar of the house, in which three families were asleep.

All were finally taken out of the house and resuscitated. Although the condition of all seems serious they will recover.

CANAL DEFENSES DIVIDE AMERICA

Fortification Advocates Argue Lack of Guns Might Cause Building Nation Huge Damage In Case of War.

Opponents Figure Battleships Could Destroy Locks Without Being Endangered by Defense Artillery.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

THE completion of the Panama canal at our doors is brought startlingly near by the designation of San Francisco as the city in which to hold the canal exposition and by the discussion as to fortifying the big ditch. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt says that fortification is opposed by some "worthy ladies of both sexes."

Among these "worthy ladies" are former Secretary of State Richard Olney, William Dean Howells, President Jordan of Stanford university and President Faunce of Brown, United States District Judge Holt, Bishop Anderson of the Episcopal church, Jane Addams of Hull House, Governor Baldwin of Connecticut, General J. Warren Keifer, General Sherwood, another representative, Methodist ministers in Cincinnati and elsewhere, 100,000 Quakers, more or less; various peace societies, two or three New York newspapers and a number of senators and representatives, but just how many nobody seems to know.

On the side of fortifications are arrayed President Taft, Colonel Roosevelt, W. R. Hearst and a vast army of American newspapers, public officials, members of both houses of congress and American citizens of the plain voting variety, nobody knowing just how many there are of these either. Both sides claim public sentiment, after the manner of factions in this land of the free. The division is not a partisan one, since the minority leader of the senate introduced the resolution favoring fortifications. Neither is it sectarian, as many ministers oppose building forts and others just as stoutly favor it. Nor is it a division between those who are for peace and those against it, since President Taft is something of a peace advocate, and Andrew Carnegie, who is for peace with his whole heart and $10,000,000, is a believer in fortifying the canal.

Foreign Opinion Divided.

Foreigners are quite as much divided on the question as ourselves. Those in responsible positions have, of course, refrained from comment, but others have not been under like restraint. Of these a number hold that it is our right and duty to protect our own property. Others insist that our best method of guarding the great waterway would be through international agreement, leaving the canal itself open to the whole world. Possibly they think we should carry our magnanimity a point further and not charge tolls.

On the same principle a farmer should not put up fences, but should depend on a neighborhood agreement to keep the cattle out of his corn and if he had any crop left should give it away. The great argument against fortifying the Panama canal is that England has not fortified the Suez canal. Yet England has amply fortified Gibraltar, which guards the entrance to the Mediterranean sea and thus commands the approach to the canal.

Another argument against fortifications is that it is physically impossible to protect the Panama canal by such means. Some guns now have a range of nearly twenty miles and the canal locks are in such an exposed position that they can be shot at from far out at sea and from several points along the coast. Ships could thus keep out of sight of the forts and still do execution against the canal. Even if sighted they would be in motion, thus being difficult to hit, while the canal locks would offer a stationary target. This line of reasoning would imply that where there cannot be complete protection there should be none at all.

Advocates of fortifications insist that guns on land can shoot quite as far as those at sea, that they would be several miles nearer to any battleship than the ship itself could get to the locks and that while attacking vessels might not furnish a stationary target the fort guns themselves would be stationary, which would be a big point in their favor. Moreover, the fortifications could be placed at both ends of the canal for $12,000,000, or a trifle more than the cost of one battleship. This is a point of no small importance, since defending the canal by the navy would be very much more expensive than fortifying and would tie up a whole fleet that in case of war would be needed for other service.

Land Defenses Formidable.

Naval experts make a telling point in favor of fortifications. In case of war it would be practically impossible without forts to take an American fleet through the canal in face of an enemy. That would be like marching an army through a narrow defile with a foe at the other end to pick them off as they emerged. With forts all this would be changed. The fort guns could keep the opposing fleet at least ten miles distant and give the American ships an opportunity to go through the canal unmolested and form in battle line under the protection of the forts.

Of course everybody hopes that there will be no more war. We have been hoping the same thing for over 2,000 years. Twenty-six hundred years ago Isaiah wrote that "they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks." We still believe that "they" will do this, but the nations have not done it yet and give no certain indication when they will. The powers run a race in building Dreadnoughts and increasing armaments. Moreover, the advocates of fortification at Panama insist that this would be a defensive rather than an offensive measure. It would make for peace rather than war. It would discourage and not invite attack. The fortifications would be no menace to commerce. They would never be used except against an enemy of the canal or an enemy of the country owning the canal.

For Police Duty.

Another argument in favor of fortifications is that they are necessary in the proper policing of the great waterway. They are required to enforce neutrality. The duty of policing and protecting the canal and of making it neutral rests on the United States government. Who then can object if we take the necessary steps to perform our duty?

The weakness of an international agreement for assuring the neutrality of the canal is that an international agreement would necessarily consist of treaties between individual nations, and in time of war such treaties are hardly worth the paper on which they are written. Besides, what is to prevent some irresponsible nation that is not a signatory to the agreement from inflicting injury on the waterway? Even if there were an understanding somebody would still have to police the canal, and for this purpose some sort of fortification would be essential. From the American viewpoint there would be another fatal defect in the plan. In case of war, say, between the United States and Japan there would be nothing to prevent a Japanese fleet from passing through the canal and attacking the Atlantic coast. Thus the waterway we ourselves had built would be used for our own injury.

It was the military necessity that first crystallized American sentiment for the enterprise. An isthmian canal had been talked of for generations, but it was not till the spectacular trip of the battleship Oregon around the Horn that Uncle Sam definitely made up his mind to get into the game. Thus the new waterway is as much a naval as a commercial venture. How silly it would be, argue the advocates of fortification, to allow all the military benefits to slip out of our hands now that we are building the canal and have them securely in our grasp! We have constructed the waterway with our own money on our own land. Who has a better right to say how we shall use it?

Natural Sites For Forts.

The natural features of the canal termini seem almost made for forts. On the Atlantic side there are necks of land that would make an ideal site for a bunch of fourteen inch and other guns, while at the Pacific entrances there are three or four cute little islands that appear specially designed for the purpose and, heaven knows, will never serve any other. Failure to take advantage of these sites placed ready at our hand would be little less than impious, say the fort supporters.

It is designed to build the forts while Colonel Goethals is still on the job. In this way much time and expense can be saved. Besides, the work will be sure to get finished. Goethals has a habit of going through with anything on which he starts, even an appropriation. Landslides have no terrors to him. He simply continues shoveling out the landscape and lets it slide any blooming way it pleases. If he were put on the fortifications he could utilize his concrete gangs after they had finished with the locks.

Not long ago the colonel appeared in Washington to testify before a committee and while there was invited to deliver a stereopticon lecture in the hall of the house of representatives, the second time such an honor has been accorded an outsider in the history of the country. He was not there to talk for forts, yet everybody knew how he felt on the subject.

It is designed to use disappearing guns for the forts. A disappearing gun has the same advantage as a man shooting from behind a tree. It bobs out suddenly, fires its load and before the enemy can get back at it is again in hiding.

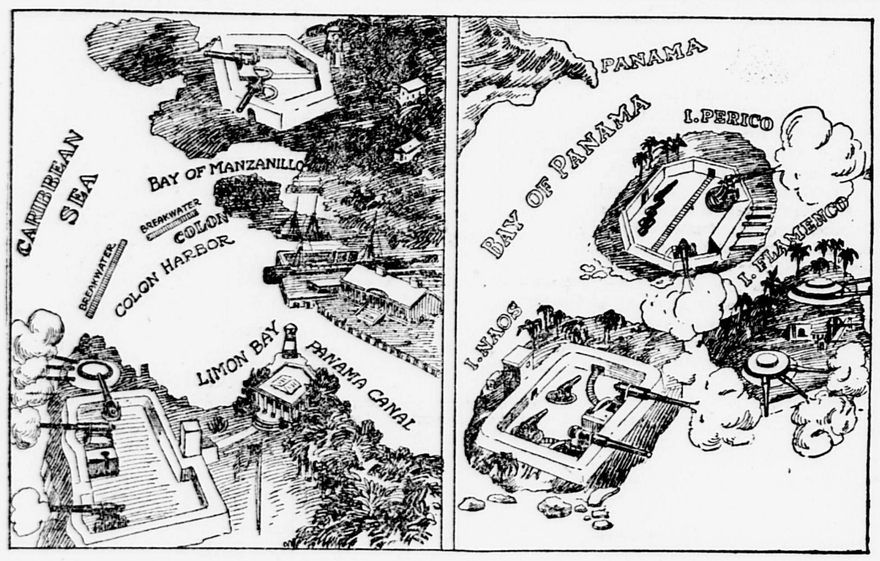

Big Growth on Pacific.

The Panama canal will be the gateway to the Pacific. Its importance to the world no one can yet measure. The outlines of the new civilization taking form around the great ocean grow more clearly defined with the passage of the years. Here is the new theater of human activity, and what a vast theater it is! Everywhere the Pacific lands are becoming keenly alive. Our own coast states show the most marvelous growth in the nation. Northwestern Canada is emerging. Eternal frost cannot wholly stifle activity even in Alaska and Siberia. Under Japanese control Korea is awakening from the sleep of thirty centuries. China is establishing a parliament and shedding its pigtails.

Under free trade with America Philippine commerce is on the upgrade. Australasia, with her advanced theories of government, seems almost a Utopia. With the opening of the great canal a new life will flow out to all these lands. Europe will have found a pathway to the east. The dream of Columbus, which led to the discovery of two continents, will have been realized and a new route to India will lie open to men.

Philanthropists believe that it would be a magnanimous and beautiful thing for America to build this waterway and say to the world, "Take it; it is yours." More practical beings feel that it is still important for the United States to control the Pacific—important for herself and still more important for civilization. By fortification we retain the key in our own hands. From our island forts at the western gateway America can proclaim:

"I awakened the Pacific; I furnished the example for the republics of the western hemisphere; I broke the sleep of Japan and maintained the integrity of China; I furnished a type of freedom for Australia and New Zealand; I am leading Hawaii and the Philippines into the paths of self government; I breathed life into all this vast new and old empire around the world's greatest ocean, and I will guard its destiny."

ROBBERS' BOLD WORK IN BOSTON STORES

Much Loot Is Secured by a Glass Breaking Gang

Boston, Feb. 27.—Under the glare of the bright street lights and within a few yards of hundreds of people, property to the value of several thousand dollars was stolen or destroyed by a gang of burglars, who worked at random in the business section of the city late Saturday night and early yesterday morning.

Washington street and vicinity seemed to be the principal working district for the gang, as reports were received about the visit of the band to the big office office building, 292 Washington street, the Beuve-Sterling shoe store, 13 Water street, the jewelry store of C. A. W. Crosby, Avon and Washington streets, and the liquor store of Daley & Co., 467 Atlantic avenue.

The means of gaining an entrance to all the places except 293 Washington street was to crash in the glass of the door or show window and then work at leisure, taking all that was valuable that they could reach.

FORTIFICATION OF CANAL

Big Majority In Favor of Project Recorded In the House

Washington, Feb. 27.—After nearly five hours of debate the house of representatives voted overwhelmingly in favor of the policy of fortifying the Panama canal, and appropriated $3,000,000 to begin the work, the total cost of which has been estimated at $12,000,000.

The sentiment of the senate is said to be more than two to one in favor of protecting the isthmian waterway by seacoast batteries.

The Republicans generally supported the fortification of the canal and the Democrats opposed it. The defection of about twenty Republicans from the general policy of fortification was offset by a defection on the Democratic side in favor of fortification. Mr. Tawney's effort to kill the measure was defeated by a vote of 130 to 63.

KEPT SAVINGS IN MILK CAN

New York Bachelor Mourns the Disappearance of $8000

New York, Feb. 27.—Henry Meyer, a bachelor, mourns his lack of faith in savings banks, which led him to deposit his savings of $8000 in a milk can for safe-keeping. The can and money have both disappeared.

Meyer kept his money in his furnished room when he first withdrew it from a bank, but later decided to put it in a battered milk can in the factory of the Ironclad Manufacturing company, where he was employed.

Despite his confidence that nobody would disturb the worthless can, Meyer had the habit of examining the "bank" every morning. On his last inspection he was rendered almost speechless at finding both bank and money missing. He was looking forward with joyful anticipation to a trip to Germany with his savings.

BIG ROBBERY ON STEAMER

Mrs. Drummond Is Relieved of $130,000 Worth of Gems

New York, Feb. 27.—Pearls and diamonds valued at $130,000 were stolen from Mrs. Maldwin Drummond, who was the widow of Marshall Field, Jr., of Chicago, while she was a passenger on the Amerika, according to a report she made to the police when she arrived in this city after landing in Hoboken.

The robbery was discovered yesterday when Mrs. Drummond went to look for the gems, which, before retiring, she had placed in the drawer of a desk and covered with a handkerchief. They were gone.

Mrs. Drummond declared that she had left the door of her cabin open when she went to bed on Saturday night. She had slept soundly and, of course, could not tell if anybody had entered her stateroom.

The robbery is one of the most baffling that has occurred on an ocean setamship for some years, and there appears to be absolutely no clue to the thief.

HAYTI REPORTS THAT REVOLT HAS ENDED

Tells Why Number of Army Officers Were Executed

Washington, Feb. 25.—The government of Hayti has advised the state department that the revolution in that country is practically at an end, and that the lives of foreigners are secure.

In extenuation of the execution of revolutionists, Hayti advises the American government that she was threatened with a serious situation, and in consequence of the part that a number of army officers took in the rebellion they were court martialled for treason and executed.

Great Britain lately expressed anxiety as to the safety of British subjects at Port au Prince, and asked this government to take measures to protect British interests. The navy department consequently instructed the commander of the United States gunboat Dolphin, which is now in the harbor of Port au Prince, to see that foreigners and foreign interests were not jeopardized.

Rumor of His Appointment Is Revived at Washington

Washington, Feb. 27.—The report is revived in Washington that William H. Lewis, the negro assistant United States district attorney of Boston, will be appointed assistant attorney general, his appointment to take effect March 1.

At that time the resignation of Assistant Attorney General Thompson will take effect, and this will cause a vacancy in the department of justice. It was stated at the White House six weeks ago the delay in naming Lewis was largely due to the fact there was no vacancy in the corps of assistants to Mr. Wickersham.

BRIEFS

The second night of the Signal Corps play at Atlantic was even better than the first night.

The apron and candy sale on Saturday at the residence of Mrs. Fred W. Austin was very successful, netting a large sum.

Any one running over to New York for a few days and missing their home daily and news from home can step into the National Newspaper Bureau at 219 East 23d street and look over the files of the Quincy Daily Ledger or buy a copy to take away with them.

A meeting in the interest of the proposed memorial hall for Quincy was held Saturday evening at the residence of C. B. Gould on Adams street. It is understood that the plan to have the city purchase the present Grand Army hall as a Memorial building has been abandoned, and that efforts will be made to have the city erect a suitable memorial building.

JUMPED FROM TRAIN.

Just before the 11.15 train from Boston pulled into the depot Saturday night a young man who gave his name as Fred Smith of 47 South street, thinking that the station had been reached, jumped off and rolled along the track. Fortunately the wheels of the train did not reach him. He was taken to the station where it was found he had escaped with a few scratches.

BURGLARS ABOUT.

It was reported to the police late Saturday night that the house of Royal L. Turner, at 37 Taylor street, had been entered by burglars. The family were away from 5 to 10 o'clock, and when Mr. Turner arrived home he found things turned topsy turvy, but he could not find that much had been taken. Footprints in the mud outside showed that there was probably but one person concerned in the break and that he had gained entrance by forcing the rear door, which was left unlocked when he took his departure.

"You are very much behind in your work, Mr. Adder," said the employer to his bookkeeper.

"I know it, sir," said Mr. Adder, meekly, "but my corns hurt me so I couldn't foot up those columns to save my life."

Trees.

A tree that has been a hundred years growing can be cut down in a couple of hours, but it takes another hundred years to replace it.

The resignation is to take effect the first Sunday in April.

The morning text was taken from a part of the 26th verse of the 20th chapter of John. "The inevitable Christ" was the subject of the discourse.

In the evening the subject was "The devotional habit." The text was found in the 11th chapter of Hebrews, part of the twenty-first verse. Both services were unusually good and well attended.

The Snug Harbor service preceding the regular morning meeting was greatly enjoyed by the sailors. Mrs. Graves and Mr. Davis accompanied Mr. Marshall and furnished some good music.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.

Hot Ham Sandwiches. Cut thin slices of white bread and spread half of them with soft butter, and the remaining half with finely chopped ham. Press the slices together and remove the crust. Beat one egg slightly, add one-half cup milk and strain over the sandwiches. When moistened place them in a hot frying pan containing two level tablespoons of butter. Brown nicely on both sides and serve at once.

Cauliflower Fritters. Soak and boil the cauliflower in the usual way, then separate into flowers. Dip each piece into a thin batter, plunge into boiling fat and fry a delicate brown. Serve very hot on a napkin. If preferred the pieces may be dipped in a mixture of salt, pepper, vinegar and oil, then fried.

Chocolate Fudge. Melt one rounded tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan; add three cups of sugar and one cup of milk. When the sugar is melted add two squares of chocolate melted. Stir and boil 15 minutes; then take from the fire and stir until creamy. Flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla and cool. Cut in squares when pretty cool.

Dark Fruit Cake. One pound dried peaches, one pound prunes, washed and soaked 12 hours, then drained, stoned, and both fruits cut fine. Cream a half pound of butter, add one pound of sugar, five beaten eggs, the spices; add gradually three cupfuls of sifted pastry flour, the juice and grated rind of two oranges, a half teaspoonful cloves, one teaspoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, a half teaspoonful of salt, a half pound of chopped nuts, the fruit lightly dusted with flour, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake it in a moderate oven for about three hours.

SPRING MILLINERY.

Shapes Are Going to Be Sensible and Becoming.

ONE OF THE MEDIUM SIZED HATS.

Small and medium sized hats are to be the approved shapes in the spring, and the model illustrated is a smart representation of the prevailing type of millinery.

The hat is of light blue hemp straw covered with white dotted malines. Tiny pink gardenias with their foliage are wreathed about the hat.

He Was Vanquished at Last

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"You have heard of the Admirable Crichton, I presume," said Philip Aguenaldiz of Havana.

No one knew anything about him.

"Crichton," explained Aguenaldiz, "was so accomplished that he was called Admirable. Just before the Spanish-American war we had a man in Havana who I think would have tied him, at least in a fight. He was a Virginian and had come down thinking that the times in Cuba were propitious for a display of his accomplishments.

Naturally the sympathy of all Americans was with the Cubans. Fitz Hugh—that was the Virginian's name—was outspoken in his advocacy of their cause and, being a citizen of the United States, was protected from arrest so long as he didn't commit any overt act against the government. He frequented public places, where he would meet Spanish officers, giving expression to his opinion of the butcheries of Captain General Weyler. Some Spaniard would take him to task for doing so, and there would be a challenge and a duel and one less officer of the Spanish army fit for duty.

Fitz Hugh went out into the country one day and stopped at a hacienda be longing to a young widow. She being a sympathizer with the Cuban cause and Fitz Hugh being of the same mind—he was a handsome dog—she entertained him royally. They were sitting at the table, just finishing an excellent dinner, when along came marching two companies of Spanish troops. There was a major in command, and he halted his men before the gate of the hacienda and, walking up to the house, called for Senora Vendez, the owner. He was invited into the dining room, where he informed the lady that, she being an avowed revolutionist, he proposed to take her and put her in commandero, or some other spread out Spanish word, which meant she was to be penned up with other rebel Cubans. The widow, being defenseless, signified that she would go with him, when Fitz Hugh spoke up.

"Senor major," he said, "it is a very easy matter for you to commit this act of tyranny upon a woman with a battalion of men behind you, but neither you nor any man in your command could do it alone."

"What do you mean, senor?"

"I mean that if you will give me an opportunity I will defend the lady against you singly, and, after you against any and all your officers, and, after that, against any and all your men, I to meet each adversary singly. If I put you all out of the fight the lady to remain where she is."

"Who are you, senor?"

"I am an American citizen."

"Ah! An American. We are having much trouble with you Americans exciting these Cubans to rebellion."

"You have a chance to punish one of them. Surely I cannot be expected to vanquish every man in your command."

The major swore a blue streak about interference, threatening to take Fitz Hugh along with the widow, but at this Fitz Hugh smiled, saying that only a coward would decline such a proposition as he had made. The major was the son of one of the most prominent grandees of Spain, and his ideas of chivalry would not permit him to brook the taunts Fitz Hugh heaped upon him. He went out to his command and talked excitedly with his officers for awhile, then returned with every one of them—six in all—to the house. Rejoining Fitz Hugh and the widow, he told the former that his challenge was accepted. He would fight the American first, and if he were killed or disabled the ranking captain would take his place, and so on to the junior second lieutenant.

The widow forbade Fitz Hugh to enter upon so unequal a contest, but he only smiled that imperturbable smile of his and began to get ready for the fray. Taking off his coat and vest, he went outside with the officers. The major did the same, and they squared for an encounter with swords. Fitz Hugh called to the widow to come out on the veranda and witness the tournament, assuring her that there would be no blood spilled. On this assurance she acceded to his request.

The two men had not fought five minutes before it was evident that the American could have killed his adversary five times. Then he sent the major's sword flying in a circle in the air, and it came down fifty feet away, the point sticking in the ground. The senior captain was served the same way and the junior captain also. After that it was evident there was no need for any more officers to take a hand, but every one of them insisted on a trial, and all received the same treatment. Fitz Hugh vanquished every one of the seven men without giving or receiving a scratch.

Well, the major and every one of his officers took Fitz Hugh by the hand and swore he should have been a Spaniard in the days when Spanish gentlemen settled all their differences with the sword, as all gentlemen should settle them. Then they marched away, and Fitz Hugh told the widow he would like to go back to the table and finish a bottle of wine that had been half emptied.

But Fitz Hugh had met an enemy who was capable of vanquishing him. The widow was so infatuated with him that she wouldn't let him go. He married her and is running her hacienda today.

THERE are plenty of good reasons why a man shouldn't bet on the ponies, but he never thinks of them until after the ponies lose.

ARGENTINA CONTRACTS ON RECIPROCITY PLANS

National Senate Adopts Resolutions Relative to Secrets of the United States Navy

Has Argentina Access to Plans Marked Confidential

Resolutions were adopted on Monday by the National Senate, says a Washington dispatch to the Globe, calling upon the secretary of state and the secretary of the navy for information as to whether the Argentine government has been given the benefit of secret plans of the United States in the matter of the construction of the two battleships now being constructed for Argentina by private shipbuilding concerns in this country.

The resolutions were presented by Senator LaFollette. One directed to the secretary of state ordered that official to supply the senate with a full statement as to any negotiations on the subject between the state department and the Argentine government.

Senator Gellinger moved to modify by leaving it to the discretion of the secretary to furnish "if not incompatible with the interests of this government." Mr. LaFollette resisted the amendment, but it was voted in, 44 to 28. The Wisconsin senator said that it had been charged that the officials had surrendered the secret plans of the navy department and he argued that if this was true it would be improper to give the department any discretion in the matter.

The resolution directed to the secretary of the navy called for full information covering the entire question, the following being a specimen provision:

"Were the plans of the new battleships, Nos. 34 and 35 marked 'confidential' furnished to the Argentine republic? Were the plans of our submerged torpedo tubes and the fire control system furnished to the Bethlehem steel company or to the Argentine republic for use in the two battleships now under construction in this country for the account of the Argentina republic? Has the Argentine republic of the Bethlehem steel company been furnished with the books or specifications marked 'confidential' or with any appendices to such books?"

The answer of the executive departments, it is understood, will set forth that the government was gratified to use all legitimate means to bring the contracts to the United States.

It is said at the navy department that the two Argentine ships which are being built at the Fore River and New York shipbuilding yards are being constructed under a plan of reciprocity. The Argentine ships are bigger than any in the American navy at the present time and represent the latest improvements in ship construction.

Under the arrangement, it is said, the U. S. experts can observe all the details of their construction and in, return for this Argentine representatives are alowed to learn all the lessons they can from the American vessels now building at the two yards mentioned.

Two envelopes were given to Mr. Kjellander one from friends and fellow workers, and the other from the church members and the Epworth league. The contents of these envelopes is to be spent by the young man in purchasing the watch of his choice.

THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

Presented in German at Quincy Mansion School

At the Quincy Mansion school on Monday evening "Dornroschen" or "Sleeping Beauty" was presented in German by the pupils of the German classes under the direction of their teacher Miss Louise Lummis.

The play ran prettily through a setting of three acts and numerous scenes, along the lines of the familiar story with a smoothness not always accorded to amateur productions in English.

The scene opens with a conversation between the King and his Lord Chamberlain in which they discuss the approaching christening. Twelve fairies have been asked to stand as god mothers to the child but the thirteenth is omitted as the kingdom boasts of but twelve golden plates.

The thirteenth having been neglected prepares for revenge and at the christening, after eleven of the fairies have bestowed their gifts of beauty, wit, riches and the like, rushes in and decrees that the princess shall die at the age of sixteen by piercing her hand with a spindle.

This causes great grief of the assembled court but the twelfth fairy, the presiding genius of the piece, then comes forward and averts the calamity by saying as her gift, instead of dying when the princess pierces her hand, she shall fall into a sleep of one hundred years to be awakened at its end by a prince. This occurs as the fairy has foretold, and in the next scene we see the court yard of an inn one hundred years later. It is evening and a prince and his servant enter and prepare to spend the night on the ground.

In a dream the good fairy causes to appear to the prince a vision of what has taken place, and in the morning the prince and his companion awake to find they have unwittingly slept in the yard of an inn. They call for refreshment and during its consumption are told of the prophecy by an old man and the landlady. The inn is on the border of the palace domain, and even as the prince ponders the bushes burst forth with roses, a sign of the appointed time for the awakening. Followed by his quaking servant he enters the confines of the palace through the network of brambles and bushes.

Next we see the princess and her court asleep. The prince and his servant enter and with the predicted kiss the princess awakens, the young prince's hand is joined with that of the princess by the happy king, and all live happily ever after.

Easily the strongest character of the piece was the portrayal by Miss Bertha Scharff of Belladonna, the thirteenth and malignant fairy. With a splendid delivery she displayed the malevolence and vindictiveness of the character in a manner so in keeping with the part as to overshadow the whole play.

A fair and beautiful princess was Miss Sentress Herlin in the title part, while Miss Fitch made an attractive prince. Miss Pitts was a King both in manner and bearing, and her speech was especially good. As the good fairy of the play Miss Arnold was sweet and pleasing.

Of the comic characters, two should be mentioned, Miss Lawton was a rubicund and irascible palace cook. In the part of the timid but humorous servant of the prince, Miss Ackerman was good.

Considering the fact that practically the entire cast were in but their first or second year of German the result was most gratifying. In the cast were the following:

Laura, his sister,	Miss Mears
Uffo, his brother-in-law,	Miss Abbott

FALSE ALARM.

The alarm from Box 37 at 4.31 Monday afternoon, followed immediately by the recall, was a false alarm. It is supposed that the alarm was pulled by an Italian boy who was urged to do so by two other boys. The two boys were taken to the police station but denied all knowledge of who had pulled the alarm.

WILL THE POLICE ACT?

Editors Daily Ledger:

It is currently reported that one of those edifying entertainments known as "boxing matches" is going to be given in this city some day this week. For the benefit of the unsophisticated, perhaps, it should be explained that a "boxing match" is a prize-fight, pure and simple.

The duty of the police is clear. They can legally prevent the fight taking place. They can stop it at any stage and prosecute the participants for mutual assault. Will the officers rise to the occasion?

TOOL SHARPENERS ALSO REACH AGREEMENT

First Time That New Bill for Increase of Wages and Better Working Conditions Has Been Adopted Without Suspension of Work

All suspicion of a suspension of work in Quincy in the granite trade March 1 was removed Monday night, when the tool sharpeners reached an agreement with the manufacturers.

It is a source of gratification to the citizens in general, as well as to those directly interested in the industry, that the committees were able to reach a peaceful agreement before the first of March, and they are to be congratulated.

They are also to be congratulated on the fact, that to the committee this year goes the credit of being the first in the history of Quincy to reach an agreement on a new bill that provided for an increase of wages for the workmen as well as for better working conditions, without any suspension of work.

Heretofore when increased wages and better working conditions have been asked, a settlement has not been reached until after a suspension of work, which at times extended over several weeks.

Monday there was some question if there might not be a suspension of work on March first, for the manufacturers had been told that unless an agreement was reached with all branches on that date there would be a suspension of work until all branches had settled.

Up to Monday everything had been settled with the exception of the tool sharpeners, who were still debating over the day and piece fire proposition. These two committees met Monday night, however, with the determination to settle, and settle they did. Unusually fair-minded men have served on the committees representing the two organizations this year. The best of feeling has prevailed through all the conferences, each, as was perfectly natural, seeking to obtain the best bargain, if such it might be called, for their association. When committees of this kind meet in fairness it is sure to result sooner or later in a peaceful agreement as it did in this case.

Another good thing about the settlement this year is that it is for five years, thus assuring five years of business without thought that the coming March might bring about labor trouble.

Tonight the several branches of the union will hold a mass meeting at St. Mary's hall, at which time the new bills of each branch will be read to the workmen, and tomorrow morning, the first day of March, the manufacturers as well as the employes will go to their work with a feeling of satisfaction at the outcome.

SAMOSET MINSTRELS

The Local Hits Were Numerous and Keenly Appreciated

The Samoset Club carved its name in the annals of Quincy on Monday evening by presenting a minstrel show in Alpha hall before a crowded house. The club is composed of a group of popular young men of Wollaston and their popularity was attested by the large audience.

The songs and gags were uproariously applauded and several encores were demanded to a number of the selections. The local hits were keenly appreciated and when the butt of the joke was found in the audience, the effect was still more mirthful. The curtain went up shortly after 8 o'clock upon a very festive circle, the end men in red and yellow striped suits, gigantic poke collars and red ties, the interlocutor in a pink dress suit supplemented by a fan of the same color and the remainder of the circle in funereal black.

After the opening chorus and a few gags Harry G. Campbell, who is familiarly known as "Ducky" sang "Bake that chicken pie" as a solo with the circle chiming in on the second chorus After a few more gags Harold S. Taylor sang 'Silver Threads among the Gold" in such a moving manner that the other bones and the tambos shed crocodile tears. "Put" Murphy made a decided hit with his rendering of "Moonlight in Jungle-Town" and also with the encore "Lovin' Joe."

The final chorus was well executed by the entire circle. The effect was spoiled a little by the refusal of the flag to come down from its aerie above the scenes, despite the best efforts of Mr. White.

The Elio opened with a splendid exhibition in club swinging by Wallace Bennett. When recalled for an encore, he went through a similar drill with flags with beautiful effect.

I BELIEVE IN THE NATURAL BEAUTIES AND ATTRACTIOSS OF THE CITY OF QUINCY

"Put" Murphy next contributed a series of parodies which met with the howling approval of all.

George Spaulding, the coach, dressed as an Irish fisherman gave an entertaining original sketch after which "Jim" Claflin sang "What's the use" in an inimitable fashion. The concluding number of the olio was a dialogue between Harry Campbell and Harold Taylor who were disguised as Jews. Not a little amusement was added to the act by the propensity of the false noses for falling off.

The show was a success from start to finish and all the performers are to be congratulated on their good work. During the performance a number of bouquets were passed to them. "Put" Murphy received an evergreen tree of the Burbank type which bore on its branches, frankfurters, lemons, carrots etc. "Jim" Claflin was given a small lemon tree and the interlocutor William W. Nichols received a bouquet of lettuce and cabbage leaves. In addition to these touching tokens of esteem there were several handsome bouquets of cut flowers presented to the minstrel men.

The list of performers is: Interlocutor William W. Nichols. End men: James E. Claflin, Harry G. Campbell, Harold S. Taylor and William Murphy. Circle: Robert Siblee, Max Pinkham, Charles Sayward, Eugene Saunders, J. E. Lewis, Jr., Brandt Lupton, Carleton Lewis, J. D. Gourlie and Sidney Claflin.

The following young ladies served as ushers Misses Lucy Chase, Helen Seavey, Caroline Lewis, Helen Jones and Frances Jones.

The orchestra was from Boston and was good at times although it was handicapped by unfamiliarity with the way things were supposed to go.

"Jim" Claflin and "Put" Murphy greatly amused the audience by antics when the other end men were performing. The circle sang well and the efficiency shown by the bones and tambos would lead one to believe that the minstrel profession was not new to these versatile performers.

WOMEN'S BIBLE CLASS

Observe Gentlemen's Night and Present a Fine Entertainment

An evening of speeches, music and readings formed the program of the annual gentlemen's night of the Women's Bible class in the chapel of the Wollaston Baptist church on Monday evening.

Following the opening remarks of Mrs. Joseph Walther, president of the class, Amos D. Albee, teacher of the class and J. Arthur Sparrow, president of the Walther Men's class, were introduced, both of whom spoke wittily and to the point.

In the musical portion of the evening were included tenor solos by Edward E. Bullock. These were sung in his usual pleasing manner, and consisted of "Come love to me," "Cornflowers," "Thinking of thee," "For us" and "Hearts delight."

As a reader Vernon Field of Boston received much applause while the mandolin selections of Lewis Doane of Quincy, accompanied by Miss Mollie Rodgers were especially pleasing.

E. L. Durgin, superintendent of the Sunday school, Rev. Joseph Walther, the pastor and Mr. Rand a new addition to the teaching force, all spoke briefly, and the evening closed with refreshments of ice cream, cake and coffee.

Mention should be made of the beautiful floral decorations of sweet peas, jonquils and pinks for whose provision the thanks of the club were due to William Chase. In charge of the affair was a committee consisting of Mrs. Joseph Walther, Mrs. W. R. Dimmock, Mrs. Ada Kendall, Mrs. A. D. Albee, Mrs. C. E. Goodspeed and Mrs. Eben Hardy.

HONESTY IN EVERYTHING

To think that somewhere flowers are blooming and birds are singing!

Here's hoping nobody will forget to get ready for the spring white-washing.

That Texas seven-colored sheep had probably been trying to keep up with recent Chicago market fluctuations.

That Mexican revolution is becoming almost as "amoosing" as a French duel.

Like some eminent gentlemen in Congress, the prophetic ground hog is more or less liable to get his dates mixed.

We discredit the story that in anticipation of Mr. Morgan's visit, the price of pyramids in Egypt "has riz."

"Say, Daily Ledger man, is there any limit to the good things you can say for Quincy; I begin to think Quincy must be all right?" It certainly is, and there is no limit.

From the present outlook there will be no legal holiday in the month of March as the senate committee has given the petitioners to make March 17 a holiday leave to withdraw.

Although there has already been several hundred thousand expended on elevating the railroad tracks in Lynn it will be a safe bet that those twenty prominent business men who now ask for depressed tracks will get what they want. Lynn merchants are hustlers and will all pull together.

We don't care how humane those Wellesley college girls are in killing the cats after they get them, the method of getting is all wrong. The janitor of the college has no legitimate way of getting the cats and should not be paid to steal. We are glad he was severely fined. Any man who would deliberately go into a person's yard and steal a handsome angora cat off the piazza should be fined and the college condemned. If the college has to have cats for its class work there are plenty of homeless cats and ways of procuring them.

INDUSTRIAL QUINCY

Makes a Good Showing Even When Compared with Boston

In the February number of "Advance New England "the Chamber of Commerce Journal, is a table of great interest to Quincy as it shows very conclusively that city is not so dependent upon Boston as promoters of "Real Boston" would have the people believe.

The Daily Ledger notes that Quincy had by the census of 1905 a total of 161 industries, or one to every 202 people by the 1910 census. Boston according to its population does not have as many, only one to every 244 people.

The only cities and towns of the Metropolitan district actually having more industries are Boston, Lynn, and Cambridge. Quincy has more industries than Somerville, Watertown, Melrose and Wakefield combined. Also more than Everett, Waltham and Hyde Park combined.

Quincy has 56,371 wage earners; in other words it gives employment to one in six of its population in its industries, where Boston gives employment to only one in eleven. Waltham gives employment to more than Quincy, but Quincy employs more than Somerville, or Chelsea, or Malden, or Melrose, or Watertown.

The yearly value of the Quincy products is $8,982,446, which is $273.92 per capita. The value per capita of Boston products is only $274.89 per capita, or 97 cents per capita more than Quincy. All the watches manufactured in Waltham in a year are not worth as much as Quincy products for the same period.

Here is the table from Advance New England, which shows that ten cities about Boston actually manufacture more than does Boston:

	Industries	Wage Earners	Value of Products
Boston,	2747	59,160	$184,351,163
Lynn,	431	21,540	55,003,023
Cambridge,	262	14,586	42,407,064
Somerville,	78	3,474	22,955,197
Watertown,	20	3,322	15,524,675
Chelsea,	130	4,930	13,879,159

Little Interest In Veto Debate

London, Feb. 28.—The members of the house of commons are showing a languid interest in the veto bill debates, there being a sparse attendance in the house.

"CARROTY NELL" AT ST. MARY REUNION

Repeated by Ladies of the Guild to Delight of Men Excluded Before

Refreshments and a Dance Follow Good Time for All

The annual reunion of St. Mary's parish was held Monday evening at St. Mary's hall, which was all too small to accommodate the large number who attended. The parishioners began to gather early in the evening and at 8 o'clock the program opened with the presentation of a two act farce entitled "Carroty Nell," which was presented in an exceptionally entertaining manner by the members of St. Mary's guild.

Some weeks ago the ladies presented the farce at one of their gatherings. The audience at that time was exclusively ladies, the only gentlemen present being one or two scribes who looked lost among such a large gathering of ladies. The success that attended the presentation on that evening was such that at the request of Rev. Henry T. Grady, he pastor of the church, the play was presented at the reunion.

The directress was Miss Julia A. Reily, and in the cast were Miss Alicia Elcock, who impersonated the character of "Carroty Nell" Miss Sadie Monahan, Miss Mary King, Miss Helen Farrell, Miss Josie Grignon, Mrs. Mabel Fennessey, Miss Mary Monahan. Miss Mollie Galvin, Miss Florence Reily, Miss Helen Pickering, Miss Anna Kane, Miss Rena Mannex, Miss Frances Elcock, Miss Elizabeth P. Farrell and Miss Mary Sweeney.

At the conclusion of the farce which was warmly applauded there was a social hour during which the floor was cleared for dancing and the reception committee got busy and saw that everybody was made acquainted with each other. This committee which did yoeman service included Hon. William T. Shea, James H. Elcock, James F. Burke, John D. Smith, Stephen B. Little, Napoleon B. Grignon, Henry M. Hughes, Edward Finn, William J. Shea, John Burke, John J. Kane, John M. O'Brien and Joseph H. McPherson.

It also afforded an opportunity for the parishioners to meet Rev. Henry T. Grady and Rev. William J. Duffy, the pastors, as well as Rev. John P. Cuffe and Rev. James F. McNiff of the Sacred Heart church.

In the meantime a large corps of ladies representing the different sections of the parish were busy in the basement serving refreshments. This committee was as follows:—

Crescent street—Mrs. Michael Reardon, Mrs. Howley, Mrs. Leary, Miss Annie McGowan, Miss Nellie Morrissette and Miss Catherine McKenna.

Common street--Misses Susie Pickering, Louise Mahoney, Eva Bertrand, Mary Saville, Margaret Burke, Elizabeth Riley, Josephine Gregnon, Mollie Connolly, Elizabeth Rouleau, Mary A. Egan, Lulu I. Pickering and Agnes Smollett.

Boulevard—Mrs. Robert J. Teasdale, Mrs. Mary Hart, Miss Bridget Walsh.

Grove and Willard streets—Mrs. Daniel Scully, Mrs. John Crowley, Mrs. Louis Schwinn, Miss Katherine Buckley, Mrs. J. L. Fennessey, Mrs. John C. Ballou, Miss Rose Canavan, Miss Elizabeth Farrell, Miss Nellie Duggan, Miss Mary Byron, Miss Susie Foley, Miss Isabelle McGilvray, Miss Gertrude O'Brien and Miss Theresa Sheehan.

West street—Mrs. M. S. McDonald, Mrs. Edward Finn, Mrs. E. Thayer, Mrs. Keefe, Mrs. Thomas Holland, Mrs Agnes McDonald, Mrs. Neil McDonald, Mrs. LeClair, Miss Annie Galvin, Miss Mollie Galvin, Miss Mary Drohan, Miss Mary Dillon, Miss Rita Lyons, Miss Elizabeth Lyons, Miss Martha McDonald, Mrs. Arthur McDonald and Mrs. Ranb.

Shortly after 10 o'clock dancing was in order and was continued until the small hours of the morning. James F. Burke was the floor marshal and John D. Smith floor director. The aids were Daniel J. Duggan, Richard Barry, Andrew J. Dinegan, Daniel F. Forde, Harry T. Boyd, Charles J. McGilvray and Joseph McNealley.

The commitee of arrangements, to whom the success of the reunion was due included Stephen B. Little, Napoleon B. Grignon, James H. Elcock, Paul Morrissette, John D. Smith, Edward Finn, John Burke, James F. Burke, Alphonse LeClair, Edward J. B. Desmond, Martin King, Frank Hebert, Andrew J. Dinegan and Michael Monahan.

NO DELAY ON BATTLESHIPS.

Rear Admiral Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding company, which has the contract for building two battleships for the Argentine Republic, denied Saturday the report from Santiago, Chile, that an additional $4,000,000 has been requested on the ground that the company would be unable to comply with contract conditions concerning speed and armament. The work on the two battleships, one at the Fore River yard and the other at Camden, is progressing satisfactorily. The battleship here is forty-eight per cent completed and launching will probably take place early in the summer. The vessel at the Camden yard is forty-five per cent completed, and that ship will reach the water a month or two later.

—The new Lady Decies who was Vivien Gould until she married Lord Decies is said to have sat in a car window in the face of a crowd who had come forth to greet her while she and her lordly husband were passing through a southern town on their wedding journey and puffed a cigarette. There is certainly nothing criminal in Lady Decies smoking a cigarette or a corn cob pipe if she chooses to do so. It does appear somewhat out of place however, to flaunt her pecularities in the face of an admiring crowd who had gathered to pay her and her husband a little token of respect. The boldest smoker would remove his pipe occasionally in the face of an audience.—Milford, N. H. Cabinet.

FOR DECORUM'S SAKE

Pictures In Albany Saloon "Done Over" With Startling Results

Albany, Feb. 28.—As a result of the efforts of Rev. J. A. McCuaig, valuable oil paintings in a local saloon have been "done over" to conform with the rules of decorum. When the owner of the pictures was informed by officers on Saturday that his paintings must be either "draped or removed" by Monday he hired an artist and put him to work.

"Diana at the Bath," said to have been valued at $10,000, is no longer shocking. Diana herself has been clad in a bathing suit of brilliant hue, while her attendants wear suits of rainbow varieties. The man in the painting appears in a convict garb, wears a silk hat and smokes a pipe.

Another valuable work, "The Awakening of Adam," has been "done over" so that Eve wears a suit of blue pajamas and Adam a pair of overalls. Both have on boxing gloves.

WHITE MAY BE ENVOY

Hammond Not Acceptable at British Coronation Ceremonies

Washington, Feb. 28.—There is an unconfirmed report here that Henry White, formerly American ambassador to France, is being considered for appointment as special ambassador to represent the United States at the coronation of King George.

This would mean that John H. Hammond has been found persona non grata to the British court. Hammond's record as a Jameson raider at once suggested the possibility of objection to him.

Road to Business Success.

Are you discounting your bills this year or paying interest? The retailer who discounts all bills is doing business on the right basis. The man who pays interest is losing money both ways and cannot hope to compete with aggressive merchants. He loses the interest and the discounts, and together they amount to more than a fair trading profit.

COUNCIL MIGHT PROBE QUINCY

Quincy Wealthy Because of Its Industries

The Boston Journal reviews the "Real Boston" bill and lets in some new light. Note what the Journal says about Quincy being an exception:

The "Metropolitan Boston Council" as proposed in the bill drafted by the 'Real Boston" committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and approved by the directors, although not as yet by the chamber as a whole, will have forty members, mayors and chairmen of boards of selectment of the forty cities and towns in the metropolitan water, sewer and park districts.

Each municipality, through its representative in the council, will have one vote. Twenty-one members would constitute a majority. The total population of the cities and towns in the council is 1,423,431. The six largest cities included have a population of 1,026,206, or more than two-thirds of the total population. The twenty-one smaller towns have a population of 112,921, or less than a tenth of the whole populace. The remaining thirteen cities and towns have 284,304 people listed.

The six largest cities are in order, Boston, Cambridge, Lynn, Somerville, Malden and Newton. Boston has 670,585 residents. Dover has 798. Each has one vote.

The total valuation of the forty municipalities is $2,181,124. The per capita wealth for each man, woman and child is $1532.50. Twenty of the municipalities have a valuation larger in proportion than its population. These are Brookline, Newton, Quincy, Milton, Chelsea, Waltham, Melrose, Wellesley, Watertown, Dedham, Winchester, Arlington, Winthrop, Swampscott, Nahant, Cohasset, Weston, Lexington, Belmont and Hingham.

Quincy, Chelsea, Waltham and Watertown are exceptions because of large industries located there. The other sixteen municipalities are wealthy residential suburbs, each having its colony of millionaires. From a standpoint of capitalization the leading cities and towns in rank are Boston, Cambridge, Brookline, Newton, Lynn, Somerville, Malden, Quincy and Milton.

Boston has a large proportionate valuation because of the large industries and wealthy residents situated here. The wealth of Cambridge, Lynn, Somerville and Malden is chiefly vested in industries. The per capita wealth of Brookline is $3924.64 and of Milton $3459.42.

DOES QUINCY WANT TO BE INVESTIGATED BY THE OTHER METROPOLITAN CITIES

The possibility that the council might become a probing body into the affairs of any city or town is indicated by the clause that the council "shall, upon request and authorization of the Legislature, inquire into any matters relating to metropolitan Boston." It also "shall transmit to the Legislature or any committee thereof, upon reuest any information upon such metropolitan affairs as it has in its possession or can reasonably obtain."

PREFERS AMERICAN MEN.

Mrs. C. W. Fairbanks Declares They Make the Best Husbands.

Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks, the wife of the former vice president, thinks that American girls who marry foreigners make a serious mistake. She says that they could find better husbands at home and that they take a step backward when they unite for life with foreigners even if those foreigners have titles.

"I will say frankly that I do not approve of this habit our American girls have of going to Europe for husbands," she said recently. "While I do not like to criticise the men they choose—they have always been very gracious to me—I do not think them as honorable as the men those girls could find at home. An American girl who marries a foreigner in a way has retrograded. She is accepting ideals of life which American men have outgrown for something decidedly better.

"I think the whole social fabric of Europe far below that of America in quality. As I said before, our men in their dealings with women are more honorable and American women are more intellectual. The thing in the United States that delights me is the number of poor women you meet daily who are well educated. Now, you never see that in other countries. There the only cultivated women you find are of leisure classes."

CHURCH RELIC IN DISPUTE.

Real Bust Said to Have Been Replaced by Poor Imitation.

Religious and art circles in France are considerably wrought up by a discussion concerning a venerated relic belonging to the church of Soudeilles, near Limoges. The relic is an enameled head of St. Martin, classified as one of the historical monuments of the country by a ministerial decree issued in 1891.

REAL HEAD OF ST. MARTIN AND ONE CALLED FAKE.

As a specimen of Limoges enamel it was shown at the Paris exhibitions of 1889 and 1900, at which times, it is said, it lost several of its precious stones. Some time ago the municipality of Soudeilles applied for permission to raise funds by selling the treasure. Then the ministry of fine arts caused the reliquary to be locked up in a safe and gave the key to a responsible authority.

Last October an inspector in the service of that ministry opened the safe in the course of his duties. His report stated that the original "St. Martin" had been replaced by a "fake." M. Dujardin-Beaumetz then ordered that a charge should be brought against some person unknown for having effected the declared change.

The head of St. Martin is of copper and dates from the fifteenth century.

IN THE WEST INDIES

C. W. Guy Writes of Havana, Porto Rico and Jamaica

Charles W. Guy writes under date of Jan. 28, 1911:

We are now out of sight of land with 905 miles to travel to Porto Rico, said to be of special interest to Americans. We took on fourteen passengers at Havana and left seven. I talked with a number who had been stopping in Havana, and they all agreed that after the $350,000 appropriated by the United States is expended, as much more will be required, a total of a million to raise the Maine. Then to make sure of it, it will be blown up by dynamite. Spain keeps two men on watch all of the time, to see if they can discover the cause to be an inside explosion, which I hope they will never be able to find out, for if the United States was wrong it better not be known. There is graft connected with it.

Feb. 1—We arrived at San Juan at 6 A. M. and left at 4 P. M. We took a ride to a large sugar plantation and sugar mill. Saw hundreds of houses used for two families and many children. Think many have triplets. Some are very dark and there are all shades Not many pure niggers. All are very small people. The police are very straight but small. The land is moist, and oranges, palms and anything set out grows. The cultivation however is very bad. In Florida land is free from weeds. All the people plant but rather think the people do not want to wash oftener than they are obliged to. In the country they live in huts with palm leaves on the sides and top. As it belongs to the United States it seems much nicer than Havana. The streets seem quite clean and they have good sidewalks. Evidently a good place for some future settlement. As to Havana I would not recommend it a place for northerners to live there. Everyone in Havana is Spanish who do not like the United States people, yet they have control and management of the country.

We like Porto Rico well. We passed a great many cultivated places. On the steamer we have lots of music by the band. In the morning they use brass instruments, and in the afternoon string instruments. The children in Porto Rico do not wear much clothes, and the small children do not wear any. While I raise sugar cain in Quincy, it is small compared with that raised in Porto Rico, which grows two crops a year rich in sugar.

Feb. 3.—We are now on deck. Jamaica mountains and hills are on our right. We will soon be in port. It is rather warm at night, but that is the fashion. It showers about every day, yet it seems very pleasant, equal to St. Augustine. The people are lazy on account of the climate. Had a nice talk with ex-Governor Draper. Hope the trip did him good.

Jamaica is the first place where we can tie up to the wharf. Effects of the earthquake are still seen near the shore. Orange street is the main street and we found accommodations by tram cars good. We get six tickets for a shilling and when you give the conductor a ticket he give you a check in return. The conductors and motormen are colored but very polite and best posted of any I have seen.

Jamaica is under the English government hence it has good schools. Many of the population are beggars who follow you about, wanting to be your guides. As we went up Orange street we met many women driving donkeys loaded with two baskets, carrying grass and vegetables to market. The women behind carried similar baskets on the head with potatoes, ham, corn, etc. All are barefooted. A great saving in the shape of sole leather. They come from fifteen miles in the country to market making a thirty mile trip a day and get about thirty cents a day for the donkey and themselves. Men, as a rule, never carry a load. Women are the great workers in all parts of the south. It is certainly a good place to visit. If I was to advise a trip, I would say go there and then home as everything that grows anywhere grows there. While a little hotter it seems more like civilization.

Another letter soon.

Charles W. Guy.

The American Woman.

The most spoiled women in the world are the American women. No one disputes this, not even the American woman herself. She accepts it with complacency.

But are the grounds for her complacency justifiable? Is it to her credit that the man spends his last dollar that she may be indulged; that she occupies the position of a spoiled darling rather than as helpmeet and companion; that her days vacillate between rest cures and a mad search for excitement?

Are not the American men responsible for this helpless attitude of the American woman? Have they not in their desire to guard women from every pin prick really crippled them and spoiled their efficiency as assistant burden bearers?

The attitude of the American woman has become definitely frivolous. She wastes her abundant vitality on things not worth while; she bends her keen mentality upon the attainment of social prestige, with its endless and life destroying competition; she recklessly saps her strength in a hundred ineffectual ways.

But her ambition is frivolous, her energy spasmodic, and the expression of both is futile, because the objects upon which they are spent are not worth while. Why not give her insight and her vitality to the men of her family in their struggle for success? And let her make of society a relaxation, not an object; let her use it as a graceful ornamentation, but not as a foundation.

Who is to blame for so unjust a situation? Both. The American man because he foolishly shields the woman from every wind that blows, making of her a fragile orchid of hothouse beauty when she should be a hardy garden rose. And the woman is to blame for shutting her eyes to life's serious aspect, for chasing butterflies in the fair gardens of convention day in and day out, when she might be climbing, side by side, with the man to the high mountain tops in the land of fine achievement.

BRIEFS

Shrove Tuesday.

The last day of February.

"Real Boston" meeting tonight at Colonial hall.

Entertainment tonight at St. John's hall by the ladies of the Quincy Catholic club.

The Board of Trade will attend in a body the funeral of John A. McDonnell tomorrow morning.

An all day sewing meeting of the Fragment society of First church is to be held in the chapel tomorrow beginning at ten o'clock.

A very pleasant surprise party was given Robert Farquhar at his home on Arthur street recently by the girls of his Sunday School class. Near the close of the evening a handsome Bible was presented to him.

At the Saturday evening whist party held in Clan McGregor hall the souvenirs were awarded to Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Kennedy, Mr. D. McLennon, Mrs. Denton, James Birnie and Grace Hollinshead. The consolation went to Mrs. James Birnie and Mr. John Drumgold.

The Finance Committee of the City Council met Monday evening to consider the annual appropriation order. According to all accounts the committee has a hard proposition, as the fixed charges will require nearly all of the amount that can be raised in excess of the amount raised last year.

Simple services were conducted at Mount Wollaston cemetery over the body of Edward Sandblom, the five year old son of Frank O. Sandblom 9 Station street, West Quincy. The boy died of scarlet fever and immediate burial was necessary. Rev. G. H. Palmgren of the Garfield street church conducted the services.

Girl Saves Two Lives

Chicopee, Mass., Feb. 28.—Thirteen-year-old Josephine Pizroski rushed into the icy waters of the Chicopee river near her home and rescued from drowning two little girl friends, while her collie dog was less successful in attempting to save the life of a third child, Mary Zybura, aged 13, who was drowned.

INTIMIDATION IS INFERRED

Taft Without Defenders When Attacked In Senate

DISCUSSION OF OREGON LAW

Furnishes Opportunity For Bourne to Refer to Beverly Letter Regarding Withholding of Federal Patronage—President Who Would Abuse Appointive Power Is Compared to "Common Ward Heeler"

Washington, Feb. 28.—President Taft, by inference, was charged last night with using his appointive power to intimidate members of congress.

This inferred charge was made in a speech in the senate by Senator Bourne, president of the new Progressive Republican league, and, until the recent trouble over an Oregon appointment, the intimate friend and golfing companion of the chief executive.

The surprising thing was that although all of the senator's audience construed his remarks as an attack upon the president, not a word was uttered in reply.

The Beverly letter, in which Secretary Norton said that the president had withheld federal patronage from certain senators and congressmen, but would discontinue that practice, was brought into prominence. On previous occasions insurgent senators had threatened to read this letter in the senate, but until last night no public reference had been made to it.

Mr. Bourne opened his speech by a discussion of the Oregon law. He said that when this law is enacted by all the states it will destroy the power of the federal machine to renominate a president or determine his successor. The "steam roller," he says, will be relegated to the political scrap heap, and its operators to the shadow of things forgotten, while fourth-class postmasters will cease to be a political asset for anybody or any party.

"I would have as much respect for a common ward heeler who buys votes at the polls as for a President of the United States who uses his appointing power as a means of forcing or persuading members of congress to determine or change their courses of action.

"But, Mr. President, the use of the appointive power to influence the action of members of congress is only one means by which this power may be abused. Federal patronage is also an effective and dangerous power when wielded for the creation or maintenance of a political machine with the purpose of forcing renomination of an executive or the nomination of a man of his choice.

"The natural inference from the Norton letter is that the President of the United States used federal patronage to influence the action of members of congress.

"This is a charge which no citizen can discuss without regret, yet the whole subject is of such vital importance in the preservation of representative government that I would feel remiss in my duty if I failed to call it to the attention of the country and place in available form such information relating thereto as may come to my attention.

"The undenied statement indicates a deplorable and despicable subservience on the part of the legislative branch and a dangerous and demoralizing usurpation upon the part of the executive."

PRESSURE ON SHEEHAN

Asked to Withdraw From the New York Senatorial Race

Albany, Feb. 28.—With a view to bringing about a break in the deadlock, it is said that the men most prominent in the councils of the Democratic party have been endeavoring to persuade William F. Sheehan, the leading candidate, to withdraw.

Mr. Sheehan has refused all such suggestions, it is understood. But the withdrawal of Edward M. Shepard from the contest has encouraged Governor Dix, who says that he is hopeful the situation will soon be cleared.

DOG HOLDS UP TRAIN

Pulls Lever Setting Stop Signal While Shut Up In Operators' Office

Napoleon, O., Feb. 28.—Wabash operators scout the proverbial gratitude of a dog. A fine shepherd dog was run over by a wagon. The sympathetic boys treated and bandaged its injured paws and gave it a bed for the night.

After the office was closed the animal pulled a lever setting a stop signal. A westbound through freight was held up forty minutes till the chief operator could be aroused.

Embezzler Ball Sentenced

Boston, Feb. 28.—Frederick W. Ball, who was employed as a bookkeeper by Walter H. Holbrook for more than ten years, was sentenced to the house of correction for a term of three and one-half years. He pleaded guilty to the charge of having stolen $5129 from his employer.

ROBIN'S TRIAL BEGUN

Six Jurors Are Chosen After His Counsel Is Overruled

New York, Feb. 28.—Joseph G. Robin, former president of the Washington Savings bank, whose financial operations recently caused the closing of that institution, the Northern bank, and, indirectly, the Carnegie Trust company, was placed on trial in the supreme court, charged specifically with stealing $27,000 from the savings institution. Altogether, it is alleged, Robin misappropriated $207,000 from the Washington Savings bank. Six jurors have been chosen.

When the prisoner was brought into court the question of his sanity again was brought forward by Mr. Jerome, his counsel, who contended that Robin was not capable of conferring with counsel and, therefore, should not be tried. Justice Seabury, however, overruled Jerome.

COSTELLO HELD IN $5000

"Black Hand" Case to Be Presented Before a Grand Jury

Milford, Mass., Feb. 28.—Frank H. Costello, 19 years old, the alleged sender of threatening "Black Hand" letters to officials of the Draper mills in Hopedale, was held in $5000 for the grand jury by Judge Cook in the police court. Costello pleaded not guilty. The police say they have a confession signed by him.

Costello worked in the bobbin shop of the mills. A month ago letters began to come to the mill officials threatening dire punishment if wages were not raised and other demands met. Armed guards were immediately stationed about the mills and detectives engaged to run down the sender of the letters. Costello was apprehended, it is said, through his confidence to a detective in the role of a fellow workman.

ADMITS STEALING FROM AGED PATIENT

Much Loot Recovered In Room of a Boston Nurse

Boston, Feb. 28.—Miss Amelie M. Leonard, the young nurse who has admitted stealing jewelry and other property valued at $6162.50 from Miss Mary J. Lockwood, an aged patient who died Feb. 14, waived examination in the municipal court, and Judge Sullivan remanded her to jail in default of $10,000 bail.

While the proceedings were going on in court, police inspectors and private detectives were searching her apartment on Commonwealth avenue. They were amazed to find thousands of dollars' worth of unset diamonds wrapped in absorbent cotton, jewelry, rare coins, laces, silks, French lingerie, porcelains, embroidery and other stuff concealed so cleverly that it was overlooked in the casual search at the time the young woman was arrested on Saturday. The value of the property is estimated at $20,000.

Letters and papers found in the nurse's room revealed that she had shipped a trunk to Bordeaux, France, and another to England while she was attending Miss Lockwood in the Hotel Brunswick.

MILLER IS IMPROVING

Aged Poet Gains Strength Through His Daughter's Telepathy

San Francisco, Feb. 28.—"If I recover my former health I shall have my daughter's telepathic treatment to thank," said the "Poet of the Sierras," Joaquin Miller, who is looking much better than before the arrival of the young woman.

Juanita M. Miller made a wild race across the continent when she learned of the illness of her father. During her flying trip from the east, says her father, she "treated him telepathetically."

The doctors admit that since the coming of Miss Miller the aged poet has grown vastly better.

DU PONT'S PHILANTHROPY

Will Build a Boulevard the Entire Length of Delaware

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 28.—T. C. DuPont, the powder magnate, after a conference with Attorney General Richards, announced that he would bear the expense of constructing a boulevard the entire length of the state of Delaware.

The boulevard will be 103 miles in length and will extend from Claymont on the north to Selbyville on the south. The cost will be approximately $2,000,000.

Drinking Water a Luxury

Saragossa, Feb. 28.—The cleaning of the canal which supplies this city with drinking water has resulted in the cutting off of the supply. People who can afford to do so are paying as high as 60 cents for a pitcherful of water brought from sources outside the city.

Sentenced For Mistreating Girls

Boston, Feb. 28.—George Hallett, 77, and John Davis, 68, were sent to the house of correction for the mistreatment of several young girls. Hallett got two and one-half years, while Davis received three years. Both men lived in Chelsea.

DAVIE MAY NOT BE EXTRADITED

No Clause In Treaty With Brazil Covering "Larceny"

FOSS IS NOTIFIED BY KNOX

Crime With Which Boston Broker Is Charged May Be Changed to Embezzlement—District Attorney Says Matter Can Be Explained So That Washington Officials Can Proceed In the Case

Boston, Feb. 28.—Governor Foss has received a telegram from Secretary of State Knox, in which the secretary regrets inability to comply with the request to secure the provisional arrest of Robert E. Davie, charged with larceny in Boston, for the reason that larceny is not included in the list of offenses in the extradition treaty with Brazil, that government at the time the treaty was negotiated declining to include larceny, and stating that Brazil does not accept larceny as an extraditable crime.

District Attorney Pelletier says that there is no occasion for hesitancy in the matter, as it can be explained so that the Washington officials will proceed in the case. Embezzlement is under the list of extraditable offenses in the treaty with Brazil, and by the recent change in the laws in Massachusetts, embezzlement and larceny are the same thing.

Governor Foss said that he had not heard that any means of extraditing Davie had been found, and in fact knew nothing more than was contained in the statement given out from his office.

"It is a legal question," said he, "and of course would have to come to me from legal sources. If any way can be found to extradite Davie as an embezzler I will be ready to act in the matter at once."

Washington Is Puzzled

Washington, Feb. 28.—In the absence of specific information as to the offense alleged, officials of the state department cannot be found who will express an opinion whether Robert E. Davie, charged with misapplication of funds, can be extradited from refuge in Brazil. It is pointed out, however, that the extradition treaty with Brazil, signed in 1897, is a broad document and in terms provides for fraud committed by persons acting as "broker."

Section fifteen of the treaty defines "embezzlement," under two heads, as "embezzlement or theft of moneys, committed by persons salaried or employed, to the detriment of those who employ them." The legal distinction between embezzlement and larceny usually recognized by lawyers is that the former implies the element of trust or confidence by the employer in the offending person, which larceny does not. The other class of embezzlement relates to public moneys.

Section thirteen is more specific and makes extraditable "fraud committed by a depositor, banker, agent, broker, treasurer, director, member or employe of any company or corporation."

This section would not appear to apply to fraud committed as an individual. The points involved in the Davie case have not been presented to the state department.

TO SUCCEED M'CARTHY

President Names Graves to Be Surveyor of Port of Boston

Boston, Feb. 28.—Word comes from Washington that Edward G. Graves, former president of the Republican city committee of Boston, has been appointed by the president to succeed Jeremiah J. McCarthy as surveyor of the port of Boston, March 31. Senator Lodge recommended his name to President Taft, with the concurrence of Senator Crane.

Surveyor McCarthy, whose life has been spent in politics, is just finishing his second term.

SUNNY MONDAY

Sunny Monday contains a dirt-starter which has a two-fold virtue—it saves rubbing and saves your clothes. Moreover, the dirt-starter in Sunny Monday stays there — it will do just as good work with the last wafer of the cake as when the bar is new. You get the benefit of it, too, in any kind of water, at any temperature. Sunny Monday contains nothing to harm the hands or the clothes. It is the most economical laundry soap made.

Governor's Council Said to Be Against Commuting Death Sentence

Boston, Feb. 28.—At least five of the eight members of the governor's council are opposed to commuting, because of her sex, the death sentence which is to be pronounced against Mrs. Lena Cusumano for the murder of her husband, unless exceptions taken by her counsel are sustained.

This, despite the fact that Governor Foss stated that he "should be awfully sorry to see a woman electrocuted in Massachusetts." The governor indicated plainly that he did not believe in the death sentence for a woman in Massachusetts.

London, Feb. 28.—Pauline Chase, who is touring in "Peter Pan," proposes to travel by aeroplane from town to town instead of using trains.

A Competition in Excellence

THERE is a kind of competition that has materially improved manufacturing conditions, raised the wages of American workmen, made more cheerful and convenient the American home, increased the demand for merchandise of real worth, and created a higher standard of business ethics.

A competition in excellence — that is what American manufacturing is rapidly becoming! For nowadays no manufacturer can be certain of success whose product in its character and purpose fails to minister to some genuine desire or need of its users.

The deeper we delve into the methods of successful industries the more certain are we to discover that they are builded on the basic ideal of an excellence maintained at any cost. Such methods had their rise in the days of the Pilgrims. "New England Made" thus early became a synonym for materials that were not skimped, inspection that was thorough, and methods of making that were conscientiously exact — and these ideals of quality have dominated the mighty developments which followed the success of those early efforts.

Nearly three centuries have come and gone since American manufacturing was established on the only lasting foundation — quality. Many new industries have come, and some have gone — perhaps because their product did not measure up to these standards of excellence. But dotted all over this great section stand the growing plants of sturdy old New England industries, where grandsons and great-grandsons still uphold the policy of excellence set by the founders — where a just pride in the product animates every member of the great organization, from the president to the unskilled workman — and that is why in the face of the ever-present competition of new recruits in the same field of manufacture, these goods have triumphed in every conflict and weathered every storm.

Such cases afford abundant proof that the only way you can long compete with a good article is to make a still better one — and it is the recognition of this necessity which is creating a new and higher competition — a competition in excellence.

ON THEIR HONEYMOON

Dr. Wiley and Miss Kelton Wedded at Home of Bride

Washington, Feb. 28.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, of pure food fame, led to the altar Miss Anna C. Kelton, daughter of the late General Joseph C. Kelton, U. S. A. The wedding was a quiet affair in the home of the bride and was attended by only the relatives and intimate friends.

Elaborate gifts were received from all quarters of the country. Dr. and Mrs. Wiley left immediately after the wedding for a trip through the northern states.

INDIANS IN BATTLE WITH STATE POLICE

Eight of the Red Men and One White Are Slain

Reno, Feb. 28.—In a battle sixty miles west of Tuscarora, eight Indians and one policeman were killed and the other members of the Indian band were captured. The battle took place at Kelly Creek.

The Indian band, twelve in number, began the fight when the state police force came upon them. For three hours the battle raged. It ended only when Ed Hoyle of the state police force and eight of the Indians had been killed. Then the remaining four Indians surrendered.

The police had been trailing the Indians for a week, believing they were the murderers of four stockmen whose bodies were found in a desolate canon on the eastern slopes of the Sierra Nevada mountains. The victims' horses had been taken and ponies which had been ridden by the murderers were found nearby, the outlaws apparently concluding their own stock too weak to keep up with them in their wild flight.

ASK WHERE PORK IS

Women Question Maxim as to His Pork and Beans Recipe

London, Feb. 28.—Sir Hiram Maxim, admitting that fat pork is indigestible, tells of a visit which he received from several Englishwomen who, after trying the great American dish, pork and beans, asked where the pork was. The combination they ate consisted of one pound of pork to two pounds of beans.

Sir Hiram says that when the pork in a raw state is finely minced and thoroughly mixed with the beans it apparently disappears in the baking process. The pork then is as easily digested as a piece of lean steak, and though very rich in everything the system requires is easily assimilated.

GARROS' GREAT FLIGHT

Soars 11,700 Feet Above Sea Level In Aeroplane In Mexico

Mexico City, Feb. 28.—Before a big crowd at the aviation field Roland G. Garros made an altitude flight estimated at 3900 feet, which, considering the starting altitude of 7800 feet, was regarded as remarkable.

Rene Barrier made a cross-country flight, and Rene Simon gave a demonstration of control, whereupon General Diaz signified a desire to have the aviators presented. He congratulated them and expressed his pleasure in witnessing the flights.

QUICK CHANGE IS ASKED FOR

Slaughtering In Country Districts Declared Dangerous

LAW NOT BEING OBSERVED

Unhealthy Conditions and Lack of Inspection In Massachusetts Told at Legislative Hearing—Cows Taken From Mire Under Slaughter House, Killed and Stamped by Inspector as Good For Food

Boston, Feb. 28.—Slaughtering as as conducted in the smaller towns and cities of Massachusetts presents disgusting and dangerous conditions, calling for a speedy and more or less costly change by the state, according to former Representative Luce of Somerville, President Rowley of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and others, who addressed the legislative committee on public health.

Dr. Rowley described the terrible conditions which his organization's agents had found in nearly all of the smaller country districts and explained them at length, even producing photographs showing actual scenes. Opponents of this bill for uniform inspection under the state board of health, a substitute for senate No. 42, were nearly all in favor of having the state board of health take charge and enforce the law as it now stands by compelling local boards to act properly, but they decried the expense, the civil service requirements and the complication of laws which they foresaw if the new bill were passed.

found conditions so unsanitary and filthy that he felt it his duty to appear and favor the bill. He suggested that if the legislature knew the real conditions governing slaughtering in small towns action would be taken promptly.

"Throughout the state," he said, "we have found that in small places the slaughtering almost invariably takes place without an inspector present. Usually the inspector comes in the next night and places his stamp on the meat. In many places hired men of the butchers are inspectors; in one case we found a 16-year-old boy, son of the butcher, serving as the inspector. In many places the inspectors are paid by the butchers.

"In one case we found that the licensee was himself the inspector. In one place, where the butcher held a license to kill one cow and seven hogs a week, we found that he had killed twenty-seven old cows in two days. They were kept in a disgustingly unclean place under the slaughter house and were brought up one at a time and killed without an inspector being present.

"We discovered another place where two horses had been killed. In one slaughter house a boy was dressing a calf nearby a dead horse. When we asked the boy about the horse he said that he died of cholera and had been there a week. We found one inspector who said that he did not know what the law was; he never had seen a copy of the slaughtering statutes.

"We want one central authority throughout the state, which shall be responsible. You will hear of the expense, but you are here as our representatives. You have it in your power to do something for the people who cannot come here to plead for themselves."

A man in the audience asked if the twenty-seven cows taken from the mire under the slaughter house and killed, which Rowley had referred to, had been used for food or for fertilizer.

Dr. Rowley said that his men had seen the inspector put his stamp on them signifying that they were good for food.

BOSS COX INDICTED

Noted Cincinnati Politician Charged With Perjury In New Papers

Cincinnati, Feb. 28.—A new indictment charging George B. Cox, the political leader of Cincinnati, with perjury was returned by the Hamilton county grand jury.

It alleges that in addition to the receipt of $48,500 interest money paid by banks to former County Treasurer Gibson, as charged in the first indictment, that Cox was given $17,500 from the same source by Tilden R. French when the latter was county treasurer.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

NO TRACE OF GEMS

Mrs. Drummond Will Give $5000 For Return of Her Property

New York, Feb. 28.—Not the slightest clue has turned up in the search for the $130,000 worth of jewels which Mrs. Maldwin Drummond missed from her stateroom when she woke on the steamer Amerika Sunday morning after the last night of a voyage from Europe.

Yesterday she engaged private detectives in this country and in Europe; the Hamburg-American line officers again searched and questioned the crew of 240 of the Amerika; the police carefully watched the pawnshops, and the customs officers were particularly thorough in passing the luggage of passengers disembarking from the Amerika. All was without avail.

Mrs. Drummond said she would willingly give at least $5000 reward for the return of the gems.

REFUSES TO IMPOSE JAIL SENTENCES

Men Guilty of Customs Frauds Pay Fines of $3600 Each

New York, Feb. 28.—Fines to a total of $7200 were imposed by Federal Judge Holt upon Max Rubel, president, and Louis J. Klukelstein, secretary, of Max Rubel & Co., importers and manufactures of cloaks and suits, on their pleas of guilty to an indictment charging them with undervaluation of importations from France.

The government asked for imposition of jail sentences, charging that the head of the Rubel firm had been guilty of persistent violations of the customs laws.

Judge Holt, however, imposed fines of $3600 each, approximately double the amount of the duty of which the government alleged it had been defrauded. The fines were paid.

JOINS HIS DEAD WIFE

Wealthy Illinois Man Starves Himself to Accomplish His Purpose

Danville, Ills., Feb. 28.—To join his wife in death, from whom in life he had never been separated as long as twenty-four hours, John P. Hunter, 93, the wealthiest citizen of Attica, literally starved himself to death.

Eighteen days ago Mrs. Hunter, who was 96 years old, was taken ill. Her physicians told Hunter that she could not get well. He remarked that if she must go he would follow. From that day until he died yesterday, not a morsel of food or a drink of water passed his lips.

His wife died ten days ago, and since then he grew gradually weaker until death came.

BOYS' CAMPAIGN.

The meeting for boys held in the Atlantic Memorial church Monday evening under the auspices of the Atlantic Extension club of the Y. M. C. A. was attended by about 175 fellows. Herbert Sutermeister conducted the meeting and six other delegates to the State convention gave reports of the meetings and told what they got out of them. Roland Estey, Henry Trask, Willett Safford, Sam Prout, Dwight Gearwar and George Daniels were the speakers. L. H. Clee, boys' work director of the Y. M. C. A., spoke briefly at the conclusion of the reports, and asked those who would accept the challenge given by the speakers, to stand. Twenty boys stood up and took their stand for right living. At Quincy Point, a similar service was held in the Congregational church. Reports were given by the delegates with Alex. Robertson as leader. The other speakers were: Howard Cantley, Everett Clark, George MacDonald, James Jenkins, Fred Roache and Theodore DuPlessis.

WEYMOUTH FIGURES.

Weymouth reports 258 births last year and 251 in 1877 (thirty-four years ago.) Also 115 marriages in 1910 and 93 in 1877. And 194 deaths in 1910 against 149 in 1877. Weymouth should take a brace.

CLANGOROUS ALL RIGHT.

Writing of the Naval Museum at Boston in the Herald the Saturday Saunterer says:

Doubtless in the naval museum of the future there may be an adequate graphic display of some of the facts about steel naval vessels from their earliest employment. Not everybody can secure admittance to the clangorous shipyard at Quincy Point to witness the processes of building a real fighting monster of steel over a wooden phantom; to the many visitors from near and far a series of photographs of the processes employed at Fore River and other shipbuilding plants would seemingly be highly instructive.

SURPRISE FOR RED SOX

Did Not Get a Point from the Giants

The Giants gave the Red Sox a great surprise on Monday evening in the Makaria league when they captured all four points and are now but one point behind the leaders. They took the first string by 45 pins, the second by 45 pins, and the third by 79 which gave them a lead of 169 on totals. Stanley Bates was high on singles with 179, and M. Nicoll also of the Giants high on totals with 488, only 8 better than Bates. The wives of the Red Sox team saw them go down to defeat. Perhaps it was the presence of the ladies that made them so nervous, but what shall we say of Russ Bates?

Dorchester High and the High school of Commerce will have a dual meet on Friday.

Bill Manning of Quincy High was rushing madly about the floor during the progress of the Quincy High-Powder Point relay race Saturday, and I inquired of an official what brainstorm had hit the Quincy lad. It seems Manning, who ran fourth on the team, had arranged to wear Estey's shoes, and when the latter finished the second relay, Manning made a quick change. Quincy won the race.—Bob Dunbar in Journal.

Would Combine to Boost.

O. W. Randall of Eagle, Colo., is trying to enlist the aid of Denver boosters in the formation of a commercial organization on the western slope. Randall's idea is to have the towns of Eagle, Minturn, Red Cliff and Gypsum unite in forming one commercial organization which shall have for its objects the advertising of these towns and more especially the creation of interest in good roads in that part of the state. It is probable that several members of the Denver chamber of commerce will visit Eagle within the next month to aid in the inauguration of an organization of this kind.

The Head of the House

A Story For Young Men About to Be Married.

By EDWARD B. KNIGHT

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Sam Martindale and Theodora Trask had been engaged a week. There had been more billing and cooing and kissing in that one week than there would be in five years of the married life before them. Then Sam called a halt to look practically at the future. He was not a man to drift through life; he preferred to prearrange everything. It seemed that there was a great ocean ahead of him and Theo, of comfort or suffering, of anxiety or discord, of contentment or unhappiness, and across this ocean it became him as the head of the house, the pilot, to steer their bark. Before taking a voyage does not the mariner familiarize himself with the areas of probable storm and sunshine, of navigable water and sunken rocks? Why should not he as commander lay down on a chart the exact course the family ship should sail?

To begin at the bottom, was he to be the commander? The very fact of his asking himself the question shows the depth of his understanding. If a general is to conduct a campaign it is necessary that his word be the law for his army. Martindale realized at once that if he were to pilot the family bark he must have no interference.

Having thus settled the matter by deliberation, Martindale concluded to broach the subject to his fiancee, merely as a preliminary reconnoissance in order to feel the enemy.

"Theo," he said gravely, "since you and I are to pass our lives together it may be well for us to come to an understanding on one important point. In every government, every business, every family, in order that the wheels may run smoothly, there must be one head. I would like to know how you feel about the matter."

"It seems to me," said Theo after thought, "that we should both be head."

Martindale was not prepared for what he considered flying right in the face of the fundamental principles of order. What was the family but a miniature state? And the idea of a state having two governors! Absurd! Theo saw by the expression of his face that she had assumed too much. So she hastened to say: "Why, dearie, don't you know that a woman just loves to lean on a man for guidance? You're to be head, of course."

This was a great relief to Sam. He took his fiancee in his arms, kissed her and said:

"Sweetheart, you have no idea how happy you've made me by saying that. Our future happiness depends upon it. There must always be a head to a family. And how hard it would be for both of us if you had a disposition to usurp the husband's place."

"I would never think of such a thing."

He gave her a dozen kisses and left her, filled with joy that the basic principle of married life—in his case—had been settled without a word of dispute. Indeed, it eliminated all the rest of the problem, for since he was to be undisputed captain he had no doubt that he could guide the family bark safely.

The couple were married. There was a big wedding—gifts galore, rice throwing, a trip and at last a settling down in a home of their own. During the engagement Theo had never expressed an opinion, much less made a decision, that would have interfered with Sam's position as heir apparent to the sovereignty of the family.

Theo had long been connected with a charitable association of which she was the secretary. One morning a fortnight after the couple's return from their wedding trip she woke up with an aching of the bones, in a feverish condition and in other ways indicating that care must be taken to avoid a severe illness, perhaps death. But there was to be a meeting that day of the charitable society, and the secretary was expected to be there. Sam was astonished to see his wife preparing to go out in a storm, already ill and with the probability of coming back to face pneumonia.

"What do you mean by even thinking of going out?" he exclaimed.

"Why, dearie, they can't get on without me."

"They will get on without you. I forbid your going."

"Oh, I couldn't possibly stay at home. I'll wrap up well, wear my rubbers and keep dry. There's not a bit of danger."

Martindale sat with his morning paper on his lap, looking fixedly at his wife, while she continued to put on her belongings with as much sang froid as if she had not heard the command of her lord and master. When she was ready she took up an umbrella, bent over her husband, kissed him and went out.

"Well, by Jove! I like that!" exclaimed Sam to himself as soon as the door was closed behind his wife.

It would be impossible to give an adequate description of the disappointment, chagrin, mortification and forebodings the young husband experienced at this utter disregard for his word of command as captain of the family ship. He carried out the simile thus: In the face of a storm he had ordered precautions, whereupon the crew had crowded on sail to wreck the vessel.

What was to be done?

Fight it out to a finish, conquer now or never.

When Mrs. Martindale came home from the meeting her husband was not there. He had gone to business. Time came for him to return, but his key did not rattle in the lock of the front door. He had gone to his club and was sitting with the evening paper before him, trying to persuade himself that he was reading it, but really in a mental turmoil. The question of the domestic supremacy had come up for settlement, and it must be settled—his way.

He ordered his dinner at the club and when it was served went into the dining room and ate it alone—that is, he ate a few mouthfuls; he couldn't eat any more. His wife would know where to find him, and if she wanted him very badly she would telephone for him. Then he would insist on an apology and a promise never to do so any more. After that he would go home and forgive her. It might be a good lesson for her if she would be very ill in consequence of her stupid, obstinate defiance of his order not to invite pneumonia. At one moment he almost wished this would happen; at the next he was in terror lest it should.

Dinner over, he sauntered out into the cafe, lit a cigar and—suffered. Several men he knew were there, but when he saw one of them advancing to speak to him, pretending not to see him, Sam turned and walked the other way. He hoped every minute to be called to the telephone. Whenever a waiter came toward him he looked at the man anxiously, and when the waiter passed him without the summons he desired he crushed back a moan.

But he wouldn't yield.

By 9 o'clock he was in despair. He concluded that if he didn't get a message from Theo before 10 he would go home and upstairs to a room by himself without paying any attention to his wife. Meanwhile his actions had made it apparent to every waiter in the club that he was eager for a telephone message. At 9:55 he went into the coat room for his hat and coat, and when he emerged a waiter ran into him, shouting:

"You're wanted at the telephone, sir!"

Martindale ran to the booth, knocking down another waiter who was hunting him to tell him he was wanted there, brushing by three more who were making dives for him from different directions to give him the same news. Inside the booth he took up the receiver and heard in a faint, husky woman's voice:

"Is that you, dear?"

"Yes."

"I thought you must be at the club. I just called you up to say—I'm talking from the phone next the bed—that the doctor has been here to see me and said I had a high fever. That was about 6 o'clock. Since there was no one here to take care of me but the cook he telephoned for a trained nurse. I knew you must be having a nice time at your club with all your old friends, and I didn't like to spoil your fun. But nurse says that I'd better try to get some sleep now, and I preferred to tell you about it before doing so. Don't hurry home; have a good time."

"I told"— He was about to give her the usual "I told you so," but checked himself, saying instead that he would be at home as soon as he could get there.

"You were very unreasonable this morning," the voice continued, "but I have forgiven you, and you needn't trouble yourself about that at all. But don't make a noise when you come in. I don't believe I shall get any sleep, but"—

There was a click, followed by a ring, and a different woman's voice said:

"Mr. Martindale?"

"Yes."

"I'm speaking to you from the lower hall telephone. Your wife is very ill; threatened with pneumonia; temperature 104 degrees."

"I'll be there in five minutes. Why the devil didn't you"—

He dropped the receiver and bolted for the street door.

Mrs. Martindale fortunately escaped a long illness, but she was for several days in a condition not warranting her husband bringing up any other subject than toast, tea, temperature and time to take medicine. During the danger period he was in an agony of fear lest he should lose the woman who would surely dominate him through life, for this first episode bearing on the balance of power in his family had opened his eyes. It was too late to go back and choose some other woman who would permit him to assume his position as head of the family, and he wouldn't have done so if he could. He quietly made up his mind, as many another man has done before him, that in the case of woman certain laws that regulate the universe are suspended. His wife had disobeyed an order he had given her for her own good, thereby showing a perversity for which he as well as she had suffered. And for having brought upon them both this suffering, including a fifty dollar doctor's bill, she had—forgiven him!

Sam Martindale has joined the innumerable throng of married men who joke with one another about their position as head of the family and take their orders from their wives dutifully as become obedient husbands, their wives the while, or many of them, not doubting in the least that they are themselves willing slaves.

But one year brought him revenge. A small lump of flesh came who could neither walk nor talk. He hadn't even a tithe of the sense Mrs. Martindale possessed, but he assumed command of the whole household.

Crocheted Purse.

Here are simple directions for crocheting a purse with wool or silk. Commence with thirty-seven chain, always taking three chain to turn. Turn and work one treble in each chain, turn and continue the same till you have the required length Remember that the work has to be doubled from beginning to end to form two sides.

When you have the length desired, start decreasing one stitch at each end until all the stitches are done This point forms the turn over flap.

Double the work and sew neatly on the wrong side, turn back and sew a patent fastener to the under side of the flap, which fastens to the purse itself.

If you wish to fasten the purse around your neck, fasten your thread at one end of the purse and work eighty chain and attach the opposite side. Buy a brass ring and double crochet around it, catching it into the eighty chain in the center. Pass the cord to go around the neck through this ring and the purse is completed.
